A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

VOL. I.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, L.L.D.

From a Painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the Possession of B. Langton Esq.

Published at the Act Streets August 21st, 1788, by J. Longman in St. Botolphs Row.
A DICTIONARY
OF THE
ENGLISH LANGUAGE:
IN WHICH
THE WORDS ARE DEDUCED FROM THEIR ORIGINALS, AND ILLUSTRATED IN THEIR DIFFERENT SIGNIFICATIONS BY EXAMPLES FROM THE BEST WRITERS.

TO WHICH ARE PREFIXED, A HISTORY OF THE LANGUAGE,
AND AN ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

BY SAMUEL JOHNSON, LL.D.

IN TWO VOLUMES.—VOL. I.

THE SIXTH EDITION.

LONDON:

M.DCC.LXXXV.
PREFACE.

IT is the fate of those who toil at the lower employments of life, to be rather driven by the fear of evil, than attracted by the prospect of good; to be exposed to ceniture, without hope of praise; to be disgraced by mischance, or punished for neglect, where success would have been without applause, and diligence without reward.

Among these unhappy mortals is the writer of dictionaries; whom mankind have considered, not as the pupil, but the slave of science, the pioneer of literature, doomed only to remove rubbish and clear obstructions from the paths through which Learning and Genius presed forward to conquest and glory, without bestowing a smile on the humble drudge that facilitates their progress. Every other author may aspire to praise; the lexicographer can only hope to escape reproach, and even this negative recompense has been yet granted to very few.

I have, notwithstanding this discouragement, attempted a Dictionary of the English language, which, while it was employed in the cultivation of every species of literature, has itself been hitherto neglected; suffered to spread, under the direction of chance, into wild exuberance; resignd to the tyranny of time and fashion; and exposed to the corruptions of ignorance, and caprices of innovation.

When I took the first survey of my undertaking, I found our speech copious without order, and energetic without rules: wherever I turned my view, there was perplexity to be disentangled, and confusion to be regulated; choice was to be made out of boundles variety, without any established principle of selection; adulterations were to be detected, without a settled test of purity; and modes of expression to be rejected or received, without the suffrages of any writers of classical reputation or acknowledged authority.

Having therefore no assistance but from general grammar, I applied myself to the perusal of our writers; and noting whatever might be of use to ascertain or illustrate any word or phrase, accumulated in time the materials of a dictionary, which, by degrees, I reduced to method, establishing to myself, in the progress of the work, such rules as experience and analogy suggested to me; experience, which practice and observation were continually increasing; and analogy, which, though in some words obscure, was evident in others.

In adjusting the Orthography, which has been to this time unsettled and fortuitous, I found it necessary to distinguish those irregularities that are inherent in our tongue, and perhaps coeval with it, from others which the ignorance or negligence of later writers has produced. Every language has its anomalies, which, though inconvenient, and in themselves once unnecessary, must be tolerated among the imperfections of human things, and which require only to be registered, that they may not be increased, and afterwards, that they may not be confounded: but every language has likewise its improprieties and absurdities, which it is the duty of the lexicographer to correct or proscribe.

As language was at its beginning merely oral, all words of necessary or common use were spoken before they were written; and while they were unfixed by any visible signs, must have been spoken with great diversity, as we now observe those who cannot read to catch sounds imperfectly, and utter them negligently. When this wild and barbarous jargon was first reduced to an alphabet, every penniian endeavoured to express, as he could, the sounds which he was accustomed to pronounce or to receive, and vitiated in writing such words as were already vitiated in speech. The powers of the letters, when they were applied to a new language, must have been vague and unsettled, and therefore different hands would exhibit the fame found by different combinations.

From
PREFACE.

From this uncertain pronunciation arise in a great part the various dialects of the same country, which will always be observed to grow fewer, and less different, as books are multiplied; and from this arbitrary representation of sounds by letters, proceeds that diversity of spelling observable in the Saxon remains, and I suppose in the first books of every nation, which perplexes or destroys analogy, and produces anomalous formations, that, being once incorporated, can never be afterwards diffused or reformed.

Of this kind are the derivatives length from long, strength from strong, darling from dear, breadth from broad, from dry, drought, and from high, height, which Milton, in zeal for analogy, writes height; Quid te exempta juvat spinis de pluribus una? to change all would be too much, and to change one is nothing.

This uncertainty is most frequent in the vowels, which are so capriciously pronounced, and so differently modified, by accident or affectation, not only in every province, but in every mouth, that to them, as is well known to etymologists, little regard is to be shewn in the deduction of one language from another.

Such defects are not errors in orthography, but spots of barbarity impressed so deep in the English language, that criticism can never wash them away: these, therefore, must be permitted to remain untouched; but many words have likewise been altered by accident, or depraved by ignorance, as the pronunciation of the vulgar has been weakly followed; and some still continue to be variously written, as authors differ in their care or skill: of these it was proper to enquire the true orthography, which I have always considered as depending on their derivation, and have therefore referred them to their original languages: thus I write enchant, enchantment, enchanter, after the French, and incantation after the Latin; thus entire is chosen rather than intire, because it passed to us not from the Latin integer, but from the French entier.

Of many words it is difficult to say whether they were immediately received from the Latin or the French; since at the time when we had dominions in France, we had Latin service in our churches. It is, however, my opinion, that the French generally supplied us; for we have few Latin words, among the terms of domestic use, which are not French; but many French, which are very remote from Latin.

Even in words of which the derivation is apparent, I have been often obliged to sacrifice uniformity to custom; thus I write, in compliance with a numberless majority, convey and inveigh, deceit and receipt, fancy and phantom; sometimes the derivative varies from the primitive, as explain and explanation, repeat and repetition.

Some combinations of letters having the same power, are used indifferently without any discoverable reason of choice, as in chook, choke; soap, sope; feuer, fuel, and many others; which I have sometimes inserted twice, that those who search for them under either form, may not search in vain.

In examining the orthography of any doubtful word, the mode of spelling by which it is inserted in the series of the dictionary, is to be considered as that to which I give, perhaps not often rashly, the preference. I have left, in the examples, to every author his own practice un molested, that the reader may balance suffrages, and judge between us: but this question is not always to be determined by reputed or by real learning; some men, intent upon greater things, have thought little on sounds and derivations; some, knowing in the ancient tongues, have neglected those in which our words are commonly to be sought. Thus Hammond writes feblines of feblines, because I suppose he imagined it derived immediately from the Latin; and some words, such as dependant, dependent; dependance, dependence, vary their final syllable, as one or another language is present to the writer.

In this part of the work, where caprice has long wantoned without controul, and vanity sought praise by petty reformation, I have endeavoured to proceed with a scholar's reverence for antiquity, and a grammarians's regard to the genius of our tongue. I have attempted few alterations, and among those few, perhaps the greater part is from the modern to the ancient practice; and I hope I may be allowed to recommend to those, whose thoughts have been perhaps employed too anxiously on verbal singularities, not to disturb, upon narrow views, or for minute propriety, the orthography of their fathers. It has been ascertained, that for the law to be known, is of more importance than to be right. Change, says Hooker, is not made without inconvenience, even from worse to better. There is in constancy and stability a general and lasting advantage, which will always overbalance the slow improvements of gradual correction.

Much
PREFACE.

Much less ought our written language to comply with the corruptions of oral utterance, or copy that which every variation of time or place makes different from itself, and imitate those changes, which will again be changed, while imitation is employed in observing them.

This recommendation of steadiness and uniformity does not proceed from an opinion, that particular combinations of letters have much influence on human happiness; or that truth may not be successfully taught by modes of spelling fanciful and erroneous: I am not yet so lost in lexicography, as to forget that words are the daughters of earth, and that things are the sons of heaven. Language is only the instrument of science, and words are but the signs of ideas: I wish, however, that the instrument might be left apt to decay, and that signs might be permanent, like the things which they denote.

In settling the orthography, I have not wholly neglected the pronunciation, which I have directed, by printing an accent upon the acute or elevated syllable. It will sometimes be found, that the accent is placed by the author quoted, on a different syllable from that marked in the alphabetical series; it is then to be understood, that custom has varied, or that the author has, in my opinion, pronounced wrong. Short directions are sometimes given where the sound of letters is irregular; and if they are sometimes omitted, defect in such minute observations will be more easily excused, than superfluity.

In the investigation both of the orthography and signification of words, their Etymology was necessarily to be considered, and they were therefore to be divided into primitives and derivatives. A primitive word, is that which can be traced no further to any English root; thus circumspect, circumvent, circumstance, delude, conceive, and complicate, though compounds in the Latin, are to us primitives. Derivatives are all those that can be referred to any word in English of greater simplicity.

The derivatives I have referred to their primitives, with an accuracy sometimes needless; for who does not see that remoteness comes from remote, lovely from love, concavity from concave, and demonstrative from demonstrate? But this grammatical exuberance the scheme of my work did not allow me to reprefs. It is of great importance, in examining the general fabric of a language, to trace one word from another, by noting the usual modes of derivation and inflection; and uniformity must be preserved in systematical works, though sometimes at the expense of particular propriety.

Among other derivatives I have been careful to insert and elucidate the anomalous plurals of nouns and preterites of verbs, which in the Teutonick dialects are very frequent, and, though familiar to those who have always used them, interrupt and embarras the learners of our language.

The two languages from which our primitives have been derived are the Roman and Teutonick: under the Roman I comprehend the French and provincial tongues; and under the Teutonick range the Saxon, German, and all their kindred dialects. Most of our polysyllables are Roman, and our words of one syllable are very often Teutonick.

In affixing the Roman original, it has perhaps sometimes happened that I have mentioned only the Latin, when the word was borrowed from the French; and considering myself as employed only in the illustration of my own language, I have not been very careful to observe whether the Latin word be pure or barbarous, or the French elegant or obsolete.

For the Teutonick etymologies I am commonly indebted to Junius and Skinner, the only names which I have forborne to quote when I copied their books; not that I might appropriate their labours or uplive their honours, but that I might spare a general repetition by one general acknowledgment. Of these, whom I ought not to mention but with the reverence due to instructors and benefactors, Junius appears to have excelled in extent of learning, and Skinner in rectitude of understanding. Junius was accurately skilled in all the northern languages, Skinner probably examined the ancient and remoter dialects only by occasional inspection into dictionaries; but the learning of Junius is often of no other use than to show him a track by which he may deviate from his purpose, to which Skinner always presses forward by the shortest way. Skinner is often ignorant, but never ridiculous: Junius is always full of knowledge; but his variety distracts his judgment, and his learning is very frequently disfigured by his absurdities.

The votaries of the northern muses will not perhaps easily restrain their indignation, when they find the name of Junius thus degraded by a disadvantageous comparison; but whatever reverence is due to his diligence, or his attainments, it can be no criminal degree of cenfurioufness to charge that etymologist with want of judgment, who can seriously derive dream from drama, because life is a drama, and a drama is a dream.
PREFACE.

Dream; and who declares with a tone of defiance, that no man can fail to derive mean from μέν, mones, single or solitary, who considers that grief naturally loves to be alone.*

Our knowledge of the northern literature is scanty, that of words undoubtedly Teutonic, the original is not always to be found in any ancient language; and I have therefore inserted Dutch or German Substitutes, which I consider not as radical, but parallel, not as the parents, but sitters of the English.

The words which are represented as thus related by descent or cognition, do not always agree in sense; for it is incident to words, as to their authors, to degenerate from their ancestors, and to change their manners when they change their country. It is sufficient, in etymological enquiries, if the sences of kindred words be found such as may easily pass into each other, or such as may both be referred to one general idea.

The etymology, so far as it is yet known, was easily found in the volumes where it is particularly and professedly delivered; and, by proper attention to the rules of derivation, the orthography was soon adjusted. But to collect the Words of our language was a task of greater difficulty: the deficiency of dictionaries was immediately apparent; and when they were exhausted, what was yet wanting must be sought by fortuitous and unguided excursions into books, and gleaned as industry should find, or chance should offer it, in the boundless chaos of a living speech. My search, however, has been either skilful or lucky; for I have much augmented the vocabulary.

As my design was a dictionary, common or appellative, I have omitted all words which have relation to proper names; such as Arius, Socinian, Calvinist, Beneditine, Mahometan; but have retained those of a more general nature, as Heathen, Pagan.

Of the terms of art I have received such as could be found either in books of science or technical dictionaries; and have often inferred, from philosophical writers, words which are supported perhaps only by a single authority, and which being not admitted into general use, stand yet as candidates or probations, and must depend for their adoption on the suffrage of futurity.

The words which our authors have introduced by their knowledge of foreign languages, or ignorance of their own, by vanity or wantonness, by compliance with fashion or lust of innovation, I have registered as they occurred, though they often only to confute them, and warn others against the folly of naturalizing useless foreigners to the injury of the natives.

I have not rejected any by design, merely because they were unecessary or exuberant; but have received those which by different writers have been differently formed, as vixid, and vixidit, vixiens, and vixecity.

Compound or double words I have seldom noted, except when they obtain a signification different from that which the components have in their simple state. Thus highwayman, woodman, and horse courser, require an explanation; but of thieving or coach driver, no notice was needed, because the primitives contain the meaning of the compounds.

Words arbitrarily formed by a constant and settled analogy, like diminutive adjectives in ibi, as greenish, blueish; adverbs in ly, as dully, openly; substantives in nesses, as vileness, faultines; were left diligently sought, and sometimes have been omitted, when I had no authority that invited me to insert them; not that they are not genuine and regular offsprings of English roots, but because their relation to the primitive being always the same, their signification cannot be mistaken.

* That I may not appear to have spoken too irreverently of Janius, I have here subjoined a few specimens of his etymological extravagance.

PREFACE.

The verbal nouns in -ing; such as the keeping of the castle, the leading of the army, are always neglected, or placed only to illustrate the sense of the verb, except when they signify things as well as actions, and have therefore a plural number, as dwelling, living; or have an absolute and abstract signification, as colouring, painting, learning.

The participles are likewise omitted, unless, by signifying rather habit or quality than action, they take the nature of adjectives; as a-thinking man, a man of prudence; a pacing horse, a horse that can pace: these I have ventured to call participial adjectives. But neither are these always inserted, because they are commonly to be understood, without any danger of mistake, by consulting the verb.

Obsolete words are admitted, when they are found in authors not obsolescent, or when they have any force or beauty that may deserve revival.

As composition is one of the chief characteristics of a language, I have endeavoured to make some preparation for the universal negligence of my predecessors, by inserting great numbers of compounded words, as may be found under after, fare, new, right, fair, and many more. These, numerous as they are, might be multiplied, but that use and curiosity are here satisfied, and the frame of our language and modes of our combination amply discovered.

Of some forms of composition, such as that by which re is prefixed to note repetition, and an to signify contrariety or privation, all the examples cannot be accumulated, because the use of these particles, if not wholly arbitrary, is so little limited, that they are hourly affixed to new words as occasion requires, or is imagined to require them.

There is another kind of composition more frequent in our language than perhaps in any other, from which arises to foreigners the greatest difficulty. We modify the signification of many words by a particle subjoined; as to come off, to escape by a fetch; to fall on, to attack; to fall off, to apostatize; to break off, to stop abruptly; to bear out, to justify; to fall in, to comply; to give over, to cease; to set off, to embellish; to set in, to begin a continual tenour; to set out, to begin a course or journey; to take off, to copy; with innumerable expressions of the same kind, of which some appear widely irregular, being so far distant from the sense of the simple words, that no sagacity will be able to trace the steps by which they arrived at the present use. These I have noted with great care; and though I cannot flatter myself that the collection is complete, I believe I have so far assisted the students of our language, that this kind of phraseology will be no longer insuperable; and the combinations of verbs and particles, by chance omitted, will be easily explained by comparison with those that may be found.

Many words yet stand supported only by the name of Bailey, Ainsworth, Philips, or the contracted Dictionaries subjoined; of these I am not always certain that they are read in any book but the works of lexicographers. Of such I have omitted many, because I had never read them; and many I have inserted, because they may perhaps exist, though they have escaped my notice: they are, however, to be yet considered as resting only upon the credit of former dictionaries. Others, which I considered as useful, or know to be proper, though I could not at present support them by authorities, I have suffered to stand upon my own attestation, claiming the same privilege with my predecessors, of being sometimes credited without proof.

The words, thus selected and disposed, are grammatically considered; they are referred to the different parts of speech, traced, when they are irregularly inflected, through their various terminations; and illustrated by observations, not indeed of great or striking importance, separately considered, but necessary to the elucidation of our language, and hitherto neglected or forgotten by English grammarians.

That part of my work on which I expect malignity most frequently to fasten, is the Explanation; in which I cannot hope to satisfy those, who are perhaps not inclined to be pleased, since I have not always been able to satisfy myself. To interpret a language by itself is very difficult; many words cannot be explained by synonyms, because the idea signified by them has not more than one appellation; nor by paraphrase, because simple ideas cannot be described. When the nature of things is unknown, or the notion unsettled and indefinite, and various in various minds, the words by which such notions are conveyed, or such things denoted, will be ambiguous and perplexed. And such is the fate of hapless lexicography, that not only darkness, but light, impedes and diffuses it; things may be not only too little, but too much known, to be happily illustrated. To explain, requires the use of terms less abstruse than that which is to be explained, and such terms cannot always be found; for as nothing can be proved but the supposing something intuitively known, and evident without proof, so nothing can be defined but by the use of words too plain to admit a definition.
PREFACE.

Other words there are, of which the sense is too subtle and evanescent to be fixed in a paraphrase; such are all those which are by the grammarians termed expletives, and, in dead languages, are suffered to pass for empty sounds, of no other use than to fill a verse, or to modulate a period, which are easily perceived in living tongues to have power and emphasis, though it be sometimes such as no other form of expression can convey.

My labour has likewise been much increased by a class of verbs too frequent in the English language, of which the signification is so loose and general, the use so vague and indeterminate, and the senses distorted so widely from the first idea, that it is hard to trace them through the maze of variation, to catch them on the brink of utter inanity, to circumscribe them by any limitations, or interpret them by any words of distinct and settled meaning; such are bear, break, come, cast, full, get, give, do, put, set, go, run, make, take, turn, throw. If of these the whole power is not accurately delivered, it must be remembered, that while our language is yet living, and variable by the caprice of every one that speaks it, these words are hourly shifting their relations, and can no more be ascertained in a dictionary, than a grove, in the agitation of a storm, can be accurately delineated from its picture in the water.

The particles are among all nations applied with so great latitude, that they are not easily reducible under any regular scheme of explication: this difficulty is not less, nor perhaps greater, in English, than in other languages. I have laboured them with diligence, I hope with success; such at least as can be expected in a task, which no man, however learned or sagacious, has yet been able to perform.

Some words there are which I cannot explain, because I do not understand them; these might have been omitted very often with little inconvenience, but I would not so far indulge my vanity as to decline this confession: for when Tully owns himself ignorant whether levis, in the twelve tables, means a funeral song, or mourning garment; and Aristotle doubts whether iberus, in the Iliad, signifies a mule, or muleteer, I may surely, without shame, leave some obscurities to happier industry, or future information.

The rigour of interpretative lexicography requires that the explanation, and the word explained, should be always reciprocal; this I have always endeavoured, but could not always attain. Words are seldom exactly synonymous; a new term was not introduced, but because the former was thought inadequate: names, therefore, have often many ideas, but few ideas have many names. It was then necessary to use the proximate word, for the deficiency of single terms can very seldom be supplied by circumlocution; nor is the inconvenience great of such mutilated interpretations, because the sense may easily be collected entire from the examples.

In every word of extensive use, it was requisite to mark the progress of its meaning, and show by what gradations of intermediate sense it has passed from its primitive to its remote and accidental signification; so that every foregoing explanation should tend to that which follows, and the series be regularly concatenated from the first notion to the last.

This is spesious, but not always practicable; kindred senses may be so interwoven, that the perplexity cannot be disentangled, nor any reason be assigned why one should be ranged before the other. When the radical idea branches out into parallel ramifications, how can a consecutive series be formed of senses in their nature collateral? The shades of meaning sometimes pass imperceptibly into each other; so that though on one side they apparently differ, yet it is impossible to mark the point of contact. Ideas of the same race, though not exactly alike, are sometimes so little different, that no words can express the difference; though the mind easily perceives it, when they are exhibited together; and sometimes there is such a confusion of acceptations, that difference is wearied, and distinction puzzled, and perseverance herself hurries to an end, by crowding together what she cannot separate.

These complaints of difficulty will, by those that have never considered words beyond their popular use, be thought only the jargon of a man willing to magnify his labours, and procure veneration to his studies by involution and obscurity. But every art is obscure to those that have not learned it: this uncertainty of terms, and commixture of ideas, is well known to those who have joined philosophy with grammar; and if I have not expressed them very clearly; it must be remembered that I am speaking of that which words are insufficient to explain.

The original sense of words is often driven out of use by their metaphorical acceptations; yet must be inferred for the sake of a regular origination. Thus I know not whether ardour is used for material heat, or whether fragrant, in English, ever signifies the same with burning; yet such are the primitive ideas of these words, which are therefore set first, though without examples, that the figurative senses may be commodiously deduced.

Such is the exuberance of signification which many words have obtained, that it was scarcely possible to collect all their senses; sometimes the meaning of derivatives must be sought in the mother term, and sometimes deficient explanations of the primitive may be supplied in the train of derivation. In any case of doubt or difficulty, it will be always proper to examine all the words of the same race; for some words are lightly passed over to avoid repetition, some admitted easier and clearer explanation than others, and all will be better understood, as they are considered in greater variety of structures and relations.

All the interpretations of words are not written with the same skill, or the same happiness: things equally easy in themselves, are not all equally easy to any single mind. Every writer of a long work commits errors, where there appears neither ambiguity to mislead, nor obscurity to confound him; and in a search like this, many felicities of expression will be casually overlooked, many convenient parallels will be forgotten, and many particulars will admit improvement from a mind utterly unequal to the whole performance.

But many seeming faults are to be imputed rather to the nature of the undertaking, than the negligence of the performer. Thus some explanations are unavoidably reciprocal or circular, as bind, the female of the flag; flag, the male of the hound: sometimes easier words are changed into harder, as burial into sepulture or interment, drier into defactive, dryness into fictitious or aridity, fit into paroxysm: for the easiest word, whatever it be, can never be translated into one more easy. But eafiness and difficulty are merely relative, and if the present prevalence of our language should invite foreigners to this dictionary, many will be asfitted by those words which now seem only to increase or produce obscurity. For this reason I have endeavoured frequently to join a Teutonick and Roman interpretation, as to cheer, to gladden, or exhilarate, that every learner of English may be asfitted by his own tongue.

The solution of all difficulties, and the supply of all defects, must be sought in the examples, subjoined to the various senses of each word, and ranged according to the time of their authors.

When I first collected these authorities, I was desirous that every quotation should be useful to some other end than the illustration of a word; I therefore extracted from philosophers principles of science; from historians remarkable facts; from chemists complete processes; from divines striking exhortations; and from poets beautiful descriptions. Such is design, while it is yet at a distance from execution. When the time called upon me to range this accumulation of elegance and wisdom into an alphabetical series, I soon discovered that the bulk of my volumes would fright away the student, and was forced to depart from my scheme of including all that was pleasing or useful in English literature, and reduce my transcriptions very often to clusters of words, in which scarcely any meaning is retained; thus to the weariness of copying, I was condemned to add the vexation of expunging. Some passages I have yet spared, which may relieve the labour of verbal searches, and intersperse with verdure and flowers the dusty deserts of barren philology.

The examples, thus mutilated, are no longer to be considered as conveying the sentiments or doctrine of their authors; the word for the sake of which they are inserted, with all its appendant clauses, has been carefully preferred; but it may sometimes happen, by hasty detruncation, that the general tendency of the sentence may be changed: the divine may defect his tenets, or the philosopher his system.

Some of the examples have been taken from writers who were never mentioned as matters of elegance or models of style; but words must be sought where they are used; and in what pages, eminent for purity, can terms of manufacture or agriculture be found? Many quotations serve no other purpose, than that of proving the bare existence of words, and are therefore selected with less scrupulousness than those which are to teach their structures and relations.

My purpose was to admit no testimony of living authors, that I might not be misled by partiality, and that none of my contemporaries might have reason to complain; nor have I departed from this resolution, but when some performance of uncommon excellence excited my veneration, when my memory supplied me, from late books, with an example that was wanting, or when my heart, in the tenderness of friendship, solicited admission for a favourite name.

So far have I been from any care to grace my pages with modern decorations, that I have studiously endeavoured to collect examples and authorities from the writers before the restoration, whose works I regard as the well of English undefiled, as the pure sources of genuine diction. Our language, for almost a century, has, by the concurrence of many causes, been gradually departing from its original Teutonic character, and deviating towards a Gallic structure and phraxeology, from which it ought to be our endeavour to recall it, by making our ancient volumes the ground-work of style, admitting among the additions of later times, only such as may supply real deficiencies, such as are readily adopted by the genius of our tongue, and incorporate easily with our native idioms.

But as every language has a time of rudeness antecedent to perfection, as well as of false refinement and declension, I have been cautious left my zeal for antiquity might drive me into times too remote, and crowd my book with words now no longer understood. I have fixed Sidney's work for the boundary, beyond which I make few excursions. From the authors which rose in the time of Elizabeth, a speech might be formed adequate to all the purposes of use and elegance. If the language of theology were extracted from Hooker and the translation of the Bible; the terms of natural knowledge from Bacon; the phrasés of policy, war, and navigation from Raleigh; the dialect of poetry and fiction from Spenser and Sidney; and the diction of common life from Shakespeare, few ideas would be lost to mankind, for want of English words, in which they might be expressed.

It is not sufficient that a word is found, unless it be so combined as that its meaning is apparently determined by the tract and tenour of the sentence; such passages I have therefore chosen, and when it happened that any author gave a definition of a term, or such an explanation as is equivalent to a definition, I have placed his authority as a supplement to my own, without regard to the chronological order, that is otherwise observed.

Some words, indeed, stand unsupported by any authority, but they are commonly derivative nouns, or adverbs, formed from their primitives by regular and constant analogy, or names of things seldom occurring in books, or words of which I have reason to doubt the existence.

There is more danger of censure from the multiplicity than paucity of examples; authorities will sometimes seem to have been accumulated without necessity or use, and perhaps some will be found, which might, without loss, have been omitted. But a work of this kind is not hastily to be charged with superfluities: those quotations, which to careless or unskilful perusers appear only to repeat the same sense, will often exhibit, to a more accurate examiner, diversities of signification, or, at least, afford different shades of the same meaning: one will shew the word applied to persons, another to things; one will express an ill, another a good, and a third a neutral sense; one will prove the expression genuine from an ancient author; another will shew it elegant from a modern: a doubtful authority is corroborated by another of more credit; an ambiguous sentence is ascertained by a passage clear and determinate; the word, how often ever repeated, appears with new associates and in different combinations, and every quotation contributes something to the stability or enlargement of the language.

When words are used equivocally, I receive them in either sense; when they are metaphorical, I adopt them in their primitive acceptation.

I have sometimes, though rarely, yielded to the temptation of exhibiting a genealogy of sentiments, by shewing how one author copied the thoughts and diction of another: such quotations are indeed little more than repetitions, which might justly be censured, did they not gratify the mind, by affording a kind of intellectual history.

The various syntactical structures occurring in the examples have been carefully noted; the licence or negligence with which many words have been hitherto used, has made our style capricious and indeterminate; when the different combinations of the same word are exhibited together, the preference is readily given to propriety, and I have often endeavoured to direct the choice.

Thus have I laboured by settling the orthography, displaying the analogy, regulating the structures, and ascertaining the signification of English words, to perform all the parts of a faithful lexicographer: but I have have not always executed my own scheme, or satisfied my own expectations. The work, whatever proofs of diligence and attention it may exhibit, is yet capable of many improvements: the orthography which I recommend is still controvertible, the etymology which I adopt is uncertain, and perhaps frequently erroneous; the explanations are sometimes too much contracted, and sometimes too much diffused, the significations are distinguished rather with subtilty than skill, and the attention is harass'd with unnecessary minuteness.

The examples are too often injudiciously truncated, and perhaps sometimes, I hope very rarely, alleged in a mistaken sense; for in making this collection I trusted more to memory, than, in a state of diffiquet and embarrassment, memory can contain, and purposed to supply at the review what was left incomplete in the first transcriptions.

Many terms appropriated to particular occupations, though necessary and signifieant, are undoubtedly omitted; and of the words most studiously considered and exemplified, many sences have escaped observation.

Yet these failures, however frequent, may admit extenuation and apology. To have attempted much is always laudable, even when the enterprize is above the strength that undertakes it: To rest below his own aim is incident to every one whose fancy is active, and whose views are comprehensive; nor is any man satisfied with himself because he has done much, but because he can conceive little. When first I engaged in this work, I resolved to leave neither words nor things unexamined, and pleased myself with a prospect of the hours which I should revel away in feats of literature, the obscure recesses of northern learning which I should enter and ramble, the treasures with which I expected every search into those neglected mines to reward my labour, and the triumph with which I should display my acquisitions to mankind. When I had thus enquired into the original of words, I resolved to show likewise my attention to things; to pierce deep into every science, to enquire the nature of every substance of which I inferred the name, to limit every idea by a definition strictly logical, and exhibit every production of art or nature in an accurate description, that my book might be in place of all other dictionaries whether appertaining or technical. But these were the dreams of a poet doomed at last to wake a lexicographer. I soon found that it is too late to look for instruments, when the work calls for execution, and that whatever abilities I had brought to my task, with those I must finally perform it. To deliberate whenever I doubted, to enquire whenever I was ignorant, would have protracted the undertaking without end, and, perhaps, without much improvement; for I did not find by my first experiments, that what I had not of my own was easily to be obtained: I saw that one enquiry only gave occasion to another, that book referred to book, that to search was not always to find, and to find was not always to be informed; and that thus to pursue perfection, was, like the first inhabitants of Arcadia, to chase the sun, which, when they had reached the hill where he seemed to rest, was still beheld at the same distance from them.

I then contracted my design, determining to confide in myself, and no longer to solicit auxiliaries, which produced more incumbrance than assistance: by this I obtained at least one advantage, that I set limits to my work, which would in time be ended, though not completed.

Dependancy has never so far prevailed, as to depress me to negligence; some faults will at last appear to be the effects of anxious diligence and persevering activity. The nice and subtle ramifications of meaning were not easily avoided by a mind intent upon accuracy, and convinced of the necessity of disentangling combinations, and separating similitudes. Many of the distinctions, which to common readers appear useless and idle, will be found real and important by men versed in the school philosophy, without which no dictionary can ever be accurately compiled, or skilfully examined.

Some senses however there are, which, though not the same, are yet so nearly allied, that they are often confounded. Most men think indistinctly, and therefore cannot speak with exactness; and consequently some examples might be indifferently put to either signification: this uncertainty is not to be imputed to me, who do not form, but register the language; who do not teach men how they should think, but relate how they have hitherto expressed their thoughts.

The imperfect sense of some examples I lamented, but could not remedy, and hope they will be compensated by innumerable passages selected with propriety, and preserved with exactness; some shining with sparks of imagination, and some replete with treasures of wisdom.

The orthography and etymology, though imperfect, are not imperfect for want of care, but because care will not always be successful, and recollection or information come too late for use.

That
That many terms of art and manufacture are omitted, must be frankly acknowledged; but for this defect I may boldly allege that it was unavoidable: I could not visit caverns to learn the miner’s language, nor take a voyage to perfect my skill in the dialect of navigation, nor visit the warehouses of merchants, and shops of artificers, to gain the names of wares, tools and operations, of which no mention is found in books; what favourable accident, or easy enquiry brought within my reach, has not been neglected; but it had been a hopeless labour to glean up words, bycourting living information, and contesting with the fullness of one, and the roughness of another.

To furnish the academicians della Crusca with words of this kind, a series of comedies called la Fiera, or the Fair, was professedly written by Buonarotti; but I had no such assistant, and therefore was content to want what they must have wanted likewise, had they not luckily been supplied.

Nor are all words which are not found in the vocabulary, to be lamented as omissions. Of the laborious and mercantile part of the people, the diction is in a great measure casual and mutable; many of their terms are formed for some temporary or local convenience, and though current at certain times and places, are in others utterly unknown. This fugitive cant, which is always in a state of increase or decay, cannot be regarded as any part of the durable materials of a language, and therefore must be suffered to perish with other things unworthy of preservation.

Care will sometimes betray to the appearance of negligence. He that is catching opportunities which seldom occur, will suffer those to pass by unregarded, which he expects hourly to return; he that is searching for rare and remote things, will neglect those that are obvious and familiar: thus many of the most common and cursory words have been infected with little illustration, because in gathering the authorities, I forbore to copy those which I thought likely to occur whenever they were wanted. It is remarkable that, in reviewing my collection, I found the word Sea unexemplified.

Thus it happens, that in things difficult there is danger from ignorance, and in things easy from confidence; the mind, afraid of greatness, and disdainful of littleness, hastily withdraws herself from painful searches, and palls with scornful rapidity over tasks not adequate to her powers, sometimes too secure for caution, and again too anxious for vigorous effort; sometimes idle in a plain path, and sometimes distracted in labyrinths, and dispirited by different intentions.

A large work is difficult because it is large, even though all its parts might singly be performed with facility; where there are many things to be done, each must be allowed its share of time and labour, in the proportion only which it bears to the whole; nor can it be expected, that the stones which form the dome of a temple, should be squared and polished like the diamond of a ring.

Of the event of this work, for which, having laboured it with so much application, I cannot but have some degree of parental fondness, it is natural to form conjectures. Those who have been persuaded to think well of my design, will require that it should fix our language, and put a stop to those alterations which time and chance have hitherto been suffered to make in it without opposition. With this confluence I will confess that I flattered myself for a while; but now begin to fear that I have indulged expectation which neither reason nor experience can justify. When we see men grow old and die at a certain time one after another, from century to century, we laugh at the elixir that promises to prolong life to a thousand years; and with equal justice may the lexicographer be derided, who being able to produce no example of a nation that has preserved their words and phrases from mutability, shall imagine that his dictionary can embalm his language, and secure it from corruption and decay, that it is in his power to change sublunary nature, and clear the world at once from folly, vanity, and affectation.

With this hope, however, academies have been instituted, to guard the avenues of their languages, to retain fugitives, and repulse intruders; but their vigilance and activity have hitherto been vain; sounds are too volatile and subtle for legal restraints; to enchain syllables, and to lath the wind, are equally the undertakings of pride, unwilling to measure its desires by its strength. The French language has visibly changed under the inscription of the academy; the style of Amelot’s translation of father Paul is observed by Le Courayer to be un peu passe; and no Italian will maintain, that the diction of any modern writer is not perceptibly different from that of Boccace, Machiavel, or Caro.

Total and sudden transformations of a language seldom happen; conquests and migrations are now very rare; but there are other causes of change, which, though flow in their operation, and invisible in their progress, are perhaps as much superior to human resistance, as the revolutions of the sky, or intumescence of the tide. Commerce, however necessary, however lucrative, as it deprives the manners, corrupts the language; they that have frequent intercourse with strangers, to whom they endeavour to accommodate themselves, must in time learn a mingled dialect, like the jargon which serves the traffickers on the Mediterranean and Indian coasts. This will not always be confined to the exchange, the warehouse, or the port, but will be communicated by degrees to other ranks of the people, and be at last incorporated with the current speech.

There are likewise internal causes equally forcible. The language most likely to continue long without alteration, would be that of a nation raised a little, and but a little, above barbarity, secluded from strangers, and totally employed in procuring the conveniences of life; either without books, or, like some of the Mahometan countries, with very few: men thus buffeted and unlearned, having only such words as common use requires, would perhaps long continue to express the same notions by the same signs. But no such constancy can be expected in a people polished by arts, and clasped by subordination, where one part of the community is sustained and accommodated by the labour of the other. Those who have much leisure to think, will always be enlarging the flock of ideas; and every increase of knowledge, whether real or fancied, will produce new words, or combinations of words. When the mind is unchained from necessity, it will range after convenience; when it is left at large in the fields of speculation, it will shift opinions; as any custom is diffused, the words that expressed it must perish with it; as any opinion grows popular, it will innovate speech in the same proportion as it alters practice.

As by the cultivation of various sciences a language is amplified, it will be more furnished with words deflected from their original sense; the geometrical will talk of a courtier's zenith, or the eccentric virtue of a wild hero, and the physician of fanguine expectations and phlegmatick delays. Copiousness of speech will give opportunities to capricious choice, by which some words will be preferred, and others degraded; vicissitudes of fashion will enforce the use of new, or extend the signification of known terms. The tropes of poetry will make hourly encroachments, and the metaphorical will become the current sense: pronunciation will be varied by levity or ignorance, and the pen must at length comply with the tongue; illiterate writers will, at one time or other, by publick infatuation, rise into renown, who, not knowing the original import of words, will use them with colloquial licentiousness, confound distinction, and forget propriety. As politeness increases, some expressions will be considered as too gross and vulgar for the delicate, others as too formal and ceremonious for the gay and airy; new phrasés are therefore adopted, which must, for the same reasons, be in time disused. Swift, in his pettish treatise on the English language, allows that new words must sometimes be introduced, but proposes that none should be suffered to become obsolete. But what makes a word obsolete, more than general agreement to forbear it? and how shall it be continued, when it conveys an offensive idea, or recalled again into the mouths of mankind, when it has once become unfamilar by disuse, and unpleasing by unfamilarity?

There is another cause of alteration more prevalent than any other, which yet is the present state of the world cannot be obviated. A mixture of two languages will produce a third distinct from both, and they will always be mixed, where the chief part of education, and the most conspicuous accomplishment, is skill in ancient or in foreign tongues. He that has long cultivated another language, will find its words and combinations crowd upon his memory; and haste and negligence, refinement and affectation, will obtrude borrowed terms and exotick expressions.

The great object of speech is frequency of translation. No book was ever turned from one language into another, without imparting something of its native idiom; this is the most mischievous and comprehensive innovation; single words may enter by thousands, and the fabric of the tongue continue the same; but new phrasology changes much at once; it alters not the single stones of the building, but the order of the columns. If an academy should be established for the cultivation of our style, which I, who can never wish to fee dependance multiplied, hope the spirit of English liberty will hinder or destroy, let them, instead of compiling grammars and dictionaries, endeavour, with all their influence, to stop the licentious of translators, whose idleness and ignorance, if it be suffered to proceed, will reduce us to babble a dialect of France.

If the changes that we fear be thus irresistible, what remains but to acquiesce with silence, as in the other insurmountable distresses of humanity? It remains that we retard what we cannot repel, that we palliate what we cannot cure. Life may be lengthened by care, though death cannot be ultimately defeated.
tongues, like governments, have a natural tendency to degeneration; we have long preserved our constitution, let us make some struggles for our language.

In hope of giving longevity to that which its own nature forbids to be immortal, I have devoted this book, the labour of years, to the honour of my country, that we may no longer yield the palm of philology, without a contest, to the nations of the continent. The chief glory of every people arises from its authors: whether I shall add any thing by my own writings to the reputation of English literature, must be left to time: much of my life has been lost under the pressures of disease; much has been trifled away; and much has always been spent in provision for the day that was passing over me; but I shall not think my employment useless or ignorable, if by my assistance foreign nations, and distant ages, gain access to the propagators of knowledge, and understand the teachers of truth; if my labours afford light to the repositories of science, and add celebrity to Bacon, to Hooker, to Milton, and to Boyle.

When I am animated by this wish, I look with pleasure on my book, however defective, and deliver it to the world with the spirit of a man that has endeavoured well. That it will immediately become popular I have not promised to myself: a few wild blunders, and trifling absurdities, from which no work of such multiplicity was ever free, may for a time furnish folly with laughter, and harden ignorance in contempt; but useful diligence will at last prevail, and there never can be wanting some who distinguish defect; who will consider that no dictionary of a living tongue ever can be perfect, since while it is hastening to publication, some words are budding, and some falling away; that a whole life cannot be spent upon syntax and etymology, and that even a whole life would not be sufficient; that he, whose design includes whatever language can express, must often speak of what he does not understand; that a writer will sometimes be hurried by eagerness to the end, and sometimes faint with weariness under a task, which Scaliger compares to the labours of the anvil and the mine; that what is obvious is not always known, and what is known is not always present; that sudden fits of inadvertency will surprize vigilance, slight avocations will seduce attention, and casual eclipses of the mind will darken learning; and that the writer shall often in vain trace his memory at the moment of need, for that which yesterday he knew with intuitive readiness, and which will come uncalled into his thoughts to-morrow.

In this work, when it shall be found that much is omitted, let it not be forgotten that much likewise is performed; and though no book was ever spared out of tenderness to the author, and the world is little solicitous to know whence proceeded the faults of that which it condemns; yet it may gratify curiosity to inform it, that the English Dictionary was written with little assistance of the learned, and without any patronage of the great; not in the soft obscurities of retirement, or under the shelter of academick bowers; but amidst inconvenience and distraction, in sickness and in sorrow. It may represent the triumph of malignant criticism to observe, that if our language is not here fully displayed, I have only failed in an attempt which no human powers have hitherto completed. If the lexicons of ancient tongues, now immutably fixed, and comprised in a few volumes, be yet, after the toil of successive ages, inadequate and delusive; if the aggregated knowledge, and co-operating diligence of the Italian academicians, did not secure them from the cenure of Bemi, if the emblazoned criticisms of France, when fifty years had been spent upon their work, were obliged to change its economy, and give their second edition another form, I may surely be contented without the praise of perfection, which, if I could obtain, in this gloom of solitude, what would it avail me? I have protracted my work till most of those whom I wished to please have sunk into the grave, and success and miscarriage are empty sounds: I therefore dismiss it with frigid tranquility, having little to fear or hope from cenure or from praise.

THE
THOUGH the Britains or Welsh were the first possessors of this island, whose names are recorded, and are therefore in civil history always considered as the predecessors of the present inhabitants; yet the deduction of the English language, from the earliest times of which we have any knowledge to its present state, requires no mention of them: for we have so few words which can, with any probability, be referred to British roots, that we justly regard the Saxons and Welsh as nations totally distinct. It has been conjectured, that when the Saxons seized this country, they suffered the Britains to live among them in a state of vassalage, employed in the culture of the ground, and other laborious and ignoble services. But it is scarcely possible, that a nation, however depressed, should have been mixed with another in considerable numbers without some communication of their tongue, and therefore, it may, with great reason, be imagined, that those, who were not sheltered in the mountains, perished by the sword.

The whole fabrick and scheme of the English language is Gotbick or Teutonick: it is a dialect of that tongue, which prevails over all the northern countries of Europe, except those where the Saxonian is spoken. Of these languages Dr. Hickes has thus exhibited the genealogy.

GOTHICK,

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Anglo-Saxon</th>
<th>Francick</th>
<th>Cimbrick,</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dutch</td>
<td>German</td>
<td>Islandick,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Frisick</td>
<td></td>
<td>Norwegian,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>English</td>
<td></td>
<td>Swedish,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Danish,</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Of the Gotbick, the only monument remaining is a copy of the gospels somewhat mutilated, which, from the silver with which the characters are adorned, is called the silver book. It is now preferred at Upfal, and having been twice published before, has been lately reprinted at Oxford, under the inspection of Mr. Lye, the editor of Junius. Whether the diction of this venerable manuscript be purely Gotbick, has been doubted; it seems however to exhibit the most ancient dialect now to be found of the Teutonick race; and the Saxon, which is the original of the present English, was either derived from it, or both have descended from some common parent.

What was the form of the Saxon language, when, about the year 450, they first entered Britain, cannot now be known. They seem to have been a people without learning, and very probably without an alphabet; their speech, therefore, having been always curvory and extemporaneous, must have been artless and unconnected, without any modes of transition or invention of clauses; which abruptness and inconnection may be observed even in their later writings. This barbarity may be supposed to have continued during their wars with the Britains, which for a time left them no leisure for foster studies; nor is there any reason for supposing it abated, till the year 570, when Augustine came from Rome to convert them to Christianity. The Christian religion always implies or produces a certain degree of civility and learning; they then became by degrees acquainted with the Roman language, and so gained, from time to time, some knowledge and elegance, till in three centuries they had formed a language capable of expressing all the sentiments of a civilized people, as appears appears by king Alfred’s paraphrase or imitation of Beowulf, and his short preface, which I have selected as the first specimen of ancient English.

CAP. I.

ON Eæne tide the Levan of Sidonum magnæ pib Romana jucie zepin upahopon.
jum heopia cymingum. Radicora and Calleianip paro hate. Romane bunip abacon.
and all Italia jucie t i bertux ham muntum
q Binia hám ealonde in anpald gezepiton.
ß a acen ham porpeppccen cymingum Deoqnic pöng to ham
ilcan nice. pe Deoqnic par Amulinga, he pag Uprten. ßeh he on ham Arhurianic zepolan duplipunode. De gebet Romanum hir fpredique. ppa t hi-mortan heopia ealopbhia pynnbe beon. Ac he ßa gebet pripde yele geleste.
ß yppde vpfe zeendode mid manege mane.
ß par to eacan oqsum anqumemum yylhum.
ß he johanner bone papan het opplae.
ßa pe tump conful, pe ße hepetotab hatap.
Boeatr pag haken, pe pér in bocacentrim
j on populs eanpending re pihupirtschafta.
ßa onccent ßa manipebladan ypel ße re cyaning Deoqnic pib ham Uprtenandone ß pib ßam Romanisrum pitum
üye. he ßa zemundzana eapnpena ßa ealopbhia de hi unson ham Larepe ham heopia ealophilopodum. Da ongan he yrmeaz ßan on him pelpum hu he ßy nice ham unqhipirycning apenm mbute. ßa on qyht gelepyppla and on pihuipryca anplbd gezibungan.
ßede ßa bigellce yeempqepmittu to ham
Larepe to Constantiropolim. ßap ß Eptca heah huncg ß heopia cymertzol.
ßom ham re Larepe par heopia ealophilopod cyner.
ßadon hine ßat he him to heopia Uprtendomo ß to heopia ealophilopod gezpultumde. ßa ßa gebet re pellepeopa cyming Deoqnic. ßat he ße gezibungan on canepen ßat yppde imebelan. ßa hit ßa gelomp ß re appuryde per on pra mcelepe neapennerre be-
com. ßa pe ßa micle yppricon on hir Mode gepereph. ßap hir hir Mod æn yppricon to ham populd re yuq unqoped per. ß he ßa nanne pprope he inman ham canepen ne zemundz.
ß he gepeol nipol of bene on ßa aton.
ß one armepnete ypppe unneot. and ornpod hine rypne
ppag ypppar ß fyr upingen de cpeh.

CAP. II.

DA hod ße ße epe ceppra geco duplilec poyng.
ße p eccentrico epiepenhe pringun.
ßi mep ypi w zepo-sum popum gezepettan.
ßap hir geco leipum decplilec pynbe. ac ßc ßi nepenbe ß yppnepede of zepoq popa miqeo, me ablenand ßar unpe-ppenopan popuold ppelpa, ßa ßa pofletan ppa blinde on hir ommbe hol.
ßa nepenod ockene lypcanepeppre
ßa ßa him yppbe betst tunpade. ßa penton hu me heopia bec to and me mid ealle yppnepettan.
ßo phon reedolaman
mine yppnde pexgen betc är ygerlep mon pepe, hu magre beon yerlep re be on dam ygerlep
Dulipuman ne moti.

CAP. III.

DA ßa ßa hir leof, cpeeh Boeatr, zeepnende ayungen hape. ßa com ßan gan in to me heoepencond pircom. ßa ßap mnjepne ßod mid hir popum gezeppete.
ßap cpeh. ßa ße
epene ßa men pe on munpe roole pepe aep ßeenbe.
ßa hpopon pypde ßu mid pircom populd popum hir ppiphe gezeppende.
buton ßc pa ß
ßa hycet ßana peppana to hycet popgten ßc ßc ße är realebe.
ßa cypode ße pircom ß cpeh.
Lepph ßu ayungen pepopul popa of mynpe hepene Mode.
ßapjam ße mid ßa
manep ypealama.
ßetap hine éep ehpopean to minun lapum.
ßa eode ße pircom
nep.
cpeeh Boeatr,
minum heepnende gezepette.
ßit ßa mepo follic hat hpeza upande, appube ßa manynep
Modor eagen.
and hit peep popum hepphen hit onconepe hir yepennemod.
ßap
ßa ßa Mod midh pepe.
ßa zeecnop
ripiphe yeepette hir agne modon.
ßer ße pic-
com ße hit lapte æn ryche.
ßa hit on-peep hir yape ripif totempennhe ßripif yepennene mid ypppe hombun.
ßyhe ßa ßap
ße ßepunde.
ßa anuppyde ße piccom hir ßa rahe.
ßiir yppnepan
hedonhine ßa totempenne.
ßep ßap
hec nehdon. ßa ßa
heopia ealhbe
peep yppnepettan.
ßap ßa ßa
epenpepe. ßa ßeppee ppiccom hir ßa
rahe.
ßiir
yppnepan
hedonhine ßa totempenne.
ßep ßap
hec nehdon. ßa ßa
heopia ealhbe
peep yppnepettan.
ßap ßa ßa
epenpepe. ßa ßeppee
ppiccom hir ßa
rahe.
ßiir
yppnepan
hedonhine ßa totempenne.

This may perhaps be considered as a specimen of the Saxen in its highest state of purity, for here are scarcely any words borrowed from the Roman dialects.
Of the following version of the gospels the age is not certainly known, but it was probably written between the time of Alfred and that of the Norman conquest, and therefore may properly be inferred here.

Translations seldom afford just specimens of a language, and leaf of all those in which a scrupulous and verbal interpretation is endeavoured, because they retain the phraseology and structure of the original-tongue; yet they have often this convenience, that the same book, being translated in different ages, affords opportunity of marking the gradations of change, and bringing one age into comparison with another. For this purpose I have placed the Saxon version and that of Wickliffe, written about the year 1380, in opposite columns, because the convenience of easy collation seems greater than that of regular chronology.

L U C A E, C A P. I.

FORBAW he pricodice manega pohton Papa vinga nace ge-endebyndon pe on yr gepyllede rent.
2 Spa yr betehtun pa de hit of pyymde geparon, and byne prynace beryn pepon.
3 Me geplute [of-geplute from pyuma] geopniece eallum, [mip] endebyndonere ryt
ce. pu de relutra Theophilup.
4 Hef pu ononape bana ponpa rodferntere.
off fam de pu seleped arpe.
5 On penoper dagum ludea cynnecge, purp rump raceno on naman Zachapayr, of Abian tune.
7 hur pip per of Aypone dothun, and hynpe nama per Elizabeth.
6 Solice hir pepon butu pihtyfere beopon
Lode. gangende on eallum hir bebodum y piht-piyfere butan pyhote.
7 And hir nacoon nan bainn. popham de Elizabeth per unbepende. y hy on hynya dagum buctu zopd-codon:
8 Soalice per geponden pa Zachapayr hir racerbader breacon hir geypynery endebyndonere beopon Lode.
9 Efetep geyunan hir racerbader bletter, he eode y hy hir opynunge rette. da hy on Loder tempel code.
10 Call penop dit polcer per ufe gebiddende on bryne opynunge timan.
11 Da zepyrome hym Dnitnere engel stonde ende per peoperb pyhpian heale.
12 Da peape Zachapayr gebraced y zere-
one. y hym ege onhepar.
13 Da eap de engel him to. Ne onopeh mu de Zachapayr. popham pin ben yr gepluere.
15 pin per Elizabeth ye runu cend. and hy nemt hir naman Iohanner.
14 y he byd pe to zepene I to byrre. y
manega on hir acenedezer geypynad.
15 Soalice he byd maye beopon Dnitnere, and he ne oynce pin ne bopn. y he byd zepylle on haligm Larte. yonne yht of hir moosn innode.
16 And manega Jpyahela beanna he gebyn to Dnitnere hynpa Lode.

L U K, C A P. I.

IN the days of Eroude kyng of Judee ther was a prest Zacharye by name: of the fort of Abia, and his wyf was of the doughtris of Aaron: and hir name was Elizabeth.
2 An bothe were just before God: goynge in alle the maundements and justifyingis of the Lord without playnte.
3 And thei hadden no child, for Elizabeth was bareyn and bothe were of greet age in her dayes.
4 And it bifel that whanne Zacharye schould do the office of presthod in the ordir of his course to fore God.
5 Aftir the custum of the presthod, he wente forth by lot and entride into the temple to encenfe.

6 And at the multitude of the puple was without forth and preyede in the our of encenfing.
7 And an angel of the Lord apperide to him:
and stood on the right half of the auter of en-cenfe.
8 And Zacharye seynge was aysrayed: and drede fel upon hym.
9 And the angel sayde to him, Zachary drede thou not: for thyn preier is herd, and Elizabeth thi wif schal here to thee a bone: and his name schal be ecleid Jon.
10 And joye and gladyng schal be to thee: and manye schulen have joye in his nativyte.
11 For he schal be great before the Lord: and he schal not drinke wyn ne fydyr, and he schal be fulfild with the holy goft yit of his modir wombe.
12 And he schal converte manye of the children of Israel to her Lord God.
58 tie hype nechbeunye tie hype cuban tie gehynnon. tie Dphiren hir mid-heonntenje mid ti hype maniowde tie hir mid hype blispordon:
59 Da on jam eltedoan oaye tie comon tie cub ymbradnan. and nemdon hir fadren namin Zachapiam:

60 Dapentrapode hir modon. Ne re poder.
ac he brd lohannen genemned:
61 Da crashan. li to hype. Nir nan on hynne
ma. De jyrym naman genemned:
62 Da bencodon li to hir peden. Ipait he polde hype genenmede beon:
63 Pu prat he gezedenum pex-brede. lohannner hir name. Da punnondon hir ealle:
64 Da peap" pona hir mid tie hir tunye openen: J the rpnaec. Dphiren blertynende:
65 Da peap" oge zeponden open ealle hype nechbeunye. and open ealle ludea munt-land pepon jon pond zepimmenode:
66 J ealle ba be hype gezedun. on hype heontan weton j crashon. Betre bu hirat by feir snapa. pirodlice Dphiren hand paf mid him:
67 And Zachapiam hir peden paf mid hale-tum lafte gezyleed. J the ptregeode and crae.
68 Lieble猇 ry Dphiren Iznahela Lord. pop-ym he be geoneord. J hir polde alypyrejere byde.

69 And he up hate hoph anapode on Dauner hype hir cnhter.
70 Spa he rpmec buh hir halegana pizgiene
mund: ba be of poldier gyym be rpnaec:
71 J the alype w of upum peondum. and op calpa bopia handa be up hatebun.
72 Mid-heontenje to vyrcenne mid upum fadenum. J gemonen hir halegana cydenne.
73 8yne wy to riyllene bone do be pe upum faden Abraham popen.
74 Dat pe butan ege. of upne pconanda
alypebe. him heopan

75 On aligenejere bepojan him cookum upum dagen:
76 And bu snapa hirt har heyrten pizgiene zenemned. bu zarte bepojan Dphiren anyne.
hir pegir zappin.
77 To ryllene hir polde hate gezire on hype
jyyna forsyjenne.
78 Buu inmodar uper Goder mid-heontenjere.
on him be up geoneord op eardebele up-rymmyndene.
79 Onlycan jam be on yryrnum J on wader reade rittad. upne pet to genecenne on nibbe
reg.
80 Solice re snapa poex. J paf on garre geterpazod. J paf on pettenum od bone letag hir aytjeyejennum on Iznahel.
Of the Saxon poetry some specimen is necessary, though our ignorance of the laws of their metre and the quantities of their syllables, which it would be very difficult, perhaps impossible, to recover, excludes us from that pleasure which the old bards undoubtfully gave to their contemporaries.

The first poetry of the Saxons was without rhyme, and consequently must have depended upon the quantity of their syllables; but they began in time to imitate their neighbours, and close their verses with correspondent sounds.

The two passages, which I have selected, contain apparently the rudiments of our present lyric measures, and the writers may be justly considered as the genuine ancestors of the English poets.

De mai him pope apópezen,
Dev he ñanne one biwde ne mugen,
Uop e blumpted ilome.
De ir pir ñ bit and bote
And bet buopen dome.
Deid com on ñir mideland
Dudp day defle ther onde,
And yenne and forse and iptime,
On ye and on londe.

Ic am elden ñanne ic per,
A pynen ñe ñe a loren.
Ic ealbi mone ñanne ic deye,
O ñir oplece to bi mone.
Se ñe hine releu uopger,
Uop pue opeñ uop childe.
De ral comen on euele jëcde,
Bute zôd him bi midle.

Ne hopie pir to hipe penne,
Ne pene to pue pire.
Bi ron him releu eupich man,
Drep pyle he biñg alue.

Eupich man mids ñe he haude,
Mai bëtgen heuphiche.
Se ñe leftr ñe ñe de mone,
Bene aircen diche.

Dëwene and eide he orenpied,
Dif eghen bid pulbëhtr.
Sôme ñe mone ñe alle fëppen,
Bëd ñëptre on ñir liphe.

Se pot hpet ñencheñ and hpet doph,
Alë quike phike.

Nñr no louenp pich ñir xirñ,
Ne no king pich ñir ñibiche.

Dëwene ñ eipde ñal ñat ñir,
Biloken ñir on ñir honde.

Pëd al ñir hir pyle ñir,
On ñir and ec on londe.

Se ñir opd abutën opde,
And ende abutën ende.

Se one ñir eune on eche jëcde,
Wende pën odu pende,

De ir buuen up and bineñen,
Buopen and ec bihme.
Se man ñ gëpere pillé ñed,
Die mai hine ahpban unde.

Eche pune he thenñ,
And pot eche ñede.

De ñuphe rëg ñecher ñëcane,
Wai hpat rël up to ñede.

Se man neune nele von god,
Ne neune god lip lënden.

En ñëd ñ dom come to hir ñune,
Se mai him röpe apÖZen.

Dënger ñ duprët ñere ñe ñele,
Eche and all unhelide.

Duph ñëd com on ñir mideland,
And ópën unyelide.

Ne mai non hepte hir ñenche,
Ne no tunge tellë.

Du muchële ñinum and hir ñele,
Bëd inne helie.

Loure ëod mid ñe ñelepte.
And mid all ñele midte.

And ñone eincërreten jëo up rël,
Sop up lëpëd ñinhte.

Sôme ñëm habbëd ñësës ñenche,
And rume ñëm habbëd mone.

Ech oñepend ñan ñe he ñede,
Oñepend ñe ñëpan ñone.

Ne rël ñëm bi ñpeñ ñe ñin,
Ne ñopen kënnen ñerte.

Lod one rël ñ bi echer lip,
And ñyrece and eche ñerçe.

Ne rël ñan ñ bi ñerçe ñe ñreñu,
Ne pojped ñerle pele none.

Ac ñi mëpës ñi men ñr biñat,
All räl ñen ñod one.

Ne mai no mëpës ñi jëo ñuclë,
Sop ñir gëdre ñuðë.

Bi ñir rëp jëne and ñuñht,
And ñš ñutë nihëte.

Dëp ñi ñele ñutë ñane,
And ñerçe ñutë ñrpinche.

Se ñi mai and ñele ñcede come,
Sôme hir ñel ñuncheñche.

Dëp ñi ñyrece ñutë ñeçe,
And ñp ñutë ñade.

Dëc eune pullen ñunche ñëp,
Blide bi bëp and ñafe.

Dëp ñi ñeçë搬家 ñutë ñede,
And ñede ñutë unhelie.

Nñr ñëp pûjte ñe ñop ñon,
Ne non unyelide.

Dëp me rël ñuñten ñreñ,
Sop ñer he ñir mid ñyrre.

Dëp one mai and ñel ai ñiën,
Engler and mënner ñyrece.
About the year 1150, the Saxon began to take a form in which the beginning of the present English may be plainly discovered; this change seems not to have been the effect of the Norman conquest, for very few French words are found to have been introduced in the first hundred years after it; the language must therefore have been altered by causes like those which, notwithstanding the care of writers and societies instituted to obviate them, are even now daily making-innovations in every living language. I have exhibited a specimen of the language of this age from the year 1135 to 1140 of the Saxon chronicle, of which the latter part was apparently written near the time to which it relates.
ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

...to don on the handern-pyescan. And he beget in lander. a piece men herein mid repenge: of Willem: Wilts will he solden Roystharn he carv on he pan Lotinghe y Orton. y op byco of Wite- ute he pan byttinglo. y Scanepic. y xl. pop. of Aldenpingle alt yen. And he makest manie muneket. y plantes: pimruckt. y makest; manie peopker. y pende to tun betepe han it eyn pay. and pef god munece god man. y popdi huueben God and gode men. Nu pe pilten yen en tol par belamp on Stephene kinger time. On hir time he Juseur of Non-pie bohten an Lysreten cul beopnen Orten. and puden him alle he ilce pinin g y une Dhuinht pan pined. and on lang- pruden him on pode hengen pon une Dhuinhtner luue. y ryden bypueben him. Wenden y it pindleben ben pop holen. oc une Dhuinht atyppede y he par halu mactyp. y to muneket him namen. y bebnyeke him helke. in de mypene. y he makest hun in Dhuinht punenlise and mani- pableuce mypeker. y hatte he y Willem:

On hir geen com Dauro king of Scotland mid opmrite pape to hir land polede pinnan hir land. he com toegenre Willem ecop of Albaman heking ashe betehe Guon-pie. y to oep suez men mid exu men y firehten piod heom. y pebmen he kinger te randep. y plogen pynke miele on hir zengen.

On hir geen polede he king Stephene tecen Rob- bent ecop of Lousaretce. he kinger rune Denuer. ac he ne mihte pop he pape it pan. Da eften hi be lengten pertepe he runne y te tei abution nootend deyer. ha men eten y me lihtede candelor. te aten bi. y par xiii. k. April. pepon men pynke opgunde. Den eften popd-peogene Wil- lem xnce-byroop of Lantspan-byng. y te kinging beote.; Tebalb xnce-byroop. y he pape abbot in he Be. Den eften pax pynke mihte uwepne betuyx he kiny y Randole ecop of Lysrete nonhe popdi y he ne jaf he am al y he cuke axen him. alfe he vide alle odene. oc apepe bemanu iap heom he penpe he papeon him. y de copi heald Lincoln agyn. y benam him al y he atbe to hauen. y te king. pop. popen. y bepsethe he y hi broneth Willem de R... aye in he carcel. y te copi reall ut y pop he eften Robbent ecop of Lous- cetere. y bhophe him piden mihte pynke. y huueben grube on Landelmaerse-ziag agyn. heope lauepc. y namen him. pop hen men him ruyeke plegen. y ludhe him to Bynteco and bidon pan in pyprun. y ... tenep. Da par all Engle-land repen man han ex pay. and all ywel pay in lande. Den eften he kinger doleton Denyer he hepere ben Empene on Alamanie. y nu pay cuntetre in Angou. y com to Lunden. y te Landenbryce pole heipe pole teceen y cece pleh. y posper par mihte: Den eften be byroop of Win caryte Denu. he kinger brodene Stephener.

ppac pib Robbent ecop y pib hennepence and y pyn- heom abar y he nepeine ma mid te king hi broneth polde halben. y cupebe alle he men he mid him heolden. y rype heom y he polde fiuen heom up Win-caryte. and namen Robbent ecop of Lous-caryte and lebed him to Roue-caryte. and viden him pane in pyprun. and te empence plehe into an myartere. Da eopden he dpe men be- t spying. he kinger penebo y te eopler penebo. and y pyned lune y me yeuile leten ut he king of pyprun sone he ecop. y te eoplon pop he king. y rra biden. siden y eften pahlenede he king y Ran- dole ecop at Scan-piep. y afer pypoen and tenyde pertepon y hep noude yeuile beprukend oepen. y he ne popy-rod nahte. pop he king fiden nam in Bamten. pyphe pecc peed. y bide he in pyprun. y op poner he let him ut yuine pypere pedo to pynenpe he y puon on haldom. y gyerler hand. y he alle he king carter yeuile fiuen up. some he iar up. and yuine ne iar he noht. and bide pane pypere danhe he hau yeuile. Da par Engle-land ruide to-bele. yme heiden mid te king. y yume mid hennepence. pop. he king par in pyprun. he penden he eopler y te nice men y he nepeine mape yeuile cumme ut. y pethlebed pyn hennepence. he bhothen heipe into Oxen-pone. and auwen heipe he buxhe. Da beking par ute. he hepe y segen. and toce hef popd. y hezet heipe in he tup. y me ket heipe bun on nicht op he tup mid pape. y rral ut y cece pleh y aede on pote to Waling-pone. Den eften pce pende open rae. y hi of Nonumandi penden alle pna he king to he ecop of Angee. pume hepe panker y pume hepe un-panker. pop he hezet heom till hi auruen up hepe carter. y hi nan helpe ne hearden op he king. Da pende Surfage he kinger rune to France. ynam he kinger runter of France to pipe. penden to bigaton Nonumandi pyn huphe. oc he pendebe trelol. y be gode juphe. pop he par an yvel man. pop papehe he ... y vale pyna yuine panne god. he nepebe he lander ladebe mc. y on. benhoite heipe pyp to Engle-land. y bide heipe in he carse. ... ceb. god pinman pce pay. oc pce hebude trelol bluysse mid him. y xipte ne polede y he yeuile langed pynhe. y pepend he and moyebe belen. y te ecop of Angee perep deo. y his pune Denu toke to he puce. and te cuen of France to- valbe yna he king. y rae com to he yung eopl Denu. he to heipe to pipe. y al Peitou mid hipe. Da pende he mid miael peop into Engle-land. y pan carter. y te king pende agyn he mihte mape peop. y podapepeputen hinoht. e Nearly about this time, the following pieces of poetry seem to have been written, of which I have inferred only short fragments; the first is a rude attempt at the present measure of eight syllables, and the second is a natural introduction to Robert of Gloucester, being composed in the same measure, which, however rude and barbarous it may seem, taught the way to the Alexandrines of the French poetry.

FUR
in see bi west spasynge.
If a leod shote cokaygne.
Der niu lond under heunereich.
Of wel of godnis hit iliche.
Doj paradis be mun and brot.
Lokaig if of fairsi fyt.
What if per in paradis.
Bot greffe and flere and generere.
Doj per be to or and gret dute.
Der niu met botu frute.
Der niu halle bure no bench.
Bot watir man if purto quench.
Be per no men but two.
Bely and enok also.
Linglich may hi go.
What per wonp men no mo.
In cokaygne if met and drunck.
Wipute care how and swunk.
De met if trye be drunk so clere:
To none ruffin and toppor.
I sigge for sop boure were.
Der niu lond on erpe if perre.
Under heuen niu londi uffe.
Of so mochil iu and blisse.
Der if mani swete fytere.
Al if dai niu per no niyte.
Der niu harte nofer strif.
Nif per no tep ac ever lif.
Der niu lac of met no clop.
Der niu no man no woman sorry.

SANC TA MARGARETTA.

OLDE ant yonge i prent ou oure folke for to lete.
Drenchet on god yat yef ou wit oure suffel to lete.
Here mai tellen ou. wid wordeis ferre and swete.
De vie of one meirian. was hoten Maregrete.
Bire fader was a patriac. af ic ou tellen may.
In auncroie wif ech is be false lay.
Deve godeis ant vombie. he served nitt ant day.
So oden mony opere. bat singere wealawy.
Theodosius waf if nome. on crist ne levete he nout.
Be levete on be false godeis. bat peren wid honden wroutt.
Do yat child sceleb chrystine ben. ic com him well in poutt.
E be ween it were bere, to befe it were ibpoutt.
De moter waf an hefene wif yat hire to wyman bere.
Do yat child ibore waf. nolte ho hit surfare.
Bo fente ic into asye. wid meffagers ful yare.
To a nourse yat hire wifte. ant sette hire to lore.
De nource yat hire wifte. children aheeude euene.
De uettef waf maregrete. cristeft may of heuene.
Tales ho ani tolce. ful feire ant ful euene.
Wou ho poleden marctod. sein Laurence ant feinte Steuene.

In these fragments, the adulteration of the Saxon tongue, by a mixture of the Norman, becomes apparent; yet it is not so much changed by the admixture of new words, which might be imputed to commerce with the continent, as by changes of its own forms and terminations; for which no reason can be given.
ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Hitherto the language used in this island, however different in successive time, may be called Saxan; nor can it be expected, from the nature of things gradually changing, that any time can be ascribed, when the Saxan may be said to cease, and the English to commence. Robert of Gloucester however, who is placed by the critics in the thirteenth century, seems to have used a kind of intermediate diction, neither Saxan nor English; in his work therefore we see the transition exhibited, and, as he is the first of our writers in rhyme, of whom any large work remains, a more extensive quotation is extracted. He writes apparently in the same measure with the foregoing author of St. Margaret, which, polished into greater exactnesses, appeared to our ancestors so suitable to the genius of the English language, that it was continued in use almost to the middle of the seventeenth century.

Of the battle of Denemarch, that hii dide in this londe, that worst were of all ope, we mote abbe an honde.

Worst hii were, vor ope adde somepwe yudo,
As Romeyns & Saxons, & wel wuste that lond herto.

Ac hii ne kept yt holde nort, bote robbey, and sende,
And destrue, & berne, & ile, & ne coupe abbe non ende.

And bote lute yt nas worp, by hii were overcomme ylome.

Vor myd flypes and gret poer as prest efHONE hii come.

Kynge Adelwolf of this londe kyng was tentyt yer.

He Deneys come by hym rywor pan hii dide er.

Vor in he al our vorst fer of is kyndom
Myd fer & prytyt flypuol men her prince hyder come,

And at Southamtonere aryuede, an hauene by Souhe.

Anofer gret oft fulke tymce aryuede at Portefmouhe.

He kyng nuste wefer kepe, at delee ys oft atuo.

He Denes adde he maytre. Jo al was ydo,
And by Estangle and Lyndeleye hii wende vorp atte lalte,

And so hamward al by Kent, & lowe & barnde valfe,

Agen wynter hii wende hem. anofer fer est hii come.

And destrude Kent al out, and Londeone nome.

Jus al an ten fer pat lond hii brogyte jer doune,
So pat in he tepe fer of he kynges crowne,
Al bysoufe hii come alon, and fer folc of Sומרfete

For he byssope Alcston and fer folc of Dorsete

Hii come & smyte an batayle, & here, geru Godes grace,

Je Deneys were al byynge, & je lond folc adde he place,

And more proveffe dude jo, pan he kyng myyte byuore,

Peruore gode lond men ne bep nort al verlore.

He kyng was he boldore jo, & aget hem he more drou,

And ys foure godes fones woxe vaffe yt nou,

Edelbold and Adelbrygte, Edelred and Alfred.

Eys was a filawarde tem, & of gret wyflom & red,

And kynges were al foure, & defendevel wel hys lond,

An Deneys dude flame ynow, par me volvel vond.

Is fryxtehe gere of he kynges kyndom

In eldeste fone Adelb gord oft to ym nome,

And ys fader also god, and opere heye mene al so,

And wende aget heys Deneys, par muche wo adde y do.

Vor myd tuo hondered flypes & an alf at Temfe mouph hii come,

And London, and Kanterbury, and ofer tounes nome,

And so vorp in to Sopherye, & lowe & barnde vaffe,

Here he kyng and ys fone hem mette atte larte.

Here was batayle strong ynow yfymte in an prow.

He godes kyngtes leyc adoun as gras, wan medep moue.

Heueden, (pat were of yfymte,) & oper lymes also,

Flete in blode al fram he gronde, ar he batayle were ydo.

Wanne pat blod flod al abrod, vas par gret wo y nou.

Nys yt reufe vorto hure, pat me fo volc flou ?

Ac our fute Louerad atte lafe frawede ys fute grace,

And fende he Criptyne Englifhe men he maytreyne in he place,

And he hefene men of Denemarch byynge were echon.

Nou nas par yut in Denemarch Cristendom nom;

He kyng her alter to holy chyrche ys herte he more drou,

And tepezedd wel & al ys lond, as hii agte, wel y nou.

Seyn Swythyn at Wyncheste fyrflup po was,

And Alcston at Syreboure, pat amendeved muche hys cas.

He kyng was wel pe betere man poru her beyre red,

Tuenty wynter he was kyng, ar he were ded.

At Wyncheste he was ybed, as he yut lyph per.

Heys tuyehe stopes he gey ys lond, as he byget ham erem.

Adelbold, the eldore, he kyndom of Eftflex,

And fulfhe Adelbrygt, Kent and Wettflex.

Etyge honderd fer yt was and seuen and fyfty al so,

After pat God anerfe com, pat hys dede was ydo.

Bope hii wuste by her tyme wel her kyndom,

At pe vysfe fer Adelbold out of hys lyue nome.
At Sætrebourne he was ybured, & ys broër Adelbrycta.
His kynedom adde after hyme, as lawe was and ryst.
By ys daye he verde com of he heñene men wel prout,
And Hamteþyre and destrüde Wynchefore al out.
And þat lond folc of Hamteþyre her red þo nome
And of Barcsþyre, and fósfe and þe frywen overcome.
Adelbrycta was kynge of Kent þeres folle tene,
And of Wærfex bote vȝue, þo he deyde ych wene.

Adelred was after hyme kynge þe mad in þe place,
Eȝte hondred ðæruene & fyxty as in þe ægie of grace.
Þe vorste þær of þis kynedome þe Deneȝs þyce ke com,
And robbede and destrüde, and cýttes valte nome.
Mayftræ his adde of her oþt, as þe were dukë, tueye,
Hynghuer and Hubba, þat frywen were byeþe.
In Þæt Angle þe blyleuède, to rett hem as þe were,
Myð þe her oþt al þe wynter, of þe vorste þær.
Þe oþfer þær hihdude hem vorþ, & oþer Hомер com,
And slowe to grounde & barnde, & Euerwyk nome.
Þer was batayle stong þy nou, vor yfawe was þeere Ofryc kynge of Hunquelund, & monye þat with þym weren.
Þo Humberland was þus yfœnd, hii wende & tounes nome.
So þat attre lafte to Eſtangle ægen þyme come.
Þer hii barnde & robbede, and þat folc to grounde slowe,
And, as wolues among þep, reulych hem to droue.
Seȝnt Edmond was þo her kynge, & þe he feþ þat deluol cas
þat me morþrede fo þat folc, & non amendementnas,
He ches leuere to deye hymefulf, þat sçuch forwe to vyfey.
He dúde hyme vorþ among þis fon, nole þe noþyng
þe.
Hii nome hyme & fœuredg hyme, & þufþe naked hyme bounde
To a tre, & to hyme slote, & made hyme mony a wounde, þat þe arewe were on hyme þo þyce, þat no flote
nas byleuede.
Atte lafte hii martred hyme, and fynyte of þis heued.
Þe fyxte zer of þe crounement of Aldered þe kynge
A nywe oþt com into þys lond, greþ þoru alle þyng,
And anon to Reyndyge robbede and slowe.
Þe þynge and Alfred þys þroer nome þen ynowe,
Mette hem, and a batayle fynyte vp Alfeldoune.
Þer was mony moder child, þat fone lay þer doune.
Þe batayle ýlaþte vorte nýȝt, & þer þere were aławef
Vyf dukets of Denemarch, ar hii wolde wyp þrawa,
And monye þousend of oþer men, & þo gonne hii
to fle;
Ach hii adde alle ybbe a堃, gyf þe nýȝt madde yþe,
Tuye batayles her after in þe súlf þær Hii fynyte, and at boþe þe heþene mayþræs were:
þe þynge Aldered fone þo þen wey of þep nome,
As þe vel, þe výftý þær of þis kynedom.
At Wæmbourne he was ybured, as God þef þat cas, þe gode Alfred, þys þroer, after hyme kynge was.

Alfred, þys noble man, as in þe ægie of grace
he hom
Eȝte hondred & fyxty & tuelue þe kynedom.
Arit he adde at Rome ybe, &; vor yȝe grete wyþdom,þe pope Leon hyme blesþede, þo he þuder com,
And þe kynges croune of hyme lond, þat in þys lond
ȝut þes:
And he led hyme to be kynge, ar he kynge were ywþys.
An he was kynge of Englond, of alle þat þer come,
þat vorst þus ylade was of þe pope of Rome,
An þufþe oþer after hyme of þe erchebyþlpes echon.
So þat hþuor hyme pore kynþng nas þer non.
In þe Soub þyde of Temeþe þynge batayles he nome
Aþen þe Deneȝs þe vorst þær of þis kynedom.
Nye þær he was þus in þys lond in batayle & in wo,
An ofte þyde aboue was, and byneþe ofþor mo;
So longe, þat hyme nere þe blyeude bote þre ÿþren in þys hond,
Hamteþyre, and Wylþteþyre, and Somerfete, of al
þys lond.
A day as he werþy was, and aþuoddyngþe hyme nome
And þys men were ywþend auȝfþeþ, Seyn Cutbert to hyme com.
“Þe am,” he sþede, “Cutbert, to þe þecham ywend
To bryþge þe gode týþynes. Fræm God þecham þyld.
“Vor þat folc of þys lond to sþyne her wyþle al
þe,
“And þut rolle herto her sþynnes byleuæ þoru me & oþer halewæ, þat in þys lond were yboþe;
þan vor þou bþþodeþ God, wanne we béþ hyme
byuore;
“Houre Loureþt myþ þys eþen of miþæ on þe lokeþ þeruore, “þan þy poër þe wolþ þyue ægen, þat þou aþ neþ vþlore;
“þan þou þer of þof þyle, þou sþalt abbe tokýþynge.
“Vor þym men, þat béþ ago to day auþþyne,
In leþepes & in couſles þo mucþe yþis hii fıkæ
hym brynge,
“þat ech man wondryþ flæþ of þo greþ cacchynde, “þan ðech moþ vor þe harde vorste, þat þe water
ýþfoþreas hþs,
“þat þe more ægen þe kunde of vyþþynge þyt þs.
“Of ferue ýþ welæþen God, and ýþef meþs meþlæger, “þan þou sþall þy wyþl æþyþe, as þecham ðytold þer.”
As þys kynge hero of aunc, and of þys eygte þoge, Hys vyflares come to hym, & so gret won of ðys
hym brogfe, þat wonder þt was, & namelyche vor þe weder was so colde.
þo lyuede þe god man wel, þat Seyn Cuthbert adde ytold.
In Deuynysye þer after aryuede of Deneyis jre and tuenty ðywpul men, all aegen þe þeys, þe kynge's brofer of Denemarch duc of ðot was.
Oure kynge's men of Engelond mette hem by cas,
And numte þer an batayle, and her gret duc flowe,
And eygte hundred & fourty men, & her caronyes to drowe.
þo kynge Alfred hurde þys, þs herte gladede þo, þat lond folc to hym come so þycke to þyt myyte go,
Of Somerfete, of Wyltesffyre, of Hamtesffyre þerto,
Euere as he wende, and of þys owe folc al fo.
So þat he adde poer þnow, and atte lasse hii come,
And a batayle at Edendene aegen þe Denyes nome.
And flowe to grounde, & wonne þe maȝtre of the velde.
þe kynge & þys grette duke bygonne hem to geilde
To þe kynge Alfred to þys wylle, and ostoffe toke, Vorto wende out of þys lond, ðyf he þt wolde loke;
And þut þerto, vor þys loue, to awunge Cristlendom.
Kynge Gurumund, þe hexte kynge, vorit þer to come.
Kynge Alfred þis godfader was. & y baptysde ek þer were þrettý of her hexte dukes, and muche of þat folc þere Kynge Alfred hem huld wþþ hym tuelf dawes as he hende,
And luffte he þet hem large ðyfes, and let hym wende.
Hii, þat nolde Cristyn be, of lande flowe þo,
And bygonde nec in France wel muche wo.
þut þe frewene come aegen, and muche wo here wrogt.
Ac þe kynge Alfred alatte to flame hem euere brogfe.
Kynge Alfred was þe wþþst kynge, þat long was bþuore.
Vor þey melegge þelawes beþ in worre þyme vorlore,
Nas þt norte to his daye. vor þey he in worre were,
Lawes he made rþtguollore, and stremore þan er
were.
Clerc he was god ynow, and þut, as me telleþ me,
He was more þan ten þer old, ar he couþe þys abece.
Ac þys gode moder ðe male þyfes hyme tolk,
Vor to byleue oper ple, and loky on þys boke.
So þat þy þor clerlyc þys rþþ lawes he wonde,
þat nuere er nere þe mad, to gourny þys lond.
And vor þe worre was so muche of þe lþþþ Deneys, þe men of þys flue londe were of þe worþe þeys.
And robbed and flowe oper, þeruir he bȳuonde,
þat þer were hundredes in ech contraye of þys lond,
And in eþt tourne of þe hundred a teþþnge were alfo.
And þat ech man wyhte gret lond in teþþnge were þdo.

And þat ech man knewe oþer þat in teþþnge were,
And wulfte somdel of her flat, ðyfemþu vp hem bere.
So streyþ he was, þat þey me ledde amydde weydes heþe
Seluer, þat non man ne dorste þt nyme, þeþ he þt seye.
Abbeþs he erde mony on, and mony þþdes þyþys.
Ac Wþneflþyre he erde on, þat nþwe munþtre ycluped þys.
Hys lþþ eygte and tuenty þer in þþs kynedom ðlafe.
After þþs dep he was þbyred at Wþneflþtre atte larte.

Sir John Mandeville wrote, as he himself informs us, in the fourteenth century, and his work, which comprising a relation of many different particulars, consequently required the use of many words and phrases, may be properly specified in this place.
Of the following questions, I have chosen the first,
because it shows, in some measure, the state of European science as well as of the English tongue; and the second, because it is valuable for the force of thought and beauty of expression.

IN that lond, ne in many other beonde that,
no man may see the sterre transmontane, that is clept the sterre of the see, that is unmoveable, and that is toward the North, that we cleen the lode sterre. But men seen another sterre, the contrarie to him, that is toward the South, that is clept Antartyk. And right as the schip men taken here avys here, and governe hem be the lode sterre, right so don schip men beonde the parties, be the sterre of the South, the which sterre apperethe not to us. And this sterre, that is toward the Northre, that we cleepen the lode sterre, ne apperethe not to hem. For whiche cause, men may well perceye, that the lond and the see ben of rownde schapp and forme. For the partie of the firmament scheweth in o contrace, that scheweth ot in another contrare. And men may well preven be experience and fotyle compassement of wytt, that sif a man fond passages be schippes, that wolde go to ferchen the world, men myghte go be schippie alle aboute the world, and aboven and benethen.
The whiche thing I prove thus, after that I have seyne. For I have been toward the parties of Bra-ban, and beholden the Aftrolabre, that the sterre that is clept the transmontayne, is 53 degrees highe.
And more forthe in Almaven and Bewme, it hath 58 degrees. And more forthe toward the parties septemtrionales, it is 62 degrees of highte, and certyn mynutes. For I my selfe have meryed it by the Aftrolabre. Now schulle ye knowe, that azen the Tranmontayne, is the tooth sterre, that is clept Antartyk; as I have seyd before. And tho 2 sterres ne meecwen nevere. And be hem turneth,
THE HISTORY OF THE

turneth the alle the firmament, righe as dothe a wheel, that turneth be his axile tree: so that the sterres bener the firmament in 2 egalle parties; so that it hathe als mochel aboven, as it hath benethen. Aftre this, I have gon toward the parties meridionales, that is toward the South: and I have founden, that in Lybye, men seen first the sterre Antaryk. And so fer I have gon more in the contrées, that I have founde that sterre more highe; so that toward the highe Lybye, it is 18 degrees of heythe, and certeyn minutes (of the which, 60 minutes maken a degree) after goynge be see and be londe, toward this contrée, of that I have spoke, and to other yles and londes bezonde that contrée, I have founden the sterre Antaryk of 33 degrees of heythe, and mo mynutes. And zif I hadde had companye and schippynde, for to go more bezonde, I trowe wel in certyn, that we scholde have seen alle the roundnesh of the firmament alle aboute. For as I have sayd zou be forn, the half of the firmament is betwene tho 2 sterres: the whiche halfonnelle I have sayd. And of the other halfonderelle, I have seen toward the Northe, under the Tranfmontane 62 degrees and 10 mynutes; and toward the partie meridionale, I have seen under the Antaryk 33 degrees and 16 mynutes: and thanne the halfonderelle of the firmament in alle, neu holdeth the not but 180 degrees. And of tho 180, I have seen 62 on that 0 part, and 33 on that other part, that ben 95 degrees, and nyghte the halfonderelle of a degree; and tho there ne saylethe but that I have seen alle the firmament, saf 84 degrees and the halfonderelle of a degree; and that is not the fourthe part of the firmament. For the 4 partie of the roundnesh of the firmament holt 90 degrees: so there saylethe but 5 degrees and an half, of the fourthe partie. And also I have seen the 3 partie of alle the roundnesh of the firmament, and more zit 5 degrees and an half. Be the whiche I feye zou certeynly, that men may environne alle the erthe of alle the world, as wel under as aboven, and turnen azen to his contrée, that hadde companye and schippynde and conduyt; and alle wyees he scholde synde men, londes, and yles, as wel as in this contrée. For zee wyten well, that thi that ben toward the Antaryk, thi ben fieghte, feet azen feet of hem, that dwellen under the Tranfmontane; als well as wee and thei that dwellyn under us, ben feett azenfeet. For alle the partie of see and of lond han here appoistes, habitables or trespassibles, and thei of this half and beond half. And wyette the wel, that aften that, that I may parcyve and comprehendhe, the londes of Prefsre John, emperour of Ynde ben under us. For in goynge from Scotlond or from Englund toward Jerusalem, men gon upward always. For oure lond is in the lowe partie of the erthe, toward the West: and the lond of Prefsre John is the lowe partie of the erthe, toward the Est: and thei han there the day, when wee have the nyghte, and also highe to the contrarie, thei han the nyghte, when wee han the day. For the erthe and the see ben of round forme and schapp, as I have sayd befor. And than that men gon upward to o coft, men gon downward to another coft. Also zee have herd me feye, that Jerusalem is in the mynddes of the world; and that may men preven and schewen there, be a spere, that is pighte in to the erthe, upon the hour of mynday, when it is equenoxium, that schewete the no schadwe on no syde. And that it scholde ben in the mynddes of the world, David wynteneft teh in the Pfautre, where he feythe, Deus operatus eft saluté in medio terre. Thanne thei that parten fro the parties of the West, for to go toward Jerusalem, als many iornyes as thei gon upward for to go thidre, in als many iornyes may thei gon fro Jerusalem, unto other connynges of the superficicall of the erthe bezonde. And when men gon bezonde tho iornyes, toward Ynde and to the fortien yles, alle is envyrongyte the roundnesh of the erthe and of the see, undre oure contrées on this half. And therfore hath he beenfallen many tyme of o thing, that I have herd cownet, when I was zong; how a worthi man departed somethyme from oure contrées, for to go ferche the world. And so he passed Ynde, and the yles bezonde Ynde, where ben mo than 5000 yles: and so longe he wente be see and londe, and so environne the world be many seyfons, that he fond an yle, where he herde speke his owne langage, callynge on oxen in the plowinge, suche wordes as men speken to bettes in his own contrée: whereof he hadde gret merweyde: for he knewe not how it myghte be. But I feye, that he had gon so longe, be londe and be see, that he had envyrond alle the erthe, that he was comen azenz envirounynge, that is to feye, goynge aboute, unto his owne marches, zif he wolde have passed forthe, til he had founden his contrée and his owne conocleche. But he turned azen from thens, from whens he was come fro: and so he loste moche penyeful labour, as he self feye, a gret while affre, that he was comen hon. For it beffel affre, that he wente in to Norweye: and there tempelt of the see toke him; and he arryved in an yle; and when he was in that yle, he knew wel, that it was the yle, where he herd speke his owne langage before, and the callynge of the oxen at the plowinge: and that was possible thinges. But how it femeethe to symple men unlearned, that men ne movte nor go undre the erthe, and also that men fcholde falle towarde the hevene, from undre! But that may not be, upon lest, than wee movte falle toward hevene, fro the erthe, where ween ben: For fro what partie of the erthe, that men dulle, outher outher aboven or benethen, it femethe alwayes to hem that duellen, that thei gon more righte than any other folk. And righte as it semethe to us, that thei ben undre us, righte so it semethe hem, that wee ben undre hem. For zif a man myghte salle fro the erthe unto the firmament; be grettere refound, the erthe and the see, that ben so grete and so hevy, fehold fallen to the firmament: but that may not be: and therfore feith feur Lord God, Non timeas me, qui suspenxi terrae ex nichilo? And alle be it, that it be possible thing, that men may seo envyronne alle the world, natheles of 1000 perfoines, on ne myghte not happen to returnen in to his contrée. For, for the gretneffe of the erthe and of the see, men may go be a 1000 and a 1000 other weyes, that no man cowde reyde him perfitely toward the parties that he cam fro, but zif it were be aventure and happ, or be the grace of God. For the erthe is fulle large and fulle gret, and holt in roundneffe and aboute envyron, be aboven and be benethen. Now thanne, be the gret compas reprented for the firmament, and the littile compas reprented for the erthe. Now thanne the firmament is devyled, be astronomeres, in 12 signes; and every signe is devyled in 30 degrees, that is 360 degrees, that the firmament hath aboven. Also, be the erthe devyled in als many parties, as the firmament; and let every partie anfwere to a degree of the firmament: and wyneth it wel, that after the audctures of astronome, 300 furlonges of erthe anfweren to a degree of the firmament; and the ben 87 miles and 4 furlonges. Now be that here multiplieth be 360 sthes; and then thi ben 315000 myles, every of 8 furlonges, after myles of oure contrée. So moche hath the erthe in roundneffe, and of hechte enviroun, after myn opynyon and myn undifornynge. And zee schulle undirflonde, that after the opynyon of olde wife philofo- phres and astronomeres, oure contrée ne Irelond ne Wales ne Scotlond ne Norweye ne the other yles cotyngye to hem, ne ben not in the superfical ye cownted abowen the erthe; as fechewethe be alle the bokes of astrononye. For the superfiциale of the erthe is departed in 7 parties, for the 7 planetes: and tho parties ben cleft clymates. And oure parties be not of the 7 clymates: for thei ben defendynege toward the Wift. And also tho yles of Ynde, which beth evene azenft us, beth noght reckned in the clymates: for thei ben azenft us, that ben in the lowe contrée. And the 7 clymates strechen hem envirowynge the world.
ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

II. And I John Maundevylle knyght aboveseyd, (alle though I be unworthy) that departed from oure contrées and passed the see, the zeer of grace 1322. that have passed manye londes and manye yles and contrées, and cerched manye fulle faurange places, and have ben in many a fulle gode honouorable companye, and at many a faire dode of armes, (alle be it that I dide none mylef, for myn unable insuffiſciency) now I am comen hom (mawgree myself) to refete: for gowtes, arteſykes, that me diffreyen, tho diffynn the ende of my labour, azenft my will (God knowethe.) And thus takynge falace in my wrecched refete, recordynge the tyme passedy, I have fulfilled theife thinges and putte hem wryten in this boke, as it wolde come in to my mynde, the zeer of grace 1356 in the 34 zeer that I departedde from oure contrées. Wheresore I preye to alle the rederes and hereres of this boke, zif it plēfe hem, that thei wolde preyen to God for me: and I schalle preye for hem. And alle tho that feyn for me a Pater noſter, with an Ave Maria, that God forzeve me my fynnes, I make hem partners and graunte hem part of alle the gode pilgrmyages and of alle the gode dedes, that I have don, zif ony be to his pleſance: and noghte only of tho, but of alle that euer I schalle do unto my lyfes ende. And I beſeeche Almyghty God, fro whom alle godence and grace cometh fro, that he voucheſaf, of his excellent mercy and habundant grace, to fulle fylle hire foules with infpi- riacion of the Holy Goſt, in makynge defence of alle hire goſty enemies here in erthe, to hire salviacion, bothe of body and soule; to worʃipe and thangye of him, that is three and on, with ouent begynnynge and without endynge; that is, with ouent qua- ritee, good, and with ouent quantitee, gret: that in alle places is preſent, and alle thinges contenynge; the whiche that no goodneffe may amende, ne non evelle empeyr: that in perfeyte trynteet lyveth and regnethe God, be alle worlde and be alle tymes. Amen, Amen, Amen.
NOWE for to speke of the commune,
It is to drede of that fortune,
Whiche hath befalle in sondrye londes:
But ote for defaute of bondes
All fodeinly, er it be wif,
A tunne, when his lie arift
Tobreke, and renneth all aboute,
Whiche els shulde nought gone out.
And eke full ofte a littell skare
Vpon a banke, er men be ware,
Let in the streme, whiche with grete peine,
If any man it shal refreine.
Where lawe failleth, errour groweth.
He is not wife, who that ne troweth.
For it hath proued oft er this.
And thus the common clamour is
In euery londe, where people dwelleth:
And eche in his complainte telleth,
How that the worlde is miswent,
And therypon his argument
Yeueth euery man in sondrie wife:
But what man wolde him felle auife
His conscience, and nought mifufe,
He maie well at the first excuse
His god, whiche euer flant in one,
In him there is defaute none
So muf it stand vpon vs felue,
Nought only vpon ten ne twelue,
But plenarly vpon vs all.
For man is cause of that shall fall.

CHAUCER.

ALAS! I wepyng am constrained to begin verfe of forowfull matter, that whilom in florishing fludie made delitable dietes. For lo! rendyng mufes of a Poetes edite to me thinges to be written, and drie teres. At lafte no drede ne might overcame tho mufes, that thei ne werren fellows, and foloweden my waie, that is to faire, when I was exiled, thei that were of my youth whilom welfull and grene, comforten now forowfull weirdes of me olde man: for elde is comen unwarily upon me, hafted by the harmes that I have, and forowe hath commaund him to be in me. Heres hore are neshad overtimeliche upon my hed: and the flacke skine trembleth of mine empted bodie. Thilke deth of men is welefull, that he ne cometh not in yeres that be swee, but

C O L V I L E.

That in tyme of prosperite, and florishing Runyde, made pleasaunte and delectable dieties, or verfes: alas now byng heawy and sad overthrown in aduersitie, am compelled to fele and taft heynes and gret. Beholde the mufes Poeticall, that is to sye: the pleasure that is in poetes verfes, do appoynt me, and compel me to writy thes verfes in meeter, and the forowfull verfes do wet my wretched face with very waterye teares, yslunging out of my eyes for forowe. Whiche mufes no tare without doubt could overcome, but that they wold follow me in my journey of exile or baniishment. Sometime the tye of happy and lustly delectable youth dyd comfort me, and nowe the course of forowfull olde age caufeth me to rejoyc. For hasty old age vnloked for is come vpon me with cometh to wretches often icleped: Alas, alas! with how dest an ere deth cruellyturneth avaie fro wretches, and naith for to close wepyng eyen. While fortune unfaithfull favoured me with light godes, that forowfull houre, that is to faie, the deth, had almost trome myne hedde: but now for fortune cloudie hath chaunged her decevable chere to mewarde, myne unpitous life draweth along ungreable dwellynges. O ye my frendes, what, or whereto avauenty ye me to ben welfull? For he that hath fallin, ftoode in no stedfaft degre.

WHYLES that I confiderydde prylylye with my felle the stynges before fayd, and described my wofull complaynte after the maner and office of a wrytrer, me thought I fawe a woman stand over my head of a revend countenaunce, haungyng quycke and gylyfering clere eye, aboue the common sorte of men in lyuely and delectable cooure, and ful of strength, although the femed fo olde that by no meannes she is thought to be one of thisoure tyme, her stature is of douteful knowlidge, for nowe the fhewthe herfelfe at the comen length or stature of men, and other whiles the femeth fo high, as though she touched heuen with the crown of her hed. And when the wold stretche fourth her hed hygher, it also perceed thorough heauen, so that mens lyghte could not attayne to broidder her. Her veurtures or cloths were perfyte of the fynyte thredes, and subtile workemanship, and of subtance permanent, whych veurtures she had wuen with her owne handes as I perceyued after by her owne faiynige. The kynde or beautye of the whyche veurtures, a certayne darkenes or rather ignoraunce of oldenes forgotten hadde obscyred and darkened, as the smoke is wont to darkn Images that stand nyghte the fmoke. In the lower parte of the said veurtures was read the greke letter P, wouen whych signifith practife or actyffe, and in the hygher parte of the veurtures the greke letter T, whych estedaneth for theoria, that signifith speculacion or contemplation. And betwene both the

[ g ]

fayd
fayd letters were sene certayne degrees, wroght after the maner of ladders, wherein as it were a passage or waye in steppes or degrees from the lower part wher the letter P. was which is vnderstand, from practys or actyf, unto the hygher parte wher the letter T. was whych is vnderstand speculation or contemplacion. Neuertheles the handes of some yvolente feriones had cut the fayde vfeatures and had taken awaye certaine pecis thereof, such as every one could catch. And the fer flete dyd bare in her ryght hand litel bokes, and in her lefte hande a scepter. And when she sawe thes Poeticall mufes approching about my bed, and enditing wordes to my wepynges, she was a little amoved, and glowed with cruell eyen. Who (q)f she hath suffered approch to this fike manne these commen from pompettes, of which is the place that mennc callen Theatre, the whiche onely ne asswagen nor his fowrues with remedies, but thei would feden and norithe hym with swete vnriue? Forsothe, that ben tho that with thornes, and prickynges of talentes of afeccions, whiche that ben nothing fruchtuous nor profitable, distroien the Come, plentuous of fructes of renson. For thei holden herites of men in utage, but thei n e deliver no folke fro maladic. But if ye mufes had withdrawn fro me with your flatteries any unconnying and unprofitable manne, as ben wont to finde commonly among the peple, I would well suffre the laffe grevously. For why, in soche an unprofitable man myn ententes were nothing endamaged. But ye withdrawn fro me this man, that hath ben nourisfied in my studies or scoles of Eleaticis, and of Academicis in Greece. But goeth now rather awaie ye Mermaidens, whiche that ben swete, till it be at the laft, and suffreth this man to be cured and heled by my mufes, that is to say, by my note-full sciences. And thus this companie of mufes iblamed calfen wrothly the chere downward to the yerth, and shewing by redness ther shame, they passeden forowfully the thrashold. And I of whom the ffight plounged in teres was darked, so that I ne might not know what that woman was, of so Imperial authoritie, I woke all abashed and flonied, and cast my ffight doune to the yerth, and began still for to abide what she would doen afterward. Then came she nere, and set her doune upon the utterest corner of my bed, and she beholding my chere, that was caft to the yerth, heve and gревous of wepyng, complained with these wordes (that I shall laine) the perturbation of my thought.
The conclusions of the Astrolabie.
This book (written to his son in the year of our Lord 1391, and in the 14 of King Richard II.) standeth so good at this day, especially for the horizon of Oxford, as in the opinion of the learned it cannot be amended, says an Edit. of Chaucer.

Lytel Lowys my sonne, I perceve well by certaine evidences thyne abylute to lerne sciences, touching nombres and proporciouns, and also well confyde I thy before prayer in especial to lerne the tretyle of the astrolobe. Than for as moche as a philosopher faith, he wrapeth hym in his frende, that condicceth to the right full prayers of his frende: therfore I have given the a sufficient astrolobe for oure orizont, compownde after the latitude of Oxenforde: upon the whiche by mediation of this lytell tremisse, I purport to teche the a certaine nombre of conclusions, pertaininge to this same instrument. I lay a certaine nombre of conclusions for thre causes, the first cause is this. Trufe well that al the conclusions that have be founden, or ells possibyle might be found in so noble an instrument as in the astrolobe, ben unknouen perfectly to anye mortal man in this region, as I suppone. Another cause this, that sothely in anye cartes of the astrolobe that I have yfene, ther ben some conclusions, that wol not in al thinges perfourme ther behets: and some of hem ben to harde to thy tender age of ten yere to conceve. This tremisse divided in five partes, wil I shewe the wonder-light rules and naked wordes in Engilise, for Latine ne canst thou nat yet: but smale, my litel sonne. But nevertheless suffisith to the these tremesi conclusions in Engilise, as wel as suffisith to these noble clerkes grekes these same conclusions in greke, and to the Arabines in Arabike, and to Jewes in Hebrewre, and to the Latin folk in Latyn: whiche Latyn folke had hemfirste out of other divers langages, and wrote hem in ther owne tonge, that is to laine in Latine.

And God wote that in all these langages and in manye mo, have these conclusions ben suffisanteley lerned and taught, and yet by divers rules, right as divers pathes led the divers folke the right waye to Rome.

Now wol I pray melyly every person discrete, that redeth ohereth this lytell tremisse to have my rude ententing excused, and my superfolute of wordes, for two causes. The first cause is, for that curious endityng and harde sentences is ful hevy at ones, for loch a childe to lerne. And the seconde cause is this, that sothely mee semeth better to witten unto a childe twise a gode sentence, than he foriste it ones. And, Lowys, if it be so that I shewe the in my Lith Engilise, as trem conclusions touching this mater, and not only as tremes but as many and subtil conclusions as ben ythered in latim, in anye common tremisse of the astrolobe, conne me the more thanke, and praye God faue the kinge, that is lorde of this langage, and all that him faith bereth, and obeith everych in his degree, the more and the lasse. But confyddeth well, that I ne uturpe not to have founden this werke of my labour or of myne engin. I name but a leude compilator of the laboure of olde astrologiens, and have it translated in myn engilise onely for thy doctrine: and with this swerde shal I sene envy.

The first party.

The first partye of this tremisse shal reherce the figures, and the members of thyne astrolobe, bycause that thou shalte have the greter knowinge of thine owne instrument.

The seconde party.

Th seconde partye shal teche the to werken the very praftike of the foresaid conclusions, as forthe and also narowe as may be fhewed in the male an instrument portatife aboute. For wel wote every astrologien, that smallest fractions ne wol not be shewed in fo mal an instrument, as in subtil tables caculde for a cause.

The Prologue of the Testament of LOVE.

MANY men there ben, that witheres openly sprad fo moche sglawen the deliciousneffe of jentes and of ryme, by queint knittinge coloures, that of the godenesse or of the badnesse of the sentence take they litel hede or els none.

Sothelye dulce witte and a thoughtfulle soule fo fore have mine and graffed in my spirtes, that foche craft of endittinge woll nat ben of mine acquaintance. And for rude wordes and boistous percen the herte of the herer to the inreit point, and planten there the sentence of thinges, so that with litel helpe it is able to spring, this boke, that no thynge hath of the grete flode of wytte, ne of femelyche coloures, is dolwen with rude wordes and boistous, and fo drawe together to maken the catchers therof ben the more redy to hent sentence.

Some men there ben, that painten with coloures riche and fome with wers, as with red inke, and some with coles and chalke: and yet is there gode matter to the leue peple of thylyke chalkye purtretyure, as hem thinketh for the time, and afterward ward the sight of the better colours yeve to 'hem more joye for the first leudensfe. So folye this leude cloudly occupacion is not to praye, but by the leude, for comenely leude leudenesse commendeth. Eke it thal yeve fight that other precyous thynges shall be the more in reverence. In Latin and French hath many foveryn wittes had grete delaye to endite, and have many noble thinges ful-filde, but certes there ben some that speken their poifye mater in Frenche, of whiche speche the Frenche men have as gode a fantayye as we have in heryng of Frenche mens Englith. And many termes there ben in Englythe, whiche unnethe Englytheye men conne declare the knowleginge: howe shoulde than a Frenche man borne? ioch ye termes coniejumpere in his matter, but as the jay chatereth Englith. Right fo truely the understandyng of Englifhmen wol not stetch to the privie termes in Frenche, what fo ever we fopeth of straunge langage. Let then clerkes enditen in Latin, for they have the propertie of science, and the knowynge in that facultie: and lette Frenche men in ther Frenche also enditen ther quinct termes, for it is kyndely to ther mouthes; and let us shewe our fantasies in such wordes as we lerned of our dame's tonge. And although this boke be lytel thank worthy for the leudensfe in travaile, yet foch writing exiten men to thilke thinges that ben necessarie; for every man therby may as by a perpetuall myrrour fene the vices or vertues of other, in whiche thynges lightly may be conceived to elcheu perils, and necessaries to catch, after as aventures have fallen to other peple or persouns.

Certes the soverynaiyth thinge of desire and most creture refonable, have or els shuld have full appetite to ther perfeccion: unrefonable belles mowen not, fithre relon hath in 'hem no workinge: than refonable that wol not, is companioned to unrefonable, and made lyke 'hem. Forsothe the moit soverynaiyn and final perfeccion of man is in knowynge of a fothe, withouten any entent decevable, and in love of one very God, that is inchaungable, that is to knowe, and love his creator.

Nowe principally the men to bynge in knowleging and loungye his creature, is the consideracion of thynges made by the creature, wher through by thylke thinges that ben made, understandyng hee here to our wyttes, arne the unfene pryvities of God made to us lyghtfull and knowynge, in our contemplacion and understandinge. These thinges than forsothe moche bringe us to the ful knowleginge fothe, and to the parfayte love of the maker of hevenly thynges. Lo! David saith: thou haffe delited me in makinge, as who saith, to have delite in the tune how God hath lent me in consideracion of thy makinge. Wherof Arifatole in the boke de Animalibus, faith to naturell philosophers: it is a grete likyngge in love of knowynge ther creture: and also in knowynge of cause in kindelye thynges, considird forsothe the formes of kindelye thinges and the shap, a grete kyndelye love do shulde have to the werkman that 'hem made. The craft of a werkman is shewed in the werk. Herefore trulie the philosophers with a lively studie manie noble thinges, righte precious, and worthy to memorize, written, and by a grete swet and travaile to us leften of causes the properties in natures of thinges, to whiche therfore philosophers it was more joye, more lykinge, mere herty luft in kindelye vertues and matters of refonable the perfection by busy study to knowe, than to have had all the trefour, al the richeffe, al the vaine glory, that the passe emperours, princes, or kinges hadden. Therfore the names of 'hem in the boke of perpetuall memorie in vertue and pece arne written; and in the contrarie, that is to faine, in Styxe the foule pitte of belle arne thilke presse that foch godenes hated. And bicause this boke shalbe of love, and the prime causes of flering in that doinge with paffions and diletes for wantinge of desire I wil that this boke be cleped the textament of love.

But nowe thou redere, who is thilke that will not in scorne laughe, to here a dwarie or els halfe a man, say he will renede out the swerde of Hercules handes, and also he shulde set Hercules Gadis a mile yet fether, and over that he had power of strengthe to pull up the spere, that Alisander the noble might never wage, and that palinge in thinges to ben mayster of Frunce by might, there as the noble gracyus Edwardre the thirde for al his grete prouewe in victories ne might al yet conquer.

Certes I wote well, ther shalbe made more scorne and jape of me, that I so unworthyly clothed altogether in the cloudie cloude of unconning, wil putten me in prees to speke of love, or els of the causes in that matter, sithen al the grettest clerkes haun had-yongh to don, and as who faythe gathered up clene toforne 'hem, and with ther sharp fithes of conning al mowen and made therof grete rekes and nobles, ful of al pretties to fede me and many an other. Envye forsothe commendethouogh his relon, that he hath in hain, be it never so trufly. And although these noble repers, as gode workmen and worthy ther hier, han al draw and bounde up in the swees, and made many shocks, yet have I enresample to gather the smale crommes, and fullin ma walez of the that fallen from the bourde among the finalle houndes, notwithstanding the travaile of the almoigner, that hath draw up in the cloth al the remeiles, as trenchours, and the relefe to bere to the amelie. Yet also have I leve of the noble hubande Boece, although I be a straunger of conninge to come after his doctrine, and thefe grete grete workmen, and glene my handfuls of the shedyne after ther handes, and ye me faile ought of my ful, to encreye my porcion with that I shal drawe by privytes out of stockes; a flye fervant in his owne helpe is ofte moche commended; knowynge of trouthe in causes of thynge, was more hardier in the firste fechers, and to sayth
Aritotle, and lighter in us that han folowed after.
For the passing stedy han freched our wittes, and oure understanyinge han excited in consideracion of trouthe by sharpynes of ther repons. Utterly these things be no dremes ne japes, to throwe to hoggis, it is lifelych mete for children of trouthe, and as they me betiden when I pilgramed out of my kith in wintere, when the wether out of mesure was bolstous, and the wyld wynd Boræs, as his kynde afketh, with drynyng coldes maked the waves of the ocean se to arile unkindely over the com-panyke banke that it was in point to spille all the crthes.

The Prologues of the Canterbury Tales of CHAUCER, from the MSS.

When that Aprilis with his flouris fote,
The drought of March had perced to the rote,
And pathed every veyn in such louer,
Of which vertue engendrid is the flour.
When Zephyrus eke, with his swete breth
Enspirid hath, in every holt and heth
The tender croppis; and that the yong Sunn
Hath in the Ramm his halvé cours yrunn:
And smalé foulsis makin melodye,
That slepon allé night with opin eye,
(So prickith them nature in ther corage)
Then longin folk to go on pilgrimage:
And palmers for to fekin frangé frondées,
To servin hallowes couth in fondynd londes:
And specially fro every shir'is end
Of England, to Canterbury they wend;
The holy blissfull martyr for to feke,
That them hath holpin, whan that they were seke.
Befell that in that febon on a day
In Southwerk at the Tabberd as I lay,
Redy to wendin on my pilgrimage
To Canterbury, with devote corage,
At night wer come into that hoffery
Wole nine and twenty in a cumpany
Of fundrie folk, by aventure yfall
In felaship; and pilgrimage wer they all:
That toward Canterbury wouldin ride.

The chambers and the stables werin wide,
And wel we werin efd at the best:
And shortly when the sunne was to ryst,
So had I spokin with them everych one,
That I was of ther felaship anone;

And made forward efrli for to ryst,
To take our weye, ther as I did devise.
But nathles whyle that I have time and space.
Er' that I further in this tale pace,
Methinkith it accordaunt to refon,
To tell you allè the condition
Of ech of them, so as it semid me,
And which they werin, and of what degree,
And eke in what array that they wer in:
And at a knight then woul I first begin.

The Knight.

A knight ther was, and that a worthy man,
That fro the time that he first began
To ridin out, he lovid Chevalrie,
Trouthe and honour, fredome and curtsey.
Full worthy was he in his lordis werre,
And thereto he had riddin mane more ferre
As well in Christendom, as in Hethynes:
And evyr honoured for his worthines.
At Alexandre' he was whan it was won;
Ful oft timis he had the bord begun
Abovin allè nacieous in Pruce;
In Lettow he riddin, and in Luce,
No Christen-man so oft of his degree
In Granada; in the sege had he be
Of Algezir, and ridd in Belmary;
At Leyis war he, and at Sataly,
Whan that they wer won; and in the grete fe
Whan manya noble army had he be:
At mortal battails had he ben fifene,
And foughtin for our feith at Tramesene,
In liftis thryss, and alwey flein his fo.
This ilke worthy knight hath ben alfo
Sometimis with the lord of Palathy,
Ayens anothir heathin in Turky;
And eviron he had a sovrane prize
And though that he was worthy, he was wise;
And of his port as meke as is a maid,
He nevir yet no villany ne faid
In all his life unto no manner wight;
He was a very parfit gentil knight.
But for to tellin you of his array,
His hors wer good; but he was nothing gay;
Of fuitian he werid a gipon,
Allè beinmodrid with his haburgeo.
For he was late ycome from his viage,
And wente for to do his pilgrimage.

The House of FAME.

The First Boke.

Now herken, as I have you saide,
What that I mette or I abraied,
Of December the tenth daie,
When it was night, to slepe I laie,

Vol. I.
Right as I was wonte for to deon,
And fill asleep wonder done,
As he that was were forgo
On pilgrimage miles two
To the corps of Saint Leonarde,
To makin liith that eke was harde.

But as me slept me mette I was Within a temple' imade of glass,
In which there were mo images
Of golde, standing in fondryllages,
Sete in mo riche tabernacles,
And with perrè mo pinnacles,
And mo curious portraituris,
And queint maner of figuris
Of golde worke, then I fawe evir.

But certainly I ne'ft nevir
Where that it was, but well wist I
It was of Venus redily
This temple, for in purtreiture
I fawe anone right her figure
Nakid yiletyng in a fe,
And alio on her hedde parde,
Her rofy garland white and redde,
And her combe for to kenbke her hedde,
Her dovis, and Dan Cupido
Her blinde fonne, and Vulcano,
That in his face ywas full broune.

But as I romid up and dounne,
I founde that on the wall there was
Thus writtyn on a table' of bras.
I woll now syng, if that I can,
The armes, and alio the man,
That first came through his telline
Fugitife fro Troye the countre
Into Itaile, with full moche pine,
Unto the strondis of Lavine,
And tho began the storie' anone,
As I shall tellin you echeone.

First fawe I the distruccon
Of Troie, thorough the Greke Sinon,
With his faffe untrue foriwerynges,
And with his chere and his lefynge,
That made a hore, brought into Troye,
By whiche Trojans lofte all their joye.

And after this was graved, alas!
How Ilions caftill affailed was,
And won, and byng Priamus flain,
And Polites his fonne certain,
Dispointly of Dan Pyrrhus.

And next that fawe I howe Venus,
When the fawe the caftill brennde,
Doune from hevin the gan dilcende,
And bide her fonne Æneas fle,
And how he fled, and how that he
Escapid was from all the pres,
And toke his fathe', old Anchifes,
And bare hym on his backe awaie,
Crying alas and welwaie!
The whiche Anchifes in his hande,
Bare tho the goddis of the lande
I mene thilke that unbrennd were.

Then fawe I next that all in fere
How Creuifa, Dan Æneas wife,
Whom that he lovid all his life,
And her yong fonne clepid Julo,
And eke Aescanius alio,
Fleddin eke, with full drerie chere,
That it was pite for to here,
And in a foret as there went
How at a tournyng of a went Creuifa was iloiste, alas!

That rede not I, how that it was
How he fought, and how her ghoste
Bad hym to flie the Grekis hoste,
And faiied he muft into Itaile,
As was his destine, fauns faile,
That it was pitie for to here,
When that her spirite gan appere,
The wordis that she to hym faied,
And for to kepe her fonne hym praied.

There fawe I gravin eke how he
His fathir eke, and his meine
With his hippis began to faile
Toward the country of Itaile,
As ftreight as ere the mightin go.

There fawe I eke the, cruill Juno,
That art Dan Jupiter his wife,
That haft ihatetall thy life
Mercilefs all the Trojan blode,
Rennin and crie as thou were wode
On Æolus, the god of windes,
To blowin out of alle kindes
So loudè, that he should ydrenche
Lorde, and ladie, and grome, and wenche
Of all the Trojanis nacion,
Without any' of their salvacion.

There fawe I foche tempelt arise,
That every herte might arie,
To see it paide on the wall.

There fawe I eke gravin withall,
Venus, how ye, my ladie dere,
Yweeping with full wofull chere
Yprayed Jupiter on he,
To fawe and kepyn that navie
Of that dere Trojan Æneas,
Sithins that he your fonne ywas.
Gode counsaile of Chaucer.

Suffise have the adverfite.
Sufhe unto the gode though it be small,
For horde hath hate, and climbyng tikihesse,
Prece hath envie, and wee it brenneth all,
Savour no more the behovin shall,
Rede well thy self, that othir folke canst rede,
And troute the shall delivir it 'is no drede.

Paine the not ech crokid to redcresse,
In trust of her that tournith as a balle,
Grece rest standith in litil buxiness,
Beware allo to spurne against a nalle,
Strive not as doith a crock with a walle,
Demith thy self that demith othir's dede,
And troute the shall delivir it 'is no drede.

That she is fent receve in buxomenesse;
The wrafflyng of this worlde askith a fall;
Here is no home, here is but wildirness,
Perchye pilgrim, forsothe be out of thy stall,
Loke up on high, and thanke thy God of all,
Wevith thy luftfe and let thy ghost the lede,
And troute the shall delivir, it 'is no drede.

Balade of the village without paintyng.

This wretched world is transmutacion
As wele and wo, nowe pore, and nowe honour,
Without ordir or dus discretion
Govirnnd is by fortun'is error,
But nathelleffe the lacke of her favour,
Ne maie not doe me fyng though that I die,
Is not my pendu, mon temps & mon laboure.
For finallly fortune I doe defe.

Yet is me left the light of my reboun
To knowen frende fro foe in thy mirour,
So moche hath yet thy tournyng up and down,
I taughtin me to knowin in an hour,
But truilly no force of thy reddour
To hym that owr hymself hath maifrie,
My suffirance yhall be my succour;
For finallly fortune I do defe.

O Socrates, thou felden champion,
She ne might nevir be thy turmentour,
Thou nevir dreddist her oppression,
Ne in her chere foundin thou no favour,
Thou knewe wele the discr ipt of her colour,
And that her moite worship is for to lie,
I knowe her eke a falfe difsimulour.
For finallly fortune I do defe.

The answere of Fortune.

No man is wretched but hymself it wene,
He that yhath hymself hath suffirance,
Why failet thou then I am to the to hene,
That hath thyself out of my govirnance?

Saye thus grant mercie of thin habundaunce
That thou haft lentor this, thou shalt not dreive,
What wolst thou yet how I the wol avance?
And eke thou haft thy belte frenede alive.

I have the taught division betwene
Frende of effecke, and frende of counfaine,
The nedih not the gallè of an hine,
That curith eyin derke for their penaunce,
Now feeft thou clere that wer in ignorance,
Yet holt thine anker, and thou maiest arive
There bountie bereth the key of my substanse,
And eke thou haft thy belte frenede alive.

How many have I refused to sustene,
Sith I have the foftrid in thy plesaunce?

Wolt thou then make a litature on thy quene,
That I shall be aie at thine ordinance?
Thou born art in my reign of variaunce,
About the whole with othir muft thou drive
My lore is bet, then wicke is thy gervaunce,
And eke thou haft thy belte frenede alive.

The answere to Fortune.

Thy lore I dampne, it is adverfite,
My frende maiest thou not revin blind goddesse,
That I thy frendis knowe I thanke it the,
Take 'hem again, let 'hem go lie a preffe,
The nigardis in kepyng ther richesse
Pronoftike is thou wolt ther toure affalle.
Wicke appetite cometh aie before sickenesse,
In generall this rule ne maie not faile.

Fortune.

Thou pinchift at my mutabilitie,
For I the lent a droppe of my richesse,
And now me likith to withdrawin me,
Why shouldest thou my roialtie oppresse?
The fe maie ebbe and flowin more and lefte,
The welkin hath might to shine, rain, and haile,
Right to muft I kithin my brotilneffe,
In generall this rule ne maie not faile.

The Plaintiffe.

Lo, the executio of the majestie,
That all purveighith of his rightwifenesse,
That famé thyng fortune yelepin ye;
Ye blyndé beffis full of leudenesse!
The hevén hath propirie of sickenes,
This worldé hath evir refléffe travaile,
The laft daie is the ende of myne entrefse,
In generall this rule ne maie not faile.

Th' envoye of Fortune.

Princes I praie you of your gentilenesse,
Let not this man and me thus crie and plain,
And I shall quarin you this bufineffe,
And if ye lifte releve hym of his pain,
Praie ye his best frende of his noblenesse
That to some bettir state he maie attain.

Lydgate
Lydgate was a monk of Bury, who wrote about the same time with Chaucer. Out of his prologue to his third book of The Fall of Princes a few stanzas are selected, which, being compared with the style of his two contemporaries, will show that our language was then not written by caprice, but was in a settled state.

LIKE a pilgrim which that goeth on foot,
And hath none horse to relieve his trauayle,
Whote, drye and wery, and may finde no bote
Of wel cold whan thrust doth hym affayle,
Wine nor licour, that may to hym auayle,
Tight to fare I which in my businesse,
No succour fynde my rudenes to redresse.

I meanes as thus, I have no freth licour
Out of the conduites of Calloipe,
Nor through Cloio in rhetorike no floure,
In my labour for to refresh me:
Nor of. the sufferers in number three,
Which with Cithera on Parano dwell,
They neuer me gave drinke once of their wel.

Nor of their springs cleere and christalline,
That sprang by touchyng of the Pegase,
Their fauour lacketh my making ten lumine
I fynde theyr bawme of so great scarcellite,
To tame their tunnes with some drop of plentiful
For Polyphemus throw his great blindnes,
Hath in me derked of Argus the brightenes.

Our life here short of wit the great dulnes
The heuy foule troubled with trauayle,
And of memore the glaring brotelnes,
Drede and vncunning haue made a strong batal
With werines my spirite to affayle,
And with their subtil creping in most quent
Hath made my spirite in makynge for to feint.

And ouermore, the ferfull frowardnes
Of my stepmother called oblivion,
Hath a balyll of foryetfullnes,
To flappe the passadge, and shadow my reason
That I might haue no clere direction,
In translating of new to quicke me,
Stories to write of olde antiquite.

Thus was I set and flote in double werre
At the metynge of fearfull ways twene,
The one was this, who euer liyt to lere,
Whereas good wyll gan me contrayne,
Bochas accomplishd for to doe my payne,
Came ignorance, with a menace of drede,
My penne to ref I durit not proceade.

Fortescue was chief justice of the Common Pleas, in the reign of king Henry VI. He retired in 1474, after the battle of Tewksbury, and probably wrote most of his works in his privacy. The following passage is selected from his book of The Difference between an absolute and limited Monarchy.

HYT may peraventure be marvelid by some men, why one Realme is a Lordhypo only Royall, and the Prince thereof rulyth yt by his Law, called Jus Regale; and another Kyngdome is a Lordship, Royall and Politike, and the Prince thereof rulyth by a Lawe, called Jus Politicum & Regale; fythyn this two Princes both of egall Affect.

To this dowe it may be anfwered in this maner; The first Institution of these two Realms, upon the Incorporation of them, is the Cause of this diversйте.

When Nembroth by Might, for his own Glorye, made and incorporate the first Realme, and savyd it to hymself by Tyrannye, he would not have it governed by any other Rule or Lawe, but by his own Will; by which and for the accomplishment thereof he made it. And herfor, though he had thus made a Realme, holy Scripture denyd to cal hym a Kyng, Quia Rex dicitur a Regendo; Whych thyng he dyd not, but oppreft the People by Myght, and therfor he was a Tyrant, and callid Primus Tyrannorum. But holy Writ callith hym Robynus Venator coram Deo. For as the Hunter takyth the wyld bette for to sele and cate hym; so Nembroth subdyd to him the People with Mght, to have their service and their goods, using upon them the Lordship that is callid Dominium Regale tantum. After hym Belus that was callid first a Kyng, and after hym his Sone Nynus, and after hym other Panyms; They, by Example of Nembroth, made them Realms, would not have them rulyd by other Lawys than by their own Wills. Which Lawys ben right good under good Princes; and their Kyngdoms a then most remblyd to the Kyngdome of God, which reynith upon Man, rulyng him by hys own Will. Wherfor many Crylyn Princes uen the fame Lawe; and therfor it is, that the Lawys fayen, Quod Principi planus Legis habet vigorem. And thus I fuppose first beganne in Realms, Dominium tantum Regale. But afterward, when Mankynd was more manuete, and better dipolyd to Vertue, Grete Communalties, as was the Felship, that came into this Lond with Brute, wylyng to be unyed and made a Body Politike callid a Realme, havynge an Heed to governe it; as after the Saying of the Philosopher, every Commanltie unyed of many parts must needs have an Heed; than they chose the fame Brute to be their Heed and Kyng. And they and he upon this Incorporation and Institution, and onyng of themself into a Realme, ordeyned the fame Realme to be rulyd and Jullyfyd by such Lawys, as they al would affent unto; which Law therfor is callid Politicum; and bycaufe it is mynyftrid by a Kyng, it is callid Regale.
ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Regale. Dominium Politicum dicimus Regimen, plurium Scientiae, seu Consilio ministratum. The Kyng of Scotts reynith upon his People by this Lawe, videlicet, Regimine Politico & Regali: And as Diodorus Syculus faith, in his Boke de præcis Hisbaris, The Realme of Egypte is rulid by the same Lawe, and therfor the Kyng therof chaungith not his Lawes, without the Assent of his People. And in like formé as he faith is ruled the Kyngdome of Saba, in Felici Arabia, and the Londe of Libie; And also the more parte of al the Realmys in Afrike. Which manner of Rule and Lordship, the sayd Diodorus in that Boke, prayzith greatly. For it is not only good for the Prince, that may thereby the more fewelry do Justice, than by his owne Arbitriment; but it is also good for his People that receyve therby, such Justice as they defyer themself. Now as me seymth, it ys shewyd openly enough, why one Kyng rulyth and reynith on his People Dominio tantum Regali, and that other reynith Dominio Politico & Regali: For that one Kyngdome beganne, of and by, the Might of the Prince, and the other beganne, by the Desier and Institution of the People of the same Prince.

Of the works of Sir Thomas More it was necessary to give a larger specimen, both because our language was then in a great degree formed and settled, and becaufe it appears from Ben Jonson, that his works were considered as models of pure and elegant styile. The tale, which is placed first, because earliest written, will shew what an attentive reader will, in perusing our old writers, often remark, that the familiar and colloquial part of our language, being diffused among those classics who had no ambition of refinement, or affection of novelty, has suffered very little change. There is another reason why the extracts from this author are more copious: his works are carefully and correctly printed, and may therefore be better trusted than any other edition of the English books of that, or the preceding ages.

A merry jest how a sergeant would learme to playe the frere. Written by maister Thomas More in hys youth.

WYSE men alway,
Affyrme and say,
That best is for a man:
Diligently,
For to apply,
The bultines that he can,
And in no wyse,
To enterprete,
An other faculte,
For he that wyll,
And can no skyll,
Is never lyke to the.
He that hath lye,
The hoffers craffe,
And falleth to makynge thone,
The mythe that shalle,
To payntynge fall,
His threfty is well nigh done.
A blacke draper,
With whyre paper,
To goe to wryting scole;
An olde butler,
Becum a cutler,
I wene shalle proue a folk.
And an olde trot,
That can I wot,
Nothynge but kyffe the cup,
With her phisick,
Wil kepe on sicke,
Tyll the have fouled hym vp.

Vol. I.
THE HISTORY OF THE

For left sum blast,
Myght ouer caft,
His ship, or by mischance,
Men with sum wil,
Myght hym begyle,
And minifi his sustaunce,
For to put out,
All maner dou,
He made a good puruy,
For every whyt,
By his owne wyt,
And toke an other way:
First fayre and wele,
Therof much dele,
He dygged it in a pot,
But then him thought,
That way was nought,
And there he left it not.
So was he faine,
From whence agayne,
To put it in a cup,
And by and by,
Coutously,
He supped it fayre vp,
In his owne brest,
He thought it best,
His money to enclose,
Then wift he well,
What euere fell,
He coulde it never lose.
He borrowed then,
Of other men,
Money and marchaundise:
Neuer payd it,
Up he laid it,
In like maner wyse.
Yet on the gere,
That he would were,
He reight not what he spent,
So it were nyce,
As for the price,
Could him not misconent.
With lusty sperte,
And with relle,
Of ioly company,
In mirth and play,
Full many a day,
He luct merelie,
And men had tworne,
Some man is borne,
To haue a lucky howre,
And so was he,
For such degree,
He gat and fuche honour,
That without dou,
Wen he went out,
A sERGEAUNT well and fayre,
Was redy ftraye,
On hym to wayte,
As fone as on the mayre.
But he doubteffe,
Of his mekenesse,
Hated sche pompe and pride,
And would not go,
Companied fo,
But drewe himself a side,
To faint Katharine,
Streight as a line,
He gat him at a tyde,
For deuocation,
Or promocion,
There would he nedes abyde.
There spent he fast,
Till all were past,
And to him came thery men,
To askethe their debt,
But none could get,
The valour of a peny.
With viage stout,
He bare it out,
Euen vnto the hard hedge,
A monthe or twaine,
Tyll he was fayre,
To lay his gowne to pledge.
Than was he there,
In greater feare,
Than ere that he came thither,
And would as fayre,
Depart againe,
But that he wift not whither.
Than after this,
To a frende of his,
He went and there abode,
Where as he lay,
So fick alway,
He myght not come abrode.
It happed that,
A marchaunt man,
That he ought money to,
Of an officere,
That gan enquere,
What him was best to do.
And he anfwere,
Be not aferde,
Take an accion therefor,
I you behelte,
I shal hym reft,
And than carent for moare.
I feare quod he,
It wyll not be,
For he wyll not come out,
The SERGEAUNT said,
Be not afrayd,
It shal be brought about.

In many a game,
Lyke to the same,
Hauve I bene well in wre,
And for your sake,
Let me be bake,
But ye I do this cure.
Thus part they both,
And forth then goth,
A pace this officere,
And for a day,
All his array,
He chaunged with a frere.
So was he dight,
That no man might,
Hym for a frere deny,
He dopped and dooked,
He speake and looked,
So religiously.
Yet in a glasse,
Or he would paffe,
He toode and he peered,
His harre for pryde,
Lepte in his fyde,
To see how well he freerde.
Than forth a pace,
Unto the place,
He goeth withouten shame
To do this dede,
But now take hede,
For here begynneth the game.
He drew hym ny,
And softly,
Streight at the dore he knocked:
And a damfell,
That hard hym well,
There came and it vnlocked.
The frere sayd,
Good speede fayre mayd,
Here lodgeth such a man,
It is told me:
Welle syr quod she,
And ye he do what than.
Quod he mayestreffe,
No harm doubtelle:
It longeth for our order,
To hurte no man,
But as we can,
Every wight to fordeir.
With hym truly,
Fayre speake would I.
Sir quod she by my say,
He is to lyke,
Ye be not lyke,
To speake with hym to day.
Quod he fayre may,
Yet I you pray,
This much at my desire.
Vouchesafe
Vouchesafe to do,
As go hym to,
And say an auflen frere
Wou'd with hym speke,
And matters breake,
For his auyle certayn.
Quod she I wyll,
Sronde ye here dyll,
Tyll I come doun again,
Vp is the go,
And told hym so,
As she was bode to say,
He mistrustysng,
No maner thyng,
Sayd mayden go thy way,
And fetch him hyder,
That we rogyder,
May talk. A dounhe gothe,
Vp she hym brought,
No harme the thought,
But it made some folke wrothe.
This officere,
This sayned frere,
When he was come aloft,
He dopped than,
And grete this man,
Religiously and oft.
And he agayn,
Ryght glad and sayn,
Toke hym there by the hande,
The frere than sayd,
Ye be dismayd,
With trouble I understande,
In dede quod he,
It hath with me,
Bene better than it is.
Syr quod the frere,
Be of good chere,
Yet shal it after this.
But I would now,
Comen with you,
In counsayle ye you please,
Or ellys nat,
Of matters that,
Shall set your heart at ease.
Dounhe went the mayd,
The marshaunt sayd,
No say on gentle frere,
Of thyys tydyng,
That ye me bryng,
I long full lore to here.
When there was none,
But they alone,
The frere with cuyll grace,
Sayd, I reft the,
Come on with me,
And out he toke his mace:
Thau shalt obey,
Come on thy way,
I have the in my clouche,
Thau goest not hence,
For all the penfe
The mayre hath in his pouche,
This marshaunt there,
For wrath and fere,
He waxynge welyngh wood,
Sayd horfon thefe,
With a mirche,
Who hath taught thee thy good.
And with his fit,
Vpon the lyft,
He gaue hym such a blow,
That backward dounne,
Almost in soune,
The frere is ouerthrow.
Yet was this man,
Well fearder than,
Left he the frere had slayne,
Tilli with good rappe,
And heuy clappes,
He dawde hym vp agayne.
The frere toke harte,
And vp he flarte,
And well he layde about,
And fo thare goth,
Betwene them both,
Many a lusty clout.
They rent and terce,
Eche others here,
And claus togerder fast,
Tyll with luggyng,
And with tuggyng,
They fell dounne bothe at laft.
Than on the grounde,
Togeder ronde,
With many a fadde stroke,
They roll and rumble,
They turrne and tumbled,
As pygges do in a poke.
So long aboue,
They heue and shoue,
Togider that at laft,
The mayd and wyfe,
To breake the strife,
Hyed them vpward fast.
And when they fyce,
The captaynes lye,
Both waltering on the place,
The freres hood,
They pulled a good,
Adowne about his face,
Whyue he was bynde,
The wenche behynede,
Lent him leyd on the flore,
Many a joule,
About the noule,
With a great batylldore.
The wyfe cane yet,
And with her fete,
She holpe to kepe him dounne,
And with her rocke,
Many a knocke,
She gaue hym on the crowne.
They layd his mace,
About his face,
That he was wood for payne:
The fryre frappe,
Gate many a fwappe,
Tyll he was full nygh slayne.
Vp they hym lift,
And with yill thirft,
Hedlyng a long the slaye,
Dounne they hym threwe,
And sayde adewe,
Commende us to the mayre.
The frere arofe,
But I suppoft,
Amaned was his hed,
He shoke his eares,
And from grete fcares,
He thought hym well yfled.
Quod he now loft,
Is all this coft,
We be never the nere.
Il mote he be,
That caufed me,
To make my felf a frere.
Now marters all,
Here now I shal,
Ende there as I began,
In any wyfe,
I wou'd anyfe,
And counsayle every man,
His owne craft vfe,
All newe refuge,
And lyghtly let them gone:
Play not the frere,
Now make good chere,
And welcome euerych one.
A ruful lamentacion (written by master Thomas More in his youth) of the deth of quene Elizabeth mother to king Henry the eight, wife to king Henry the feuenth, and the eldest daughter to king Edward the fourth, whose Elizabeth dyed in childbed in February in the yere of our Lord 1503, and in the 18 yere of the raigne of king Henry the feuenth.

O YE that put your tryst and confidence,
In worldly joy and frayle prosperite,
That lo lyue here as ye shoulde never hence,
Remember death and Joke here upon me.
Enample I thinke there may no better be.
Your selfe worthe well that in this realme was I,
Your quene but late, and lo now here I ly.
Was I not borne of olde worthy linage?
Was not my mother quene my father kyng?
Was I not a kinges fere in marriage?
Had I not plenty of every pleasuante thyng?
Mercifull god this is a trauenge reckenyng:
Rycheffe, honour, welth, and aunceftry:
That me forfaken and lo now here I ly.
If worship myght haue kept me, I had not gone.
If wyte myght haue me faued, I neded not fere.
If money myght haue holpe, I lacked none.
But God good what vayleth all this geres.
When deth is come thy mighty meflangere,
Obey we must there is no remedy,
Me hath he fommoned, and lo now here I ly.
Yet was I late promisied otherwyse,
This yere to lyue in welth and delice.
Lo where to commeth thy bandiftehy promye,
O falle astrology and deuynatryse.
Of goddes secretes makyng thy selfe so wyse.
How truely is for this yere thy prophecy.
The yere yet laftehy, and lo now here I ly.
O bryttel welth, as ful of bitterneffe,
Thy single pleursee doubled is with payne.
Account my forow firste and my diftere,
In fondry wyse, and recken there agayne,
The joye that I have haued, and I dare layne,
For all my honour, endured yet haue I,
More wo than welth, and lo now here I ly.
Where are our caffels, now where are our towers,
Goodly Rychmonde fone art thou gone from me,
At Westminster that costly worke of yours,
Myne owne dere lorde now shal I never fee.
Almighty god voucheafe to graunt that ye,
For you and your children well may edely.
My palyse bylded is, and lo now here I ly.
Adew myne owne dere spoufe my worthy lorde,
The faithfull love, that dyd vs both conjynge,
In marryage and peacleable concorde,
Into your handes here I clene royne,
To be bestowed vpon your children and moyn.
Erst wer you father, and now mule ye supplie,
The mothers part also, for lo now here I ly.

Farewell my daughter lady Margarete.
God wootte full oft it greued hath my mynde,
That ye should go where we shoulde feldome mete.
Now am I gone, and haue left you behynde.
O mortall folke that we be very bynyde.
That we leaft feare, full oft it is molt nye,
From you depart I fyrfyt, and lo now here I ly.
Farewell Madame my lords worthy mother,
Comfort your sonne, and be ye of good chere.
Take all a worth, for it will be no nother.
Farewell my daughter Katherine late the fere,
To prince Arthur myne owne chylfd fo dere,
It boocht not for me to wepe or cry,
Pray for my soule, for lo now here I ly.
Adew lord Henry my louye fonne adew.
Our lorde encreafe your honour and estate,
Adew my daughter Mary bright of hew,
God make you vertuous wyse and fortunate.
Adew sweete hart my litle daughter Kate,
Thou shalt sweete babe suche is thy defteny,
Thy mother neuer know, for lo now here I ly.
Lady Cicily Anne and Kate,
Farewell my welbeloved fisters three,
O lady Briget other fister myne,
Lo here the ende of worldely vanitee.
Now well are ye that earthly foly fece,
And heavynse thynges loue and magnify,
Farewell and pray for me, for lo now here I ly.
A dew my lorde, a dew my lades all,
A dew my faithful feruauntes everych one,
A dew my commons whom I neuer shall,
See in this world wherfore to the alone,
Immortall god verely three and one,
I me commende. Thy infinite mercy,
Shew to thy feruant, for lo now here I ly.

Certain meters in English written by master Thomas More in his youth for the boke of fortune, and caueth them to be printed in the beynynge of that boke.

The wordes of Fortune to the people.

MINE high estate power and auctoritie,
If ye ne know, encreche and ye shall spye,
That richesse, worship, welth, and dignitie,
Joy, rest, and peace, and all thyng synally,
That any pleasure or profit may come by,
To mannes comfort, ayde, and sustenaunce,
Is all at my deuyse and ordinaunce.
Without my fayour there is nothing wonne.
Many a matter haue I brought at last,
To good conclusion, that fondly was begonne.
And many a purpose, bounden fure and falt
With wife prowision, I haue ouercaft.
Without good happe there may no wit suffice.
Better is to be fortunate than wyse.
And therefore hath there some men bene or this,
My deadly foes and written many a boke,
To my dispraye. And other cause there nys,
But for me lief not friendly on them loke.
Thus lyke the fox they fare that once forsoke,
The pleasaunt grapes, and gan for to defy them,
Because he lept and yet could not come by them.

But let them write theyr labour is in vayne,
For well ye wote, myrth, honour, and richeffe,
Much better is than penury and payne.
The nedy wretch that lingereth in diffresse,
Without myne helpe is ever comfortlesse,
A very burden odious and loth,
To all the world, and eke to him selfe both.
But he that by his fauour may afcende,
To mighty power and excellent degree,
A common wele to gouerne and defende,
O in how blift condition standeth he:
Him self in honour and felicite,
And ouer that, may forther and increase,
A region hole in joyfull rest and peace.

Now in this poynyt there is no more to say,
Eche man hath of him self the gouernance.
Let every wight than folowe his owne way,
And he that out of pouerrie and mischance,
Lift for to liue, and wyll him selfe enhance,
In wealth and richeffe, come forth and wayte on me.
And he that will be a beggar, lykem be.

THOMAS MORE to them that trust in Fortune.

THOU that are proude of honour shape or kynne,
That hepeft vp this wretched worlde treasure,
Thy fingers shrinde with gold, thy tawny fkyrene,
With freshe apparyle garnished out of meafeure,
And wenest to hauue fortune at thy pleasure,
Caft vp thyne eye, and loke how flipper chaunce,
Illudeth her men with chaung and vauryance.
Sometyme she lokeft as lovelie fayre and bright,
As goodly Uenus mother of Cupyde.
She becketh and the smieth on euery wight,
But this cheere fayneed, may not long abide.
There commeth a cloude, and farewell all our pryde.
Like any serpent the beginneth to swell,
And lookest as fierce as any fury of hell.

Yet for all that we brote men are fayne,
(So wretched is our nature and fo bylynde)
As soone as Fortune lyft to laught agayne,
With fayre countenance and delfcente mynde,
To crouche and knele and gape after the wynde,
Not one or twayne but thoulandes in a rout,
Lyke swarmanyng bees come flickeryng her aboute.
Then as a baiet the she bryngeth forth her ware,
Siluer, gold, riche perle, and precious stone:
On whiche the malede people gafe and flare,
And gape therefore, as dogges doe for the bone.
Fortune at them laugheth, and in her trone

Amyd her treasure and waueryng rychesse,
Proudly shehoueth as lady and empriss.
Faft by her fyde doth very labour stand,
Pale feere alfo, and forow all bewepe,
Difdayn and hatred on the other hand,
Eke refltes watche fro slepe with trauayle kept,
His eyes drowfy and lokyng as he lept.
Before her standeth danger and enuy,
Flattery, dyscyet, mischiefe and tiranni.
About her commeth all the world to begge.
He akeeth lande, and he to pas would bryng,
This roye and that, and all not worth an egge:
He would in lue prosper above all thyng:
He kneleth downe and would be made a kyng:
He forceth not so he may money haue,
Though all the worlde accompt hym for a knaue.

Lo thus ye see diuers heddes, diuers wittes.
Fortune alone as diuers as they all,
Vnstable here and there among them flittes:
And at aventure downe her giftes fall,
Catch who so may the throweth great and small
Not to all men, as commeth fonne or dewe,
But for the Most part, all among a fewe.
And yet her brotell giftes long may not laft.
He that the-gaue them, lokest proude and hye:
She whirleth about and plucketh away as faft,
And gueveth them to another by and by,
And thus from man to man continually,
She vseth to gue and take, and Lilly toffe,
One man to wynnyng of an others losse.

And when the robbeth one, downe goth his pryde.
He wepeth and wayleth and curfeth her full fere.
But he that receueth it, on that other fyde,
Is glad, and blest he often tymes therefore.
But in a whyle when she loueth hym no more,
She glydeth from hym, and her giftes to,
And he her curfeth, as other fooles do.

Alas the folafe people can not ceafe,
Ne vovyed her trayne, tyll they the harme do fele.
About her alway, befely they preace.
But lord how he doth thanke hym self full wele.
That may yet once his hande vppon her whyle.
He holdeth faft: but vpward as he flieth,
She whippeth her whyle about, and there he lyeth.
Thus fell Julius from his mighty power.
Thus fell Darius the worthy kyng of Perce.
Thus fell Alexander the great conquerour.
Thus many mo then I may well rehere.
Thus double fortune, when the lyft reuerfe
Her flipper fayour fro them that in her trut,
She fleeth her wey and leyeth them in the duft.
She fodeinly enhanceeth them aloft.
And sodeynly mischeueth all the flocke.
The head that late lay easly and full soft,
In flede of pylows lyeth after on the bloccke.
And yet alas the moft cruell proude mocke:
The deynty mouth that ladyes kisst haue,
She bryngeth in the caze to kyffe a knaue.
In chaungying of her course, the chaunge shewth this,
Vp starth a knaue, and downe there salth a knight,
The beggar ryche, and the ryche man pore is.
Hatred is turned to love, love to despyght.
This is her sport, thus proueth the her myght.
Great bothe she maketh yt one be by her power,
Welthy and wretched both within an howre.
Poorete of that of her giftes wyll nothing take,
Wyth mery chere, looketh vpon the prece.
Feeth how fortunes houhold goeth to wake.
East by her standeth the wyse Socrates,
Arstitippus, Pythagoras, and many a lefe.
Of olde philosophers. And eke agaynst the sonne
Bekyth hym poore Diogenes in his tonne.

With her is Byas, whose countrie lackt defence,
And wyllom of their foes ftole s to doute,
That eche man failely gan to cary thence,
And asked hym why he nought caryed out.
I bere quod he all myne with me about:
Wifdom he ment, not fortunes broteth fees.
For nought he counted his that he might leefe.

Heraclitus eke, lyft felowship to kepe
With glad pouerete, Democritus also:
Of which the fyrst can never cease but wepe,
To see how thick the byldened people goe,
With labour great to purchase care and wo.
That other laugheth to see the foolyshe apes,
How earneftly they walk about their capes.

Of this poore feft, it is comen vlage,
Onely to take that nature may foftayne,
Bannifying cleane all other furpluse,
They be content, and of nothynge compayne.
No nygarde eke is of his good to fayne.
But they more pleasure haue a thoulanted folde,
The secrete draughtes of nature to beholde.

Set fortunes fervauentes by them and ye wull,
That one is free, that other ever thrall,
That one content, that others ever full,
That one in surete, that other lyke to fall.
Who lyft to aduile them bothe, parceuye he fall,
As great difference between them as we see,
Betwyxte wretches and felicite.

Nowe haue I shewed you bothe: these whiche ye lyft,
Statly fortune, or humble pouerete:
That is to say, none lyseth it in your lyft,
To take here bondage, or free libertee.
But in this poynte and ye do after me,
Draw you to fortune, and labour her to please,
If that ye thinke your selte to well at eale.

And fyrt vpon the louely shal the smyte,
And frendly on the cait her wandering eyes,
Embrace the in her armes, and for a whyte,
Put the and kepe the in a fooles paradise:
And fourth with all what so thou lyft deuise,
She wyll the grant it liberally perhaps:
But for all that beware of after clappes.

Reckon you neuer of her favoure sure:
Ye may in cloudes as easilly trace an hare,
Or in drye lande caufe fishes to endure,
And make the burnynge fyre his heate to spare,
And all thyss woorde in compace to forfare,
As her to make by craft or engine flable,
That of her nature is ever variable.

Surete her day and nyght as reuerently,
Vpon thy knees as any feruant may,
And in conclusion, that thou shalt winne thereby
Shall not be worth thy serverice I dare say.
And looke yet what the geueth the to day,
With labour wonne the shal happily to morow
Plucke it agayne out of thyne hand with forow.

Wherefore yt thou in surete lyft to stande,
Take pouereties parte and let prowde fortune go,
Receyve nothyng that commeth from her hande.
Lowe maner and vertue: they be onely tho.
Whiche double fortune may not take the fro.
Then mayst thou boldely defye her turnynge chauce:
She can the neyther hynder nor aunauce.

But and thou wylt nedes medle with her treasure,
Truft not therein, and spende it liberally.

Beare the no proude, nor take not out of meature.
Bylde not thynce house on heyth vp in the skye.
Nonne falith farre, but he that climbeth yce.
Remember nature sent the hyther bare,
The gyftes of fortune count them borrowed ware.

THOMAS MORE to them that feke Fortune.

WHO so deuyte to proven and aysy,
Of wavering fortune the vncertayne lot,
If that the aunwere pleasse you not alway,
Blame ye not me: for I commande you not,
Fortune to tryst, and eke full well ye woor,
I haue of her no byrdle in my fitt,
She renneth loofe, and turneth where the lyft.

The rollynge dyke in whom your lucked doth stande,
With whole vnhappy chauce ye be so wroth,
Ye knowe your felte came never in myne hande.

Lo in this ponda be fythe and frogges both,
Cait in your nette: but be you litle or lothen,
Hold you content as fortune lyft allayn:
For it is your owne fythyng and not myne.

And though in one chauce fortune you offend,
Grudge not there at, but beare a mery face.
In many an other the shall it amende.
There is no manne so farre out of her grace,
But he somyyme hath comfort and solace:
Ne none agayne so farre forth in her favoure,
That is full satsfied with her behauiour.

Fortune is latelly, solemne, powde, and hye:
And ryche不说 geueth, to have feryuce thereforre.
The nedy begge catteteth an halfpeny.
Some manne a thousande pounde, some leffe some more.
But for all that he kepeth ever in flore,
From every manne some parcell of his wyll,
That he may pray therselfe and serve her flyll.
Some manne hath good, but children hath he none.
Some manne hath both, but he can get none health.
Some hath al thire, but vp to honours trone,
Can he not crepe, by no maner of felthe.
To fome she sendeth, children, ryches, welthe,
Honour, woorhype, and reuerence all his lyfe:
But yet the pyncheth hym with a shrewde wyfe.

Then for asmuch as it is fortunes gyyle,
To graunt to manne all thyng that he wyll axe,
But as her felle lyft order and deuyse,
Both every manne his parte diuide and tax,
I couenaye you eche one truwe vp your packes,
And take no thyng at all, or be content,
With suche rewarde as fortune hath you fent.

All thynges in this boke that ye shall rede,
Doe as ye lyft, there shal no manne you bynde,
Them to beleeue, as fullye as your crede.
But norwithstanding certes in my mynde,
I durst well swere, as true ye shal them fynde,
In evey pointe eche answere by and by,
As are the judgements of astronomey.

The Description of Richard the thirde.

Richard the third sonne, of whom we nowe entreate, was in witte and courrage eгал with either of them, in bodye and prouesse farre vnder them bothe, little of stature, ill setured of limmes, croke backed, his left shoulde much higher than his right, hard fauoured of vifage, and such as is in itates called warlye, in other menne otherwise, he was malicious, wrathfull, envious, and from afores his birth, euer frowarde. It is for trouthe reported, that the duches his mother had so much a doe in her traualie: that shee coulde not be deliverd of hym vnclute, and that he came into the world with the feete forwarde, as menne be borne outwarde, and (as the fame rewritten) also not vnto thet, whither menne of hatred reporte aboue the trouthe, or elles that nature chaunged his courfe in hys beginnynge, whiche in the courfe of his lyfe many thinges vnnaturalye committed.
None euill capatine was hee in the ware, as to whiche his dispozion was more metely then for peace. Sundrye victories hadde hee, and somme-time ouerthrowes, but never in defaulte as for his owne parfon, either of hardinesse or poyltyke order, free was hee called of dympence, and sommewhat aboue his power liberal, with large giftes hee get him wynnedate frendeshippe, for whiche hee was fain to pil and spoyle in other places, and get him steadfast hatred. Hee was close and secrete, a deepe discerne, lowlye of countenancce, arrogante of heart, outwardlye comptynable where he inwardey hated, not letting to kiffe whome he thoughte to kylle: dispitiones and cruell, not for euill will alway, but after for ambition, and either for the furietie and encrease of his estate. Frende and foo was muche what indifferent, where his advaungtage grew, he sparde no mans death, whollye with foode his purpose. He swee with his owne handes king Henry the fyrst, being prisoner in the Tower, as menne constantly faye, and that without commanudement or knowledge of the king, whiche woulde undoubtedly ye he had entended that thynge, haue appointed that boocherly office, to some other then his owne borne brother.

Sommue wife menne alle weene, that his drif courteerly conuayde, lacked not in helping furth his brother of Clarence to his death: whiche hee refistd openly, howbeit somwhat (as menne deme) more dainly then he that wer hartely minded to his welth. And they that thus deme, think that he long time in king Edwardes lyfte, forethought to be king in that caze the king his brother (whose life hee looked that euill dyete shoulde shortern) shoulde happen to deceafe (as in dede he did) while his children wer yonge. And thei deme, that for thys intent he was gladd of his brothers death the duke of Clarence, whose lyfe must nudes haue hindered hym fo entendynge, whither the fame duke of Clarence hadde keppe him true to his nephew yonge king, or enterprised to be kyng himfelfe. But of a] this pointe, is there no certainie, and whofo diuineth vppon coniecutures, maye as wel flote to farre as to short. Howbeit this hau I by credible informacion learned, that the felke nighte in whiche kyng Edwardes dyed, one Myftebrooke longe ere mornynge, came in grete halfe to the houle of one Pottery dwellying in Reddecruffe fritee without Crepulgate; and when he was with badt ye rappynge quickly letten in, hee frewed vnto Pottery that kyng Edwardes was departed. By my trouthe mane quod Pottier then whil my master the dufe of Gloucester bee kyngye. What cause hee hadde foo to thynke halde it is to faye, whyther hee being toward him, anye thynge knewe that hee suche thynge purposed, or otherwyse had anye Inkelye thereof:
for hee was not likeleye to speake it of noughte.
But nowe to returne to the courfe of this hisstorye, were it that the dufe of Gloucester haide of old fore-minded this conclusion, or was nowe at erthe thereunto moved, and putte in hope by the occasion of the tender age of the younge princes, his nephues (as opportunitie and likelyhode of spede, putth a manne in courrage of that hee never en-tended) cerrayn is it that hee conrained therdef-truccion, with the vflrapacion of the regal dignityte vppon hymfelle. And for as muche as hee well withe and holpe to mayntayn, a long continued grudge and hearte brennynge betweene the quenes kinred and the kinges blood eyther partye enuying others authoritie, he nowe thought that their de\textit{filiation shoulde bee} (as it was in dede) a fortherlye begynnynge to the pursuite of his intente, and a fure ground for the foundation of al his building ye he might firtle vnder the pretexet of reuengynge of olde displeasure, abuse the anger and ygnoraunce of the tone partie, to the destruccion of the tother:
and then wynne to this purpose as manye as he coulde: and those that could not be wonne, myght be lofte ere they looked therefore. For of one thyng was hee certayne, that if his entente were percieued, he shold soone haue made peace be-twene the bothe parties, with his owne bloude.

\textit{Kynge Edward} in his life, albeit that this discencion becwene his frendes sommewhat yrked hym: yet in his good heathe he sommewhat the lyke regarded it, because hee thought whatsoeuer busines shoulde falle betwene them, hymselfe should alwaie bee hable to rule bothe the parties.

But in his laste ficknesse, when hee receiued his naturall streinte the fore ensebled, that hee dybynynge all recourye, then hee confyderynge the youth of his chylde, albeit hee nothyng lefte mistrusted then that that happened, yet well for-feyng that manye harms myghte growe by theyr debate, whyle the youth of his chylde shoulde lacke diercicion of themself, and good consayle of their frendes, of whiche either partye shold con-sayle for their owne commodity and rather by pleasaunte adowyte too wynne themselfe-fauour, then by profitable adverturemente to do the chyldren good, he called some of them before him that were at variance, and in especte all the lorde marques Dor-sayle the quenes fonne by her fyrte howsebande, and Richarde the lorde Halynyes, a noble man, than lorde chumberlayne agayne whome the quene specialy grudged, for the great fauour the kyng bare hym, and alfo for that hee thoughte hym se-cretely familier with the kyng en wanont com-panye. Her kynder alfo bare hym fore, as wel for that the kyng hade made hym captayne of Calyce (whiche office the lorde Ryuers, brother to the quene, claimed of the kinges former promyse) as for dierfe other great giftes whiche hee receyued, that they loked for. When these lorde with dierfe other of bothe the partie were commae in preence, the kyng leytinge vppe himselfe and vnderfette with pillowes, as it is reported on this wyse sayd vnto them, My lordes, my dere kinmenne, and allies, in what plighte I lye you see, and I feele. By whiche the lefle whyle I looke to lyue with you, the more depelye am I moued to care in what case I leaue you, for such as I leaue you, fuche bee my children lyke to fynde you.
Whiche if they shoulde (that Godde forbydde) fyne you at vrayance, myght happe to fall thmselfe at warre ere their diercicion woulde servre to fette you at peace. Ye fee their youth, of whiche
I recken the onely suretie to refle in youre concord. For it suffilet not that al you loue them, yf eche of you hate other. If they wer menne, their faithfulnesse happelye woulde suffite. But childhood must be maintayned by mens authoritie, and flipper youth vnderproped with elder coun-sayle, which neither they can haue, but ye geue it, nor ye geue it, yf ye gree not. For when eche la-boureth to breake that the other maketh, and for hatred of eche of others parson, impugneth eche others counsayle, there must it nedes bee long ere anye good conclusion goe forwarde. And alfo while either partye laboureth to be chyfe, flattery shall haue more place then plaine and faithfull adyye, of whiche mutte needes enseue the eyyll bring-ving vppe of the prync, whose mynd in tender youth infect, that redily fau to mischief and riot, and drawe downe with this noble relme to ruine: but if grace turne him to wildom, which if Godd send, then thei that by euyl menes before pleased him belp, shal after fall farthest out of favour, so that ever at length euyl driftes dree to nought, and good plain wayes prosper. Great variance hath ther long bene betwene you, not alway for great cauces. Sometime a thing right wel intended, our misconstruccion turneth vnto worse or a final displeasure done vs, eyther our owne affeccion or euil tongues agreeueth. But this wote I well ye never had so great caufe of hatred, as ye have of loue.
That be al men, that be chyllen men, this shall I leaue for prechers to tel you (and yet I wote here whither any prechers wordes ought more oughte to moue you, then his that is by and by goyng to the place that thei all preache of.) But this shal I defire you to remember, that the one parte of you is of my bloude, the other of myne allies, and eche of you with other, eyther of kinred or affinitie, which spyrtyuall kynred of affynity, if the sacramentes of Christes churche, beare that weyghte with vs that would Godde thei did, shoulde no leffe moue vs to charitie, then the respecete of feithlye confanguntye. Our Lorde forbysyde, that you love together the worse, for the selfe causse that you ought to loue the better. And yet that happeneth. And no where fynde wee so deadlye debate, as amongst them, whyche by nature and lawe moile oughte to agree together. Such a perilietin ferpente is ambicion and defyr of vaine glorye and foueranty, whiche amongst stastes where he once entreth crepeth foorth to farre, tblly with devision and variance hee turneth all to mischief. Firste longing to be neste the beft, afterwarde egall with the belle, and at laste chiefe and aboue the beft.
Of which immoderate appetite of woorship, and thereby of debate and diffencion what loffe, what forowe,
forowe, what trouble hathe within these fewe yeares grown in this realme, I praye Godde as wel for-geate as weel remember.

Whiche things ye I coulde as wel have foresene, as I haue with my more payne then pleasure proued, by Goddes blessed Ladie (that was euer his othe) I woulde never have won the courtesye of mennes knees, with the loffe of too manye heads. But fitten thynges passe not to be gaine called, muche oughte wee the more beware, by what occasioun we haue taken foore greatte hurted aforde, that we eftefroones fall not in that occasioun agayne. Nowe be those grieues passe, and all is (Godde be thanked) quiere, and likele righte wel to prosper in wealthfull peace vnder youre cofeys, if Godde ende them life and you loue. Of whiche twoo things, the lefte loffe Wer they by whome though Godde dydde hys pleasure, yet shoulde the realme alway finde kinges and paundanture as good kinges. But ye you among your selfe in a childef raygne fall at debate, manye a good man shal perih and happily he to, and ye to, ere this land finde peace again. Wherfore in these lastt wordes that euery I looke to speake with you: I exhort you and require you al, for the loue that you haue euer borne to me, for the loue that I haue euer borne to you, for the loue that our Lord beareth to vs all, from this time forwarde, all grieues forgotten, eche of you loue other. Whiche I verelye truste you will, if ye any thing earthly regard, either Godde or you king, affinitie or kinred, this realme, your owne countrey, or your owne surety. And therewithal the king no longer enduring to fite vp laide he down on his right side, his face towards them: and none was there present that couldref refrain from weeping. But the lorde recomforting him with as good wordes as they could, and answering for the time as thei thought to stand with his pleasure, there in his presence as by ther wordes appered ech fondage other, and ioyned their hands togethther, when (as it after appeared by their dedes) their hearts wer far a fondre. As fone as the king was departed, the noble prince his sone drewe towad London, which at the time of his deceafe, kept his household at Ludlow in Wales. Which countrey being far of from the law and recurtoe to justice, was begun to be farre out of good wyll and waxen wild, and robbers and riuers walking at libertie vncoorreeft. And for this encheacon the prince was in the life of his father fente thither, to the ende that the authoritie of his presence shoulde refraine euill diisposed parsons fro the boldnes of their former outerages, to the gournaunce and order of this yonge prince at his fending thither, was there appointed Sir Anthony Wodulfe lord Riuers and brother vnto the quene, a right ho-ourable man, as valiaunte of hande as politike in counfayle. Adioyned wer there vnto him other of the same partie, and in effect every one as he was neerel of kin vnto the quene, so was plantet next about the prince. That drifte by the quene not vnwisty deusified, whereby her bloode mighte of youth be rooted in the princes favour, the duke of Gloucefler turned vnto their destrucccion, and vpon that grounde fet the foundation of all his vnhappy building. For whom focuer he perceiued, either at variance with them, or bearing himselfe their favor, he brake vnto them, some by mouth, som by writing or secret messengers, that it neyther was reaason nor in any wife to be suffered, that the yonge king their mafter and kinmanne, shold bee in the handes and custodye of his mothers kinred, se-queftrd in maner from theire companni and atten-dance, of which euery one ought him as faithul servise as they, and manye of them farr more honorable part of kin then his mothers side: whose blood (quod he) faucing the kinges pleasure, was ful vnumetly to be matched with his: whiche nowe be to as who fay removed from the kyng, and the leffe noble to be left aboute him, is (quod he) neither honorable to hys magelitie, nor vnto vs, and as to his grace no surety to haue the mightieft of his friendes from him, and vnto vs no little Jeopardy, to suffer our welproued euil willers, to grow in ouerget authoritie with the prince in youth, namely which is lighte of belefe and fone perfwaved. Ye remember I trow king Edward himself, albeit he was a man of age and of dis-cretion, yet was he in manye thynges ruled by the bende, more then ftode either with his honour, or our profite, or with the commoditie of any manne els, except onely the inmoderate aduancement of them felie. Whiche whither they forer thirsted after ther owne weale, or our woe, it wer hard I wene to gaffie. And if some folkes frendship had not holde better place with the king, then any re-pect of kinred, thei might peraduenture easely haue be trapped and brought to confusion of vs ere this. Why not as easily as they haue done some other alreadye, as seeere of his royal bloode as we. But our Lord hath wrought his wil, and thanke be to his grace that peril is paile. Howe be it as great is growing, ye wee suffer this yonge kyng in oure enemies hande, whiche without his wyttyng, might abuse the name of his commaun- dement, to ani of our vndoin, which thynge God and good prouision forbyd. Of which good pro- uition none of vs hath any thing the leffe neede, for the late made attoneemente, in whiche the kinges pleasure hadde more place then the parties willes. Nor none of vs I beleue is so vnwyle, overfone to truule a newe frende made of an olde foe, or to think that an hourely kindeless, fudaine contract in one houre continued, yet feant a fornitgh, thold be deeper setled in their stomackes: then a long accustomed malice many yeres rootet.

With thes wordes and wytinges and suche other, the duke of Gloucester sent a fyre, them that were of themselve eth to kindle, and in especiall twayne, Edwarde duke of Buckingham, and Richard lorde Hastings and chaumberlany, both men of honour and of great power. The tone by longe succession from his antecetrie, the tother by his office and the kinges fauer. These two not hearing eche to other so muche loue, as hatred bothe vnto the quenes parte: in this poynte accorded together wyth the duke of Gloucester, that they wolde vterelye amoue fro the kinges company, all his mothers frendes, vnder the name of their enemies. Vppon this concluded, the duke of Gloucester understanding, that the lordes whiche at that tyme were aboute the kyng, entended to bryng him vppe to his coronacion, accompanied with suche power of theyr frendes, that it shoulde be harde for hym to bryng his purpose to passe, without the gathering and great assembly of people and in manner of open warre, whereof the ende he wiste was doubtous, and in which the kyng being on his side, his parte shoulde have the face and name of a rebellion: he secretely therefore by divers meanes, caufed the quene to be perfwaded and brought in the mynd, that it neither wer nede, and also shold be jeopardous, the kyng to come vp strong. For where as nowe every lorde loued other, and none other thing studied vppon, but aboute the coronacion and honoure of the king: if the lordes of her kinred shold assemble in the kinges name muche people, thei shoulde gieve the lordes attixthe whome and them hadd bene sommetyme debate, to feare and suspeete, lesthe they shoulde gather thys people, not for the kynges faugardes whome no manne emiguen, but for thei destruccion, hauinge more regard to their old variaunce, then their newe attonement. For whiche caufe thei shoulde assemble on the other parte muche people agayne for their defence, whose power the wyfel wel farre stretched. And thus shoulde all the realme fall on a rone. And of al the hurte that therof shound ensue, which was likely not to be little, and the moter ammune there like to fal wher the left would, al the worlde woulde put her and her kinred in the wyght, and say that thei had wynwyfelye and vntrewlye also, broken the amitie and peace that the kyng her husband so prudentelye made, betwene hys kinne and hers in his death bed, and whiche the other parte faithfully obturued.

The quene being in this wise perfwaded, fuchewoorde sent vnto her sonne, and vnto her brother being aboute the kyng, and ouer that the duke of Gloucester hymselfe and other lordes the chiefe of hys bende, wrote vnto the kynghe too reuerentlye, and to the quenes frendes there too louyngelye, that they nothynge earthelye mystrefuynghe, broughte the kynghe vppe in great hafte, not in good speede, with a frober companye. Nowe was the kyng in his wyse to London gone, from Northampton, where the dukes of Gloucester and Bucyngheam came thisther. Where remained behynd, the lorde Ryuers the kynges vncl, ententyng on the morowe to follow the kynghe, and bee with hym at Stonye Stratford miles thence, carely or hee departed. So was there made that nyghthe muche frendelie chere betwene thes dukes and the lorde Ryuers a greate while. But incontinente after that they were oppenlye with greate courtey depar ted, and the lorde Ryuers lodged, the dukes secretelye with a fewe of their moste priuye frendes, sette them downe in countayle, wherin they spent a great parte of the nyght. And at their ringle in the dawnyng of the day, thei sent aboute priulye to their freuantes in the inne and lodgynges aboute, geuinge them commandeemente to make them selfe shortly readeye, for their lordes wer to horfebackward. Vppon whiche mesflages, manye of their folke were attendant, when manye of the lorde Ryuers freuantes were vnreadye. Nowe hadde thes dukes taken alio into their custodye the kayes of the inne, that none shoulde passe forth without theyr licenc.

And ouer this in the hyghe wyse toward Stonye Stratfordhe where the kynghe laye, they hadde bee floowed certayne of theyr folke, that shoulde fende backe agayne, and compell to retournue, anye manne that were gotten oue of Northampton toward Stonye Stratfordhe, tylly they shoulde geue other licenc. For as muche as the dukes themselfe entended for thew theire dylygenc, to bee the fyftle that shoulde that daye attende vppon the kynges highnesse oue of that towne: thus bare they folke in hande. But when the lorde Ryuers vnderfotode the gares clofed, and the wayes on euerye side befette, neythere hys freuantes nor hynselfe suffered to go ouete, parciouslye well so greate a thyng without his knowledge not begun, for noughte, comparyng this maner present with this last nightes chere, in so fewe houres so gret a chaunge maruelously mililked. How be it the hee coulde not geat awaye, and kepe hynselfe clofe, hee woulde not, lefte hee shoulde seeme to hyde hynselfe for some secret feare of hys owne faute, whereof he faw no such caufe in hym self: he determined vppon the securetie of his owne conscience, to geoe boldelye to them, and inquire what this matter myghte meane. Whome as soone as they faw, they beganne to quarrell with hym, and faye, that hee intended to lette distaunce betweene the kynghe and them, and to brynghe them to confusion, but it shoulde no tye in hys power. And when hee beganne
A letter written with a cole by Sir Thomas More to hys daughter maistres Margaret Roper, within a whyle after he was prifoner in the Tower.

M Y N E own good daughter, our lorde be thanked I am in good heithe of bodye, and in good quiet of minde: and of worldly thynges I no more defter then I have. I befeche hym make you all mery in the hope of heauen. And such thynges as I somewhat longed to talke with you all, concerning the worlde to come, our Lorde put them into your myndes, as I trule he dothe and better to by hys holy spirite: who bleffe you and ferve you all. Written wyth a cole by your tender loving father, who in hys pore prayers forgetteth none of you all nor your babes, nor your nufses, nor your good hufbandes, nor your good hufbandes threwe wyues, nor your fathers threwe wyfe neither, nor our other frendes. And thus fare ye hartely well for lacke of paper.

Two short ballettes which Sir Thomas More made for hys paftyme while he was prifoner in the Tower of London.

L E W Y S the loft louer.

E Y flattering fortune, loke thou neuer fo fayre, Or neuer fo plesantly begin to smile, As though thou wouldst thy ruine all repayre, During my life thou fhalt not me begile. Truft thall I God, to entere in a while. Hys hauen or heauen sure and unforme. Euer after thy calme, loke I for a florne.

D A V Y the dyer.

L O N G was I lady Luke your ferving man, And now haue lost agayne all that I gat, Wherfore when I thinke on you nowe and than, And in my mynde remembre this and that, Ye may not blame me though L befrew your cat, But in fayth I bleffe you agayne a thousand times, For lending me nowe some layture to make rymes.

At the same time with Sir Thomas More lived Skelton, the poet laureate of Henry VIII. from whose works, works it seems proper to insert a few stanzas, though he cannot be said to have attained great elegance of language.

The prologue to the Bouge of Courte.

IN Autumnpe whan the sonne in vyrgeyne
By radynte herte enrypyd hath our corne
When Luna full of mutabylyte
As Emperes the dyadem hath worne
Of our pole arkyte, smylyng halfe in scorne
At our foly and our vnfedfafieth
The time whan Mars to warre hym dyd dres,
I callynge to mynde the greate autoryte
Of poetes olde, whiche full craftely
Vnder as couerte termes as could he
Can touche a truth, and cloke futblyly
With freshe vterarunce full sentenciously
Dyuerfe in style some spared not kyse to wryte
Some of mortalitie nobly dyd endyte
Whereby I rede, theyr renome and theyr fame
May never dye, but euermore endure
I was fore moued to a forfe the fame
But ignorance full soone dyd me dyfcure
And shewed that in this arte I was not fure
For to illumine the fayd I was to dulle
Aduyfynge me my penne awaye to pulle
And not to wryte, for he fo wyll atteyne
Excedyng fether than his connynge is
His heed maye be harde, but feble is brayne
Yet hauen I knownen fuche er this
But of reproche surely he maye not mys
That clymmeth hyer than he may fotinge haue
What and he flyde downe, who shall him faue?
Thus vp and downe my mynde was drawnen and caft
That I ne wyfte what to do was brefte
So forte enwered that I was at the lafte
Enforst to flepe, and for to take some reste
And to lye downe as soone as I my drefte
At Harwyche porte flumbrynge as I laye
In myne hostes house called powers keye.

Of the wits that flourished in the reign of Henry VIII. none has been more frequently celebrated than the earl of Surry; and this history would therefore have been imperfect without some specimens of his works, which yet it is not easy to distinguish from those of Sir Thomas Wyatt and others, with which they are confounded in the edition that has fallen into my hands. The three first arc, I believe, Surry's; the rest, being of the same age, are selected, some as examples of different measures, and one as the oldest composition which I have found in blank verse.

Description of Spring, wherein eche thing newenes, fave only the lover.

THE seote seazon that bud, and blome fourth brings,
With grene hath cladde the hyll, and eke the vale;
The Nightingall with fethers newe the finges;
The turtle to her mate hath told the tale :
Somer is come, for every spry now springes,
The hart hath hungys olye head on the pale,
The bucke in brak his witer coate he flynges;
The fihes fete with newe repafyred fcale:
The adder all her floth awaye the flynges,
The swift swallow purlueth the flyes smalle,
The busie bee her honey howe the mynges;
Winter is worne that was the fliures bale.
And thus I fee amonge thefe pleafant thynges
Eche care decayes, and yet my sorrow fpriunges.

Description of the reflefs estate of a lover.

WHEN youth had led me half the race,
That Cupides fcurge had made me runne;
I looked back to meet the place,
From whence my weary course begunne:
And then I faw howe my defyre
Misguiding me had led the waye,
Myne eyne to greedy of theyr hyre,
Had made me lofe a better prey.
For when in fighes I fpent the day,
And could not cloake my griefe with game;
The bylinge fmoke dyd ftil bewray,
The prefent heat of secret flame:
And when falt teares do byyne my brefte,
Where love his pleafant traynes hath fown,
Her beautie hath the fruytes opprefte,
Ere that the buddes were fprunge and blowne.
And when myne eyne dyd ftil purifie,
The flyinge chafe of theyr requit,
Theyre greedy looks dyd oft renew,
The hydden wounde within my brefte.
When every loke thefe cheekes might flayne,
From deadlie pale to glowing red;
By outward fignes appeared playne,
To her for helpe my harte was fild.
But all to late Love learneth me,
To paynt all kynd of Colours new;
To bylnd theyr eyes that elle should see
My speckled cheekes with Cupids hew.
And now the covert breft I clame,
That worship Cupide secrectely;
And nourished hyes facred flame,
From whence no blairing sparks do flye.
Description of the sickle Affections, Pangs, and Sleightes of Love.

SUCH wayward wayes hath Love, that mok part in discord
Our wills do stand, whereby our hartes but seldom do accord:
Decyte is his delighte, and to begyle and mocke
The simple hartes which he doth strike with forward divers stroke.
He causeth th' one to rage with golden burning darte,
And doth alay with Leaden cold, again the others hart.
Whose gleames of burning fyre and easy sparkes of flame,
In balance of unequall weighte he pondereth by ame
From easye ford where I myghte wade and pas full well,
He me withdrawes and doth me drive, into a depe dark hell:
And me withholdes where I am calde and offred place,
And wille me that my mortall foe I do becke of Grace;
He lettes me to pursuie a conquest wellerner wonne
To follow where my paynes were lost, ere that my sure begunne.
So by this meanes I know how soon a hart may turne
From warre to peace, from truce to stryfe, and so agayne returne.
I know how to content my self, in others luft,
Of little iluffe unto my self to weave a webbe of truft:
And how to hyde my harmses with fole dysymbling chere,
When in my face the painted thoughtes would outwardly appeare.
I know how that the bloud forsakes the face for dred,
And how by flame it staynes agayne the Chekes with flaming red:
I know under the Grene, the Serpent how he lurkes:
The hammer of the reflefs forge I wote eke how it workes.
I know and con by roate the tale that I woulde tell
But ofte the woordes come fourth awrye of him that loveth well.
I know in heathe and colde the Lover how he shakes,
In lynging how he doth complayne, in sleepping how he wakes.
To languish without ache, fickleffe for to confume,
A thousand thynges for to devyse, resolvynge of his fume;
And though he lyfte to fee his Ladies Grace full lore
Such pleasures as deliyght bys Eye, do not his helthe restore.

I know to seke the tracte of my defyrde foe,
And fere to fynde that I do seek, but chiefly this I know;
That Lovers must transfourme into the thynge be loved,
And live (alas! who would believe?) with sprite from Lyle removed.
I knowe in harty sighes and laughteres of the spleene,
At once to chaunge my flate, my will, and eke my colour clene.
I know how to deceyve my self wythe others helpe,
And how the Lyon chaftiled is, by beatynge of the whelpe.
In standyngere the fyre, I know how that I freafe;
Farre of I burne, in bothe I wste, and so my Lyfe I lefe.
I know how Love doth rage upon a yeilding mynde,
How smalle a nete may take and make a harte of gentle kynde:
Or else with seldom swete to seasan hopes of gall,
Revised with a gympse of Grace old sorowes to let fall.
The hydden traynes I know, and secret fnares of Love,
How foonne a loke will prynpte a thoughte that never may remove.
The flypper flate I know, the fodein turnes from welthe
The dubtfull hope, the certaine woe, and fure defpaired helthe.

A praise of his ladie.

GEVE place you ladies and be gone,
Boast not your felves at all,
For here at hende approcheth one,
Whose face will styneye you all.

The vertue of her lively lookes
Excels the precious stone,
I wishe to have none other bookes
To reade or look upon.

In ech of her two chriystall eyes,
Smyleth a naked boy;
It would you all in heart sufffe
To fee that lampe of joye.

I think nature hath loft the mould,
Where she the shape did take;
Or else I doubte if nature could
So fyare a creature make.

She may be well comparde
Unto the Phenix kinde,
Whose like was never seene nor heard,
That any man can fynde.

In lyfe she is Diana chaft
In trouthe Penelopey,
In woord and eke in dede stedfast;
What will you more we say:
If all the world were sought so farre,
Who could finde suche a night,
Her beauty twinkled like a starre
Within the frosty night.

The Lover refued of his love, embraceth vertue.

My youthfull yeres are past,
My joyfull dayses are gone,
My lyfe it may not last,
My grave and I am one.
My myrth and joyes are fled,
And I a Man in wo,
Desirous to be ded,
My miscrese to forego.
I burne and am a colde,
I freeze amydles the fyer,
I fee the doth withholde
That is my honest defyre.
I see my helpe at hande,
I see my lyfe also,
I see where the doth flande
That is my deadly fo.
I see how the doth fee,
And yet the wil be blinde,
I see in helpyng me,
She fekes and wil not fynde.
I see how the doth wraye,
When I begynne to mone,
I see when I come nye,
How fayne she would be gone.
I see what wil ye more,
She will me gladly kill,
And you shall see therfore
That she shall have her will.
I cannot live with stones,
It is too hard a foode,
I wil be dead at ones
To do my Lady good.

The Death of ZOROAS, an Egyptian astronomer,
in the first fight that Alexander had with the Perians.

Now clattering armes, now raging broys of warre,
Gan paffe the noys of drefftull trumpettes clang,
Shrowded with shafts, the heaven with cloudes of darts,
Covered the ayre. Against full fatted bulles,
As forceth kynded yre the lyons keene,
Whole greedy gutts the gnawing hunger prickes;
So Macedons against the Perians fare,
Now corpes hyde the purpoure soyle with blood;
Large slaughter on eche side, but Peries more,
Myft fieldes bebled, theyr heartes and numbers bate,
Painted while they gave backe, and fall to flight.

The listenig Macedon by swordes, by gleaves;
By bandes and troupe of footemen, with his garde,
Speedes to Dary, but hym his mereft kyn,
Oxate preferves with horlemen on a plump.
Before his carr, that none his charge should give.
Here grunts, here groans, eche where stong youth is spent:
Shaking her bloody hands, Bellone among
The Peries soweth all kind of cruel death:
With throte yrent he roares, he lyeth alonng
His entrailes with a lance through gyred quyte,
Hym smythes the club, hym wounds farre styking bowe,
And him the fling, and him the shining sword;
He dyeth, he is all dead, he pantes, he refles.
Right over foode in snowwhite armour brave,
The Memphite Zoroas, a cunning clarke,
To whom the heaven lay open as his booke;
And in celeftial bodies he could tell
The moving meeting light, aspect, eclips,
And influence, and constellations all;
What earthly chaunces would betyde, what yere,
Of plenty florde, what signe forewarned death;
How winter gendrith snow, what temperature
In the prime tyde doth seafon well the soyle,
Why tummer burns, why autumneth ripe grapes,
Whither the circle quadrate may become,
Whether our tunes heavens harmony can yelde
Of four begyns among themselues how great
Proportion is; what iway the erring lightes
Doth send in courfe gayne that fyre movyng heaven;
What grees one from another distance be,
What flarr doth let the hurtfull fyre to rage,
Or him more mylde what opposition makes,
What fyre doth qualifie Mavories fyre,
What house eche one doth seek, what plannett rainghes
Within this heaven sphere, nor that small thynges
I speake, whole heaven he clofeth in his breit.
This fage then in the starres hath fyped the fates
Threatned him death without delay, and, fith,
He saw he could not fallall order chaunge,
Foreward he preft in battayle, that he might Mete with the rulers of the Macedons,
Of his right hand definous to be flain,
The bouleff born, and worthieth in the feilde;
And as a wight, now wery of his lyfe,
And feaking death, in fyrifte front of his rage,
Comes desperately to Alexanders face,
At him with darters one after other throwes,
With recklesse wordes and clamour him provokes,
And sayeth, Neceanaks bafkard shamefull flayne
Of mothers bed, why losfet thou thy frookes,
Cowardes among. Turn thee to me, in case
Manhood there be so much left in thy heart,
Come fight with me, that on my helmet weare

Apollo's
Apollo's laurell both for learnings laude,
And eke for martiaall praife, that in my shielde
The seven fold Sophi of Minerve contain,
A match more mete, Syr King, then any here.
The noble prince amoved takes ruth upon
The wilfull wight, and with soft words ayen,
O monstreous man (quoth he) what so thou art,
I pray thee live, ne do not with thy death
This lodge of Lors, the Muses mansion marre;
That trefoure house this hand shall never spoyle,
My sword shall never bruise that skullful brayne
Long gather'd heapes of science lone to spill;
O howe fayre fruittes may you to mortall men
From Wifdoms garden give; how many may
By you the wiser and the better prove:
What error, what mad moode, what frenzy thee
Perfwades to be done, sent to depe Averne
Where no artes flourisht, nor no knowledge vailes
For all these fawes. When thus the sovereign rai
Alighted Zoros with sword unheathed,
The careless king there smote above the greve,
At th' opening of his quishes wounded him,
So that the blood down trailed on the ground:
The Macedon perceiving hurt, gan gnathe,
But yet his mynde he bent in any wife
Hym to forbearre, sett spurrets unto his flede,
And turnde away, left anguish of his smarte
Should cause revenger hand deale balefull blowes.
But of the Macedonian chiestaines knights,
One Meleager could not bear this fight,
But ran upon the fai'd Egyptian rude,
And cut him in both knees: he fell to ground,
Wherewith a whole rout came of fouldours
iterne,
And all in pieces hewed the fely leg,
But happily the soule fled to the starres,
Where, under him, he hath full fight of all,
Wherat he gazed here with reaching looke.
The Persians walld such sapience to forgoe,
The very fone the Macedonians wifht
He would have lived, king Alexander felse
Demde him a man unmete to dye at all;
Who wonne like praife for conquist of his Yre,
As for foute men in field that day subdued,
Who princes taught how to dicerne a man,
That in his head to rare a jewel beares,
But over all those fame Camenes, those fame,
Divine Camenes, whose honour he procurde,
As tender parent doth his daughters weale,
Lamented, and for thankes, all that they can.
Do cherish hym deceat, and lett him free,
From dark oblivion of devouring death.

Barclay wrote about 1550; his chief work is the Ship of Foulkes, of which the following extract will shew his style.

Of Mockers and Scorners, and fals Accusers.

O Heartless fooles, haaste here to our doctrine,
Leave off the wayes of your enormitie,
Enforce you to my preceptes to encline,
For here shall I shewe you good and veritie:
Encline, and ye finde shall great prosperitie,
Enfuing the doctrine of our fathers olde,
And godly lawes in valour worth great golde.

Who that will followe the graces manyfoldes
Which are in vertue, shall finde auancement:
Wherfore ye-fooles that in your f搬运 are bolde,
Enfue ye wifdome, and leave your lewe intent,
Wifdome is the way of men most excellent:
Therfore haue done, and shortly speade your pace,
To quantynt your selfe and company with grace.

Lerne what is vertue, therin is great folacie,
Lerne what is truth, sadnes and prudence,
Let grutche be gone, and grauitie purchase,
Forfake your folly and inconueniency,
Cease to be fooles, and ay to fue offence,
Followe ye vertue, chiefre root of godlynes,
For it and wifdome is ground of cienlynes.

Wifdome and vertue two things are doubles,
Whiche man endueth with honour speciall,
But suche heartes as flepe in foolishnes
Knoweth nothing, and will nought know at all:
But in this little barge in principall
All foolish mockers I purpose to reproue,
Clawe he his backe that fectlith itch or greue.

Mockers and fcorners that are harde of beleu,
With a rough comb here will I clause and grate,
To-prute if they will from their vice remue,
And leave their folly, which caufeth great debate:
Suche caytuiues sparre neyther poore man nor eflate,
And where their felse are molt worthy derision,
Other men to scorn is all their most condition.

Yet are mo fooles of this abusion,
Whiche of wise men delieth the doctrine,
With mowes, mockes, scorn, and collusion,
Rewarding rebukes for their good discipline:
Shewe to suche wifdome, yet shall they not encline
Unto the same, but fet nothing therby,
But mocke thy doctrine, still or openly.

So in the world it appeareth commonly,
That who that will a foule rebuke or blame,
A mocke or mowe shal he haue by and by:
Thus in derision have fooles their speciall game:
Correct a wiseman that would sicue ill name,
And fayne would lerne, and his lewe life amende,
And to thy wordes he gladly shal intende.
The History of the

If by misfortune a rightwise man offende,
He gladly suffereth a juste correction,
And let him that teacheth taketh for his frendes,
Him selue putting meekely unto subjection.
Following his preceptes and good direction:
But if that one a foole rebuke or blame,
He shall his teacher hate, slaunder and difname.

Howbeit his wordes oft turne to his owne shame,
And his owne darres recouer to him agayne,
And so he fore woundes with the same,
And in wo endeth, great misery and paine.
It also proved full often is certayne
That they that on mockers alway their mindes cast;
Shall of all other be mocked at the last.

He that goeth right, feedfast, sure, and fast,
May him well mocke that goeth halting and lame,
And he that is white may well his scornes cast,
Agaynt a man of Inde: but no man ought to blame.
Another vice, while he vioeth the same.
But who that of finne is cleane in deede and thought,
May him well scorne whole living is stark close nought.
The scornes of Naball full dere should have been bought,
If Abigail his wife discrete and sage,
Had not by kindnes right crafty meanes sought,
The wrath of David to temper and affiarge.
Hath not two beares in their fury and rage,
Two and forty children rent and torn;
For they the prophete Helyfeus did scornc.
So might they curfe the time that they were borne,
For their mocking of this prophete diuine:
So many other of this sort often mourne.
For their lewe mockes, and fall into ruine.
Thus is it folly for wise men to encline,
To this lewe flocke of frooles, for se thou shalt
Them moste scorninge that are most bad of all.

The Lenvoy of Barclay to the frooles.

Ye mocking frooles that in scornc set your joy,
Proudly despifing Gods punition:
Take ye exemple by Cham the sonne of Noy,
Which laughed his father vnto derision,
Which him after cursed for his transgression,
And made him feruante to all his lyne and stocke.
So shal ye catyfes at the conclusion,
Since ye are nought, and other scorne and mocke.

Thus have I deduced the English language from the age of Alfred to that of Elizabeth: in some parts imperfectly for want of materials; but I hope, at least, in such a manner that its progress may be

About the year 1553 wrote Dr. Wilson, a man celebrated for the politenes of his style, and the extent of his knowledge: what was the state of our language in his time, the following may be of use to know.

Pronunciation is an apte ordering bothe of the voice, countenaunce, and all the whole bodye, accordlynge to the worthines of such wordes and matter as by speache are declared. The vie hereof is suche for anye one that liketh to have praye for tellyng his tale in open affemblie, that having a good tongue, and a comelye countenaunce, he shal be thought to passe all other that have the like vitteraunce: though they have much more learning. The tongue geveth a certayne grace to euerye matter, and beautifieth the cause in like maner, as a swete soundinge lute muche seteth forth a meane deuised ballade. Or as the founde of a good instrumente fyrreth the hearers, and moueth muche deltie, so a cleare sounding voice comforteth muche our deceitie eares, with muche swete melodie, and causeth vs to allowe the matter rather for the reporters sake, then the reporter for the matters sake. Demosthenes therfore, that famoure orator, beyng aksed what was the chiefest point in al oratorie, gave the chiefe and onely praiie to Pronunciation; being demaunded, what was the seconde, and the thirde, he still made aunswer, Pronunciation, and would make none other aunswere, till they lefte asking, declarlyng hereby that arte without vitteraunce can doe no thyng, vitteraunce without arte can doe right muche. And no doubte that man is in outardes apparaunce halfe a good clarke, that hath a cleane tongue, and a comelye gesture of his body.

Æichines lykewise beyng bannished his countrie through Demosthenes, when he had redde to the Rhodians his owne oration, and Demosthenes aunswere thereunto, by force whereof he was bannished, and all they maruellde muche at the excellencie of the same: then (god Æichines) you would have maruellde muche more if you had heard hymselfe speake it. Thus beyng cast in miferie and bannished for euer, he could not but geue such greate reporte of his deadly and mortall ennemy.

easily traced, and the gradations observed, by which it advanced from its first rudenes to its present elegance.
M

R

M

A

R

OF THE

ENGLISH TONGUE.
G

RAMM AR, whlchisyhart of ufing'wards properly prifes

four

,

and Profody.

In this divirton and order of the parts of grammir I follow the common gr»mmwians, without enquiring whether t fitter diftributiim might not be tound.
Experience ha; long Ikown this method to be fo diftinft a» to obviate confulion, and fo comprchcnfive as to prevent any inconvenient omiflions. I likcwife ufe •the terms already received, and ah-cady (nderftood, though perhaps others more proper might fometimes be invented.
Sylbnrgius, and other innovators, whofe new terms have fanlc their learning into negled, have left fufficieot warning againft the trifling ambition of teaching arts in a new language.

ORTHOCRAPHy

the art of combining Utters

is 4mdfyllabhs into nuords.

and found of letters.

The Roman.

Saxon.

X
fi letter*

B

B

b

C
D

s e

«c

c

c

C

c

D

d

e

i.

E
F

e

F

F fe

i f

d

£ t
F f

'I

»

I

i

7

j

L

1 ro

m

N

n

k
1

M m

K

k

L

M
N

I

i

3
{{
%

t

i (.wja

J confonant.

ia

I

tl

tm

Mi

n

tn

<o

o

M n

O

o

N
O

P

P

P

P

P P pee

«T

SL q

?

^

P

Q.

q

cut

r

fR

tf or fs?

'fi

t

tit

u
b

u

R
8

T
U
V

n

R

r

fR

r

S

fs

T

S f>

t

e

U
V

a

V

u;

w

P

X
Y

X
Y

X
y z

Z

n
o

Z

a

T

W
X

y
z

_

Vol.

»

I

commonly reckoned twenty-four, different powers, have

T
U
V

t

A
C u

•V

D

w

IM

m

r
X

X
y
K

P

X

bj

f

^

t
i bccaufe anciently i and/,

but as thofc letters,
;
forms, our alphabet may fame charafler

now

diflFcrent

Vowels are Such

the

is

from five, a, e, i, o> u.

number generally received

y

in the end of words, as

;

but for thy, holy is the before /,

i it
;

die,
;

dying

and

;

in

of

I
confider the Englilh alphabet only as it is Englilh ; and even in this narrow dif..
quifition, I follow the example of former grammarians, perhaps with more reverence than judgment, bccaufe by writing in Englilh i fuppofc my reader already acquainted with the EngliOi language, and confequenilv able to pronounce the letters, of which I teach the pronunciation; and becaufc of founds in gcnc.-.il it may be obfcrved, that words are unable to defcribe them. An account therefore of the primitive and fimple ietttrs is ufclefs almoft alike to thofe who know their found, and thofe who know it not.

VOWELS.
A.

J has three founds, the flender, open, and broad.
A flender found in moft words, zaface, mane and in word*
is

(or 'Va

confonant.
doable « tx

•V nvy xed, more commonly izz^rd

fhard.

H.

be properly faid to coniill of twenty-fix letters.
None of the fraall confunants have a double form, excepty^ ij of whichyit ufed in the beginning and middle, and < at the end.

Of

or uxxard, that mt - letters are

nor into the properties and gradation of founds, or the elegance or harlhnefs particular combinations, as a writer of univerfal and tranfcendental grammar.

aitcb

m

m fF, ff, fi, fli, fi, ffi, ffl, flc,

In treating on the letters, 1 fliall not, like fome other grimmarUni, enquire into the original of their form, as an antiquarian j nor into their formation and prolation by the organs of fpccch, as a mechanick, anatomiH, or phyfiologift

€
jet

i

K
L

e

8
1

J

k

«

fi*
det

h

J

K

l»

(b, w

a it

f

I

H

®

ft, fl, fl,

from beautify, beautifying ; in the words y5yi/, words derived from the Greek, and written originally with v, Zifiijiem, avmft» 5 fympathy, av^iti^uct.
For u we often write after a vowel, to make a diphthong j as rarw, grew, n/itvj, •vovi,floTMing, loivnefs.
The founds of all the letters are various.

Name.

3P

1

G

»

certain combinations of letters univer-

as ft.

as u and v, were exprefled by the

which had always

as <3

h

g
h

Our

s well

days, eyes

S

G
H

7>

OldE nglith.
a b

b

c

Italick.

;

and &, or and per ft, and. a,ft,fl,f,fi,fi,ff,j;f,ffi,f,ffi.ff.
(t, a, a, a, ff, tr, a, s, ffi, ffi, i» form of the Eagliih language are.

a

D

may be added

praftice to write

A

E

thefe

fally ufed in printing

fyllahhs,

It therefore teaches previoufly the

a b

A

a b itito

To

com-

Orthography, Etymology, Syntax, parts;

is

;

ending in atiotr, as creation, fal'vation, generation.
The a flender is the proper Englilh a, called very juftly by Erpenius, in hii Arabick Grammar, a Anglicum turn c miftum, as having a middle found between the open a and the t.
The French have a fimilar found in the woid /a/i, and in
^
their e mafculiuc.

A

open is the a of the Italian, or nearly refembles father, rather, congratulate, fancy, glafs.
broad refembles the a of the German ; as all, 'wall,

A

Many

it j

as call.

words pronounced with a broad were anciently written with au, at ftnlt, mauli ; and we fliU tty fault, vault. This was probably the Siaon found,
S
/or


A Grammar of the

for it is yet retained in the northern dialects, and in the rustic pronunciation; as mean for mean, bound not hand.

The short a approaches to the a open, as grafts.

The long a, if prolonged by e at the end of the word, is always flender, as grace, fame.

A forms a diphthong only with i or y, and u or ow. A or ay, as in plain, main, gay, clay, has only the sound of the long and flender a, and differs not in the pronunciation from plane, voan.

A or ow has the sound of the German a, as rawe, naughty.

A is sometimes found in Latin words not completely naturalized or assimilated, but is no English diphthong; and is more properly exprest by sige, as C[e, E[mor.

E.

E is the letter which occurs most frequently in the English language.

1. E is long, as in fine; or short, as in cellar, separate, celebrate, mean, then.

2. It is always short before a double consonant, or two consonants, as in vex, perplexity, relent, median, reptile, serpent, cellar, collision, blessing, fell, filling, debt.

3. E is always mute at the end of a word, except in monosyllables that have no other vowel, as the; or proper names, as Penelope, Philet, Derbe; being used to modify the preceding consonant, as since, once, hedges, oblige; or to lengthen the preceding vowel, as main, fine; that, no; will, words; and sometimes, to separate, as water, heat; as in it; as in attic.

4. Almost all words which now terminate in consonants ended anciently in e, as year, years, worldly, worldliness, which e perhaps had the force of the French feminine, and enunciated a syllable with its associative consonant; for, in old editions, words are sometimes divided thus, close, felt, knowledge. This e was perhaps for a tone vocal or silent in poetry, as convenience required; but it has been long wholly mute. Camden in his Remains calls it the silent e.

5. It does not always lengthen the preceding vowel, as glove, live, give.

6. It has sometimes in the end of words a sound obscure, and scarcely perceptible, as open, fiace, stenton, thistle, participle, live.

7. This finalness of sound is found when e separates a mute from a liquid, as in rotten; or follows a mute and liquid, as in easy.

8. E forms a diphthong with a, as near; with i, as deign, receive; and with u or ow, as new, soon.

9. E sounds like e long, as mean; or like e, as dear, clear, near.

10. E is found like e long, as fine, perceiving.

11. E sounds as u long and soft.

12. E, a, u, are combined in beauty and its derivatives, but have only the sound of u.

13. E may be said to form a diphthong by reduplication, as agree, pieking.

14. E is found in Yemen, where it is founded as e short; and in people, where it is pronounced like o.

I.

I has a sound, long, as fine; and short, as /in/.

That is eminently observable in i, which may be likewise remarked in other letters, that the short sound is not the long sound contracted, but a sound wholly different.

The long sound in monosyllables is always marked by the e final, as thin, thine.

I is often founded before r as short u; as first, first, first. It forms a diphthong only with e, as field, fields, which is founded as the double re; except friend, which is founded as frend.

1. I is joined with m in lion, and ow in view; which diphthongs are founded as the open.

O.

O is long, as bone, obedient, corroding; or short, as black, knock, oblique, ill.

Women is pronounced wimen.

The short e has sometimes the sound of a close a, as far, came.

O conveys into a diphthong with a, as mean, green, approach; ao has the sound of a long.

O is united to e in some words derived from Greek, as omen; but e being not an English diphthong, they are better written as they are sounded, with only o, as to.

With i, as oil, soil, mail, net, some.

This position of letters seems to unite the sounds of the two letters as in two sounds can be united without being destroyed, and therefore approaches more nearly than any combination in our tongue to the notion of a diphthong.

With o, as boat, boot, cooler; so has the found of the Italian u. With u or ow, as our, power, flower; but in some words has only the sound of a long, as in soul, bowl, saw, grew. These different sounds are used to distinguish different significations; as bow, an instrument for shooting; bone, a depression of the head; saw, the file of a boar; saw, to scatter feed: bowl, an orbicular body; bowl, a wooden vessel.

Ow is sometimes pronounced like o soft; as court; sometimes like o short; as rough; sometimes like u close, as could; or u open, as rough, rough; which u e only can teach.

11. U is frequently used in the last syllable of words which in Latin end in e, and are made English, as honey, linden, favow, from bono, labor, favor.

Some late innovators have ejected the u, without considering that the last syllable gives the sound neither of or nor u, but a sound between them; if not confounded of both; besides that they are probably derived to us from the French point in our, 0, as meaus favor.

U is long in use, confusion.

It conveys with e, i, o; but has rather in these combinations the force of the w, as quaff, quaff, quit, quite, language; sometimes in u the 7 loses its sound, as in juice. It is sometimes mute before a, e, i, y, as guard, gazet, guide, buy.

U is followed by e in eerie, but the e has no sound.

U is sometimes mute at the end of a word, in imitation of the French, as prestious, lonesome, strange, courage, dangerous.

Y.

Y is a vowel, which, as Quintilian observes of one of the Roman letters, we might want without inconvenience, but that we have it. It supplies the place of i at the end of words, as why; before an i, as dying; and is commonly retained in derivative words where it was part of a diphthong in the primitive; as destroy, destroyer; betray, betrayed, betrayer; pray, prayer; say, sayer; day, days.

Y being the Saxon vowel, which was commonly used where i is now put, occurs very frequently in all old books.

General Rules.

A vowel in the beginning or middle syllable, before two consonants, is commonly short, as opportunity.

In monosyllables a single vowel before a single consonant is short, as fog, fog.

Many is pronounced as if it were many.

Of Consonants.

B.

B has one unvaried sound, such as it obtains in other languages.

It is mute in debt, debtor, subtle, doubt, lamb, limb, dump, thumb, climb, comb, womb.

It is used before l and r, as black, brown.
ENGLISH TONGUE.

C.

G has the sound of \(s\), as in book, coach, custom, center, circular, circular, city, citiety; before \(a\), \(o\), and \(u\), it sounds like \(h\), as calm, concavity, copper, incorporate, curiosity, consciousness.

\(c\) might be omitted in the language without loss, since one of its sounds might be supplied by \(s\), and the other by \(k\), but that it pervades to the eye the etymology of words, as face from faces, capture from captivity.

\(ch\) has a sound which is analyzed into \(st\), as church, chin, crutch.

It is the same sound which the Italians give to \(c\) simple before \(i\) and \(e\), as catto, terra.

\(ch\) is founded like \(l\) in words derived from the Greek, as chymist, scheme, color.

Arch is commonly pronounced ark before a vowel, as archangel; and with the English sound of \(ch\) before a consonant, as archbishop.

\(ch\), in some French words not yet assimilated, sounds like \(f\), as machien, chef.

\(c\), having no determinate sound, according to English orthography, never ends a word; therefore we write fish, block, which were originally fict, biets, in such words.

It is used before \(l\) and \(r\), as cinct, crafts.

D.

Is uniform in its sound, as death, diligent.

It is used before \(r\), as draw, draft; and \(w\), as dwell.

\(F\) has a sound like \(v\), as in gay, go, gan; the other soft, as in gems, giant.

At the end of a word it is always hard, rings, fings, fong, frog.

Before \(e\) and \(i\), the sound is uncertain.

\(g\) before \(e\) is soft, as gem, generation, except in gear, gael, gape, get, genuevo, and derivatives from words ending in \(g\), as saging, stronger, and generally before \(e\) at the end of words, as finger.

\(g\) is mute before \(n\), as gnash, sign, foreign.

\(g\) before \(i\) is hard, as gnui, except in giant, gigantea, gigiant, giles, gilts, gills, gillsflower, gis, ginge, gingle, to which may be added Egypt and gypsy.

\(gh\), in the beginning of a word, has the sound of the hard \(g\), as glosly; in the middle, and sometimes at the end, it is quite silent, as though, right, rough; spoken tho', rite, four.

It has often at the end of the word, as laugh, whence laughter retains the sound found in the middle; cough, throug, rough, tough, enough,ough.

It is not to be doubted, but that in the original pronunciation \(gb\) had the force of a consonant, deep guttural, which is still continued among the Scotch.

\(G\) is used before \(k\), \(l\), and \(r\).

H.

\(h\) is a note of aspiration, and shows that the following vowel must be pronounced with a strong emission of breath, as hat, hoff.

It seldom begins any but the first syllable, in which it is always found with a full breath, except in heir, herb, hostler, bowser,umble, benefi, bowser, and their derivatives.

It sometimes begins middle or final syllables in words compounded, as blockhead; or derived from the Latin, as comprehended.

\(j\) coonant sounds uniformly like the soft \(g\), and is therefore a letter useless, except in etymology, as ejaculation, jeffer, found, fuses.

K.

\(k\) has the sound of hard \(c\), and is used before \(e\) and \(i\), where, according to English analogy, \(c\) would be soft, as kept, king, flirt, feltick, for so it should be written, not feltick, because \(c\) is founded like \(s\), as in scene.

It is used before \(n\), as kneel, knit, but totally loses its sound in modern pronunciation.

\(k\) is never doubled; but \(e\) is used before it to shorten the vowel by a double coonant, as cockle, pickle.

L.

\(l\) has in English the same liquid sound as in other languages.

The suffix is to double the \(f\) at the end of monosyllables, as kill, will, fall. These words were originally written kil, wol, fal; and when the \(f\) first grew silent, and was afterwards omitted, the \(i\) was retained, to give force, according to the analogy of our language, to the foregoing vowel.

\(l\) is sometimes mute, as in calf, half, halves, caw, rad, below, psalm, talk, salman, falcon.

The Saxon, who delighted in guttural sounds, sometimes aspirated the \(l\) at the beginning of words, as klap; a lisp, or broad; klapsy, a lisp; but this pronunciation is now discarded.

\(le\), at the end of words is pronounced like a weak \(le\), in which the \(e\) is almost mute, as table, quilt.

M.

\(M\) has always the same sound, as murmur, monumental.

N.

\(N\) has always the same sound, as noble, manner.

\(N\) is sometimes mute after \(m\), as damn, condemn, hymn.

P.

\(P\) has always the same sound, which the Welsh and Germans confound with \(B\).

\(P\) is sometimes mute, as in psalm, and between \(m\) and \(t\), as tempt.

\(Ph\) is used for \(f\) in words derived from the Greek, as philosophy, philanthropy, Philip.

Q.

\(Q\), as in other languages, is always followed by \(u\), and has a sound which our Saxon ancestors well expressed by cp, cuw, as quadrants, queen, equifian, quilt, enquiry, quire, quotidain. \(Q\) is never followed by \(u\).

\(Qu\) is sometimes founded, in words derived from the French, like \(k\), as conquer, liquor, risque, cbequer.

R.

\(R\) has the same rough snaering sound as in other tongues.

The Saxons used often to put \(b\) before it, as before \(k\) at the beginning of words.

\(Rh\) is used in words derived from the Greek, as myrb, myrhibe, cattarbou, rheum, rheumbitis, rhynie.

\(Re\), at the end of some words derived from the Latin or French, is pronounced like a weak \(er\), as theatre, sepulcral.

S.

\(S\) has a hissing sound, as fribilation, fitter.

A single \(s\) seldom ends any word, except in the third person of verbs, as loves, grows; and the plurals of nouns, as tears, before, distresses; the pronouns
A Grammar of the

Z.

Z begins no English word; it has the sound of k's, as axle, entrance.

Y.

Y', when it follows a consonant, is a vowel; when it precedes either a vowel or diphthong, it is a consonant, ye, young. It is thought by some to be in all cases a vowel. But it may be observed of y as of u, that it follows a vowel without any hiatus, as rosy youth.

The chief argument by which we assert this to be always vowels is, that the sounds which they are supposed to have as consonants, cannot be uttered after a vowel, like that of all other consonants: thus we say, to, to, to; add, add, but in wed, wae, the two sounds of w have no resemblance to each other.

In orthography I have supposed orthoepia, or just utterance of words, to be included; orthography being only the art of expressing certain sounds by proper characters. I have therefore observed in what words any of the letters are mute.

Most of the writers of English Grammar have given long tables of words pronounced otherwise than they are written, and seem not sufficiently to have considered, that of English, as of all living tongues, there is a double pronunciation, one curfewy and colloquial, the other regular and formal. The curfew pronunciation is always vague and uncertain, being made different in different mouths by negligence, unskilfulness, or affection. The solemn pronunciation, though by no means immutable and permanent, as yet always leaves remote from the orthography and less liable to rapid innovations. They have however generally formed their tables according to the curfew speech of those with whom they happened to converse; and concluding that the whole nation combines to vitiage language in one manner, have often established the jargon of the lowest of the people as the model of speech.

For pronunciation the best general rule is, to consider those of the most elegant speakers who deviate least from the written words.

There have been many schemes offered for the emendation and settlement of our orthography, which, like that of other nations, being formed by charter, or according to the fancy of the earliest writers in rude ages, are at first very various and uncertain, and is yet sufficiently irregular. Of these reformers some have endeavoured to accommodate orthography better to the pronunciation, without considering that this is to measure by a shadow, to take that for a model or standard which is shadowy, and the other regular and formal. The curfew pronunciation is always vague and uncertain, having endeavoured to proportion the number of letters to that of sounds, that every sound may have its own character, and every character a single sound. Such would be the orthography of a new language to be formed by a synod of grammarians upon principles of science. But who can hope to prevail on nations to change their practice, and make all their old books useless? or what advantage would a new orthography procure equivalent to the confusion and perplexity of such an innovation?

Some of these schemes I shall however exhibit, which may be used according to the diversities of genius, as a guide to reformers, or terror to innovators.

One of the first who proposed a scheme of regular orthography, was Sir Thomas More, secretary of state to Queen Elizabeth, a man of superior learning, and much practised in grammatical disquisitions. Had he written the following lines according to his scheme, they would have appeared thus:

At length Enamans, that great injurt's name,
    The glory of the priesthood, and the flame,
Stemm'd the wild torrent of a barbarous age,
And drove thofe holy Vandals off the stage.

At length Enamans, Sat grist tingard nam,
At glori of St praefidii, and St mnm,
Stemm'd be wild torrent of a barbarous age,
And drove be holy Vandals off he stag.

After him another mode of writing was offered by Dr. Gill, the celebrated master of St. Paul's school in London; which cannot express exactly for want of types, but will express as truly as is by means of characters now in use, so as to make it understand, exhibiting two Tanias of Spencer in the reformed orthography.

Spenser, book iii. canto 5.

Unthankful wretch, said he, is this the mead,
With which her sovereign mercy thou dost quire?
Thy life she fared by her gracious deed;
But thou dost ween with villainous delight,
To blot her honour, and her heart's light.
Die, rather die, than so disloyally;
Deem of her high desert, or seem so light.
Fair death it is to run more flame; then die.
Die, rather die, than ever love disloyally.
But if to love disloyalty it be,
Shall I then hate her, that from deaths door
Me brought? ah! far be such reproach from me.
What can I les for thee? thou therefore,
Sith she due reward cannot restore?
Die, rather die, and dying do her serve,
Dying her serve, and living her adore.
Thy life she gave, thy life thou waste;
Die, rather die, than ever from her service swerve.

Unthankful wret, said hja, is hisSe mej,
In only regard to her fristrion much? Sou doit quj?
Dj [rij] fnted bi her graduts djid.
But Sou doit wih kinus djips.
ETYMOLOGY

ETYMOLOGY teaches the deduction of one word from another, and various modifications by which the sense of the same word is diversified; as horse, hores; love, I loved.

Of the Article

The English have two articles, an or a, and the.

AN, A.

A has an indefinite signification, and means one, with some reference to more; as This is a good book, that is, one among the books that are good. He was killed by a sword, that is, some sword. This is a better book for a man than a boy, that is, for one of these that are sadder than one of those that are boys. An army might enter without resistance, that is, any army.

In the senes in which we use a or an in the singular, we speak in the plural without an article; as, these are good books.

I have made as the original article, because it is only the Saxon an or en, one, applied to a new use, as the German ein, and the French un; the being cut off before a consonant in the speed of utterance.

Grammarians of the 17th age directed, that an should be used before a; whence it appears that the English anciently aspirated left. An is still used before the silent b, as, an herb, an honest man: but otherwise a; as,

A horfe, a horfe, my kingdom for a horfe. Shakespeare.

An or a can only be joined with a singular, the correspondent plural is the noun without an article, as I want a pen; I want pens: or with the pronominal adjective some, as I want some pens.

The has a particular and definite signification.

The fruit
Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world. Milton.

That is, that particular fruit, and this word in which we live. So, He giveth fodd for the cattle, and green herbs for the use of man; that is, for those beings that are cattle, and his use that is man.

The is used in both numbers.

I am as free as Nature first made man,
Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran. Dryden.

Many words are used without articles; as,

1. Proper names, as John, Alexander, Langinus, Aristarchus, Jerusalem, Athens, Rome, London. God is used as a proper name.
2. Abstract names, as blackness, witchcraft, virtue, vice, beauty, ugliness, love, hatred, anger, good-nature, kindness.
3. Words in which nothing but the mere being of any thing is implied: This is not beer, but water: this is not brisk, but brisk.

Of Nouns Substantives

The relations of English nouns to words going before or following, are not expressed by cases, or changes of termination, but as in most of the other European languages by prepositions, unless we may be said to have a genitive case.

Singular.

Nom. Magister, a Master, the Master.
Gen. Magistri, of a Master, of the Master, or Masters, the Masters.
Dat. Magistro, to a Master, to the Master.
Acc. Magistrum, a Master, the Master.
Voc. Magister, Master, O Master.
AbI. Magistro, from a Master, from the Master.

Plural.
The comparative degree of adjectives is formed by adding or, the superlative by adding est, to the positive; as fair, fairest, fairest; lovely, lovelyer, loveliest; sweet, sweeter, sweetest; low, lower, lowest; big, bigger, biggest.

Some words are irregularly compared; as good, better, best; bad, worse, worst; little, less, least; near, nearer, nearest; much, more, most; many (or more), more (or most), most (or most); late, later, latest or last.

Some comparatives form a superlative by adding most, as neither, neithermost; outer, outermost; under, undermost; up, upper, uppermost; first, former, foremost.

The superlative is sometimes added to a substantive, as topmost, southmost.

Many adjectives that admit of comparison by terminations, and are only compared by more and most, as beneficent, most beneficent.

All adjectives may be compared by more and most, even when they have comparatives and superlatives regularly formed; as fair, fairer, or more fair; fairest, or most fair.

In adjectives that admit a regular comparison, the comparative more is oftener used than the superlative most, as more fair is oftener written for fairest, than most fair for fairest.

The comparison of adjectives is very uncertain; and being much regulated by commodiousness of utterance, or agreeableness of sound, is not easily reduced to rules.

Monosyllables are commonly compared.

Poly syllables, or words of more than two syllables, are seldom compared otherwise than by more and most, as deletable, more deletable, most deletable.

Dilysyllables are seldom compared if they terminate in some, as fulsome, toksome; in suf, as careful, splendifer, dreadful; in ing, as trifling, charming; in ons, as pores; in ass, as careful, barmish; in ed, as wreathed; in id, as caused; in as, as mortal; in ent, as recent, fervent; in ain, as certain; in foy, as mischief; in dy, as woody; in fy, as puffy; in hy, as rocky, except livery, in my, as roomy; in ny, as skinny; in sy, as repay, except happy; in ny, as hearty.

Some comparatives and superlatives are yet found in good writers, formed without regard to the foregoing rules; but in a language subjected to little and so fastly to grammar, such anomalies must frequently occur.

So flanny is compared by Milton.

She did not weep for fear, but for joy, and with did she pour her nocturnal note, and with did she pour her nocturnal note.

So trifling, by Ray.

What she wills to say or do, seems wiser, virtuouf, disinterested, bid.

So trivial, by Ray.

Who is indeed of no great authority.

It is not to decorous, in respect of God, that he should immediately do all the meaneast and triflingest things himself, without making use of any inferior or subordinate minister.

Euphemia, by Milton.

I shall be nam'd among the famoobb.

Of women, sung at solemn festivals.

Inventories, by Acham.

Thou have the inventiofth heads for all purposes, and roundet tongues in all matters.

Acham's Scholastic.

Most, by Bacon.

The most mortal poisons practis'd by the Weit Indians, have some mixture of the blood, fat, or flesh of man.

Bacon.

Natural, by Wanby.

I will now deliver a few of the properest and naturalish considerations that belong to this piece.

Writings, by Jenyon.

The author's are the companions of all helps; such as preening on their own natural, desire diligence, and mock at terms when they underrind and not things.

Ben Jenyon.

Proverb, by Milton.

We have sustaine'd one day a doubtful fight.

What heaven's great King hath powerfully to send Against us from about his throne.
The termination in /s/ may be accounted for in some degree of comparison, by which the finality is diminished below the positive, as black, blacker, or tending to blackness; *also, halfly, or having a little taste of half: they therefore admit no comparisons. This termination is seldom added by words expressing sensible qualities, nor often to words of one syllable, and is scarcely used in the solemn or sublime style.

Of Pronouns.

Pronouns, in the English language, are, *is, thou, he, with their plurals, are, ye, they, it, *we, *you, *we, whether, *whomever, *whatssoever, *mine, our, ours, thy, thine, your, yours, his, her, hers, their, theirs, this, that, other, another, the same, some.

The pronouns personal are irregularly inflected.

Singular. Plural.

Nom. *I *We

Accus. and other oblique cases. *Me *Us

Nom. Thou *Ye

Oblique. Thee *You

You is commonly used in modern writers for ye, particularly in the language of ceremony, where the second person plural is used for the second person singular, You are my friends.

For the practice of ancient writers was to use be, and for *its, his.

The possessive pronouns, like other adjectives, are without cases or change of termination.

The possessive of the first person is my, mine, ours, our; of the second, thy, thine, your, yours; of the third, his, her, hers, and in the plural theirs, for both sexes.

Ours, yours, hers, theirs, are used when the substantive preceding is separated by a verb, as These are our books. These books are ours. Your children excel in features, but ours surpass yours in learning. Ours, yours, hers, theirs, notwithstanding their seeming plural termination, are applied equally to singular and plural substantives, as, *this book is ours. *These books are ours.

Mine and thine were formerly used before a vowel, as mine amiable lady, which, though now followed in prose, might be still properly continued in poetry: they are used as ours and yours, and are referred to a substantive preceding, as thy house is larger than mine, but my garden is more fertile than thine.

Their and theirs are the possessive likewise of their, when they are the plural of it, and are therefore applied to things. Pronouns relative are, whoso, which, whatevery, whether, whatsoever, whatsoever.

Sing. and Plur. Sing. and Plur.

Nom. Who | Nom. Which

Gen. Whose | Gen. Of which, or whose

Other oblique cases. Whom | Other oblique cases. Which

Who is now used in relation to persons, and which in relation to things; but they were anciently confounded. At least it was common to say, the man which, though I remember no example of the thing which. Whose is rather the poetical than regular genitive of which.

The fruit

Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste

Brought death into the world.

Whose is only used in the nominative and accusative cases; and has no plural, being applied only to one of a number, commonly to one of two, as Whether of these is left I know not. Whether shall I choose? It is now almost obsolete.

What, whether relative or interrogative, is without variation. Whosoever, whatsoever, being compounded of who or what, and forever, follow the rule of their primitives.

The plural other is not used but when it is referred to a substantive preceding, as I have some other horses. I have not the same horses, but others.

Another, being only an other, has no plural.

Here, there, and where, joined with certain particles, have a relative and nominal use. Hereof, thereof, hereafter, therewith, thereof, thereby, therefore, wherewith, whereof, whichever, wheresoever, wherewith, which signifies, of this, in this, of that, in that, of which, in which, &c.

Therefore and whenever, which are proper, there for and where for, for that, for which, are now reckoned conjunctions, and continued in use. The rest seem to be passing by degrees into neglect, though proper, useful, and analogous. They are referred both to singular and plural antecedents.

There are two more words used only in conjunction with pronouns, own and self.

Own is added to possessives, both singular and plural, as my own hand, our own house. It is emphatical, and implies a silent contrariety or opposition; as I live in my own house, that is, not in a hired house. This I did with my own hand, that is, without help, or not by proxy.

Self is added to possessives, as myself, ourselves; and sometimes to personal pronouns, as himself, itself, themselves. It then, like own, expresses emphasis and opposition, as I did this myself, that is, not another; or it forms a reciprocal pronoun, as We hurt ourselves by vain rage.

Himself, itself, themselves, are supposed by Wallis to be put, by corruption, for his self, its self, their selves, to that self is always a substantive. This seems justly observed, for we say, He came himself, Himself shall do this, where himself cannot be an accusative.

Of the Verb.

English verbs are active, as I love; or passive, as I'm loved. The neutrals are formed like the actives.

Most verbs signifying action may likewise signify condition or habit, and become neuter, as I love, I am in love; I fear, I am now thinking.

Verbs have only two tenses inflected in their terminations, the present, and the simple pretterite; the other tenses are compounded of the auxiliary verbs have, had, am, is, was, and the infinitive of the active or neuter verb.

The passive voice is formed by joining the participial preterite to the subjunctive verb, as I am loved.

To have. Indicative Mood.

Present Tense.

Sing. I have; thou hast; he hath or has;

Plur. We have; ye have; they have.

Has is a termination corrupted from hath, but now more frequently used both in verse and prose.

Simple Preterite.

Sing. I had; thou hadst; he had;

Plur. We had; ye had; they had.

Compound Preterite.

Sing. I have had; thou hast had; he has or hath had;

Plur. We have had; ye have had; they have had.

Pretterperfect.

Sing. I had had; thou hadst had; he had had;

Plur. We had had; ye had had; they had had.

Future.

Sing. I shall have; thou shalt have; he shall have;

Plur. We shall have; ye shall have; they shall have.

Second
A Grammar of the Second Future.

Sing. I will have; thou wilt have; he will have;
Plur. We will have; ye will have; they will have.

By reading these future tenses may be observed the variations of shall and will.

Imperative Mood.

Sing. Have, or have thou; let him have;
Plur. Let us have; have, or have ye; let them have.

Conjunctive Mood.

Preterite compound.

Sing. I have had; thou hast had; he have had;
Plur. We have had; ye have had; they have had.

Future.

Sing. I shall have; as in the Indicative.

Second Future.

Sing. I shall have had; thou shalt have had; he shall have had;
Plur. We shall have had; ye shall have had; they shall have had.

Potential.

The potential form of speaking is expressed by may, can; in the present; and might, could, or should, in the preterite, joined with the infinitive mood of the verb.

Preterite.

Sing. I may have; thou mayst have; he may have;
Plur. We may have; ye may have; they may have.

Preterite.

Sing. I might have; thou mightst have; he might have;
Plur. We might have; ye might have; they might have.

Preterite.

Sing. I can have; thou canst have; he can have;
Plur. We can have; ye can have; they can have.

Preterite.

Sing. I could have; thou couldst have; he could have;
Plur. We could have; ye could have; they could have.

In like manner should is united to the verb.

There is likewise a double preterite.

Sing. I should have had; thou shouldst have had; he should have had;
Plur. We should have had; ye should have had; they should have had.

In like manner we use, I might have had; I could have had, &c.

Infinitive Mood.

Verb Active. To love.

Indicative. Present.

Sing. I love; thou lovest; he loveth, or loves;
Plur. We love; ye love; they love.

Preterite simple.

Sing. I loved; thou lovedst; he loved;
Plur. We loved; ye loved; they loved.

Preterite perfect compound. I have loved, &c.

Pretertiple perfect. I had loved, &c.

Future. I shall love, &c. I will love, &c.

Imperative.

Sing. Love, or love thou; let him love;
Plur. Let us love; love, or love ye; let them love.

Conjunctive. Present.

Sing. I love; thou love; he love;
Plur. We love; ye love; they love.

Preterite simple, as in the Indicative.

Preterite compound. I have loved, &c.

Future. I shall love, &c.

Second Future. I shall have loved, &c.

Potential.

Present. I may or can love, &c.

Preterite. I might, could, or should love, &c.

Double Preterite. I might, could, or should have loved, &c.

Infinitive.

The passive is formed by the addition of the participle preterite to the different tenses of the verb to be, which must therefore be here exhibited.

Indicative. Present.

Sing. I am; thou art; he is;
Plur. We are, or be; ye are, or be; they are, or be.

The plural be is now little in use.

Preterite.

Sing. I was; thou wast, or wert; he was;
Plur. We were; ye were; they were.

Wert is properly of the conjunctive mood, and ought not to be used in the indicative.

Preterite compound. I have been, &c.

Pretertiple perfect. I had been, &c.

Future. I shall or will be, &c.

Imperative.

Sing. Be thou; let him be;
Plur. Let us be; be ye; let them be.

Conjunctive. Present.

Sing. I be; thou beft; be be;
Plur. We be; ye be; they be.

Preterite.

Sing. I were; thou wert; he were;
Plur. We were; ye were; they were.

Preterite compound. I have been, &c.

Future. I shall have been, &c.

Potential.

I may or can; would, could, or should be; could, would, or should have been, &c.

Infinitive.

Present. To be. Preterite. To have been. Participle present. Being. Participle preterit. Having been.

I am loved, &c. I was loved, &c. I have been loved, &c.

Conjunctive Mood.

If I be loved, &c. If I were loved, &c. If I shall have been loved, &c.

Potential
ENGLISH TONGUE.

Potential Mood.
I may or can be loved, &c. I might, could, or should be loved, &c. I might, could, or should have been loved, &c.

Infinitive.
Preterite. To be loved. Preterite. To have been loved.
Participle. Loved.

There is another form of English verbs, in which the infinitive mood is joined to the verb do in its various inflections, which are therefore to be learned in this place.

To Do:

Indicative. Present.
Sing. I do; thou dost; he doth; doth; we do; ye do; you do; they do.

Preterite.
Sing. I did; thou didst; he did; we did; ye did; you did; they did.

Participle, &c. I have done, &c. I had done, &c.
Future. I shall or will do, &c.

Imperative.
Sing. Do thou; let him do; do.
Plur. Let us do; do ye; let them do.

Conjunctive. Present.
Sing. I do; thou dost; he do; we do; ye do; you do; they do.

The refl are as in the Indicative.

Infinitive. To do; to have done.

Do is sometimes used superfluously, as I do love, I did love; simply for I love, or I loved; but this is considered as a vicious mode of speech. It is sometimes used emphatically; as, I do love thee, and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again. Shakespeare.

It is frequently joined with a negative; as I like her, but I do not love her; I wished him success, but did not help him. This, by culum at least, appears more early than the other form of expressing the same sense by a negative adverb after the verb, I like her, but love her not.

The Imperative prohibitory is seldom applied in the second person, at least in prose, without the word do; as Stop him, but do not hurt him; Praise beauty, but do not adore it.

Its chief use is in interrogative forms of speech, in which it is used through all the persons; as Do I love? Dost thou love me? Do they love? Did I complain? Didst thou love her? Did she die? So likewise in negative interrogations; Do I not yet grieve? Did she not die?

Do and did are thus used only for the present and simple preterite.

There is another manner of conjugating neuter verbs, which, when it is used, may not improperly denominate them neuter passive, as they are inflected according to the passive form by the help of the verb be substantive to be. They answer nearly to the reciprocal verbs in French; as Am rison, furrex, Latin; Je me suis levé, French. I was walked out, exieram; Je m'étois promené.

In like manner we commonly express the present tense: as I am going, am; I am grieveing, dole. She is dying, ill moritur. The temped is rages, furit pressilla. I am pursuing an enemy, iibum inseguer. So the other tenses, as, We were walking, invicem seambulaverunt. I have been walking, I had been walking, paxor or will be walking.

There is another manner of using the active participle, which gives it a passive signification: as, The grammar is now printing, grammaticae jam nunc chartis impressura. The brahs is forgiving, aera excurvat. This is, in my opinion, a vicious expression, probably corrupted from a phrase more pure, but now favored by scholars: The book is a forgery, a being properly art, and printing and forging verbal nouns signifying action, according to the analogy of this language.

The indicative and conjunctive moods are by modern writers frequently confounded, or rather the conjunctive is wholly neglected, when some convenience of verification does not invite its revival. It is used among the purer writers of former times after if, though, ere, before, still or until, whether, except, unless, whatsoever, whosoever, and words of willing; as, Doubtless thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Ishmael acknowledge us not.

Of Irregular Verbs.

The English verbs were divided by Ben Jonson into four conjugations, without any reason arising from the nature of the language, which has properly but one conjugation, such as has been exemplified; from which all deviations are to be considered as anomalies, which are indeed in our monosyllable Saxon verbs, and the verbs derived from them, very frequent; but almost all the verbs which have been adopted from other languages, follow the regular form.

Our verbs are observed by Dr. Wallis to be irregular only in the formation of the preterite, and its participle. Indeed, in the scantiness of our conjugations, there is scarcely any other place for irregularity.

The first irregularity is a slight deviation from the regular form, by rapid utterance or poetical contraction: the last syllable of ed is often joined with the former by suppresion of t; as low'd for loved; after c, s, f, j, x, and after the consonants f, s, when more strongly pronounced, and sometimes after m, n, r, if preceded by a short vowel, t is used in pronunciation, but very seldom in writing, rather than d; as plac't, frvent'l, lik'd, wak't, dined, 'tis small'; for placed, fancied, fed, smold, wind, snold, said, &c. or placed, snatched, filled, looked, dwelled, smeltled. Tho' words which terminate in l o r, or s, make their preterite in t, even in solemn language; as crept, fell, dwelt, sometimes after x, ed is changed into t, as uxt; this is not constant.

A long vowel is often changed into a short one; thus, kept, slept, crept, faint; from the verbs, to keep, to sleep, to sweep, to creep, to swoop.

Where d or t go before, the additional letter d or t, in this contracted form, coalesce into one letter with the radical d or t; if t were the radical, they coalesce into t; but if d were the radical, then into d or t, as the one or the other letter may be more easily pronounced: as read, bed, spread, fed, bred, bid, bid, Chad, fed, bid, bred, brief, bred, died, rid; from the verbs to spread, to feed, to ride, to bid, to ride, to food, to breed, to freed, to stride, to ride. And thus, cast, hurt, cast, hurt, eat, beat, sauce, sit, quit, write, sit, bit, met, met, float, from the verbs to cast, to hurt, to cast, to hurt, to eat, to beat, sauce, sit, quit, write, sit, bit, met, to meet, to float. And in like manner, lent, sent, rent, girt; from the verbs to lend, to send, to rend, to gird.

The participle preterit or passive is often formed in ed, instead of ed; as been, taken, given, shown, known; from the verbs to be, to take, to give, to flow, to know.

Many words have two or more participles, as not only written, bitten, eaten, beaten, bidden, chidden, stotten, oven, broken; but likewise norit, bit, eat, beat, bid, chid, flot, chofe, broken, are proficuously used in the participle, from the verbs to orisit, to bite, to eat, to beat, to bid, to chide, to flow, to chofe, to break, and many such like.

In the same manner, four, flour, brow, brow, movan, laden, laden, as well as sword, sword, browd, movd, loaded, laden, from the verbs to saw, to saw, to brow, to mov, to lead, or lad.

Concerning these double participles it is difficult to give any rule; but he shall seldom err who remembers, that when a verb has a participle distinct from its preterite, as orisit, orisit, orisit, that distinct participle is more proper and elegant, as The four.
A GRAMMAR OF THE book is written, is better written. Howrera written may be used in poetry; at least if we allow any authority to poets, who, in the exultation of genius, think themselves perhaps entitled to trample on grammarians.

There are other anomalies in the preterite.
1. Win, soon, began, I saw, strike, stick, fig, fig, fig, ring, ring, rove, rove, sing, drink, spark, spark, come, run, find, bind, grind, wound, both in the preterite, imperfect, and particible passive, give, gain, began, saw, struck, stuck, struck, fig, flung, flung, rang, rang, song, song, song, drank, drank, drank, come, run, found, bound, ground, wound. And most of them are also formed in the preterite by a, as began, rang, fig, flung, drank, came, took, and some others; but most of these are now obsolete. Some in the participle passive likewise take en, as strikken, strucken, strucken, sounden.

But a great many of these retain likewise the regular form, as taught, teach, unteach, caughed, worked.

3. Take, take, forake, awake, awake, stand, break, speak, bear, bear, bear, bear, tear, tear, use, use, cause, choose, thrive, thrive, drive, shine, rise, rise, rise, make, wrote, write, all in the preterite and particible passive, took, took, awake, awake, stood, broke, spoke, bear, bear, rave, rave, rave, wrote, wrote, caused, caused, thriven, thriven, drove, shone, shone, shone, made, wrote, written, and perhaps some others, but more rarely. In the participle passive many of them are formed by en, as taken, foraken, broken, spoken, born, sown, sown, torn, worn, worn, crown, thriven, driven, ridden, ridden, ridden, ridden, got, taken, forgotten, sitten. And many do likewise retain the analogy in,
as awaked, awaked, flourished, flourished, leaved, abided, fasted.

4. Give, bid, set, make in the preterite grace, grate, hate; in the participle passive, given, ridden, ridden; but in both bid.

5. Draw, know, knew, threw, crew, crew like a cock, fly, fly, set, let, make their preterite deo, knew, knew, threw,
crew, crew, knew, crew, lay; their participles passive by en, drawn, known, grown, thrown, blown, blown, flown, flown, seen, lain. Yet from set is made hefted; from seen, from the old wound, the participle is gotten.

Of Derivation.

That the English language may be more easily understood, it is necessary to inquire how its derivative words are deduced from their primitives, and how the primitives are borrowed from other languages. In this enquiry I shall sometimes copy Dr. Wallis, and sometimes endeavour to supply his defects, and rectify his errors.

Nouns are derived from verbs.
The thing implied in the verb, as done or produced, is commonly either the present of the verb: as to love, love; to fright, a fright; to fight, a fight; or the preterite of the verb, as, to strike, I strike or strik, a stroke.

The action is the same with the participle present, as loving, lovingly, lovingly, love, love.

The agent, or person acting, is denoted by the yllable er or ed added to the verb, as lover, lover, lover.

Substantives, adjectives, and sometimes other parts of speech, are changed into verbs: in which case the vowel is often lengthened, or the consonant softened: as a house, to house;
brains, to brain; glass, to glass; girls, to grace; price, to prize;
breath, to breathe; a fish, to fish; oil, to oil; further, to fur-er; forward, to forward; hinder, to hinder.

Sometimes the termination en is added, especially to adjectives: as hate, to soften; length, to lengthen; strength, to strengthen; short, to shorten; fast, to fasten; white, to whiten;

black, to blacken; hard, to harden; fast, to fasten.

From substantives are formed adjectives of plenty, by adding the termination y, as a house, housey; wealth, wealthy; health, healthy; might, mighty; worth, worthy; wit, witty; left, lefty;
water, wattery; earth, earthy; wood, woody; air, airy;
a heart, hearty and handy.

From substantives are formed adjectives of plenty, by adding the termination ful, denoting abundance: as joy, joyful; fruit, fruitful; youth, youthful; care, careful; sile, useful; delight, delightful; plenty, plentiful; help, helpful.

Sometimes, in almost the same fene, but with some kind of diminution thereof, the termination fere is added, denoting funding, or in some degree: as delight, delightfully; game, gamey, irk, irksome, burden, burdenfome; trouble, troublefome;
light, lightfome; hand, handsome; alone, alonefome; tall, tallfome.

On the contrary, the termination ifi added to substantives, makes adjectives signifying want: as vorilefs, vorilefs, heartless, heartless, helpelf, helpelf. Thus comfort, comfortifl, sap, sapless.

Privation or contrariety is very often denoted by the word an prefixed to many adjectives, or in before words derived from the Latin: as pleasant, unpleasant; wise, unwife; profitable, unprofitable; patient, impatient. Thus unworthy, unhealthy, unprofitable, unprofitful, and many more.

The original English privative is an: but as we often borrow from the Latin, or its descendants, words already signifying privation, as unificating, impudicating, to parallel in any particles we and we have fallen into confusion, from which it is not easy to disengage them.

is prefixed to all words originally English: as write, writ, unwrit, unolv.

is prefixed to all participles made privative adjectives, as unfading, unaffiing, unseen, unclouded, unwept.

is prefixed to most substantives which have an English termination, as un-ferile, unfruitful, which, if they have borrowed terminations, take in or imperfection, imperfection, unprofitable, unprofitable, inactivity.

In borrowing adjectives, if we receive them already compounded, it is usual to retain the particle prefixed, as in English, independent, independent; but if we borrow the adjective, and add the participial particles, we commonly prefix an, as unpoor, unpoor, unpoor.

The prepositional adjectives of and of the deand mis of the French, signify almost the same as an; yet dis rather imports contrariety than privation, since it answers to the Latin preposition de. Mis inicates some error, and for the most part may be rendered by the Latin words woes or pereram. To like, to dislike; honour, dishonour; to honour, to grace, to disgrace; to desire, to disdains; chance, hap, mischance, mishap; to take, to misuse; deed, misled;
to use, to misuse; to employ, to miscarry; to apply, to mis-apply.

Words derived from Latin words with de or di retain the same signification: as differentiis, differentiis, differentiis, differentiis, defere, defere, defere, defere.

The termination is added to substantives, and sometimes to adjectives, forms adjectives that import some kind of similitude or agreement, being formed by contraction of like or like.

A giant, giantly, giantlike; earth, earthly; heaven, heaviness;
world, worldly; God, godly; good, goodly.

The same termination is added to adjectives, forms adverbs of like signification: as beautifully, beautifully; sweet, sweetly;
that is, in a beautiful manner; with some degree of sweetness.

The termination is added to adjectives, imports diminution; and added to substantives, imports similitude or tendency to a character: as green, greenish; white, whitish; -ish, -ish; abuse, abuser, abuser; a thief, thieves; a wolf, wolves; a child, children.

We have forms of diminutives in substantives, though very rare; as a hill, a hillot; a cock, a cocklet; a pike, a piket; this is a French termination: a goose, a gosling; this is a German termination: a lamb, a lambkin; a chick, a chicken; a man, a mankin; a pipe, a pipkin; and thus Halkin, whence the patronymics, Hawkins; Wilkin, Wilson, and others.

Yet
Of concrete adjectives are made abstract substantives, by adding the termination nef, and a few in ood or oat, noting character or qualities; as white, whitenef; hard, hardnef; great, greatnep; skillful, skillfulnep, unskillfulnep; godhead, manhood, maidenhead, widowhood, knighthood, priesthood, likelihood, foolishhood.

There are other abstractions, partly derived from adjectives, and partly from verbs, which are formed by the addition of the termination th, a small change being sometimes made; as long, lengthth; strong, strengthth; broad, broadth; wide, wideth; deep, depthth; true, trueth; warm, wamith; dear, dearth; long, longth; commonly spoken and written later mather, after mather; in some modern words, mather is derived from fey or fey.fey, weal, wealth; dry, drought; young, youth; and so on, month, monthth.

Like these are some words derived from verbs; die, deathth; till, tleeth; grow, growth; move, moweth; after moweth; so that moweth is often used for mow, and moweth is often used for mow.

Some ending in thf imply an office, employment, or condition; as kingthf, wardenship, guardianship, partnership, wardenship, headship, lordship,

Thus vopfthf that is, vopfthf; whence vopfthf and to vopfthf.

Some few ending in dom, richt, quick, do especcially denote dominion, at least fate or condition; as kingdom, ukedom, earldom, princeedom, popedom, christendom, freedom, avidom, subordom, bishopsick, bishopsick.

Mess and age are plainly French terminations, and are of the same import with us as among them, fearfully ever occurring, except in words derived from the French, as commandment, usage.

There are in English often long trains of words allied by their meaning and derivation; as to keat, a bat, hotton, a battle, a kettle, a battle-sweat, to kettar, a kind of glutinous composition for food, made by beating different bodies into one mass. All these are of similar signification, and perhaps derived from the Latin batum. Thus rake, tach, tick, tickle, tacketh; all imply a local application, batum Latin tangere, tangth, tang.

From swt are formed sweat, swet, sweyet, swyvet, swyt, swyt, swyt, swyt, swyt, swyt, swyt, swyt.

The following remarks, extracted from Wallis, are ingenious, but of more flashy than solidify, and such as perhaps might in every language be enlarged without end.

So usually imply the mef, and what relates to it. From the Latin mef is derived the French me and the English me; and me a pronominky, as projecting like a nose. But as if from the consonants m taken from mef, and w from wef, we form wine; wine from wine; and thenere are derived many words that relate to the nose, as fwoe, fwooe, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor, fwoor. There is another swt, by which perhaps may be derived from the Latin sumus, as sum, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth, sumuth. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf. It imply only blaf; as blaf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf, blayf.
GRAMMAR

A
From the Cv^Ims, /npfJicatt, Jiff oft, difpono

fupplico

ixpatiaie, expatior

;

;

dtmtnftraie, demonftro

;

/upprefs, fupprimo

;

Many

place lace, rabula,

;

rail

;

rnel, viraul,

Irawf,

raile,

Irthh

l]UiefitiO(

\

;

exempt,

cximo.

queft.

At lable

more apparent, than diatWallis goo too far in quell of originals.
of tbefe which fcem felejted as immediate defcendanta from the Latin,

Nothing

THE

OF

It

are appirentl; Ficnch, as conceive, affrtmt, exfofi, txcmft.

alfo a confonant, or at lead

;

rotundus, round;

one of 1 fofter found, or even a whole fyl-fragilis, /rai/

nomen, noun

;

fecurus,

/vn regula, rule; tegula,

;

decanus, dean ; computo, rntiir ; fubitancui, fuddain, foon ; fuperare, tofoar; periculum, ^^i/; mirabile, marvel; as magnus, mo/R ; dignor, <fW^ii ; Xingo, JIain; tin3um, /.linr ; pingo, ^o>»; prx-tile ;

fubtilis, futtle

;

;

dari, reach,

The contraftions may feem harder, where many of them meet, as xit^ioju;,
purely French, not derived from the Latin, we kyrk, church; prejbyter, frir/? ; facrillanus,y<x.'cn; frango, fregi, irrj>, irraii j
to garter, buckler, language garden,
as have transferred into our
;
fagus, ^vya, beech ;
f changed into b, and g into cb, which are letters near a-kin; frigefco,yr«ai£; Wigeko, frefh, fc \n«> p, slz TAioyt in hifbcp, fijh, fo in aJi'ttttce, to cry, to plead, from the French, Jardin,jartier, bouclier, A-vancer, crier, plaider ; though indeed, even of thefe, part is of fcapha,^iy,yl(^, and refrigefco, refrejh ; butvirefcOj/r^; phlcbotomusjj^rain ;
bovina, huf; vitulina, vtal; fcutifer, fjuire ; pcenitentia, penance; fandtuaLatin original.

Some words

rium, fanHuary, fentry

to many words which we dies; Sravt, traho

;

tame,

domo,

i'(t/>caar;

jugum, ^fDy*?;

yoke,

over,

upper,

qusfitio, chafe;

perquifitio, purchaje; anguilla,

«/;
;
and more contrafledly namely,
by rejeiling to fan,
from
; ciaminare,
the beginning and end t and 0, accord'mg CO the ufual manner, the remainder xamin, which tlie Saxons, who did not ufe *, write cfamen, or fcamen, is contracted into yr an ; as from dominus, don; nomine, noun; Ahomlno, ban ; and indeed apum cxamen they turned into fciame ; for which we fay ftvjrme, by Jnfula,

have in common with the Germans, it is doubtflU whether the old Teutons borrowed them from the Latins, or the Latins ftom the Teutons, or both had tlicm from fome common original ; as v)'tnt, vinum ; ixi'md, vcntus ; wf»f, veni ; icay, via ; •tvall, vallum ; ivalkia, volvo tinol, vtilus ; lu'xll, volo ; imrm, vermis { u'tirtb, virtus ; waff, vefpa ; Jay,

As

ey, ijle.

;

He, iflar.d, i'anJ

;

infuletta,

iflet, u'el

;

eyght

whence Ovijney, Ruhy, Ely

inferting r to denote the murmuring

thefaurus, fiore

;

;

fedile, fiuol

w'o;,

;

ireji, frango ; fy, volo j ilc^v, flo.
; am, fum, Hfju ;
I make no
•uiet ; fudo, fweat gaudium, gay ; jocus, joy ; fuccus, juice ; catena, chain j
;
doubt but the Teutonick is more ancient than the Latin; and it is no leff caliga, calga ; chaufe, chaulTe, Fr. hcfi ; extinguo, ftancb, fquencb, fucnchf certain, that the Latin, which borrowed a great number of words, not only ftint; (otii, forth; {fCcXts, fpice ; recito, read; adjuvo, aid; a\vi, a;vum, erff from the Greek, efpccially the ^olick, but from other neighbouring languages, age, ever ; noccus, lock ; excerpo, fcrape, fcrahbU, fcratul ; extravagus, flray,
a) the ©fcan and others, which have long become ohfolete, received not a few ftraggle; c.o\\t&\itn, clot, clutch; cnlligo, coil; recoUigo, recoil; feveio, fivear from the Teutonick. It is certain, that the EngliOi, German, and other Teu- iWduluSj^ri//; procurator, ^roxy pulfo, ro /i»/!!> ; calamus, a quill; impetere, tonick languages, retained fome derived from the Greek, which the Latin has to impeach; augeo, auxi, tv<ix; and vanefco, vanui, TJane
;
;
fyllabare, tofpelli
;
not ; as ex, aebs, mit, ford, pfurd, daughter, tocbter, mick/e, mingle, moon, puteus, ^ir; granum, ccrn compritno, cramp, crump, crumple, crinkle.
;
fear, grave, gra^, to grave, tojcrape, vjbole, from i^irn, /j^ira, ma^ixo^, ^yyar^f
Some may feem harOier, yet may not be reje^ed, for it at lead appears,
Since they received thefc immediate- that fome of them are derived from proper names, and there are others whofe utyaXo^, fxiyfCv, fMr,m, ^^^ii, y^a'^ai, cXof.
ly from the Greeks, without the intervention of the Latin language, why may etymology is acknowledged by every body as Alexander, Elick, Scanjer, San; not other words be derived immediately from the fame fountain, though they be der, Sanny, Sandy; Eiizabetha, Eiixabeth, Elifaheth, Betty, Befi; Margareta, likcwife found among the Latins ?
Margaret, Margct, Meg, Peg ; Maria, Mary, Mai, Pal, Malkin, Mawkin, Matokcs; Matthaeus, Mattlu, Ma'tbew ; Martha, Matt, Pat; Gulielmus,
Our anceftors were ftudious to form borrowed words, however IVilhelmus, Cirolamo, Guillaume, miliam, fVitl, Bill, fTiUm, HHcken, fTicki, fuper, iir«;

long, into monofyllables ; and not only cut off the formative terminations, but cropped the firll fyllable, efpecially in words beginning with a vowel ; and rejefted not only vowels in the middle, but likewife confonants of a weaker found, retaining the Wronger, which feem the bones of words, or changing them for others of the fame organ, in order that the found might become the fofter ; but efpecially tranfpofing their order, that they might the more readily be pronounced without the intermediate vowels.
For example, in expendo, _/5>Ma' ; txemp]um, /ample ; excipio, /cape ; extraneus, grange ; extraftum, ^retch'd ; excrucio, to /creiv i exfcorio, to/our ; excorio, to/courge ; excortico, to /cratch ;

and others beginning with ^jr

.•

as alfo,

emendo,

copus, hipop ; in Danifh, hi/p\ epillola, tie J Hifpania, Spain ; hiiloria,y?(7ry.

Many

epi/ile;

to mend;

epif-hofpitale, /fit-

of thefe etymologies are doubtful, and fame evidently miftaken.

The

following are fomewhat harder, Alexarier, Sander ; Elifabeiha, Betty ; apis, hee\ aper, bar\ p paOing into h, as in bijhop ; and by cutting off a from the beginning, which is reftored in the middle : but for the old bar or hare,
We now fay hoar ; as for lartg, long ; for bain, bane ; for fiane, flcne ; aprugna, being changed into b, and a tranfpnfed, as in afer, and g changed intow, as in pignus, paton ; lege, latu ; iXoirnJ, fox; cutting off me beginning, and changing/! into f, as in pellis, a fell; pullus, a foal; pater, father;

pavor,y<ar ; polio, jf/V; pIco, impleo, _^//, /a//; pifcis, and tranfpofing o
;
into the middle, which was taken from the beginning; apex, apiece; peak, pike; zofhoia$, freeze; muftum, JIum; defenfio, fence; difpenfator, fpencer ; afculto, efcouter, Fr. fcout ; exfcalpo, /(rape, redoring / indead of r, and hence fhap, fcrahle, Icrawl; exculpo, /coop ; exterrltus, Jlart ; extonitus, attonitus, fitnn'd; ftomachus, maw; o&etiio, fined ; obftipo, y7o)> ; audere, dare; cavere, xvare; whenrc a-iuare, he-tvare, ivary, ivarn, warning, for the Latin .1/ con fonant formeilv founded like our w, and the modern found of the v confonant was formerly that of the letter y, that is, the i^o'.ick digamma, which had the found of ^, and the modern found of the letter /"was that of the Greek ip or pb ;
braton,

p

^i ulcus, ulcere, ulcer^ fre, and hence ferry, jorrotv, jorrovjful; ingenium, engine, gin; fcalenus, leaning, unlrfs you w.juld rather derive it from xXivv, v.-hence inclino ; infundibulum, funnel ; gagate:, jctt ; projeilum, to jctt forth, a jetty cucullus, a civil.

There are fyncopes fomewhat harder; from tempore, time; from nomine, Tame ; domina, eLtme ; as the French b-.mme, femme, r.om, fromlipminc, fceraina, nomine. Thua pagina, page ; «roTn{im, pot ; tamtWa., cup ; cantharus, can ;
tentorium, lint ; precor, pray ; prxda, prey ; fpecio, fpeculor, Jpy ; plico, ply ;
implico, im^/y ; replico, rrf« ; complico, rom/i/y ; fedes epifcopalis,^v.
A vowel is alfo cut off in the middle, that the number of the fyllable?
may be leffened ; ai aroita, aunt; fpiritus, ^ri^i/ ; dcbitum, debt; dubito, tUnbt ; com^5, comitis, count ; ckticus, clerk ; quietus, ^uit, quite ; acquieto, (» Mf^t; feparo, r« Jp<irt\ &al>ilis> ^uiU; lUbuluni; Jiable j fa^atiym^ ppfTeeh.

Thus cariophyllus, flos ; gerofilo, leal, giriflee, gilofer, Fr. gillifiovter, \vhich the vulgar call julyfloiuer, as if derived from the month July ; petrofclinum, parjley; portulaca, ^wr/Jjm ;cydonium, quince; cydoniatum, quiddeny ; perficum, peach ; cruca, eruke, which they corrupt to ear-viig, as if it took its name from the ear annulus geminus, a gimmal, or gimbal ring and thus the word gimbal and jumbal is transferred to other things thus interwoven ; quelques
;

;

chofes, kickfbaivi.
Since the origin of thefe, and many others, however forced, is evident, it ought to appear no wonder to any one if the ancients have thus disfigured

many,

efpecially as they fo

much make them found monofyllables

affefted

the fofter, took this liberty of ing, tranfpofing, and foftening them.

;

and, to maiming, taking away, chang-

But while we derive thefe from the Latin, I do not mean to fay, that many of them did not immediately 'come to us from the Saxon, DanUh, Dutch, and Teutonick languages, and other dialedls, and fome taken more lately from the French, or Italians, or Spaniards.
The fame word, according to its different Cgnifications, often has a diflferent origin; »s to bear a burden, (com fero; but to bear, whence birth, born, bairn, comes from pario, and a bear, at leaft if it be of Latin original, (com era, Thas perch, a fifli, ftomperca; but perch, a meafure, from pertica, and likewife ro^frri.
To fpett is from Jyllaba ; hut fpell, an inchantmcnt, by which it is believed that the boundaries are fo fixed in lands, that none can pafs them againft the mailer's will, from expello ; and fpell, a me(Tenger, from epijlola ;

f

Thus frcefe, or freexe, from frigejco ;
gofpel, good-fpell, or god-Jpell, but /"«««, an architeflonic word, from xophorus; bat freefe, for cloth, from Frifia, or perhaps from frigefco, as being more fit than any other for keeping out whence the cold.

There are many words among us, even monofyllables, compounded of two or more words, at leaft ferving inftead of compounds, and comprifing the fignification of more words than one ; as from fcrip and roll, comes fcrcll ; from froud and dance, prance from ft of the verb Jlay, or Jland and c:a, is made/oar ;
from flout and hardy, flurdy ; from fp of fpit or fpevi, and out, comes fpout j from the dmn fp, with the termination in, \% fpin; and iii\n%oul,fpin tut ;
and'from the Um&fp, with /'/, is fpit, which only differs ftom fpout m that it
;

is fmaller, and with lei's

noife and force

;

but fputter

becaufe of the obfcure of adding r, it intimates whereas fpatter, on ac:

is,

V, fomething between fpit and (pout ; and by reafon
a frequent iteration and noife, but cbicurely confufed count of the (harper and clearer vowel a, intimates a more diftiniS noife, in whiih it chiefly differs from fputter. From the dmefp, and the termination ark, comas fpark, fignifying a fingle cmifiion of fire with a noife ; namely, j^ the cniiOion, ar the more acute noife, and k the mute confonant, intimates its being fuddenly terminated ; but adding /, is made the frequentative fparkle.

The famc_y^, by adding r, that is fpr, implies a more lively impecus of diffufing or expanding itfclf; to which adding the termination ing, it becomes J^rjn^ ; its vigour fpr imports, its fiiarpnefs the termination ing; and lalHy in acute and tremulous, ending in the mute confonant g, denotes, the fudden ending of any motion, that it is meant in its primary fignificatioo, of a finglr, not a complicated exilition.
Hence we call fpring whatever has an elallick force as alfo a fountain of water, and thence the origin of any thing ; and to fpring,
:

to germinate

J

and fpring, gnc vf Uis fpur f«afoasi

Froio ths faroc

^r and tut,


ENGLISH TONGUE.

1. Diffusibles formed by suffixing a termination, the former syllable is commonly accented, as:
2. Diffusibles formed by prefixing a syllable to the radical word, commonly the accent on the latter; as:
3. Of diffusibles, which are at once nouns and verbs, the verb has commonly the accent on the latter, and the noun on the former syllable; as:

4. All diffusibles ending in if, or in effusibles, except those which are properly verbs, or having a diphthong on the last syllable, as:
5. Diffusible nouns in er, or in effusible, have the accent on the former syllable.
6. Diffusible verbs terminating in a consonant and e final, as:
7. Diffusible verbs having a diphthong in the last syllable, as:
8. Diffusible forms by adding a termination, or prefixing a syllable, retain the accent of the radical word, as:
9. Diffusible forms in us, or in effusible, as:
10. Diffusible forms in es, or in effusible, accent the first syllable.
11. Diffusible forms in ex, or in effusible, as:
12. Diffusible forms in us or ex, accent the first syllable, as:
13. Diffusible forms in us or ex, commonly accent the first syllable, as:
14. Diffusible forms in us or ex, as:
15. Diffusible forms that have their accent on the last syllable are commonly French, as:
16. Polyphrases, or words of more than three syllables, follow the accent of the words from which they are derived, as:
17. Words in us have the accent upon the antepenult, as:
18. Words ending in us have the accent on the first syllable, as:
19. Words ending in us have the accent on the antepenult, as:
20. Words ending in us have their accent on the antepenult, as:

VERSIFICATION is the arrangement of a certain number of syllables according to certain laws.

The feet of our verses are either iambick, as:

Our
our iambick measure comprises verses.

Of four syllables,
Most good, most fair,
Or things as rare,
To call you's Eft;
For all the Eft
Words can beftow,
So poorly how
Upon your prufie,
That all the ways
Sense hath, come short.

With ravish'd ears
The monarch hears.

Drayton.

Of five,
This while we are abroad,
Shall we not touch our lyre?
Shall we not ftng an ode?
Shall that holy fire,
In us that strongly glow'd,
In this cold air expire?
Though in the utmost Peak
A while we do remain,
Among the mountains bleak,
Expos'd to Eleet and rain,
No sport our hours shall break,
To exercise our vein.
What though bright Phoebus' beams
Refresh the southern ground,
And though the princely Thames
With beauteous nymphs abound,
And by old Camber's streams
Be many wonders found:
Yet many rivers clear
Here glide in silver swathes,
And what of all molt dear,
Buxton's delicious baths,
Strong ale and noble cheer,
T'affiance breem winter's fteathes.

In places far or near,
Or famous, or obscure,
Where wholsom is the air,
Or where the molt impure,
All times, and every where,
The mufe is still in ure.

Drayton.

Of eight, which is the ufual measure for short poems,
And may at laft my weary age
Find out the peaceful hermitage,
The hairy gown, and moss}' cell,
Where I may fit, and nightly spell
Of ev'ry flar the fly doth fliew,
And ev'ry herb that fips the dew.

Milton.

Of ten, which is the common measure of heroick and tragick poetry,
Full in the midst of this created space,
Betwixt heaven, earth, and fies, there stands a place
Confining on all thee; with triple bound;
Whence all things, though remote, are view'd around,
And thither bring their undulating found.
The palace of loud Fame, her fest of pow'r,
Plac'd on the fummit of a lofty tow'r;
A thousand winding entries long and wide
Receive of fresh reports a flowing tide.

Drayton.

A thousand crannies in the walls are made;
Nor gate nor bar exclude the busy trade.
'Tis built of brafs, the better to diffuse
The spreading sounds, and multiply the news;
Where echoes in repeated echoes play:
A mart for ever full; and open night and day.
Nor silence is within, nor voice express,
But a deaf noise of sounds that never ceafe.
Confus'd, and chiding, like the hollow roar
Of tiles, receding from the inftulted shore:
Or like the broken thunders, heard from far,
When Jove to distance drives the rolling war.
The courts are fill'd with a tumultuous din
Of crowds, or flogging forth, or ent'ring in;
A thorough-fare of news; where fome devote Things never heard, fome mingle truth with lies:
The troubled air with empty sounds they beat,
Intent to hear, and eager to repeat.

Dryden.

In all these measures the accents are to be placed on even syllables; and every line considered by itself is more harmonious, as this rule is more strictly observed. The variations necessary to pleasure belong to the art of poetry, not the rules of grammar.

Our trochaic measures are

Of three syllables,
Here we may Think and pray,
Before death
Stops our breath:
Other joys
Are but toys.

Walton's Angler.

Of five,
In the days of old,
Stories plainly told,
Lovers felt annoy.

Old Ballad.

Of seven,
Fairest piece of well-form'd earth,
Urgent not thus your haughty birth.

Waller.

In these measures the accent is to be placed on the odd syllables.

There are the measures which are now in use, and above the rest those of seven, eight, and ten syllables. Our ancient poets wrote verses sometimes of twelve syllables, as Drayton's Polyolbion.

Of all the Cambrian files their heads that bear so high,
And fcrutify their foils with an ambitious eye,
Mervinia for her hills, as for their matchlefs crowds,
The nearest that are faid to kids the wandering crowds,
Especial audience craves, of lendfed with the throng,
That he of all the refpicted was so long:
Alling for herfelf, when through the Saxon's pride,
The godlike race of Brute to Severn's fettled side
Were cruelly infur'd, her mountains did relieve
Those whom devouring war elf every where did griev'd.
And when all Wales before (by fortune or by might)
Unto her ancient for regif'd her ancient right,
A constant maiden still the only did remain,
The left her genuine laws which ftoatly did retain.
And as each one is prais'd for her peculiar things,
So only the is rich in mountains, meres, and fpringes.
And holds herfelf as great in her superfluous waftes,
As others by their towns and fruitful tilage grafted.

Drayton.

Of fourteen, as Chapman's Homer.
And as the mind of man that hath a long way gone,
And either knoweth not his way, or else would let alone
His purfuit's journey, is difturbed.

The measures of twelve and fourteen syllables were often mingled by our old poets, sometimes in alternate lines, and sometimes in alternate couples.
ENGLISH TONGUE.

The verse of twelve syllables, called an Alexandrine, is now only used to diversify heroic lines.

Waller was smooth, but Dryden taught to join
The varying vers, the full-refounding line:
The long majestic march, and energy divine.

The pause in the Alexandrine must be at the sixth syllable.

The verse of fourteen syllables is now broken into a soft lyric measure of verss consisting alternately of eight syllables and six.

She to receive thy radiant name,
Selects a whiter space.

When all shall praise, and ev'ry lay
Devote a wreath to thee,
That day, for come it will, that day
Shall lament to see.

Beneath this tomb an infant lies
To earth whose body lent,
Hereafter shall more glorious rise,
But not more innocent.

When the Archangel's trump shall blow
And souls to bodies join,
What crowds shall with their lives below
Had been as short as thine!

We have another measure very quick and lively, and therefore much used in songs, which may be called the anapestick, in which the accent rests upon every third syllable.

May I govern my passions with absolute fury,
And grow wiser and better as life wears away.

In this measure a syllable is often retrenched from the first foot, as Diogenes fury and proud.

When present we love, and when absent agree,
I think not of Iris, nor Iris of me.

These measures are varied by many combinations, and sometimes by double ending, either with or without rhyme, as in the heroic measure.

To these measures, and their laws, may be reduced every species of English verse.

Our versification admits of few licences, except a synallepsis, or elision of e in the before a vowel, as th' eternal; and more rarely of o in to, as t' accept; and a sineretis; by which two short vowels coalesce into one syllable, as quevisu, speciis; or a word is contracted by the expulsion of a short vowel before a liquid, as aw'rice, temp'reance.

Thus have I collected rules and examples, by which the English language may be learned, if the reader be already acquainted with grammatical terms, or taught by a master to those that are more ignorant. To have written a grammar for such as are not yet initiated in the schools, would have been tedious, and perhaps at last ineffectual.
ADVERTISEMENT

TO THE

FOURTH EDITION.

MANY are the works of human industry, which to begin and finish are hardly granted to the same man. He that undertakes to compile a Dictionary, undertakes that, which, if it comprehends the full extent of his design, he knows himself unable to perform. Yet his labours, though deficient, may be useful, and with the hope of this inferior praise, he must incite his activity, and solace his weariness.

Perfection is unattainable, but nearer and nearer approaches may be made; and finding my Dictionary about to be reprinted, I have endeavoured, by a revisal, to make it less reprehensible. I will not deny that I found many parts requiring emendation, and many more capable of improvement. Many faults I have corrected, some superfluities I have taken away, and some deficiencies I have supplied. I have methodised some parts that were disordered, and illuminated some that were obscure. Yet the changes or additions bear a very small proportion to the whole. The critic will now have less to object, but the student who has bought any of the former copies needs not repent; he will not, without nice collation, perceive how they differ; and usefulness seldom depends upon little things.

For negligence or deficiency, I have perhaps not need of more apology than the nature of the work will furnish: I have left that inaccurate which never was made exact, and that imperfect which never was completed.
A

The first letter of the European alphabets, has, in the English language, three different sounds, which may be termed the broad, open, and slender.

The broad sound, resembling that of the German a, is found in many of our monosyllables, as all, wall, mall, shall, in which a is pronounced as aw in taw, or aw in law. Many of these words were formerly written with au, as fault, awalt; which happens to be still retained in faults. This was probably the ancient sound of the Saxons, since it is almost uniformly preserved in the ruffian pronunciation, and the Northern dialects, as maw for man, bounded for bond.

A open, not unlike the o of the Italians, is found in father, rather, and more obscurely in fancy, fajf, &c.

A slender or close, is the peculiar a of the English language, resembling the sound of the French e, masculine, or diphthong ai in paiz, or perhaps a middle sound found between them, or between the a and e; to this the Arabic a is said nearly to approach.

Of this sound we have examples in the words, place, face,raise, and all those that terminate in aue or aue as relation, nation, generation.

A is short, as, globe, grove; or long, as, glance, grace; it is marked long, generally, by an e final, place, or by an i added, as plain. The short a is open, the long close.

1. A, an article set before nouns of the singular number; a man, a tree; denoting the number one, as, a man is coming, that is, no more than one; or an indefinite indication, as, a man may come this way, that is, any man. This article has no plural signification. Before a word beginning with a vowel, it is written an, a, an ox, an egg, of which a is the contraction.

VOL. I.

2. A, taken materially, or for itself, is a noun; as, a great A, a little a.

3. A is placed before a participle, or participial noun; and is considered by Wallis as a contraction of at, when it is put before a word denoting some action not yet finished; as, I am a walking.

It also seems to be increasingly contracted from at, when placed before local names; as, Thomas a Becket. In other cases, it seems to signify to, like the French à.

A hunting Chloe went.

Prior.

May peace still number by these gushing fountains!

Fcustom.

Which we may ever year.

Find when we come a faling here.

Wettan.

Now the men fell a rubbing of armour, which a great while had lain oiled.

Wettan.

He will knap the spears a pieces with his teeth.

Mert's Amids Alm.

Another falls a ringing a Peternnus Nige, and judiciously distinguishes the sound of it to be modern.

Addison on Medals.

4. A has a peculiar signification, denoting the proportion of one thing to another.

Thus we say, The landlord hath a hundred a year; The ship's crew gained a thousand pounds a man.

The river Inn paffes through a wide open country, during all its course through Bavaria; which is a voyage of two days, after the rate of twenty leagues a day.

Addison on Italy.

5. A is used in burlesque poetry, to lengthen out a syllable, without adding to the sense.

For cloves and nutmegs to the line a.

And even for oranges to China.

Dryden.

6. A is sometimes, in familiar writings, put by a barbarous corruption for be; as, will a come, for will be come.

7. A, in composition, feems to have sometimes the power of the French a in these phrases, a droit, a gauche, &c, and sometimes to be contracred from as, as, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte, afte.

ABA

I gin to be a worry of the sun.

And with the state of the world were now undone.

Shakespeare's Much Ado.

And now a breeze from there began to blow.

The sailors ship their oars, and cesse to row.

Then hoist their yards a trip, and all their sails.

Let fall, to count the wind, and catch the gales.

Dryden's Cymon and Atheo.

A little house with trees a row.

And, like its matter, very low.

Pipe, Hor.

8. A is sometimes redundant; as, as, is, arofe, arose, arose; the same with rife, route, wake.

9. A, in abbreviations, stands for artium, or arts; as, A.B. master of arts, arthum magnifier; or, ano, as, A.D. anno dominii.

AB, at the beginning of the names of places, generally shows that they have some relation to an abbey, as Abingdon.

Gibbon.

ABACEK. adv. [from back.] Backwards.

Obiolute.

But when they came where thou thy skill didst show.

They drew aback, as half with shame confounded.

Spen. Paff.

ABACTOR. n. f. [Latin.] One who drives away or steals cattle in herds, or great numbers at once, in distinction from those that steal only a few.

Blount.

ABLESCUS. n. f. [Latin.]

1. A counting-table, anciently used in calculations.

2. [In architecture.] The uppermost member of a column, which figures as a foot of crowning both to the capital and column.

Dibr.

ABEFT. adv. [of abyexan, Sax. behind.]

From the fore-part of the ship, towards the stern.

Dibr.

ABASANCE. n. f. [from the French abasuer, to depress, to bring down.] An act of reverence, a bow. Obscuration is considered by Skinner as a corruption of abasance, but is now universally used.
To ABALIENATE. v. a. [from abalize, Lat.] To make that another's which was our own before. A term of the civil law, not much used in common speech. Abalization, n. s. [Lat. abalizatio]. The act of giving up one's right to another person; or a making over an estate, goods, or chattels by sale, or due course of law. Ditto.

To ABANDON, v. a. [A word contracted from abandon, but not now in use. See A-band.] To forsake. They were abandoned, or was, than which they fought at first their helping hand, and Voritger enforced the kingdom to abandon.

To ABANDON, v. a. [fr. abandon.] Derived, according to Menage, from the Italian abandonare, which signifies to forsake his colours; bandum [oxeillum] desertus. Faquier thinks it is a coalition of a ban donner, to give up to a proscription; in which sense we, at this day, mention the ban of the empire. Ban, in our own old dialekt, signifies a curf; and to abandon, if considered as compounded between French and Saxon, is exactly equivalent to diri deponente.

1. To give up, resign, or quit; often followed by the particle to.
   a. To render oneself to sorrow, as it is spoken, the never will admit me. Shakspe. Twelfth Night.
   b. The passive gods behold the Greeks' deeds. Their temple, and abandon to the spoil their own abodes; we fleeh free, confine To save a sinking town, involve'd in fire. Dryd. Aenid.
   c. Who is he so abandoned to forfeit his credulity, as to think, that a cloud of earth in a sickle, may ever, by eternal shaking, receive the fabric of man's body? Boccaccio's. Sermone. Much be, whole altars on the Phrygian throne, with frequent rites, and pure, sow'd thy pow'r, Be deem'd the worth of human life to prove, Unblest! abandoned to the wrath of Jove! Pope's Odyssey, b. i. l. 80.

2. To defect; to forsake in an ill sense.
   a. The princes using the passions of fearing evil, and defining to escape, only to serve the rule of virtue, not to abandon one's self, leapt to a rib of the ship. Sidney, b. ii. ii. Seeing the last flag rust, Left and abandoned of his velvet friends, 'Tis right, quothe he; thus misier doth part The flux of company, broke shep, As you like it. What fate a wretched fugitive attends, Scorn'd by my foes, abandoned by my friends. Dryd. Aenid, 2.
   b. But to the parting goddess thus the pray'z
   Perpetual will be present to my mind.
   Nor quite abandon your once-fav'd maid. Dryd. Fables.

3. To forsake, to leave.
   a. And bold speaks Sir knight, if knight thou be.
   Abandon this forsaken place at erst.
   For fear of further harm, I counsel thee. Spenser's Fairy Queen, b. ii. cent. 4. flav. 39.
   To abandon over, v. a. [a form of writing not usual, perhaps not exact.] To give up to, to resign.
   b. Look on me as an abandoned 'd ster.
   To an eternal lethargy of love; To pull, and pinch, and wound me, cannot cure, And but disturb the quiet of my death. Dryd. Sp. Friar.

Abandoned, particip. adj. Corrupted in the highest degree; as, an abandoned wretch. In this sense, it is a contraction of a longer form, abandoned [given up] to wickedness.

Abandoning. [A verbal noun from abandon.] Defension, forfaking.
   a. He hop'd his past meritorious actions might outweigh his present abandoning the thought of future recompense. Dryd. Aenid.

Abandonment, n. s. [abandonment, Fr.] 1. The act of abandoning.
   a. The statute of being abandoned. Ditto.
   b. If from, and articulis, a joint, Lat.] A good and apt construction of the bones, by which they move strongly and easily; or that species of articulation that has manifest motion. Ditto.

To Aba'se, v. a. [fr. abaissfer, from the Lat. baissat, or baissat, a barbarous word, signifying low, base.] 1. To depress, to lower.
   a. It is a point of cunning to wait upon him with whom you speak with your eyes; yet with a duere abasing of it sometimes. Bacon.
   b. To call down, to depress, to bring low; in a figurative and personal sense, which is the common use.
   By the gods that are thankful, that thy advancement their widows have theabased. Sidney, b. i. 7.
   Behold every one that is proud, and abase him. Job. xli. 11.
   With unrefr'd the monarch reigns;
   He levels mountains, and he raises plains; And, not regarding difference of degree, Abais'd thy daughter, and exalted me. Lock. Aenid.

Abased, adj. [with heralds] a term used of the wings of eagles, when the top looks downwards towards the point of the shield; or when the wings are flat; the natural way of bearing them being spread with the top pointing to the chief of the angle. Baily's Chambers.

Abasement, n. s. The state of being brought low; the act of bringing low; depression.
   a. There is an abasement because of glory; and there is that lifteth his head from a low estate. Erithocytos. xx. 11.

To Abash, v. a. [See Baseful. Perhaps from abaissfer, French.] 1. To put into confusion; to make ashamed. It generally implies a sudden impression of shame.
   a. They heard, and were abash'd. Milton's Paradise Regained, b. i. 331.
   This head, th' impious queen fat maim'd with fear, Nor further durst incite the gloomy thunderer. Silence was in the court at this rebuke: Nor could the gods, abash'd, sustain their love-ly reign. Dryd. Fables.

2. The passive admits the particle at, sometimes of, before the causal noun.
   a. In no wise speak against the truth, but be abash'd of the error of thy ignorance. Ecles. lv. 25.
   I said unto her, From whence is this kid? Is it not stolen? But she replying upon me, it was given for a gift, more than the wages however, I did not believe her, and I was abash'd at her. 1 Sam. xi. 13, 14.

In the 3d nitraction only of weak minds.
   a. Captive: cease to admire, and all her plumes fell flat, and sink into a trivial toy. At every sudden flighting quite abash'd. Milton's Paradise Regained, b. i. 233.

The little Cupids how ringounding,
   As pictures prove with garlands crown'd,
   Aush'd at what they saw and heard,
   Flow off, or ever more appear'd.
   Swift's Miscellaneous.

To ABATE. v. a. [from the French abatter, to beat down.] 1. To leffen, to diminish.
   a. Who can tell whether the divine wisdom, to abate the glory of those kings, did not refer this work to be done by a queen, that it might appear to be his own immediate work? Sir John Davies on Ireland.
   b. If you did know to whom I gave the ring, And how unwillingly I left the ring, You would abate the strength of your disfavour.
   Shakespeare.

Here we see the hopes of great benefit and light from expeditors and contumacys, are in a great part abated; and those who have no mind of their help, can receive but little from them. Locke's Essay on St. Paul's Ephesians.

2. To deject, or depref the mind.
   This iron work
   Brings down the stoutest hearts to lowest state: For misery doth breave minds abate.
   Spens. Hobard's Tale.

Have the power fill
   To banish your defects, fill at length
   Your ignorance deliver you,
   As molt abated captives to some nation
   That won you without blows!
   Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

Time, that changes all, yet changes us in vain,
   The body, not the mind; nor can control
   Th' immortal vigour, or abate the soul.
   Dryd. Aenid.

3. In commerce, to let down the price in selling, sometimes to beat down the price in buying.
To ABATE. v. n.

1. To grow less; as, his passion abated; the form abates. It is used sometimes with the particle of before the thing lessened.
   Our physicians have observed, that in process of time, some diseases have abated of their virulence, and, have, in a manner, worn out their malignity, so as to be no longer mortal.
   Dryd.'s Hind and Panther.

2. In common law.
   It is in law used both actively and nesterly as: to abate a right, to beat it down. To abate a writ, is, by some exception, to defeat or overthrow it. A stranger abates, that is, entereth upon a house or land void by the death of him that left possessed it, before he take his portion, and so keepeth him out. Wherefore, as he that puttest out him in possession, it saile to diffie a: he that keepeth in between the former possessor and his heir is said to abate, or to be devestated in the nearer satisfaction thus: The writ of the demandment shall abate, that is, shall be disposed of, frustrated, or overthrown. The appeal abated by covin, that is, that the ascension is defeated by the former covin.

3. In horfmanship.
   A horse is said to abate or take down his curves; when working upon curvets, he puts his hind legs to the ground both at once, and observe the fame exactness in all the times.
   Ditto.

Abatement, n. s. [abatement, Fr.] 1. The act of abating or lessening.
   Xenophon tells us, that the city contained about ten thousand houses, and allowing one man to have house, who could have any share in the government (the rest confining of women, children, and servants), and making other obvious abatements, those tyrants, if they had been careful to adhere together, might have been a majority even of the people collective.

Swift. in the Congress of Athens and Rome.

2. The fate of being abated.

Coffee, in common with all nuts, an oil strongly combined and entangled with earthly particles. The most noxious part of oil exhalates in roasting, to the abatement of near one quarter of its weight. Addition In Aliments.

3. The sum or quantity taken away by the act of abating.

The law of works is that law, which requires perfect obedience, without remission or abatement; so that, by that law, a man cannot be just, or justified, without an exact performance of every little.

Locke.

4. The cause of abating; extenuation.

At our advantages towards preaching and promoting pious and virtuous works were greater than those of other men; so will our excuse be less, if we neglect to make use of them. We cannot plead in abatement of our guilt, that we were ignorant of our duty, or of the punishment of it, and the bias of a wrong education. Addition in Senten.

5. [In law.] The act of the abator; as, the abatement of the heir into the land before he hath agreed with the lord. The affection or passion of the thing abated; as, abatement of the writ. Cowell.

6. [With heralds.] An accidental mark, which being added to a coat of arms, the dignity of it is abated, by reason of some ilia or unbecomely quality of the wearer. Addition.

Abbatar, n. f. The agent or cause by which an abatement is procured; that by which any thing is lessened.

Abbatar. n. f. [a law term.] One who intrudes into houses or land, void by the death of the former possessor, and yet not entered upon or taken up by his heir. Dict.

Abbatare, n. f. [from abbatre, French.] Those fpirits of grns which are thrown down by a stag in his passing by. Dict.

Abb. n. f. The yarn on a weaver's warp; a term among clothiers. Chamberl.

ABB. A. [Heb. ab.] A Syriac word, which signifies father.

Abbacy, n. [Lat. abbatia.] The rights or privileges of an abbey. See Abbey.

According to Fellenus, an abbacy is the dignity itself, since an abbacy is a term of word of dignity, and not of office; and, therefore, even a secular person, who has the care of souls, is sometime, in the canon law, así's titled an abbacy.

Ashby's Paragon Juris Canoni.

Abbess, n. f. [Lat. abbatisa, from whence the Saxon abby-bry, then probably ab- bate, and by contraction abbis, and to Fr. and abbé, Eng.] The superior or governor of a nunery or monastery of women.

They fled Into this abbey, whither we pursued them; And here the abbis shuts the gate on us, And will not suffer us toetch him out. Shaksp. Com. of Errors.

1. I have a sister, abbis in Terence, Who left her lover on her brid-day.

Dyce, D. Shaksp.

Confinada, as soon as the separities of her reception were over, retired with the abbis into her own apartment. Addition.

Abbey, or Abbey, n. f. [Lat. abbatisa; from whence probably first * Abbey,* which see.] A monastery of religious persons, whether men or women; differing largely from religious houses of other denominations by larger privileges. See Abbot.

With easy roads he came to Ledeles; Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot, With all his convent, honourably rec'd him. Shaksp.

Abb'ry-Lubber. n. f. [See Lubber.]

A fruitful loiterer in a religious house, under pretence of retirement and authority.

This is no Father Dominic, no huge overgrown abbis-lubber; this is but a diminutive flocking friar. Drye, Sp.

A'BOUT. n. f. [in the lower Latin abbotus, from phater, which fene was also implied; so that the abbots were called pateres, and abbeses materes monasterii. Thus Fortunatus to the abbot Paterinus: Nomini officiis firmum, Paterne, geriti. The chief of a convent, or fellowship of canons. Of these, some in England were mitred, some were尼 that were mitred, were exempted from the jurisdiction of the diocesan, having in themselves episcopal authority within their precincts, and being also lords of parliaments. The other were subject to the diocesan in all spiritual government.

See Abbey.

To A'BREVIATE. v. a. [Lat. abbreviari.] To abbreviate or reduce the usual or stated expression. To give up right; to resign; to lay down an office.

Old Saturn, here, with upcast eyes. Beheld his abbified eyes.

A'BREVIATION, n. f. [abbreviatio, Lat.] The act of abbreviating; renunciation; quitting an office by one's own proper act before the usual or stated expiration.

Neither doth it appear how a prince's abdication can make any other sort of vacancy in the throne, than would be caused by his death; since because an abbis for his church and otherwise than his own consent in form to a bill from the two houses. Swift on the Sentiments of a Church of England Man.

A'B' D ICAT IVE. adj. That which causes or implies an abdication. Dict.

A'B ICCAT I V E. adj. [from abde, to hide.] That which has the power or quality of hiding. Dict.

A'B'D'O'MEN. n. f. [Lat. from abde, to hide.] A cavity commonly called the lower venter or belly; It contains the stomach, guts, liver, spleen, bladder, and is within lined with a membrane called the peritoneum. The lower part is called the hypogastrum; the foremost part is divided into the epigastrum, the right and left hypochondria, and the navell; 'tis bounded above by the car- tilage eniformis and the epidiaphragm, sideways by the flout or lower ribs, and below by the ventralis of the last rib, the bones of the coxofemur, that of the pubis, and os sacrum. It is covered with few ral muscles, from whose alternate relaxations and contractions in respiration, digestion is forwarded, and the due motion of all the parts therein contained promoted, both for secretion and expul-

Quinley.

The abdemon conflicts of parts containing and containing. Welch's Surgery.

A'B'D'O'MINAL. adj. Relating to the ab-

A'B'D'O'MOUS. adj. Same.

To A'B'D'U'CE. v. a. [Lat. abduce.] To draw to a different part; to withdraw one part from another. A word chiefly ued in phyric or science.
A

B

A B E
If we abduct the eye unto either corner, the object will not duplicate; for in that position, the axis of the cones remain in the same plane, as is demonstrated to be done by Galen.
Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 20.
A B D U C T E N T. adj. Muscles abundant are those which serve to open or pull back divers parts of the body; their opposites being called adduct.

D u t i .
A B D U C T I O N. n. f. [adducit, Lat.] The art of drawing apart, or withdrawing one part from another.

2. A particular form of argument.
A B D U C T O R. n. f. [adductus, Lat.] The name given by anatomists to the muscles, which serve to draw back the several members.
He supposed the constrictors of the eye-lids must be strengthened in the supercilious; the adductors in drunkards, and contemplative men, who have the same stolid and grave motion of the eye.
Abbeinos and Popes, Martianus Scribulator.
A B E C D A R I A N. n. f. [from the names of a, b, c, d, the three first letters of the alphabet.] He who teaches or learns the alphabet, or first rudiments of literature.
This word is used by Wood in his Athenae Oxonienses, where mentioning Farnaby the critic, he relates, that, in some part of his life, he was reduced to follow the trade of an abecedarian by his necessity.
A B E C E D A R Y. adj. [See A B E C D A R I A N.]
1. Belonging to the alphabet.
2. Inscribed with the alphabet.
This is pretended from the sympathy of two needles touched with the lodestone, and placed in the center of two abecedary circles, or rings of letters, described round about them, one friend keeping one, and another the other, and agreeing upon any hour wherein they will communicate.
Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 3.
A B E D. adv. [from a, for, at, and, in, bed.] In bed.
It was a shame for them to mar their compositions, yea, and conditions too, with long lying abed: when she was of age, she would have made a handkerchief by that time old.
Sidney, b. ii.
She has not been abed, but in her chapel.
All night devoutly watch'd.
Dodd. Span. Friar.
A B E R R A N C E. n. f. [from aborre, Lat.
A B E R R A N C Y. n. f. To wander from the right way.
A deviation from the right way, an error; a mistake; a false opinion.
They do not only swear with errors, but vice depending thereon. Thus they commonly affect no man further than he defects his reason, or complies with their absurdities.
Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. i. c. 2.
A B E R R A N T. adj. [from aberrans, Lat.
Deviating, wandering from the right or proper way.
A B E R R A T I O N. n. f. [from aberratio, Lat.
The act of deviating from the common or from the right track.
If it be a mistake, there is no hereby in such an harmless aberration; the probability of it will render it of easy of yarson.
Glanvill's Specifs Scientificus, c. 11.
A B E R R I N G. part. [from the verb abbere, of aborre, Lat.] Wandering, going astray.
The verb aberre I have found no example.
Divers were out in their accounts, aberring several ways from the true and just, and came to that one year, which perhaps might be another.
Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 12.

To A B E R N S C A T U S, a. a. [aversione, Lat.
To pull up by the roots; to extirpate utterly.

To A B E T T E R. w. n. [from bene, Sax. signifying to entangle and animate.] To pull forward another, to support him in his designs by converse, encouragement, or help. It was one indifferent, but is almost always taken by modern writers in an ill sense: as may be seen in Abetter.
To abetter signifies, in our common law, as much as to encourage or incite to.
Cowel.
Thou shalt I soon, quoth he, return again, after that villain's base defilement, and shortly back return.
Fair Fores, b. i.
A widow who by solemn vows, Contracted to me, for my spouse, Complied with her, to break her word, and has abated all.
Hudibras, p. iii. cant. 3.
Men lay too great weight upon right opinions, and exhorters of abetting, that they account the chiding of Parliament, and Drag of Peace.
They abetted both parties in the civil war, and always furnished supplies to the weaker side, lest there should be an end to these fatal divisions.
Addison, Spectator, No. 53.
A B E T T E R , or A B E T T O R . n. f. He that abets; the supporter or encourager of another.
Whilst calumny has two such potent abetters, we are not to wonder at its growth; as long as men are malicious and designing, they will be traducers.
Governs of the Tongue.
You shall be still plain Torridonism with me,
Th' abettor, partner (if you like the name),
The husband of a tyrant, that blood is long,
Till you deserve that title by your justice.
Dryden's Spanish Friar.
These confederations, though they may have no influence in the minds of the people, may yet so far into the minds of those who are abettors, and who, if they escape punishment here, must know, that these several melancholic days will be one day laid to their charge.
A B E Y A N C E. n. f. [from the French abyer, allatrer, to bark at.]
That word, in Littleton, cap. Discontinuance, is thus used. The right of fee-simple in lie in abeyance, when it is all only in the remembrance, intent, and consideration of the law. The frank tenement of the glebe of the parsonage, is in no man during the time that the parsonage is void, but is in abeyance.
Cowel.
A B C R A G I O N. n. f. [agregatio, Lat.
A separation from the flock.

To A B H O R , w. a. [abhorre, Lat.
To hate; to abhor to extirpate; to abominate.
When I was big in clamour, came a man,
Who having seen me in my wofly state,
Shan'd my abhorre's society.
Jully thou abhorre.
That son, on the quiet state of men
Such trouble brought, affecting to subdue
National liberty.
Mills, Parad. Lost, b. xii. l. 79.

G C R Y .
A B I
The self-same thing they will abhor.
One way, and long another.

A church of England man abhor the humour of the age, in delighting to fling scandal upon the clergy in general; which, besides the disgrace to the reformation, and to religion itself, calls an ignominy upon the kingdom.
Swift. C. of Brg.
A B H O R R E N C Y .
A B H O R R E N T. adj. [from abborre,]
1. The act of abhorring, detestation.
It draws upon him the hatred and abhorrence of all men here; and subjects him to the wrath of God hereafter.

2. The disposition to abhor, hatred.
Even a just and necessary anxiety does, by giving men acquaintance with war, take off somewhat from the abhorrence of it, and indubitably dispose them to hostilities.
Decay of Piety.
The first tendency to any injustice that appears must be supplicated with a show of wonder and abhorrence in the parents and government.
Locke on Education, § 130.
A B H O R R E N T. adj. [from abborre,]
1. Struck with abhorrence or something.
For if the worlds in words inclin'd could on his fen's hurt, he would abhorre turn.
Thomson's Summer, l. 150.
2. Contrary to, foreign, inconfident with.
It is used with the particles from or to, but more properly from.
This I conceive to be an hypothesis, well worthy a rational belief; and yet it is so abhorrent from the vulgar, that they would as soon believe Anaxagoras, that snow is black, as him that should affirm it is not white.
Glanvill's Specifs Scientificus, c. 12.
Why then these foreign thoughts of state employments?
Abhorrent is your function and your breeding?
Poor droning truant of unpractical'd cells,
Bred in the fellowship of bearded boys,
What wonder is it if you know not men?
Dryden.
A B H O R R E R. n. f. [from abborre,]
The person that abhors; a hater, defetter.
The lower clergy were rated as, for disputing the power of the bishops, by the known abhorrens of episcopacy, and abjured for doing nothing in the conversations, by the very men who wanted to bind up their hands.
Swift. Examiner, No. 21.
A B H O R R I N G .
The object of abhorrence.
This seems not to be the proper use of the participial noun.
They shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against Me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.
Isaih, livi. 44.

A B I D E . w. n. I abide or abid. [from bibian, or aubibian, Sax.]
1. To dwell in a place; not remove; to stay.
Thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father forever. Now therefore I pray thee, lest thy servant abide instead of the lad, a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.
Gen. xliiv. 33, 35.
2. To dwell.
The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled to Richmond, in the parts where he abides.
Shaksp. Richard III.
Those who apply themselves to learning, are forced to acknowledge one Gore incorruptible and unbegotten; who is the only true being, and abide for ever above the highest heavens, from whence He beholds all the things that are done in heaven and earth.
3. To
Citt with circumstantial thies,
He fell calamitous contraint abides.

ASDM. n. f. [from abide.] The person that abides or dwells in a place, perhaps that lives or endures. A word little in use.

AIDEING. n. f. [from abide.] Continuance; stay; fixed state.
We are strangers among Thee and our fathers, as were all our fathers; our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding.

The air in that region is so violently moved, and carried about with such swiftness, as nothing in that place can stand or have abiding.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

AJECT. adj. [abjedat, Lat. thrown away as of no value.]
1. Mean; worthless; base; groveling; spoken of persons, or their qualities.
2. Rebellion.
3. Mean and deplorable; used of actions.
4. The state the example stands.

ABJURATION. n. f. [from abjure.] The act of abjuring. The oath taken for that end.

ABJUARY. n. f. [from abjure.] The act of abjuring. The oath taken for that end.

ABJURATION. n. f. [from abjure.] The act of abjuring. The oath taken for that end.
To ABLA'CTATE. v. a. [ablacate, Lat.]
To send abroad upon some employment; to send out of the way.
Dict.

ABLA'CTION. n. f. [from ablactate.] The act of sending abroad.

ABLENESS. n. f. [from able.] Ability of body or mind, vigour, force.

ABLEPSY. n. f. [ablapsy, Gr.] Want of sight, blindness; unadvisedness.

ABLIGRUI'TION. n. f. [abligruritio, Lat.] Prodigious expense on meat and drink.

To A'BLEGATE. v. a. [ablego, Lat.] To tie up from.

To A'BLOCATE. v. a. [abloque, Lat.] To let out to hire.

Perhaps properly by him who has hired it from another.

Calvin's Lexicon Juridicum.

ABLOCA'TIO. n. f. [ablactio, Lat.] A letting out to hire.

To AB'OLE. v. n. [ablobe, Lat.] To be unlike.

A'B'LUNT. adj. [ablautus, Lat. from ablauo, to walk away.] 1. That which washes clean.
2. That which has the power of cleaning.

ABLU'TION. n. f. [abluctio, Lat.] The act of cleaning, or washing clean.

There is a natural analogy between the ablutions of the body and the purification of the soul; between eating the holy bread and drinking the sacred chalice, and a participation of the body and blood of Christ.

Taylor's Weekly Communicant.

The water used in washing.

Wash'd by the hasty wave, the plious train Are clean'd, and cast th' ablution in the main.

Pope's Thracis.

The ablution or renunciation of all his own holds and interests, and trufts of all that man is mutifi apt to depend upon, that he may the more expeditly follow Christ.

Hammond.

ABODA'TION. n. f. [abodatio, Lat.] The act of cutting away knots from trees: a term of gardening.

Dict.

ABODA'GUS. adj. [abogatus, Lat. out of rule.] Irregular, mihapen.

ABORD. adv. [a sea-terr. but adopted into common language] Applied immediately from the French a bord, as, aller a bord, esquerre a bord. Bord is itself a word of very doubtful original, and perhaps, in its different acceptations, deducible from different roots. Borp, in the ancient Saxon, signified a bond; in which sense, to go abroad, is to take up residence in a ship.

1. In a ship.

To ABODE. v. n. [abode, Lat.;] To stay.

He loudly call'd to such as were abroad, The little bark unto the shore to draw, And him to ferry over that deep ford.

Sir W. Replig's Effays, b. viii. c. 6.

He might land them, if it pleased him, or otherwise keep them abroad.

And let the sport, if possible, be taken, Sir John Hawkins.

2. Into a ship.

When morning roys, I sent my mates to bring Supplies of water from a neighb'ring spring, With all the motions of the wind: expul'd; Then fummon'd in my crew, and went abroad.

Shakspere's Tempest, b. iii.

But I know thy abode and thy going out, and thy coming in.

2 Kings, xii. 27.

Others may use the ocean as their road; Only the English use the land.

Whose ready falls with every wind can fly, And make a cov'rant with th' inconfant sky.

Waller.

3. To make abode. To dwell, to reside, to inhabit.

Deep in a cave the Sibyl makes abode;

Thence full of fate returns, and of the God.

—Sir John Hawkins, b. iii.

To AN'BOLE. v. a. [See Bode.] To foretoken or foretell; to be a prognostic, to be ominous. It is taken, with its derivatives, in the sense either of good or ill.

To every man After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd; and, not confounding, Broke into a general prophecy, that this tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, abode To the golden breach of it.

Shakspere, Henry VIII.

To AN'OENT. v. a. [from abone, Lat.] A secret anticipation of something future; an impression of the mind from some event to come; propheticism; omen.

I like not this.

For many men that tumble at the threshold, Are well forc'd, that danger lurks within.

—Tillot. in abominations must not now abut us.

Shakspere's Henry VI. i. 2. 3.

My lord bishop asked him, Whether he had never any secret abode in his mind? Not reply'd the duke; but I think some adventure may take place as well as another man.

Wotton.

To A'BOLISH. v. a. [abolish, Latin.] 1. To annul; to make void. Applied to laws or institutions.

For us to abolish what he hath established, were profanation most intolerable. Hooker, b. vi. c. 10.

On the parliament's part it was proposed, that all the bishops, deans, and chapters, might be immediately taken away, and abolished.

Arundel, b. viii.

To put an end to, to destroy.

The long continued wars between the English and the Scots, had then raised invaluable jea- looses and haunts, which long continued peace hath since abolished.

That shall Pervoeles will requite, I wot, And, with thy abode, abolish to reproachful blot.

Fairy Queen.

More destroy'd than they.

We should be quite abolish'd and engi'd.

Milton.
Pride goes, hated, cursed, and abominated by all.

We are not guilty of your injuries, but do abhor, Abominable, and hath this curse. Southern's Crotalia.

He professed both to abominate and despise all mystery, refinement, and intricacies, either in princes or ministers. Swift's

ABOMINATION. n. f.

1. Hatred, detestation.

To abhor, the thing that is abominable.

To abhor, detest, hate utterly

To abominate, n. a. [abominable, Lat.]

To abhor, detest, hate utterly

The Queen and ministry might easily redress this abominable, offensive, and detestable vice by appointing a suitable person to assume the functions of a virtuous ministrant. Swift's Preface for the Advancement of Religion.

2. Unclean.
The soul that toucheth any unclean beast, or any unclean abominable, whether dead or alive, even that soul shall be cut off from his people. Leviticus, viii. 21.

3. In low and ludicrous language, it is a word of loose and indeterminate censure. They say you are a malicious fellow. I am so; I do love it no more than laughter. Those that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse than drudgery. Addison's Spectator.

ABOMINABLENESS. n. f. [from abominable.]
The quality of being abominable; hateful, odiousness.

The sight we have proved, in its proper place, the eternal and essential difference between virtue and vice, we must forbear to urge abhorrers with the corruption and abominable of their principles. Bentley's Sermon.

ABOMINABLY. adv. [from abominable.]
A word of low or familiar language, signifying excrecibly, extremely, exceedingly; in an ill sense. It is not often literally used.

I was moved great abases and disorders in your family; your servants are mutinous and quarrelsome, and chest you most abominably. Addington.

To ABOMINATE, n. a. [abominator, Lat.]
To abhor, detest, hate utterly

ABOR.'ELY. adv. [from abortive.]
Born without the due time; immaturely, untimely.

ABORTIVENESS. n. f. [from abortive.]
The state of abortion.

ABORTMENT. n. f. [from abort.]
The thing brought forth out of time; an untimely birth.

Conceited women, now left to mankind, shall be brought into use by the industry of converted patients, whose wretched cases the Imperial laws declare, as untimely births, to the worms of the world; in whose womb they defected mineral riches must ever lie buried as lost abortiveness, unless those be made the active midwives to deliver them.

Bacon's Physical Remains.

ABOVE. prep. [from a., and, buoyan. Saxon; boven, Dutch.]
To a higher place; in a higher place.

To ascend the stage a step higher.

The bubbling waters from the bottom rise; the brims they force their way with; black vapours climb above, and cloud the day. Lyc. viii. 465.

2. More in quantity or number.
Every one that paffeth among them, that are numbered from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the Lord.

Exod. xxx. 14.

3. In a superiour degree, or to a superiour degree of rank, power, or excellence.
The Lord is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens. Ps. cxlii. 4.

The public power of all focieties is above every soul contained in the same societies. Hobbes, b. 1.

There is no riches above a sound body, and no joy above the joy of the heart. Eccl. viii. 16.

'To her
They did reign thy manhood, and the place
Wherein God for thee above her, made of thee,
A superiour; whose election far excelled
Hers, in all real dignity.

Miller's Paradise Lost, b. x. i. 147.

Lest now she think thee the rest,
And feeds with secret joy her fluent breath. Dryden's Aeneis.

4. In a state of being superior to; untainable by.

It is an old and true diffinition, that things may be above our reach, without being contrary to it. Of this kind are the laws of nature, and the universal presence of God, with innumerable other points. Swift's

5. Beyond; more than.
We were preified out of measure, above strength; insomuch that we despairs even of life. 2 Cor. I. 2.

In having thoughts unconfounded, and being able to...
ABO

to distinguish one thing from another; where there is but the least difference, confounds the exactness of judgment and clears of reason, which is in one man above another.

6. Too proud for; too high for. A phrase chiefly used in familiar expression.

Kings and princes, in the earlier ages of the world, laboured in arts and occupations, and were above everything that tended to promote the conveniences of life.

Joan's Odyssey, note.

ABOVE, adv.

1. Over-head; in a higher place.

2. In the regions of heaven.

Your praise the birds shall chant in every grove.

3. Before. [See ABOVE-CITED.]

I fold above, that these two machines of the balance, and the dird, were only ornamental, and that the success of the dice had been the fame without them.

Dryden, Aemid.

ABOVE ALL.

In the first place; chiefly.

I studied Virgil's design, his disposition of it, his manners, his judicious management of the figures, the fober refhrnings of his fene, which always leaves something to gratify our imagination, on which it may or may not relish at pleasure; but above all, the elegance of his expression, and the harmony of his numbers.

Dryden's Dedication to the Aemid.

ABOVE-BOARD.

1. In open fight; without artifice or trick.

A figurative expression, borrowed from gamblers, who, when they put their hands under the table, are changing their cards. It is used only in familiar language.

It is the part of an honest man to deal above-board, and without tricks.

L'Estrange.

2. Without deign or concealment.

Though there has been nothing wanting such hereunto, as have professed these unworthy arts, for as much as there have been villains in all places and ages, yet now-a-days they are owned above-board.

Swift's Sermons.

ABOVE-CITED. Cited before. A figurative expression, taken from the ancient manner of writing books on scrolls; where whatever is cited or mentioned before in the same page, must be above.

It appears from the authority above-cited, that this is a fact confused by heathens themselves.

Addison, the Christian Religion.

ABOVE-GROUND. An expression used to signify alive; not in the grave.

ABOVE-MENTIONED. See ABOVE-CITED.

I do not remember, that Homer any where falls into the faults above-mentioned, which were indeed the false refinements of later ages.

Addison, Spectator, No. 279.

ABO

To ABOUND, v. t. [abound, L. abundare, French.]

1. To have in great plenty; to be copiously. It is used sometimes with the particle in, and sometimes the particle with.

The king-becoming graces,
I have no reft of them, but abound
In the division of each fatal crime.

Acting in many ways. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Corn, wine, and oil, are wanting to this ground,

in which our countries fruitfully abound.

Cicero's Chief of Hebrews.

A faithful man shall abound with bleftings:
but that he maketh his house rich, shall not be innocent.

Prov. xxviii. 20.

Now that languages are made, and abound with words standing for combinations, an usual way of getting complex ideas, is by the explication of those terms that stand for them.

Loch.

2. To be in great plenty.

And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

Matthew, xix. 13.

Words are like leaves, and where they moft abound,
Much fruit of serene beneft is rarely found.

Joan's Elegy on Crathelin.

ABO'UT. prep. [abut, or abuton, Sax., which seems to signify encircling on the outside.]

1. Round, surrouding, encircling.

Let not mercy and truth forfake thee. Bind them about thy neck; write them upon the tables of thy heart.

Heb. iv. 12.

2. Near to.

Speak unto the congregation, saying, get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

Exod. xvii. 17.

Loch.

3. Concerning, with regard to, relating to.

When Conflantine had finifhed an house for the service of God at Jerusalem, the dedication he judged a matter not unworthy, about the following performance whereof, the greatest part of the bishops in Chriftendom should meet together.

Haller.

The painter is not to take so much pains about the drapery as about the face where the principal resemblance lies.

Dryden.

They are most frequently used as words equivalent, and do both of them indifferently signify either a speculative knowledge of things, or a practical skill about them, according to the exigency of the matter or thing spoken of.

Swift, St. Sermon.

Thrift is alfo a fine, although the particular species of it, and the denomination of particular acts, doth fuppofe positive laws about dominion and property.

Stillingfate.

Children should always be heard, and fairly and kindly answered, when they ask after any thing they would know, and defire to be informed about.

Curiosity should be as carefully cherished in children, as other appetites suppressed.

Leake.

It is hath been established as a method of making men's court, when they are asked about the rate of lands, the abilities of tenants, the state of trade, to answer that all things are in a flourishing

Stewart's View of Ireland.

4. In a state of being engaged in, or employed upon.

Our blessed Lord was pleased to command the reprefentation of his death and facrifice on the cross should be made by breaking of bread and eafion of wine; to signify to us the nature and sacrements of the liturgy we are about.

Taylor.

Labour, for labour's fake, is against nature.

The understanding of all are the other faculries, choafs always the prettiest way to its end, would profertently obtain the knowledge it is about, and then let upon some new enquiry. But this, whether laziness or haste, often miffleads

Loch.

Our armies ought to be provided with secretaries, to tell their story in plain English, and to let us know, in our mother tongue, what is our brave countr ymen are about.

Addison, Spelt. No. 309.

5. Appendant to the person; as cloaths.

If you have this about you, as I will give you when we go, you may boldly affault the accencers' houses.

Milton's Comus.

It is not strange to me, that persons of the faire fex should like, in all things about them, that handfomeflances for which they find themselves moft liked.

Boyle on Colours.

6. Relating to the person, as an act or office.

Liking very well the young gentleman, fuch I took him to be, admitted this Delphiantus about me, who well fhowed me, that it was no service like his that ferves he loves and beholds.

Swift, A Reliant of Armida.

7. Relating to person, as an act or office.

Good corporal, for my old dame's sake, fland my friend; the hath no body to do any thing about her when I am gone, and he is old and cannot help herself.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

ABO'UT, adv.

1. Circularly, in a round; circum.

The wayward fitters, hand in hand,

Bothers of the fea and land,

Thus do also, and the two worlds about, and I am about no walter, I am about thirti.

Shakespeare.

2. In circuit, in compass.

I'll tell you what I am about—Two yards and more.—No quips now, Pitifal; indeed I am in the wall two yards about; but I am about no walter, I am about thirti.

Shakespeare.

A run about in my pillar here,

A polifh'd mirror none but half fo clear.

Dryden, Fables.

3. Nearly; cirular.

When the boats were come within about forty yards of the piling, that bound themselves all round, and could go no farther, yet so as they might move to go about, but might not approach nearer.

Bacon's New Atlantis.

4. Here and there; every way; circa.

Up rode the gentle virgin from her place,

And looked all about, if the myffy

Her lovely knight.

Dryden. A Reliant.

5. With to before a verb; as, about to fly.

Son of the dying lovers, and their living sons, Suspend the furface, and silence the gods; Beauty and youth, about to perish, finds

Such noble pity in brave English minds.

Waller.

6. Round; the longest way, in opposition to the short straight way.

Child had there. In him; greatness of weight, closeness of parts; fascination, plainsomeness, or holliness; immunity from falt; colour, and fincture of yellow: Therefore the true way (though most about) to make gold, is to know the causes of the several natures before rehearsed.

Bacon's Natural Hist. No. 328.

Spies of the Volcicm.

Who held me in charity, that I was fuced to wheel

Three
Abru'ted. adj. [abruptus, Lat. a word little in use.] Broken off suddenly. The effects of their activity are not precipitously abrupted, but gradually proceed to their consummation. Brown's Familiar Quotations. Emp. v. 10.

Abruption. n. s. [abruptus, Lat.] Breaking off, violent and sudden separation. Those joints which are inlaid in stone, marble, or such other solid matter, being difficulty separable from it, because of its cohesion to all sides of them, ceases commonly of that matter still adhering to them, or at least marks of its absorption from them, on all their faces. Woodward's Nat. Hist. iv. 4.

Abru'tty. adv. [See A'brupt.] Hastily, without the due forms of preparation. The sweetness of virtue's disposition, jealous even over itself, suffered her not to enter abruptly into questions of Mufidus. Sidney, b. ii. Now milling from their joy so lately found, So lately found, and to abruptly gone. Par. Regained, b. ii.

Abru'tness. n. f. [from abrupt.] 1. An abrupt manner, halts, fuddennesses, untimely vehemence. 2. The state of an abrupt or broken thing; roughness, cragginess; as of a fragment violently disjoined. The crystallized bodies found in the perpendicular intervals, have always their root, as the jewelers call it, which is only the abruptness, at the end of the body whereby it adhered to the roof, or the base further, which abruptness is caused by its being broke off from the flat stone. Woodr. Nat. Hist. p. 4.

A'bcess. n. f. [abscessus, Lat.] A morbid cavity in the body; a tumour filled with matter; a term of chirurgery. If the patient is not relieved, nor dies in eight days, the inflammation ends in a suppuration and an abscess in the lungs, and sometimes in some other part of the body. Archd. of Diet. Ljndamus conjectured it might be some absccess in the memenity, which breaking some few days after, was discovered to be an apotelon of the memenity. Harvey on Consumptions. To As'cend. v. a. To cut off, either in a natural or figurative sense.

A'bscissa. [Lat.] Part of the diameter of a conic section, intercepted between the vertex and a semi-ordinate.

A'bscission. n. f. [abscessus, Lat.]
1. The act of cutting off. Fabricius ab Aquapendente renders the abscess of them difficult enough, and not without danger. Women's Surgery.
2. The state of being cut off. The composition of oracles, with Montezuma, we may understand this interjection, not abscessum, or consummate defolation. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. vi. c. 13.
To A'bso'nd. v. a. [abscondo, Lat.] To hide one's self; to retire from the public view: generally need of perfons in debt, or criminals eluding the law. The marmots, which abscond all winter, live on its ownfat: for la autumn, when it thus lieth up in its hole, it is very fat; but in the springtime, when it comes forth again, very fat in the Creation.

A's'cender. n. f. [from abscond. The person that absconds.]
A'bsence. n. f. [See Absent.]

1. The state of being absent, opposed to presence. Sin, 'tis fit You have Arong party to defend yourself. By calumny, or by absence all's in danger. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
His friends beheld, and pity'd him in vain, For what advice can ease a lover's pain? Absence, the heal'd, the bane. His absence, I cannot find, Might save the fortune, if not cure the mind. Dryd. Fab.
You have given no absences upon the absence of lovers, nor laid down any methods how they should support themselves under those separations. Addison, Spectator, N. 241.

2. Want of appearance, in the legal sense. Absence is of a fourth kind or species. The first is a necessary absence, as in banished persons; this is entirely necessary. A second, necessary and voluntary; as, upon the account of the commonwealth, or in the service of the church. The third kind the civilians call a probable absence; as, that of students on the score of study. And the fourth, an absence entirely voluntary; as, on the account of trade, merchandise, and the like. He add a fifth kind of absence, which is committed sum dubi & culp, by a man's non-appearance on a citation; as, in a consanguineous person, who, in hatred to his contumacy, is, by the law, to come in as a person present.

Ab'sh'fne. n. f. [abruptus, Lat.]
1. Not present: used with the particle from. In spring the fields, in autumn hills I love; At morn the plains, at noon the shady groves: But Delia always: absent from her sight. Nor plains at morn, nor groves at noon delight. Pope's Poet.

2. It is used with the particle from. His absence from his mother oft he'll mourn, And, with his eyes, look wishes to return. Dryd. Fae. Sat. ii.

A'b'sent. adj. [absentus, Lat.] 1. Not present: as a person from.

A'bsolute. adj. [absolutus, Lat.] 1. Complete; applied as well to persons as things. Because the things that proceed from him are perfect, without any manner of defect or main; it cannot be but that the words of his mouth are absolute, and lack nothing which they should have, for performance of that thing whereunto they tend. Isom. 2. 2. Unconditional; as, an absolute promissory. Although it runs in forms absolute, yet it is indeed conditional, as depending upon the qualification of the person to whom it is pronounced. Clarke's Bible Dictionary. 3. Not relative; as, absolute space. I see still the distinctions of sovereign and inferior, of absolute and relative worship, will bear any man out in the worship of any creature with respect to God, as well at least as doth in the worship of images. Stilling. Def. of Dif. on Rom. 11. 31. An absolute mode is that which belongs to its subject, without respect to any other being whatsoever.
1. Acquittal.
Abjuration, in the civil law, imports a full acceptance of some final sentence of law; also,
a temporary disavowal of his further attendance upon a mene proces, though a failure or defect in pleading; as it does likewise in the canton law, where, and among divines, it signifys a renunciation or departure from the objection.
There was no sentence pronounced either in a court of law, or else in furr pontentia. Thus there is, in this kind of law, one kind of abjuration, termed judicial, and another, byeld a declaratory or extra judicial abjuration.

2. The remission of fins, or penance, de-declared by ecclesiastical authority.
The abjuration pronounced by a priest, whether as a popish or protestant, is not a certain infallible ground to give the person, so abjured, confidence towards God.

South's Sermons.

ABJURATORY. adj. [abjurationis, Lat.]
That which abjures.

Though an abjuration sentence should be pronounced in favour of the pernons, upon the account of nearness of blood; yet, if admittance shall afterwards be truly proved, he may be again procceeded against as an adulterer.

Abjuration of the Penitents,

Contrary to reason, wide from the purpose.

Ablionous. adj. [abjurator, ill-found.
Abjurd, contrary to reason. It is too much in use, and it may be doubted whether it should be followed by or from.

To suppose an uniter of a middle condition, that should partake of some of the qualities of both,
but unwarried by any of our faculties; yet,
most abhorrent to our reason.

Glanville's Scripta Scientifica. v. 4.

To A B J U R . v. n. [abjurator, Lat. pret.]
abjurationis, part. pret. abjurus, or abjuratus.

1. To swallow up.
Mores impured the debility to the diffusion of the abyss; and St. Peter to the particular condition of that earth, which made it obnoxious to be abjured in water.

Burn. pun

Some tokens the
Of fearles friendship, and their finking mates
Sustain; vain love, the laudable, abjurat.

By a fierce eddy, they together found
The vast profundity.

Phillips.

2. To fuck up. See A B S E R B E N T.
The evils that come of excess, are that it does abjur and attenuate the modesty of the body.

Bacon.

ABSORBENT. n. f. [abjurator, Lat.]
A medicine that, by the softness or porosity of its parts, either cafes the asperities of pungent humours, or dries away superfluous moisture in the body.

Quinxy.

There is a third clas of substances, commonly called absorbers: as, the various kinds of shell-coral, chalk, crab's eyes, &c. which likewise raise an offensive from acids, and are therefore called allikals, though, not to properly, for they are not fats.

Abdktion of Aliments.

ABSORPTION. n. f. [abjurator, Lat.]
The act of swallowing up.

It was below the dignity of those sacred penans, or the Spirit of God that directed them, to show us the cause of this usurpation, or this abjuration; this is left to the heart of man.

Burn's Theory of the Earth.

To ABSTAIN. v. n. [abstine, Lat.] To forbear, to deny one's self any gratification; with the particle from.

If thou judged hard and difficult,
Covetous, looking, loving abstinence.

From love's due rites, nuptial embraces sweet.

And, with deers, to languish without hope.

Milton's Parideli, b. vi. n. 993.

To be perpetually languishing and impatiently drawing of anything, so that a man cannot abstain from it, is to lose a man's liberty, and to become a servant of meat and drink, or smoke.

Swift's Rule of being bely.

Even then the doubtful billows scarce abstain
From the toils'd vessel on the troubled main.

Dryden's Pindar.

ABSTINENCES. adj. [abstinere, Lat.]
Temperate, sober, abstinence, refraining from excels or pleasures. It is used of persons; as, an abstinence of things; or an abstinence diet. It is spoken likewise of things that caufe temperance.

The instances of longevity are chiefly amongst the abstemious. Abstinence in extremity will prove a mortal disease; but the experiments of it are very rare.

Clytemnestra streams the love of wine expel.

(Such is the virtue of th' abstemious will)
Whether the colder nymph that rules the flood,
Erechtheus, and bulk to the drunken god.

And, when that deities in fortune are,
To make the Parthian with charms he cur'd,
And pow'erful herbs, both chumis and funphes cast
Into the fober springs, where still their virtues left.

Dryden's Fables.

ABSTEMIOUSLY. adv. [from abstimens.
Temperately, soberly, without indulgence.

ABSTEMIOUSNESS. n. f. [See ABSTE-MIOUS.] The quality of being abstem-iouous.

ABSTINCTION. n. f. [from abstima,
Lat.] The act of holding off, or restraining;
restraint.

Died.

To ABSTERGE. v. a. [abstere, Lat.] To be clean by wiping; to wipe.

ABSTERCENT. adj. Cleaning; having a cleaning quality.

ABSTIRGE. [See ABSTERGE.] To be clean; to purify; a word very little in use, and left analogous than absterge.

Nor will we affirm, that iron receiveth, in the stomach of the ochtrich, no alteration; but we profess this effect rather from corrosion than digestion; nor any tendency to clification by natural heat, but rather some attrition from an acid and vitreous humidity in the stomach, which may absterge and have the porous parts thereof.

Bretan's Volgar Errata, b. iii.

ABSTERGE. n. f. [abstere, Lat.] The act of cleaning. See ABSTERGE.

Absterge is plainly a scouring off, or incision of the more viscus humours, and making the hu-nours more fluid, and cutting between them and the liquor; as is found in that clause of the fifteenth chapter of Daniel wherein it is said to be absterge, that has thoughts, as far as he can, from all the present world, its customs and its manners, to be fully poised and abstered from the things of the outer.

Mathematics, in its latitude, is usually divided into pure and mixed, but abstract only "abstract" quantity in general, as geometric, arithmetic; yet which is mixed, both confers the quantity of some particular determinate subject. So economy handles the quantity of heaven and earth, music of sounds, and mechanics of weights and powers.

Watts's Mathematical Physick.

Abstract terms or quality of a being, without any regard to the subject in which it is, as, whiteness, roundness, length, breadth, wisdom, mortality, life, death.

Watts's Logick.

2. With the particle from.

Another fruit from the considering things in themselves, abstract from our opinions, and others' notions, and discourse on them, will be, that each man will pursue his thoughts in that method, which will be most agreeable to the nature of the thing, and to his apprehension of what it offers to him.

Laker.

ABSTRACT. n. [from the verb.]

1. A smaller quantity, containing the virtue or power of a greater.

You shall think of a man, who is the abstract of all faults men follow.

Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

If you are false, these epithets are small.

You're then the things, and abstract of them all.

Dryden's Abs.

2. An epitome made by taking out the principal parts.

When Moses came to the end of a chapter, he recollected the sentiment he had remarked; so that he could give a tolerable analysis and abstract of every treatise he had read, just after he had finished it.

Watts's Imp. of the Mind.

3. The state of being abstracted, or disjoined.

The hearts of great princes, if they be considered, as in were in abstracts, without the necessity of states, and circumstances of time, can take no full and proportioned pleasure in the excelsisy of any narrow bounty.

Warton.

ABSTRACTED. part. adj. [from abstract.]

1. Separated; disjoined.

That state the will one abstracted stood
From his own evil, and for the time remain'd Stupidly good.

Milton.

2. Refined, purified.

Abstracted spiritual love, they like
Their foul, a dress of Don's.

3. Abstract; difficult.

Abstemious; inattentive to present objects; as, an abstracted scholar.

ABSTRACTLY. adv. With abstraction, simply, separately from all contingent circumstances.

Or whether more abstractely we look,
On the writers, or the written book.

Whether, but from heaven's, could men unfold'd in art,
In several ages born, in several parts,
Weave such agreeing truths? or how, or why
Should all the lusts, which with a lie
Unkind their pains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gain, and martyred their price.

Dryden's Relig. Lati.

ABREVIATION. n. [from abbreviate.]

1. The form of abbreviate.

The word abbreviation signifies a withdrawing some part of an idea from other parts of it; by which means such abstracted ideas are formed, as neither represent any thing corporeal or spiritual, that is, any thing particular or proper to mind or body.

Watts's Imp. of the Mind.

2. The state of being abstracted.

Abbrevia.

Absence of mind; inattention.

4. Disregard of worldly objects.

A hermit wishes to be praised for his abstraction.

Pope's Letters.

ABRÉV. abbr. [abbreviar, Lat.] Shortening.

ABRÉVIE. abbr. [abréviar, Lat.] Shortening.

ABRÉVIATION. n. [from abbreviate.]

1. Unreasonable; without judgment, as ufed of men.

Scaring
ABU

Seeming wise men may make shift to get opinion; but let no man chuse them for employment; for to be thought to take for business a man somewhat abjur'd, than to be aboun'd.

A man, who cannot write with wit on a proper subject, is dull and stupid; but one, who shews it in an improper place, is importunate and abjur'd.

Addison, Spectator, No. 220.

2. Inconstant, contrary to reason, used of sentiments or practices.
The thing little appeared definable to him, and accordingly he could not but like and define it; but then, it was after a very irrational abjur'd way, and contrary to all the methods and principles of a rational agent, which never will a thing really and properly, but it applies to the means, by which it is not verily serious; and therefore were not put so much to the use of their wills, to find out way for living commodiously. Burnet.

4. It is applied generally to things, sometimes to perrons.
The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering and abundant in goodness and truth. Exodus xxvi. 4.

ABUNDAINTLY, adv. [from abundant.] 1. In plenty.
Let the waters bring forth abundantly the living creature and fowl of the seas. Genesis i. 20.

2. Amply, liberally, more than sufficiently.
Ye saw the French tongue abundantly purified. Spæit.

ABUNDANCE, n. f. [abundance, Fr.] 1. Plenty; a fene chiefly poetical.
At the whifher of thy word, Crow'd abundance spread thy word. Confœus.
The doubled charge his subjects' love supplies, Who, in that bounty, to themselves are kind; So glad Egyptians for their Niles rise, And, in their plenty, abundance find. Dryd. Ann. Mir.

2. Great numbers.
The river Ison is flat up between mountains, covered with woods of oaks. Abundance of peafants are employed in hewing down the larger off these trees, that, after they are backed and cut into flaps, are tumbled down. Addington on Italy.

3. A great quantity.
The chief enterprize was the recovery of the Holy Land; in which worthy, but extremely difficult, action, it is lamentable to remember what abundance of noble blood hath been fled, with very small benefit unto the present world. Sir Walter Raleigh's Essays.

4. Exuberance, more than enough.
For well I wot, most mighty sovereign, That all this famous antique history, Of fame, the abundance of a idle brain, Will judged be, and painted forgery. Spenser.

ABUNDANT, adj. [abundant, Lat.] 1. Plentiful.
Good, the more communicated, more abundant grows.
The author not impair'd, but honour'd more. Paradise Lost, b. v.

2. Exuberant.
If the vefsils are in a state of too great rigidity, so as not to yield, a strong projeceive motion occasions their rupture, and hemorrhages: especially in the lungs, where the blood is abundant. Flaxman on Aliments.

3. Fully flored. It is followed sometimes by in, commonly by with.
The world began but some ages before these were found, and was abundant with all things at first; and men were not so verdictious; and therefore were not put so much to the use of their wills, to find out way for living commodiously. Burnet.

4. It is applied generally to things, sometimes to perrons.
The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering and abundant in goodness and truth. Exodus xxvi. 4.

ABU, n. m. [from the verb abufe.] 1. The ill use of any thing.
The casting away things profitable for the sustenance of man's life, is an unthankful abufe of the fruits of God's good providence towards mankind. Huyler, b. v. § 9.

2. A corrupt practice, bad custom.
The nature of things is such, that, if abufes be not remedied, they will certainly encrease. Swift's Observations on Religion.

ABUSER, n. f. [from the verb abufe.] 1. He that makes an ill use.
He that deceives.

2. He that deceives.
Next thou, the abuser of thy prince's ear.

3. He that reproaches with rudenes.
A raverish, a violater.

ABUSIVE, adj. [from abufe.] 1. Praifting abufe.
The tongue mov'd gently first, and speech was low,
'Till wrangling science taught it noise and how,
And wifked wit wrothe, thy utmost abufe how.

Dame Nature, as the learned show,
Provides each animal its foe;
Hounds hunt the hare, the wily fox
Devours your geese, the Metro nicks.

Thus envy pleads a natural claim,
To prejudice the wise's fame,
On ports in all times abusor,
From Homer down to Pope and Swift. Swift's Miscellany.

2. Containing abuse; as, an abusor lamoon.

Next, Comedy appear'd with great applause,
Till her licentious and abusive tongue
Waken'd the magistrates coercive power. Restrom.

3. Deceitful; a fene little used, yet not improper.
It is verified by a number of examples, that whatsoever is gained by an abusor treaty, ought to be recluded in integrum.

Bacon's Considerations on War exist Spain.

ABUSIVELY, adv. [from abufe.] 1. Improperly, by a wrong use.
The oil, abusively called spirit, of roses, swims at the top of the water, in the form of a white butter; which remember not to have observe in any other oil drawn in any limbeck. Boyle's Sceptical Cymth.

2. Reproachfully.
ABUSIVENESS, n. f. [from the verb abufe.] The quality of being abusive; foulness of language.

Pick out of mirth, like bees out of the ground, Profanities, filthiness, and abuse.

These are the scum, with which corrosive wits surround
The fine may scarce these well, yet go left. Herbert.
To ABUT, v. n. object. [about, to touch at the end, Fr.] To end at, to border upon; to meet, or approach to, with the particle upon.

Abutment, n. s. [from abut.] That which abuts, or borders upon another.

Abys, n. s. [abyss, old Fr. now written contractedly abisme.] A gulf; the same with abyss.

My good stars, that were my former guides, Have left their empty orbs; and shot their fires Into the abyss of night.

Shakespeare's Sonnet and Cleopatra.

aby'sm. n. s. [abyssus, Lat. abyssus, bot- tomatels, Gr.] 1. A depth without bottom.

Who shall tempt with wand'ring feet The dark, unbottom'd, infinite abyss, And, through the palpable obscurity, and out This uncoiny way.

Midian's Paradise Lost, b. ii. l. 405.

Thy threshold darkens in the abyss of light, A blaze of glory that forbids the sight; O teach me to believe thee thus conceal'd, And search no farther than thyself reveal'd.

Dryden.

Jove was not more pleas'd
With infant nature, when his spacious hand Had rounded this huge ball of earth and seas To give it the first pulse, and let it roll Along the void abyss. Addison, Govern, No. 110.

2. A great depth, a gulf; hyperbolically.

The yawning earth discloses th' abyss of hell.

3. In a figurative sense, that in which any thing is lost.

For sepulchers themselves must crumbling fall In time's abyss, the common grave of all.

Dryden's Journal, Sat. x.

If, discovering how far we have clear and distinct ideas, we confine our thoughts within the contemplation of those things that are within the reach of our understandings, and launch not out into that abyss of darkness, out of a presumption that nothing is beyond our comprehension.

4. The body of waters suppos'd at the centre of the earth.

We are here to consider what is generally understood by the great abyss, in the common expression of the deluge, and its commonly interpreted either to be the sea, or the infernal regions of fire and water hid in the bowels of the earth.

Burnet's Theory.

5. In the language of divines, hell.

From that intangible abyss, Where flames devour, and serpents hiss, Promote me to thy feast of bliss.

Robinson's Cenotaph.

Acc. Ak, or Ake.

Being initials in the names of places, as Aetol, signify an oak, from the Saxon ae, an oak.

GIOTTO'S CENOTAPH.

Aca, n. f. [Lat.]

1. A drug brought from Egypt, which, being suppos'd the insipiated juice of a tree, is imitated by the juice of foles, boled to the same confidence.

2. A tree commonly so called here, though different from that which produces the true acacia; and therefore termed pseudacacia, or Virginian acacia. Miller.

Academic, adj. [from academy.] Relating to an academy, belonging to an academy.

Academician, n. f. [from academy.] A scholar of an academy or university; a member of an university. Wood, in his Athenae Oxoniensia, mentions a great feast made for the academicians.

Academicl, adj. [academicus, Lat.] Belonging to an university.

He drew him into the fatal circle, from a kind of resolved privateness; when, after the academic life, he had taken such a taste of the rural, as I have heard him say, that he could well have beat his mind to a retired course.

Motion.

Academician, n. f. [academicus, Fr.] The member of an academy. It is generally used in speaking of the professors in the academies of France.

Academicick, n. f. [from academy.] A student of an university.

A young academic shall dwell upon a journal that treats of trade, and be lavish in the praise of the author; while profons in those subjects, bear the tattse with a jest.

Watt's Improvement of the Mind.

Academicl, adj. [academicus, Lat.] Relating to an university.

While through poetic scenes the genius roves, Or wanders wild in academic groves.

Academist, n. f. [from academy.] The member of an academy. This is not often used.

It is observed by the Prussian academists, that some amphibious quadrupeds, particularly the sculp or seal, hath his epithet extraneously large.

Ray on the Creation.

A'CADeMY. n. f. [anciently, and properly, with the accent on the first syllable, now frequently on the second. Academist, Lat. from Academus of Athens, whose house was turned into a school, from whom the Groves of Academ in Milton.]

1. An assembly or society of men, uniting for the promotion of some art.

Our court shall be a little academy, Still constant, and the seat of useful arts.

Shakespeare's Love's Labour Lost.

2. The place where sciences are taught.

Amongst the academies, which were compos'd by the rare genius of those great men, these four are reckn'd as the principal; namely, the Athenian school, that of Sicyon, that of Rhodes, and that of Corinth.

Dryden's Dunciad.

3. An university.

A place of education, in contradistincion to the universities or public schools. The thing, and therefore the name, is modern.

Acanthus, n. f. [Lat.] The name of the herb bears-breech, remarkable for being the model of the foliage on the Corinthian chapter.

On either side Acanthus, and each o'dious boughful, Fenced up the verdant wall.

Mill's Parad. Lost, b. iv. l. 666.

Acataleticc, n. f. [ακαταλεξικείν. Gr.] A veris which has the complete number of syllables, without defect or superfluity.

To ACCEDE. v. n. [accedo, Lat.] To be added to, to come to; generally used in political accounts; as, another power has acceded to the treaty; that is, has become a party.

To ACCELERATE, v. a. [accelero, Lat.]

1. To make quick, to hasten, to quicken motion; to give a continual impulse to motion, so as perpetually to increase.

Take new beer, and put in some quantity of stale beer into it; and see whether it will not accelerate the clarification, by opening the body of the beer whereby th' air may fall down into the lees.

Bacon's Natural History, No. 307.

By a skilful application of these niceties, may be gained the accelerating and bettering of fruits, and through the ends of making a more easy rates than by the common methods, Glanville, Steph.

If the rays endeavour to recede from the densest part of the vibrations, they may be alternately accelerated and retarded by the vibrations overlapping them.

Newton's Opticks.

Spices quicken the pulse, and accelerate the motion of the blood, and dilate the fluids; whence lenitens, paint in the flamish, leathings, and feathers.

Aquebus on Aliments.

Lo! from the dread immensity of space Returning, with accelerated course, The rushing comet to the funeral car.

Thoms. Sum. l. 1690.

2. It is generally applied to matter, and used chiefly in philosophical language; but it is sometimes used on other occasions.

In which counsel the king himself, whose con- tinual vigilancy did fall in some times causeful fulgurations, which few knew else inclined to the accelerating a battle.

Bacon's Henry VII.

Perhaps it may point out to a student now and then, what may employ the most useful labours of his thoughts, and accelerate his diligence in the most momentous enquiries.

Watts.

ACCELERAtion, n. f. [acceleration, Lat.]

1. The act of quickening motion.

The law of the acceleration of falling bodies, discovered first by Galileus, is, that the velocities acquired by falling, being as the time in which the body falls, the spaces through which it passes will be as the squares of the velocities, and the velocity and time taken together, as in a quadruply false ratio to the spaces.

2. The state of the body accelerated, or quickened in its motion.

The degrees of acceleration of motion, the gravitation of the air, the existence or non-existence of empty spaces, either contiguous or interpenetrated, and many more like, have made up the notions and times of men in disputes concerning them.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

5. The act of hastening.

Concerning the language signifying that action in some, and the visible accelerations it maketh of age in mort, we cannot but think very much abridg'd our days.

Brown.

To ACCEED. v. a. [accedo, Lat.] To kindle, to set on fire; a word very rarely used.

Our devotion, if sufficiently acceded, would, as theirs, burn up innumerable books of this sort.

Decay of Piety.

Accesion, n. f. [accessus, Lat.] The act of kindling, or the state of being kindled.

The following damp will take fire at a candle, or other flame, and, upon its accession, gives a crack or report, like the discharge of a gun, and makes an explosion forcible sometimes to kill the miners, shake the earth, and force bodies, of great weight and bulk, from the bottom of the pit or mine.

Wodrow's Natural History.

A'CENT. n. f. [accentus, Lat.]

1. The manner of speaking or pronouncing, with regard either to a force or eloquence.

I know,
I know, Sir, I am no flatterer; he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave;
which, for my part, I will not be.

2. The sound given to the syllable pronounced.

Your accent is something finer than you could purchase to remove a dwelling.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

3. In grammar, the marks made upon sy-labes, to regulate their pronunciation.

Accent, as in the Greek names and usage, seems to have regarded the tune of the voice; the acute accent raising the voice in some certain syllables to a higher, i.e., more acute pitch or tone, and the grave depriving it lower, and both having some emphasis in concentration. Holdes.

4. Poetically, language or words.

How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er,
In dates unremembered, and accents yet unknown.

Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus.

Winds on your wings to heaven her accents bear;
Such words as heaven's alone is fit to hear.
Dryden, Virg. Pass. 5.

5. A modification of the voice, expressive of the passions or sentiments.

The tender accent of a woman's cry
Will pass unheard, will unregarded die;
When the rough feaman's louder thunders prevail,
When fair occasion flewes the springing gale. Prior.

To ACCENT, v. a. [from accentus, Lat.]
frequently elevated at the second syllable, now as at the first.

1. To pronounce, to speak words with particular regard to the grammatical marks or rules.

Having got somebody to mark the last syllable but one, where it is long, in words above two syllables, which is enough to save her pronunciation, and accenting the words) let her read daily in the gospels, and avoid understanding them in Latin, if she can. Locke on Education, § 177.

2. In poetry; to pronounce or utter in gen.- ical.

O my unhappy lines! you that before
Have serv'd your youth to vent some wanton erase,
And, now congeal'd with grief, can scarce inspire
Strength to accept, Here my Alcubius lies! Warton.

3. To write or note the accents.

To ACCENTUATE, v. a. [accentuer, Fr.]

To place the proper accents over the vowels.

ACCENTUATION, n. s. [from accentuate.]

1. The act of placing the accent in prono-nunciation.

2. Marking the accent in writing.

To ACCEPT, v. a. [accepis, Lat. accepter, Fr.]

1. To take with pleasure; to receive kindly; to admit with approbation.

It is distinguished from receive, as speccific from general; noting a particular manner of receiving.

Neither do youkinsle fire on my altar for nought;
I have no pleasure in you, faith the Lord of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand.
Malachi, i. 10.

God is no respecter of persons: but, in every nation, he that searcheth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. Acts x, 34-35.

You have been graciously pleased to accept this tender of my desire.
Dryden's Dedication to his Fabes.

Charm by accepting, by submitting away,
Yet have your humour moist when you obey. Pope.

2. It is used in a kind of juridical fenie; ass, to accept terms, accept a treaty.

They traffiq'd many of the gentry, for whom no sex or age could be accepted for executors. Sidney.

His promise Palamon accept, but pray'd
To keep it better than the first hand.
Dryden's Fables.

Those who have defended the proceedings of our negotiators at the treaty of Croydenbrough, dwell upon their desire of availing work the French up to their demands, but say nothing of the probability that France would ever accept them.
Swift.

3. In the language of the Bible, to accept persons, is to act with personal and partial regard.

He will surely repay you, if ye do secretly accept persons.
Judg. xlii, 10.

4. It is sometimes used with the particle
of.

I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will fe his face; my advantore he will accept of me. Genesis, xxxiii, 20.

ACCEPTABILIT Y, n. s.
The quality of being acceptable. See ACCEPTABLE.

He hath given us his natural blood to be shed, for the remission of our sins, and Alidone
the obtaining the grace and acceptableness of repentance.
Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

ACCEPTABLE, adj. [acceptable, Fr. from the Latin.]

It is pronounced by some with the accent on the first syllable, as by Milton; by others, with the accent on the second, which is more analogical.

1. That which is likely to be accepted; grateful offerings, which is endowed with the particle before to the person accepting.

This woman, whom thou madest fit to be my help,
And gav'st me as thy perfect gift, so good,
So fit, to acceptable, so divine,
That from her hand I could expect no ill.
Paradise Lost, b. i.

I do not see any other method left for men of that function to take, in order to reform the world, than by using all honest arts to make them voluntary to accept of these duties.

After he had made a peace acceptable to the church, and to honourable to himself, he died in an extraordinary reputation of facility.

ACCEPTABleness, n. s. [from acceptable.]
The quality of being acceptable.
It will thereby take away the acceptableness of that conjunction.
Grew's Cosmogogia Sacra, b. ii. c. 2.

ACCEPTABLY, adv. [from acceptable.]

In an acceptable manner; so as to please; with the particle to.

For the accent, see ACCEPTABLE.

Do not omit any thing that may be of good omen;
for he that prayeth upon God's account, cares not what he suffers, so he be the friend of Christ, nor where he prays, so he may do it frequently, fervently, and acceptably, Taylor.

If you can teach them to love and respect other people, they will, as your age requires it, find ways to express it acceptably to every one.

Locke on Education, § 145.

ACCEPTANCE, n. s. [from accept, accepter, Fr.]

1. Reception with approbation.

By that acceptance of his sovereignty, they also accepted of his laws; why then should any other laws now be used amongst them?

Prior, b. ii. 97.

If he tells us his noble designs, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Thus I humbly'd their spake, and freedom ward Permissive, and acceptance found.
Paradise Lost, b. vii. l. 1435.

Some men cannot be fools with so good acceptance as others.
South's Sermons.

2. The meaning of a word as it is received or understood; acceptance is the word now commonly used.

That pleasure is man's chiefest good, because that in it is the perception of his duty, and propriety pleasure, is an applause most certainly true, though, under the common acceptance of it, not only false but odious; for, according to this, pleasure and feare may pass for terms equivalent, and thence be, who takes it in this fictit, alter the subject of the discourse.
South.

ACCEPTANCE. [in law.]
The receiving of a rent, whereby the giver binds himself, for ever, to allow a former act done by another, whether it be in itself good or not.
Cowell.

ACCEPTATION, n. s. [from accept.

1. Reception, whether good or bad. This large fente feems no wholly out of use.

Yet, poor soul! I know he no other, but that I do supeed, neglect, yes, and detest him? For, every day, he finds one way or other to fet forth him to me; and all are rewarved with like coldness of acceptance.
Sidney, ii, 66.

What is now finds better acceptance, than what is good or great.

Denham's Sopky.

2. Good reception, acceptance.

Oft, reewes of the acceptance of his brother's pray and sacrifice, flew him; making himself the first manfayer, and his brother the first martyr.

Ralph's History of the World, 5, 1.

3. The state of being acceptable; regard things, although not so required of necessity, that, to leave them undone, excludeth from the promotion, with so great dignity and acceptation with God, that most ample reward in heaven is hid up for them. Hooker, c. 3.

They have thos ejoyments only as the conse quences of the state of exisetern and acceptance they are in with their parents and governors.

Locke on Education, § 53.

4. Acceptance in the juridical sense.
This fente occurs rarely.

As, in order to the passing away a thing by gift, there is required a donner of all right on his part that gives; so there is required also an acceptance thereon by the donee.

Clarendon, b. viii.

All matter is either fluid or solid, in a large acceptation of the words, that they may compre-end even all the middle degrees between extreme existence and non-quitence, and the middle tentative motion of the particles of bodies. René, Sena.

ACCEPTER, n. s. [from accept.]

The person that accepts.

ACCEPTATION, n. s. [acceptor, Lat.]

A term of the civil law, importing the remission of a debt by an acquittance from the creditor, testifying the receipt thereof by which has never been paid.

ACCEPT, n. s. [from acceptio, Lat.]
The received fente of a word; the meaning. Not in use.

That this hath been esteemed the due and proper acceptation of this word, I shall testify by one evidence, which gave me the first hint of this notion.

Hannard on Fundamental.

ACCEPTESS, n. s. [in some of its fentes, it seems derived from acceptio, in others, from acci or, Lat. accept, Fr.]

1. The way by which any thing may be approached.

The accept of the town was only by a neck of land.

There remained very advantageous acceptes for t transmission to the enemy; invades, the incursions carrying being very slender, little knowledge of immorality, or any thing beyond this life, and no assurance
At an end, we are accesseable on every side, and exposed to perpetual invasions; against which it is impossible to fortify ourselves sufficiently, without a power of sea.
Addison's Freemaker.

In conversation, the temper of men are open and accessible, their attention is awake, and their minds disposed to receive the truths presented to their understandings; and what is spoken is generally more affecting, and more appropriate to particular occasions. Roger.

Accession. n. [accesses, Lat., access, Fr.]

1. Increase by something added, enlargement, augmentation.

Nor could all the king's bounties, nor his own large accesseions, raise a fortune to his heir; but after vast sums of money, and great wealth gotten, he died unamended.

There would not have been found the difference here set down between the force of the air, when expanded, and what that force should have been according to the theory, but that the included inch of air received some little accent in the trial. Boyle's Spring of the Air.

The wifeest among the nobles began to apprehend the growing power of the people; and therefore, knowing what an accessory thereof would be to this, by the addition of property, used all means to prevent it. Swift.

Charity, indeed, and works of munificence, are the proper discharge of such over-proportioned accesseions, and the only virtuous enjoyment of them. Roger's Sermons.

2. The act of coming to, or joining one's self to; as, accession to a confederacy.

Before, what wise objections he prepares Against my last, Accesseions of the summers! Has not the foolish person's argument Is with more force against Achilles bent? Dryden's Fables.

3. The act of arriving at; as, the king's accession to the throne.

Accessory. n. [from accessory.] In the manner of an accessory.

Accessory. adj. Joined to another thing, so as to increase it; additional.

In this kind there is not the least action, but it doth somewhat make to the accession augmentation of our blifs. Hooker.

Accessory. n. s. [accessorius, Lat. accessories, Fr. This word, which had ancienfly a general significancy, is now almost confined to forms of law.]

1. Applied to a man that is guilty of a felonious offence, not principally, but by participation; as, by commandment, advice, or concealment. And a man may be accessory to the offence of another, after two forts, by the common law, or by statute: and, by the common law, two ways also; that is, before or after the fact. Before the fact; as, when one commandeth or adviceth another to commit a felony, and is not present at the execution thereof; for his presence makes him also a principal; whereas there cannot be an accessory before the fact in manslaughter; because manslaughter is sudden and irrevocable after the fact, when one receiveth him, whom he kneweth to have committed felony. Accessory by statute, is he that abets, counsels, or hides any man committing, or having committed, an offence made felony by statute.

By the common law, the accessories cannot be proceeded against, till the principal hath received his trial.

But paule, my foul! and study, etc. thou fall On accession joys, thy essential.

Still before accesseries to abide
A trial, must conclude the try'd.

Dana.

Now were all transform'd
Alike, to sperits all, as accessories
To his bold riot. Milton's Par. Lost., b. x. l. 520.

2. Applied to things.

Accessory. n. f. [one, of the elenials of any subject, before you consider its accidents. Watts's Logic.

Accidental. n. s. [accidental, Fr. See ACCIDENT.] A property nonessential.

Conceive, as much as you can, of the essentials of any subject, and you will have its accidents. Watts's Logic.

Accidental. adj. [from accident.] 1. Having the quality of an accident, nonessential; used with the particle so, that in which the accident inheres.

A distinction is to be made between what pleases naturally in itself, and what pleases upon the account of machines, actors, dances, and circumstances, which are merely accidental to the tragedy. Rymer's Treasuries of the old Asia.

This is accidental to a thing in religion, and therefore ought to be reckoned among the ordinary difficulties of it. Tillotson.

2. Casual, fortuitous, happening by chance.

Thy fin's not accidental, but a trade.

Milton.

At all events. For so shall you hear
Of accidental judgments, casual Flamebras;
Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc’d envy.

Shaksp. Hen. VI.

Look upon things of the most accidental and mutable nature; accidental in their production, and mutable in their continuance; yet God’s preference of them is as certain in him, as the memory of them, or can be, in us.

South’s Sermons.

3. In the following passage it seems to signify adverbially;

"Ay, such a minister as wind to fire, That adds an accidental fireness to its natural fury."

Davenant’s Sophy.

Accidentally, adv. [from accidental.]

1. After an accidental manner; noneffectually.

Other points no less concern the commonwealth, though but accidentally depending upon the former.

Spenser’s F. of S. 1: 1.

I conclude choler accidentally bitter, and ariens not in itself. Honesty on Consequences.

Accidentalness, n. s. [from accidental.]

The quality of being accidental.

Dict.

Accipient, n. s. [accepter, Lat.] Receiver, perhaps sometimes used for recipient.

Dict.

To Accite, v. a. [accite, Lat.] To call, to summons; a word not in use now.

Our conversation will accord (As I before remember’d) all our Uses.

And (Heav’n consenting to my good intent) No pains to earn, half have just cause to say, Heav’n borrow Harry his happy life on one day.

Spenser’s F. of S. 1: 7.

Acc claim, n. s. [acclama, Lat. from which probably frit the verb acclam, now lost, and then the noun; a thout of praise, acclamation.

Back from proficibly powers, with loud acclam.

Thou only art eternal.

Milton’s Par. Lost, b. 1: 637.

The herald cried; the vast uphol’ted firmament

With loud acclam, and with vast applause, is rent.

Dryden’s Fables.

Acclamation, n. s. [acclamatory, Lat.] Shouts of applause, such as those with which a victorious army salutes the general.

It hath been the custom of Christian men, in token of the greatest reverence, to stand, to utter certain words, of acclamation, and, at the name of Jesus, to bow.

Hill’s, b. 2: 489.

Gladsly then he mix’d

Among those friendly pow’rs, who him receiv’d

With joy, and acclamation loud, that one.

That, of so many myriads fall’d, that one.

Return’d, not lost.

Mill’s Paradoxy, b. 6: 1: 24.

Such an enchantment is there in words, and so much this does seem to some, to be ruined plunderably, and to be useful to their destruction with pangeyric and acclamation.

Acclivity, n. s. [from acclivus, Lat.]

The steepness or slope of a line inclining to the horizon, reckoned upwards; as, the ascenst of an hill is the acclivity, the declivity is the declivity.

Quint.

The men, the wives, and younger children below, do not, without some difficulty, climb up the acclivities, dragging their kine with them, where they feed them, and milk them, and make butter and cheese, and do all the dairy-work.

Acclivous, adj. [acclivus, Lat.] Rising with a slope.

Vol. I.

To Acclo’ry, v. a. [See CLOV.]

1. To fill up, in an ill sense; to crowd, to stuff full; a word almost obsolete.

At the wild to lead the purest streams aright; But mucky filth in their bed doth annoy, And with uneomnously weeds the gentle wave acclivy.

Fairy Queen.

2. To fill to fattiery; in which sense clo’ry is still in use.

They thay, escape best in the temperate zone, would be acquitted with long sights, very tedious, no less than forty days.

Roy. in the Cragems.

To Accol’i, v. n. [See Coll.]

To crowd, to keep a coil about, to buffet, to be in a hurry: a word now out of use.

About the cauldron many cooks accol’d, With hooks and ladles, as need did require; While the vinds in the vell’d did

They did about their business sweat, and sorely told’d.

Fairy Queen.

Accolent, n. s. [accolens, Lat.] He that inhabits near a place; a borderer. Ditto.

Accommodable, adj. [accommodabili, Lat.] That which may be fitted; with the paragraph.

As there is infinite variety in the circumstances of persons, things, actions, times, and places; so we must be furnished with such general rules as are accommodable to all this variety, by a wise judgment and discretion.

Watts’s Langks.

To ACCOM’MADATE, v. a. [accommodate, Lat.]

1. To supply with conveniences of any kind. It has suite before the thing.

Thee then, The red on nothing; with this word, fand, fand, Accommodate by the place; (more charming)

With their own particular, but that he might accommodate himself to the age in which he lived.

Dryden on Dramatic Poetry.

’Twas his misfortune to light upon an hypothesis, that could be adapted to the nature of things, and human affairs; his principles could not be made to agree with that constitution and order which God had fitted in the world.

Laker.

3. To reconcile: to adjust what seems inconsistent or at variance; to make consonancy appear.

Part know how to accommodate St. James and St. Paul better than some late reconcilers.

Nord.

To ACCOM’MODATE, v. n. To be conformable to.

They make the particular enigmas of the twelve tribes accommodate unto the twelve signs of the Zodiac.

Brown.

Neither sort of chymists have duly considered how great variety there is in the textures and consistencies of compound bodies; and how little the confidence and duration of many of them seem to accommodate and be explicable by the propo.

Boyle’s Scep’s Gym.

Accommodation, adj. [accommodarius, Lat.] Suitable, fit, used sometimes with the particle for, but not frequenty with to.

They are so fitted and directed by nature, as to call their eggs in such places as are most accommodable for the exclusion of their young, and where they have food ready for them to feed on as they be hatched.

In these cases we examine the why, the what, and the how, of things, and propose means accommodating to the end.

L’Estrange.

God did not primarily intend to applaud this way of worship, and to impose it upon them as that which was most proper and agreeable to him, but that he intended to lead it as most accommodable to their present state and inclination.

Tillotson.

Accommodately, adv. [from accommodate.]

Suitably, fitly.

Accommodation, n. s. [from accommodate.]

1. Provision of conveniences.

In the plural, conveniences, things requisite to cafe or refreshment.

The king’s commissioners were to have such accommodations, as the other thought fit to leave to them; who had been very civil to the king’s commissioners.

Clarendon, b. vii.

3. Adaptation, fitness; with the particle to.

Indeed that disputing physiology is no accommodation to your delinquent, which are not to teach men to count endlesly about matter and forms.

Gibbon’s Scipio.

The organization of the body, with accommodation as functions, is fitted with the most curious machinery.

Hale’s Origins.

4. Composition of a difference, reconciliation, adjustment.

Accompansable, adj. [from accompany.] Sioable: a word now not used.

A flow, as it were, of an accommodating politeness, and of a civil wildness.

Sidney, b. I.

Accompainier, n. s. [from accompany.]

The person that makes part of the company; companion.

Dict.

To ACCOMPANY, v. a. [accompanier, Fr.] To be with another as a companion. It is used both of persons and things.

Go viit her, in her chaste boower of rest, Accompanied with angel-like delights.

Spenser, Sonnet III.

The great benefice of the seafes being to make us take notice of what hurts or advantages the body, it is, in widely ordered by nature, that pain should accompany the conception of several ideas.

As felly is usually accompanied with preterience, so is it here.

Swift’s Short Piece of Man.

To ACCOMPANY, v. n. To associate with; to become a companion to.

When he enthrall’d his “Galley” with others, but helearneth, ere he is aware, some gesture, voice, or fashion.

Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

Accomplish, n. s. [complex, Fr. from complex, a word in the barbarous Latin, much in use.] 1. An associate, a partaker, usually in an ill sense.

There were several scandalous reports industriously spread by Wood, and his accomplishes, to discourage all opposition against his infamous project.

Swift.

2. A partner, or co-operator; in a jenic indifferent.

If a tongue would be walking without a mouth, what could it have done, when it had all its organs of speech, and accomplishes of found, about itself.

Addison, Spectator, No. 247.

3. It is used with the particle to before a thing, and with before a person.

Children Arturus, a man rich before; Thus by his loyes multiplie his fortunes,

Subjected for accomplish to the fire,

That burnt his palace but to build it higher.

Dryden, Tier Nat.

Who, should they Real for want of love, at least,

He judged himself accomplish with the thief.

Dryden’s Fables.

To ACCOMPLISH, v. a. [accomplish, Fr. from complex, Lat.]
1. To complete, to execute fully; as, to accomplish a design.

2. To complete a period of time.

3. To fulfill; as, a prophecy.

4. To gain, to obtain.

5. To adorn, or furnish, either mind or body.

6. Action in speaking, correspondent to the words.

7. To accord or fit, of which is properly a participle, and is therefore never used but as.

A C C

1. To complete, to execute fully; as, to accomplish a design.

2. To complete a period of time.

3. To fulfill; as, a prophecy.

4. The act of obtaining or perfecting any thing; attainment; completion.

The means suggested by policy and worldly wisdom, for the attainment of those earthly enjoyments, are unfit for that purpose, not only upon the account of their instability, but also of their frequent opposition and contrariety, to the accomplishment of such ends. Smith's Sermon.

Accompt. n. f. [Fr. compter and compte, anciently accepter. Skinner.] An account, a reckoning. See Account.

The soul may have time to call itself to a just account of all things fall, by means whereof perfection is perfected.

Each Christmas they accommodated did clear; And wound their round year round the year. Prior.

Accomplish. n. f. [accomptant. Fr.] A reckoner, computer. See Accountant.

As the accompt runs on, generally the accomptant goes backward. South's Sermon.

Accompanying day. The day on which the reckoning is to be settled.

To whom much doth owe, thou much think on the debt against thee’ accompanying day.

Sir J. Danham.

To ACCORD. w. a. [derived, from, corde, the firing of a musical instrument, by others, from, corde, hearts; in the first, implying harmony, in the other, unity.]

1. To make agree; to adjust one thing to another; with the particle as.

The fine spirits the户ors shrunk, were full of such leps and gambols, as being accorded to the pipe which bore in their mouths, even as they danced, made a right picture of their chief god Pan, and his companions the fauns.

Sidney, b. 1.

Her hands accord the lute's Muse to the voice; her panting heart danced to the music.

Sidney, b. ii.

The lights and shades, whose well accorded strive, Give all the strength and colour of our life.

Pipe's Epistle.

2. To bring to agreement; to compose; to accommodate.

Men would not sell upon bare contracts without reducing the debt into a specialty, which created much certainty, and accorded many trusts.

Sir W. Hale.

To ACCORD. w. a. To agree, to suit one with another; with the particle with.

'Things are often spoken, and falden mean; But that my heart accorded with my tongue, Seeing the deed is meritorious, And to preserve my sovereign from his foes.

Shakespeare. Hen. VI.

Several of the main parts of Moliere's history, as the first fathers of the concerning nations of the world, do very well accord with the modern accounts of remote history.

Till then, Sermon.

Jarring interes'ls of themselves create

Th' according musick of a well-mixt rate. Pope.

Accord. n. f. [accord, Fr.] 1. A compact; an agreement; an adjustment of a difference.

There was no means for him to satisfy all obligations to God and man, but to offer himself for a mediator of an accord and peace between them.

Blaise's History. VII.

If both are satisfied with this accord, Swear by the laws of knighthood on my sword.

Dryden. Fabel.

2. Concurrence, union of mind.

At such grace I found, and I mean I wrought,

That I last spoke to my spouse had won,

Accord of friends, content of parents taught,

Affiance made, my happiness begun.

Spenser's Fairy Queen.

They gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and Israel, with one accord.

3. Harmony, symmetry, just correspondence of one thing with another.

Beauty is nothing else but a just accord and mutual harmony of the members, animated by a healthful constitution.

Dryden's Dunciad, Pref.

Try, if there were in one stringless two balls of uniform weight, whether the striking of the one would move the other, more than if it were another accord.

Bacchus's Natural History, No 28.

We must not blame Apollo, but his tutor.

If false accord from her false fings be sent.

Sir J. Davies.

5. Own accord; voluntary motion: used both of persons and things.

Ne Gunpow yet space word, Till the sword with an iron door, Which to them opened of its own accord.

Fairfax, b. ii. stanza 65.

6. Action in speaking, correspondent to the words.

Thus, I am come to talk with thee.—

—No, a word: how can I grace my talk, Wanting a hand to give it that accord?—

Shakespeare, Timon of Athens.

Accordant. adj. [accordant, Fr.] Willing; in a good humour. Not in use.

The prince discovered that he loved your niece, and meant to acknowledge it; this night in a dance; and, if he fouls the accord, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Shakespeare. Much ado about Nothing.

Accordance, prep. [from accord, of which it is properly a participle, and is therefore never used but as.

1. In a manner suitable to, agreeably to, in accordance with.

Our churches are places provided, that the people might there assemble themselves in due and decent manner, according to their several degrees and orders.

Then, should he be according to knowledge. And what kind of knowledge? Without all question, first, according to the true, saving, evangelical knowledge. It should be according to the Gospel; the whole gospel: not only according to its truths, but precepts: not only according to its free grace, but necessary duties: not only according to its mysteries, but also its commandments.

Sermon.

Noble is the face that is builded on candour and ingenuity, according to those beautiful lines of Sir John Denham.

Addison, Spectator.

2. With regard to.

God made all things in number, weight, and measure, and gave them to be considered by us according to these properties, which are inherent in created beings.

Haller on Time.

3. In proportion. The following phrase is, I think, vicious.

A man must, with prudence and a good conscience, approve of the professed principles of one party party more than the other, according to he think; they both promote the good of church and state.

Swift's Church of England Man.

Accordingly, they are, [from accord.] Agreeably, suitably, conformably.

As the actions of men are of sundry different kinds, so do the laws thereof according to the times, circumstances, and disposition of the people.

Dods, § 6.

Sirrah, thou'rt fad to have a Rubens born, That apprehends no further than this world; And squats thy life and duty after.

Shaksp. Measure for Measure.

Whoever is ascribed to the authority and sense of justice, as to believe the doctrine of it, and to live accordingly, shall be Considered.

Tillotson's Preface.

Moral substances, fermented, two-four. Accordingly, given to a weak child, they will retain their nature; for head and heart will compose them.

Arabian in Americas.

To ACCOST, w. v. [accept, Fr.] To speak to first, to address; to salute.

You mistake, knight: accept her, front her, board her, woo her, affar her.

Shakesp. Twelfth Night.

At length, collecting in his formal verses, with some words entre, him thus accept.

Parad. Reg.

I first accept him: I do, I ought.

And, with a loving force, to Phoenix brought.

Dryd. Aeneid.

ACCOCTABLE. adj. [from accept.] Easv of access; familiar. Not in use.

They were both indubitable, strong, and high-minded men, yet of sweet and admirable nature, almost equally delighting in the posts and affinities of dependents and futurs.

Witten.

ACCOUNT. n. f. [from the old French comptes, from comptum. Lat. it was originally written comptes, which see; but, by gradually softening the pronunciation, in time the orthography changed to account.]

1. A computation of debts or expenses; a register of facts relating to money.

At many times I brought in my accounts, List them before you; you would throw them off, And say you found them in mine honestly.

Shakesp. Timon.

When my young master has once got the skill of keeping accounts (which is a business of reason more than arithmetic), perhaps it will not be amiss, that his father from thenceforth require him to do it in his commercial business.

2. The state or result of a computation; as, the account stands thus between us.

Behold this have I found, faith the Preacher, counting cie by one, to find out the account.

Ecclesiastics, vi, 27.

3. Such a flate of persons or things, as may make them more or less worthy of being considered in the reckoning. Value, or estimation.

For the care that they took for their wives and their children, their brethren and kinsfolk, was in least account with them; but the greatest and principal care was for the holy temple.

2 Machab. xviii. 18.

That good affection, which things of smaller account, as notes of hand, are by so much the more easily raised higher.

Hokker, t. v. § 35.

1 should make more account of their judgment, who are men of sense, and yet have never touched a pencil, than of the opinion given by the greatest number of painters.

2 Machab. xviii.

4. Profit; advantage; to turn to account is to produce advantage.

We would establish our fests in such a solid and substantial virtue, as will turn to account in that great day, when it shall send the ten thousand fellow of wisdom and justice.

Add. Sixth, N° 399.

5. Distinction, dignity, rank.

There is such a peculiarity in Homer's manner of apostrophizing Eumæus: it is generally applied, by that poet, not only to men of account and distinction.

Pope's Dunciad, v. 17.

6. A reckoning verified being the same as a thing equal to what it was accounted.

Considering the usual motive of human actions, which are pleasure, profit, and ambition, I cannot yet comprehend how those persons find the account of it is any thing in the present.

Swift's Rasselas.

7. A reckoning referred to, or sum charged upon any particular person; and thence, figuratively, regard, consideration; fake.

If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee, any thing on my account.

Philom. v. 5.

This must be always remembered, that nothing can come into the account of recreation, that is not done with delight.

In matters where his judgment led him to oppose men on a public account, he would do it vigorously and earnestly.

Atterbury's Sermon.

The affection is our Saviour's, the thought uttered by him in the person of Abraham the father of the faithful; who, on the account of that character, is very fitly introduced.

Atterbury.

Thcre tribunes kindled great dissensions between the nobles and the commons, on the account of Coriolanus, whom the latter had impeached.

Swift's Conjux in Athens and Rome.

Nothing can recommend itself to our love, on any other account, but either as it promotes our present, or is a means to allure to future happiness.

Bowes, Sermon.

Semporius gives no thanks on this account.

Add. Sir Cari.

8. A narrative, relation; in this use it may seem to be derived from conte, Fr. a tale, a narration.

The review or examination of an affair taken by authority; as, the magistrate took an account of the tumult.

Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants; and when he had begun to reckon, one was caught unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents.

Matt. xii. 23-34.

10. The relation and reasons of a transaction given to a person in authority.

What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?

Thus it is, Shakespeare's Macbeth.

The true ground of meagery can only be the will and law of a God who sees men in the dark, has in his hands rewards and punishments, and power enough to call to account the proudest offender.

Locke.

11. Explanation; assignment of causes.

It is easy to give account, how it comes to pass, that though all men desire happiness, yet their wills can but be from contentment.

Locke.

It being, in our author's account, a right acquired by beggurig, to rule over those he had beggur, it was not a power possible to be inherited, because the right, being conferrur, and built on, an all perfectly personal, made that power to possessor and impossible to be inheriter.

Locke.

12. An opinion previously established.

There were designed to join with the forces at first, and being brought by the helmsmen, boats to transport the land forces under the wing of the great navy: for they made no account, but that the navy should be absolutely master of the field.

Bacon's Essays, § 240. Spain.

A pordic, strong fellow, that had fold his cloves, upon the sight of a Swallow, made account that Tammur was at hand, and away went his shirt too.

13. The reasons of anything collected.

Being convinced, upon all accounts, that they had the same reason to believe the history of our Saviour, as that of any other person to which they themselves were not actually eye-witneses, they were bound, by all the rules of historical fact and of right reason, to give credit to this history.

Addison.

In law.

Account is, in the common law, taken for a writ or action brought against a man, that, by means of office or business undertaken, it is required an account unto another; as a balliff to his master, or a guardian to his ward.

Atterbury's Sermon.

To account, to compute.

Neither the motion of the moon, whereby months are computed, nor the sun, whereby years are accounted, confesseth of whole centuries.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To assign to, as a debt; with the particle to.

For some years really accrued the yearly sum of two hundred thousand pounds to the king's coffers: and, in truth, it is the only project that was accounted to his own service.

Clarendon.

To hold in esteem; with of.

Silver was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

Atterbury.

To reckon, w. n.

1. To reckon.

The calendar months are likewise arbitrated and unequally settled by the same power; by, which months we, in this day, accounts, and they measure and make up that which we call the Julian.

Holer on Time.

2. To give an account, to assign the cauls; in which sense it is followed by the particle for.

If any one should ask, why our general continued to easy the fast? I know no other reason to account for, but that incomparable love of wealth, which his bet friends allow to be his predominant passion.

Swift.

3. To make up the reckoning; to answer with.

Thus he shall see him grown, when least he fears, at once accounting for his deep arrears.

Dryd. Fri. Sat. viii.

They have no uneasy present of high considerations, wherein the pleasures they now taste must be accounted for; and may, perhaps, be outweighed by the pains which shall then lay hold of them.

Atterbury.

To appear as the medium, by which any thing may be explained.

Such as have a faulty circulation through the lungs, ought to eat very little at a time; because the increase of the quantity of fresh chyme must make that circulation fill more uneasily; which, indeed, is the case of consumptive and some ath-matic persons, and accounts for the symptoms they are troubled with after eating.

Add. Sir Cari.

ACCOUNTABLE. adj. [from account.] Of whom an account may be required; who must answer for: followed by the particle to before the person, and for before the thing.

Accountable to none, but to my conscience and my God alone.

Oldham.

Thinking themselves excused from standing upon their own legs, or being accountable for their own conduct, they very seldom trouble themselves with enquiries.

Lector on Education.

The good magistrate will make no distinction for the judgment is God's; and he will look upon himself as accountable at his bar for the safety of his country.

Atterbury's Sermon.
ACCOUNTABLE. adj. [accountable, L.] Responsible. To be accountable for behavior.

ACCOUNTANCY. n.f. [accountancy, L.] The business or profession of an accountant.

ACCOUNTANT. n.s. [see Account.] A person who keeps an account book or records financial transactions.

ACCOUNT BOOK. n.s. A book containing accounts.

ACCOUNTING. n.s. [from account.] The activity of reckoning, or making up accounts.

ACCOUNTING, n.s. [from account.] The activity of reckoning, or making up accounts.

ACCOUNT-BOOK. n.s. A book containing accounts.

ACCOUNT BOOK, n.s. A book containing accounts.

ACCOUNT-TAKER. n.s. A person who takes or makes accounts.

ACCOUNT-TAKER. n.s. A person who takes or makes accounts.

ACCURATE. adj. [from accurate.] Exact, precise, or correct in detail.

ACCURATELY. adv. In an accurate manner.

ACCURACY. n.s. [accurateness, Lat.] Precision or correctness.

ACCRUED. adj. [accrue, Lat.] Accumulated, having been added or gained over time.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accrue.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accrue.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accruing.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accruing.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accruing.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUING. n.s. [from accruing.] The process of accumulating.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.

ACCRUM. adj. [accrue, Lat.] To accumulate, to increase gradually.
ACC

No man living has made more accurate trials than Bacon, that brightest ornament of France.

3. Determine; precisely fixed.
That conceive the celestial bodies have more accurate influences upon these things below, than indeed they have been given.

Accurately, adv. [from accurate.] In an accurate manner; exactly, without error, nicely.
The fine of incidence is either accurately, or very nearly, in a given ratio to the fine of reflection.

That all these distances, motions, and quantities of matter, should be so accurately and harmoniously adjusted in this great variety of our system, is above the furtitious hints of blind material causals, and must certainly flow from that eternal fountain of wisdom.

Accurate, adj. [from accurate.] Exactness; nicety.
But sometime after, suspecting that in making this observation I had not determined the distance of the spheres with sufficient accuracy, I repeated the experiment.

To Accurse, v. a. [See Curse.] To doom to misery; to invoke misery upon any one.
As if were an unlucky custom, or as if God had not intended it should never shine to give light in things concerning our duty any way towards him.

As Hildebrand accursed and cast down from his throne Henry IV., there were none hardy as to defend their lord.

Sir Walter Ralegh’s Effigies.

Accursed, part. adj.
1. That which is cursed or doomed to misery.
’Tis the most certain sign the world accurseth, That the belt things corrupt are and work.

2. That which deserves the curse; excusable; hateful; detestable; and, by consequence, wicked; malignant.
A blissful swelling
May soon return to us our suffering country.

Under a hard accurset; Shakespeare’s Macbeth.
The chief part of the misery of wicked men, and those accurset spirits, the devil’s, is this, that they are of a disposition contrary to God.

They, like the feed from which they spring,
Against the gods immortal hatred nurs’d.

Accusable, adj. [from the verb accuse.] That which may be censured; blameable; culpable.
There would be a manifest defect, and Nature’s improvement were justly accurset; if animals, so subject unto diseases from bilious causes, should want a proper conveyance for choler.

Brown’s Parrot Errors.

Accusation, n. f. [from accuse.] The act of accusing.
Thus they in mutual accusation feast.
The frauds are high, but rather self-condemning.

And of their vain contest appear no end.
Milton.

The charge brought against any one by the accuser.
You read

These accusations, and their grievous crimes
Committing by your person, and your followers.

Shakespeare.

All accusation, in the very nature of the thing, still supposing, and being founded upon some law; for when there is no law, there can be no transfregession; and where there can be no transfregession, I am sure there ought to be no accusation.

South.

3. [In the sense of the courts.] A declaration of some crime preferred before a competent judge, in order to inflict some judgment on the guilty person.

Aylliff’s Parergon.

Accusative, adj. [accusatives, Lat.] A term of grammar, signifying the relation of the noun, upon which the action implied in the verb terminates.

Accusatory, adj. [from accusa.] That which produces or contains an accusation.

In a charge of adultery, the accuser ought to set forth, in the accusatory libel, some certain and definite things.

Aylliff.

To Accuse, v. a. [accusa., Lat.] To charge with a crime. It requires the particle of before the subject of accusation.

He flipp’d the bear’s-foot of his leafe growth;
And, calling western winds, accus’d the spring of both.

Dryden’s Fugitive Poems.

The professions are accus’d of all the ill practices which seem to be the ill consequences of their principles.

Addison.

2. It sometimes admits the particle for.

Never to bring up a dog of a story, as some, when there is a cat or dog in the house, that can be accus’d for running away with it: But, if there happen to be neither, you must lay it upon the rat, or a damn’d cat.

South.

3. To blame or censure, in opposition to applaud or justification.
Their confidence bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accus’d or else extoll’d another.

Rem. ii. 15.

Your value would your cloath too much accus’d.
And therefore, like themselves, they princes chose.

Dryden’s Timon of Athens.

Accusatory, n. f. [from accusa.] He that brings a charge against another.

There are some persons forbidden to be accus’d, on the score of their sex, as women; others, of their age, as pupils and infants; others, upon the account of some crimes committed by them; and others, on the score of some filthy license they propagate to gain thereby; others, on the score of their poverty, as libertines against their patrons; and others, through a suspicion of calumny, as having once already given false evidence; and, lastly, others are accus’d for accounts of their poverty, than are not worth more than fifty sure.

Aylliff’s Parergon.

—That good men, who drank the poisônous draught,
With mind sincere, and could not with so few
His vile accus’d drank as deep as he.

Dryden.

If the person accus’d maketh his innocence plainly to appear upon his trial, the accusator is immediately put to an ignominious death; and, out of his goods and lands, the innocent person is quadruply recompened.

Guilem. Teazer.

To Accus’tom, v. a. [accusatur, Fr.] To habituate, to enure, with the particle it.
It is used chiefly of persons.

How shall we breathe in other air?
Left pure, through every letter.
It has been some advantage to accus’tom one’s self to books of the same edition.

Watt’s Improvement of the Mind.

To Accustom, v. a. To be wont to do anything.
A beast over-fed, too fat, and, all drownd, faying one woman, that in her first poppin up again, which must living things accus’tom, get hold of the host.
Carv.}

Accustomed, adj. [from accus’tom.] Of long custom or habit; habitual, customary.
Animals even of the same original, extractions, and species, may be diversified by accus’tomable residence in one climate, from what they are in another.

Halle’s Origin of Mankind.

Accustomably, adv. According to custom.

Touching the king’s fines accus’tomably paid for the purchasing of works original, I find no certain beginning of them, and do therefore think that they grew up with the chancery.

Bacon’s Almanicks.

Accustomance, n. f. [accus’tomance, Fr.] Custom, habit, use.
Through accus’tomance and negligence, and perhaps some other causes, we neither feel it in our own bodies, nor take notice of it in others.

Boyle.

Accustomarily, adv. In a customary manner; according to common or customary practice.

Go on, rhetoric, and expost the peculiar eminency which you accus’tomarily marshal before logic to public view.

Cheltenham.

Accustomary, adj. [from accus’tom.] Usual, prattled; according to custom.

Accustomed, adj. [from accus’tom.] According to custom; frequent; usual.

Look how the rubs her hands.—It is an accus’tom’d action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Shakespeare’s Macbeth.

Acc. n. f. [At only signified a piece of money, but any integer, from whence is derived the word ace, or unit. Thus Ace signified the whole inheritance. Arctobuton of Coinso.]

1. An unit; a single point on cards or dice.
When lots are tossed together in a lap, um, or pitch; or if a man blindfold casts a die, what reason in the world can he have to presume, that he shall draw a white stone rather than a black, or throw an ace rather than a six?

South.

4. A small quantity; a particle; an atom.

He will not bite an ace of absolute certainty; but however doubtful or improbable the thing is, coming from him it must go for an indisputable truth.

Government of the Tongue.

I’ll not wag an ace further the whole world shall not bite me to it.

Dryden’s Spanish Friar.

Acophilous, adj. [accioueo., Gr.] Without a head.

Dif.

Acre, adj. [acres, Lat.] Acid, with an addition of roughness, as most fruits are before they are ripe.

Quinque.

Acerbity, n. f. [acribitas, Lat.]
1. A rough four tail.
2. Applied to men, sharpness of temper; severity.

True it is, that the talents for criticism, namely, sharpness, quick censure, vivacity of remark, indeed all acerbity, form rather the gifts of youth than of old age.

Pope.

To Acervate, v. a. [aceros, Lat.]
Heap up.

Dif.

Acervation, n. f. [from accerase.] The act of heaping together.

Acervo, adj. Full of heaps.

Dif.

Acescence, adj. Acceseant, Lat.] That which has a tendency to fonnness or acidity.
The same persons, perhaps, had enjoyed their health as well with a mixture of animal, qualifying with a sufficient quantity of acids; as, bread, vinegar, and fermented liquors.

Arbuthnot on Aliments.

Aceto’s, adj. That which has in it any thing four.

Dif.

Acetosity, n. f. [from aceto.] The state of being aceto, or of containing fonnness.

Dif.

Acente, adj. [from acetum, vinegar, Lat.]
A C H

Lat.] Having the quality of vinegar; four.
Raisins, which consist chiefly of the juice of grapes, in the skins or husks by the evaporation of superficial moisture through their pores, being distilled in a retort, did not afford any vinous, but rather an acetic spirit. Boyle.
A C H E. n.s. [L. n. f. £c£ce, Sax. acce, Gr. oue, now generally written ace, and in the plural aces, of one syllable; the primitive man- ner of pronouncing the short vowels, or poetry, for the sake of the measure.] A continued pain. See ACH.
I'll rack thee with old cramps;
Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar;
That beas'll tremble at thy din. Shakespeare.
A coming snow, thy hoasting corns prejudice.
Old aches will throb, thy hollow tooth will rage.

A C O

He has shown his hero acknowledging and ungrateful, compassionate and heart-hardened; but, at the bottom, sickle and self-interest.
Dryden's Virgin.

Acknowledgment, n.f. [from acknowledge.]
1. Concession of any character in another; as, exclusion, superiority.
The due contemptulation of the human nature deth, by a necessary connexion and chain of causes, carry us up to the unavoidable acknowledgment of the Deity; because it carries every thinking man to an original of every successive individual.
Hale's Origin of Mankind.

2. Concession of the truth of any position.
Immediately upon the acknowledgment of the Christian faith, the cunctah was baptized by Philip.
Hooker.

4. Confession of a benefit received; gratitude.

5. Act of attestation to any concession; as, homage.
There be many wide countries in Ireland, in which the laws of England were never established, nor any acknowledgment of subjection made.
Spenser's State of Ireland.

6. Something given or done in concession of a benefit received.
The second is an acknowledgment to his majesty for the leave of fishing upon his coasts; and though this may not be grounded upon any treaty, yet, if it appear to be an ancient right on our side, and custom on theirs, not determined or extinguished by any treaty between us, it may with justice be insisted on.
Temple's Miscellanies.
A C M E. n.f. [see Acme, Gr.] The height of any thing; more especially used to denote the height of a distemper, which is divided into four periods. 1. The ache, the beginning or first attack. 2. Acheblos, the growth. 3. Acme, the height. And, 4. Parous, which is the dissolution of the distemper. Quincy.
A C O L O TH I S T. n.f. [from Acolis, Gr.] One of the lowest orders in the Romish church, whose office is to prepare the elements for the offices, to light the church, &c. It is duty, according to the papal law, when the Bishop sings mass, to order all the inferior clergy to appear in their proper habits; and to see that all the offices of the church be properly performed; to ordain the acolyths, to keep the sacred vessels.
A C O L Y T E. n.f. The same with Acoi- rhist.
A C O N T E. n.f. [aconitum, Lat.] Properly the herb wolves-bane, but commonly used in poetical language for poison in general.
Our land is from the rage of tyrants freed;
Nor nourishes the lion's angry feed.
Nor poisons acridit is here produced;
Or grows unknown, or is, when known, dreaded.
Dryden.

Des pairs, that acrole does prove,
And certain death to others live,
That poison never yet withstood;
Does nourish mice, and turns to blood.
G r a n o l l e.
A C O R N. n.f. [azaarum, Sax. from ac, an oak, and corn, or grain; that is, the grain or fruit of the oak.] The seed or fruit born by the oak.
Errours, such as are but errors in our younger brows, grow oaks in our older heads, and become infallible.
Stevens.

Content
A C Q

1. The doctrine or theory of sounds.

2. Medicines to help the hearing. Quincy.

To ACQAIN'T. a. [accustomed.] To make familiar with.

To ACQUIRE. a. [acquire.] To gain.

ACQUIRABLE. adj. [from acquire.] That which may be acquired or obtained; attainable.

ACQUISITION. n.s. [acquisitio.] The act of acquiring or gaining.

ACQUISITION. n.s. [acquisitio.] Of or pertaining to acquisition; obtained or gained.

ACQUISITION. n.s. [acquisitio.] The act of acquiring or gaining.

1. A silent appearance of content, diffusing on one side from avoided content, on the other from opposition.

Neither from any of the nobility, nor of the clergy, were there thought so distasteful to the public, or so injurious to the state, as those who openly professed any sign of contradiction to that set up in the Church of England.

2. Satisfaotion, rect. content.

Many indeed have given their pursuets after fame, either from idleness of opinion, or from experience of the little pleasure which attends it, or the better observations and natural endowments of old age, but seldom from a full satisfaction and acquiescence in their present enjoyments of it.

3. Submission, confidence.

The greatest part of the world take up their pursuits concerning good and evil, by an implicit faith in a full acquaintance in the world of events, who shall represent things to them under these characters.

ACQUISITORS. n.s. [acquisitor.] A person who acquires or gains.

ACQUISITORS. n.s. [acquisitor.] The act of acquiring or gaining.

Acquisitions of glory as of empire, here I lay before Your Royal feet.

A State can never arrive to its period in a more deplorable crisis, than when some prince lies heavily, like a vulture, to dismember the dying carcass; by which means he bequeaths not an acquisition to some mighty monarchy, without hopes of a reformation.
ACQUIRING. adj. [acquisitions, Lat.] That which is acquired or gained. He did not in his acquire in his native soil; nature herself, as it were, claiming a final interest in his body, when fortune had done with him. Milton.

ACQUISITION. n. f. [See Acquire.] Acquisition; attainment; gain. Not in use.

His fervant he with new acquist Of true experience from this great event, With peace and consolation hath diffin'd. Milton.

ACQUIRED. v. a. [acquire, Fr. See Acquire.] To Acquire. 1. To set free. To be acquit from my continual smart; But joy her thral for ever to remain, And yield for pledge my poor captivated heart.

2. To clear from a charge of guilt; to absolve; opposed to condemn, either simply with an accusative; as, the jury acquitted him, or with the particles from or of, which is more common, before the crime. If I fis, then thou markest me, and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity. To clear, or to absolve, of all this injustice. By the suffrage of the mob and bell he is already acquitted, and, by the sentence of some, condemned. Dryden.

He that judges, without informing himself to the utmost that he is capable, cannot acquit himself of judging amiss. Locke. Neither do I reflect upon the memory of his majesty, whom I entirely acquit of any imputation. Swift.

3. To clear from any obligation. Steady to my principles, and not displeased with my afflictions, I have, by the blessing of God on my endeavours, overcome all difficulties; and, in some measure, acquitted myself of the debt which I owed the publick, when I undertook this work. Dryden.

4. In a similar sense it is said, The man hath acquitted himself well; that is, he hath discharged his duty. Acquittement. n. f. [from acquire.] The state of being acquitted; or act of acquitting.

The word imports properly an acquittal or discharge of a man upon some precedent accusation, and a full trial and cognizance of his cause hath theretofore been. Acquittal. n. f. In law, is a deliverance and setting free from the suspicion or guiltiness of an offence. Covel.

The constant design of both these orators, was to drive some one particular point, either the condemnation or acquittal of a accused person. Swift.

To Acquitment. v. a. To procure an acquittance; to acquit; a word not in present use.

But if black fandall and foul-fac'd reproach, Attend the fregul of your imposition. Your mere enforcement shall acquit you from all the impure blot and stains thereof. Shakespeare.

ACQUITIES. n. f. [from acquit.] 1. The act of discharging from a debt. But soon shall find

2. A writing testifying the receipt of a debt.

You can produce acquittances For such a sum, from special officers Of Charles his father. Shakespeare's Lov's Labour Lost.

They quickly pay their debt, and then Take no acquittances, but pay again. Donne.

The same man bought and sold to himself, paid the money, and gave the acquittance. Aubrunot.

AERIE. n. f. [Aeige, Sax.] A quantity of land containing in length forty perches, and in breadth, or four thousand eight hundred and forty square yards. Didst.

Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye. Shakespeare. King Lear.

ACRID. adj. [acrior, Lat.] Of a hot biting taste; bitter; so as to leave a painful heat upon the organs of taste. Bitter and acrid differ only by the sharp particles of the former, in a greater quantity of oil than those of the last. Aubrunot on Aliments.

ACRIMONIOUS. adj. Abounding with acrimony; sharp; corrosive. If gall cannot be rendered acrimonious, and bitter of itself, then whatever acrimony or amaritude redounds in it, must be from the admixture of melancholy. Harmony on Complaints. Aubrunot of Aliments.

ACRIMONY. n. f. [acrimonia, Lat.] 1. Sharpness, corrosiveness. There be plants that have a milk in them when they are cut; as, figs, old lettuce, five-thistles, ivy-leaves, etc. The calcium may be an impurity of plant-faction; for those milks have all an acrimony, though one should think they should be benigne. Barrow's Natural History.

The chymists define faults, from some of its properties, to be a body fusible in the fire, combustible again by cold into brittle gloses or crystals, soluble in water, so as to disperse, not meltedly, and having something in it which affects the organs of taste with a sensation of acrimony or sharpness. Aubrunot.

2. Sharpness of temper, severity, bitter-ness of thought or language. John the Baptist set himself, with much acrimony and indignation, to battle this fomentors arrogant conceits of theirs, which made them haft at the doctrine of repentance, as a thing below them, and not at all belonging to them. South.

ACRITUDE. n. f. [from acrid.] An acrid taste; a biting heat on the palate.

In green vined, with his aromatic and sweetish tastes, is joined some acridities. Grew's Museum.

ACROMATICAL. adj. [Acrmatos, Gr. I hear.] Of or pertaining to deep learning; the opposite of exoterical.

ACROSTICKS. n. f. [Acratides, Gr.] Aristotle's lectures on the more nice and principal parts of philosophy, to which none but friends and scholars were admitted by him. Aubrunot.

ACROSPIRE. n. f. [from acrospire, and aegritus, Gr.] A shoot or spurt from the end of seeds before they are put in the ground. Many corns will smite, or have their pulp turned into a substance like thick cream; and will send forth their substance in an acrspire. Martirens.

ACROSPIRED. adj. [from acrospire.] Having sprouts, or having shot out.

For want of turning, when the malt is steeped on the floor, it comes and sprouts at both ends, which is called acrospered, and is fit only for twineers or sharpsenders or distillers.

ACROSS. adv. [from a for at, or the French à, as it is used in à travers, and crois.] A contrary; laid over something so as to cross it.

He hath the conceale not along the strings, but across the strings; and no harp hath the found to melting and prolonged as the Irish harp. Dean.

This view'd, and not enjoy'd, with arms across
He stood, reflecting on his country's loss. Dryden.

There is a set of artizans, who, by the help of several poles, on which they lay acrospered, or with others shoulders, build themselves up into a kind of pyramid; so that you see a pile of men in the size of four or five rows rising one above another. Addison.

ACROSTIC. n. f. [from a and proes, Gr.] A poem in which the first letter of every line being taken, makes up the name of the person or thing on which the poem is made.

ACROSTICK. adj. 1. That which relates to an acrostick.

2. That which contains acrosticks.

Leave writing plays, and choose for thy command Some peaceful province in acrostick land: There thou mayst wings display, and altars raise, And torture one poor word ten thousand ways. Dryden.

ACROTERRA. n. f. [from acros, Gr. the extremity of any body.] Little pedefals without bases, placed at the middle and the two extremities of pedestals, sometimes serving to support statues.

To ACT, v. n. [from acros, Gr., to cut.] 1. To be in action, not to rest.

He hangs between in doubts or self or refl. Pope.

2. To perform the proper functions.

Albeit the will is not capable of being compelled to any of its actions, yet it is capable of being made to act with more or less difficulty, according to the different impressions it receives from motives or objects. South.

3. To prudically arts or duties; to conduct one's self.

'Tis plain that the, who for a kingdom now Would sacrifice his bones, his name, his bow, Not out of love, but interest, or sake, And would, ev'n in my arms, lie thinking of a throne. Dryden's Comus of Granada.

The desire of happiness, and the containment it puts upon us to act for its, no body accounts an abdication of liberty. Locke.

The splendor of his office, is the token of that sacred character which he invades bears, and one of those ought constantly to put him in mind of the other, and excite him to act up to it, through the whole course of his administration. Seneca.

It is our part and duty to co-operate with this grace, vigorously to exert those powers, and act up to those advantages to which it entitles us. He has given his eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame. Shakespeare's King Henry VIII.

4. To produce effects in some passive subject.

Hence 'tis we wait the word cause to find How body acts upon impassive mind. Garrick's Dibden's.
ACT

1. To bear a borrowed character; as, a stage-player.
2. To counterfeits; to feign by action.
3. To advocate; to put in motion; to regulate the movements.
4. To act; to do a deed; an exploit; whether good or ill.
5. Act; the performance of exploits; production of effects.
6. Action; the doing of some particular thing; a step taken; a purpose executed.
7. A state of reality; effect.
8. Incipient agency; tendency to an effort.
9. A part of a play, during which the action proceeds without interruption.
10. A decree of a court of justice, or edict of a legislature.

Vol. I

They make acts for usury to support usurers, repeal daily any wholesome edict established against the rich, and provide more plentiful statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor.

You that are kings, though you wear the crown, have cause'd him, by new acts of parliament, to be brought.

That which admits an act in law to be brought against it; punifiable.

The quality of flattery, or act of flattery, or act of making.

One that has a share in edicts or flocks.

Accustomed to refer by means of law; litigious.

A knave, a rascal, a filthy word-stocking knave, a filthy liar.

Admission, or Actionist, n. [from action.] One that has a share in edicts or flocks.

That which has the power or quality of acting.

These particles have not only a vis inertiae, accompanied with such passive laws of motion, as naturally result from that force, but also they are moved by certain active principles, such as that of gravity, and that which causes fermentation, and the cohesion of bodies.

The quality of being active; opposed to idle or sedentary, or any state of which the duties are performed only by the mental powers.

In a virtuous action that must prove bring forth, Without which, how advice is little worth; Yet they who give good counsel, prove delirious. The in the advice part they cannot serve to their purpose.

Practical; not merely theoretical.

The world hath had in these men fresh experience, of dangerous such affectors errors. Hesiod.

Nimbler, agile and quick.

And some with darts their advice, some criterion. Dry, d.

In grammar.

A verb active is that which signifies action.

Active, or Actionist, n. [from action.] The quality of being active; quickness;

\[ \text{Sidney} \]

For our reward then,

First, all our debts are paid; dangers of law, success, decrees, judgments, against us quoted.

B. Jofan.

In the plural, in France, the name as flocks in England.

Action-taking, adj. Accustomed to refer by means of law; litigious.

A knave, a rascal, a filthy word-stocking knave, a filthy liar.

Actuation, n. [from action.] One that has a share in edicts or flocks.

To activate, c. [from action.] To make active. This work is perhaps used only by the author of the Play, if S. and love, especially being helpful, and their cold affected at nite or faut, will turn water into ice, and that in a few hours; so it may be, it will turn wood or flint clay into. In longer time.

Active, adj. [from action, Lat.] 1. That which has the power or quality of acting.

These particles have not only a vis inertiae, accompanied with such passive laws of motion, as naturally result from that force, but also they are moved by certain active principles, such as that of gravity, and that which causes fermentation, and the cohesion of bodies.

Admission, or Actionist, n. [from action.] One that has a share in edicts or flocks.

That which has the power or quality of acting.

These particles have not only a vis inertiae, accompanied with such passive laws of motion, as naturally result from that force, but also they are moved by certain active principles, such as that of gravity, and that which causes fermentation, and the cohesion of bodies.
AC T

nimbleness. This is a word more rarely used than activity.

The virtue of either age may correct the defects of both: and good for succession, that young men may be learners, while men in age are actors.

He who writes an Encyclopaedia for his own mind, and with gladly exhaust such pranks, as he was famous for, acted again, though he dares not, is an actor of them all; though he watched every turn of his soul, and incident of his life; and, if we remit our activity, will take advantage of our indolence.

AC T I O N. n. f. [from activ.] The quality of being active, applied either to things or persons.

Salt put to ice, as in the producing of the artificial ice, increaseth the activity of cold. Bacon.

In certain, it is certain; and really. In certain, it is common.

Boyle.

particular things, in a power, which would, though he acts, yet, and if we remit our activity, will take advantage of our indolence.

ACTOR. n. f. [actor, Lat.]

1. That acts, or performs any thing.

2. That perforates a character; a stage-player.

Would you have Such an Hercules after in the scene, And not this hydra? They must sweat no less To fit their proper, than 't expect their part. Ben Jonson.

When a good actor doth his part prettily, In every act he our attention draws, That at the last he may find just applause. Dryden.

These false beauties of the stage are no more lasting than a rainbow; when the actor ceases to shine upon them, they vanish in a twinkling. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

ACTRESS. n. f. [actric, Fr.]

1. That performs any thing.

Virgil has, indeed, admitted Fame as an actress In the Eneid, but the part the acts is very short, and none of the most admired circumstances of that divine work.

Addison.

We forgets have just such actors.

We had, for all the world, when human creatures; And therefore I that was an actress here, Play all my tricks in hell, mistake, here. Dryden.

2. A woman that plays on the stage.

ACTUAL. adj. [actual, Fr.]

1. That comprehends activity.

In this flummery agitation, besides her habit and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard of her play? Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. Really in all; only merely potential.

Sin, there in power: before Once actual; now in body, and to dwell Habitual habitant.

Milton.

3. In act; not purely in speculation.

For be that but conceive a crime in thought, Contraets the danger of an actual fault: Then what must he expect, that will proceed To finish sin, and work up thoughts to deeds? Dryden.

ACTUALITY. n. f. [from actual.] The state of being actual.

The actuality of their spirituall qualities is thus impressed, though their potentiality be not so destroyed; and thus a crafts, extended, imperceptible, passive, divisible, unintelligible substance is great in every thing, which they contain. Ogilby.

ACTUALLY. adv. [from actual.] In act; in effect; really. All mankind acknowledge themselves able and sufficient to do many things, which actually they never do.

Sudh.

One of the Chronicles, and you will think you were reading a history of the kings of Israel or Judah, where the historians were actually informed, and where, by a particular scheme of providence, the kings were distingued by judgments or blis-
ADD

You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant!
But I, the flower, do not iron; for my heart
Is true as steel.

Shakespeare.

Let him change his lodging from one part of the town to another, which is a great adamant of acquaintance.

Bacon.

ADAMANT. adj. [from adamant.]

Hard as adamant.

He weapons himself,
Made arms ridiculous, useless the forger.
Of brazens shields and spears, the hammer'd cutlasses,
Clasps his temper'd steel, and trocks of mail.

Adamant proof.

This word occurs, perhaps, only in this passage.

ADAMANTINE. adj. [adaman'tinæ, Lat.]

1. Made of adamant.

Wide is the fronting gate, and rai'd on high
With adamantine columns, threats the sky.

Dryden.

2. Having the qualities of adamant; as,
Hardness, indissolubility.

Could Eve's weak hand, extended to the tree,
In finder rend that adamantine chains.

White edge, gold and crimson-encased,
And which to God's own chair doth fix'd remain?

Devis.

An eternal immensity must have ponder'd the world
From all things that had been fixed and fastened Everlasting with the adamantine chains of Specific gravity; if the Almighty had not spoken
And said, Let earth bring forth grass, the herb Yielding, and the fruits from trees, fruit;
And it was so.

Bentley.

In adamantine chains shall death be bound,
And hell's grim tyrant feel 'tis eternal wound.

Pope.

The adamantine bonds the chief refrain,
The dire restraint his wisdom will defeat,
And then reform him to his regal seat.

Pope.

ADAM'S-APPLE. n. s. [in anatomy.]

A prominent part of the throat.

To ADAPT, v. a. [adap'to, Lat.] To fit
One thing to another; to fit; to proportion.

'Tis true, but let it not be known,
My eyes are somewhat dimm'd grown;
For nature, always in the right,
To preserve the eyes, adap'ts and lights.

Swift.

It is not enough that nothing offends the ear,
But a good poet will adapt the very sounds,
as well as words, to the things he treats of.

Pope's Letters.

ADAPTATION. n. s. [from adapt.] The art of fitting one thing to another; the fitness of one thing to another.

Some species there be of middle natures, that
Is, of bird and beast; as bats; yet are their parts together, that we cannot define the beginning or ending of either, there being a communion of both, rather than adaptation or cement of the one unto the other.

Brown's Valley Errours.

Adaptation may be in part ascribed, either to form, or its calculation in the prefixed grief, or to the exquisite adaptation of the almost num'rous, though very fewl, aspiring's of the one, and the numerous little cavities of the other; whereby the foulls do lock in with one another, or as, it were,
which was clasping another.

Bentley.

ADAPTATION. n. s. [from adapt.] The art of fitting.

It were alone a sufficient work to show all the mercurialists, the wife contrivances, and prudent adaptations, of these admirable machines, for the sublimation of their wits.

Coytes.

ADAPTIVENESS. n. s. [for adaptedness, from adapt.]

Some notes are to display the adaptations of the found in the fudge.

Dr. Newm.

This word I have found no where elc.

ADD

To ACCORPORATE. v. a. [from ad and corpus.] To unite one body with another; more usually wrote accuplicate; which fce.

To ADD. v. a. [addo, Lat.]

1. To join something to that which was before.
Mark if his birth makes any difference,
If to his words it adds one grain of fente. Dryden.
They, whose wofles have the highest flown,
Add not to his immortal memory,
But do an act of friendship to their own. Dryden.

2. To perform the mental operation of adding one number or conception to another.
To add to is proper, but to add together seeks a fallac.
Whatever positive ideas a man has in his mind, of any quantity, he can repeat it, and add it to the former, as easily as he can add together the ideas of two days, or two years.

Locke.

ADDABLE. adj. [from add.] That to which something may be added.
Ad
dible is more proper. It signifies more properly that which may be added.

The first number in every addition is called the addable number, the other, the number or numbers added, and the number invented by the addition, the aggregate or sum.

Cocker.

To ADVERTISE. v. a. [adde'mut, Lat.]
To take or afferior tithe.

Dict.

To ADVERTISE. v. a. [from dem.]
To esteem or account.
This word is now out of u. e.

She seems to be add'ed to worth-less base,
As to be mov'd to such an infamy.

Daniel's Civil War.

A'DER. n. s. [Eecepæ, Ectetæ, Nabnæ, as it seems from eetæ, Sax. poïton.]
A ferment, a viper, a poisonous reptile; perhaps of any species. In common language, adders and snakes are not the same.

Or is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin content the eye?

Shakespeare.

An adder did it; for, with doubling lights.
Than thine, thou ferpent, never ador blung.

Shakespeare.

The adder teaches us where to strike, by her
Curious and fearful defending of her head. Dryg.

A'DER'S GRASS. n. s. The name of a plant, imagined by Skinner to be so named, because serpent's lurk about it.

A'DER'S TONGUE. n. s. [o'kingi'sium, Lat.]
The name of an herb.
It hath no visible flower; but the seeds are produced on a spike, which resembles a ferpent's tongue; which seed is contained in many longitudiinal cells.

Miller.

The most common simples are comfrey, mugwort, garmony, fentice, sul't-lenton, fluelise, periwood, and the like; and his property is to add.

A'DER'S WORK. n. s. An herb so named, on account of its wort, real or supposed, of curing the bite of ferpents.

ADDABLE. adj. [from add.] Possible to be added. See ADDABLE.

The clearest idea it can get of infinity, is the confused, incomprehensible remainder of endles, addible, or that which affords no proffes on stop, or boundary.

Locke.

ADDIBILITY. n. s. [from addible.] The possibility of being added.
This endless addition, or addibility (of any one or the word better) of numbers, so apparent to the mind, is that which gives us the clearest and most distinct idea of infinity.

Locke.

ADDICE. n. s. [for which we corruptly speak and write addic, from abscère, Sax.
an axe.]
The addice hath his blade made thin and somewhat arching. As the axe hath its edge parallel to its handle, so the addice hath its edge athwart the handle, and is ground to a baffle on its edge in order to aid its edge.

Macket's Mechanical Exercises.

To ADDICT. v. a. [addic, Lat.]
1. To devote, to dedicate, in a good sense; which is rarely used.

Ye know the house of Stephanus, that they have addicted themselves to the ministry of the faints.

1 Cor. xii. 15.

2. It is commonly taken in a bad sense;
as, be addicted himself to vice.

3. To devote one's self to any person, party, or persuasion. A Latinism.

I am neither author nor fuster of any fict: I will have no man addic himself to me; but I have any thing right, defend it as truth's.

Ban Jonson.

ADDICTEDNESS. n. s. [from addicted.]
The quality or state of being addicted.

Those know how little I have remitted of my former addictedness to make chymical experiments.

Byle.

ADDICITION. n. s. [addiction, Lat.]
1. The act of devoting, or giving up.

2. The slate of being devoted.

It is a wonder how his greatness should gian,
Since his addition was to corves vain;
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports.

Bentley.

ADDICATION. n. s. [addication, Lat.]
The addition, or thing added.

Iron will not incorporate with brass, nor other metals, of itself, by simple fire: so as the enquiry must be upon the calculation, and the addition,
and the charge of them.

Bacot.

In a palace there is first the cafe and fabric;
or moles of the structure itself; and, besides that, there are certain additions that contribute to its crosten and use; as, various fountains, rare fountains and aqueducts, divers things appendic cated to it.

Hate's Origin of Mankind.

ADDITION. n. s. [from add.]
1. The act of adding one thing to another; opposed to diminution. The infinite distance between the Creator and the abod of all creatures, can never be measured, nor exhausted by endles addition of finite degrees.

Bentley.

2. Addition, or the thing added.

It will not be madeily done, if any of our own wisdom intrude or interfere, or be willing to make additions to what Christ and his apostles have deigned.

Hammonds.

Some such resemblances, methinks, I find
Of our last evening's talk, in this thy dream.
But with addition strange.

Milton.

The abolishing of vileness, together with the custom permitted among the nobles, of selling their lands, was a mighty addition to the power of Swifts.

3. In arithmetick.

Addition is the reduction of two or more numbers of like kind together into one sum or total.

Cocker's Arithmetic.

4. In law. A title given to a man over, and above his christian name and surname, shewing his estate, degree, occupation, trade, age, place of dwelling,

Cowell.

Only retain
The name, and all the' addition to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution,
Beloved sons, be yours; which to confirm,
This coronet part between you.

Shakespeare, King Lear.
It lifted up its head, and did address
Its last motion, as it would speak.
Shakespeare, Hamlet.

Then Turnus, from his chariot leaping light,
Address'd himself on foot to single fight.
Dryden.

2. To get ready; to put in a state for immediate use.
They fell directly on the English battle; where Upon the ear of Warick address'd his men to take the flank.
Hogarth.

Duke Frederick hearing, how every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forefost,
Address'd him a mighty power, which were on foot,
In his own conduct purposely to take
His brother Germanick
Shakespeare.

3. To apply to another by words, with various forms of construction.
To-night to Harflee we will be your guest,
To-morrow for the march we are address'd.
Shakespeare.

4. Sometimes without a proposition.
To such I would address with this most affectionate petition.
Dryden.

5. Sometimes with to.
Address'd to Polixen, his great patron, and himself
To a young poet, he began to affect his native character, which is sublimity.
Dryden.

6. Sometimes with the reciprocal pronoun;
as, be address'd himself to the general.

7. Sometimes with the accusative of the matter of the addres, which may be the nominative to the passive.
The young hero had address'd his prayers to him for his assistance.
Dryden.

The prince himself, with awful dread pres'd,
His own to great Apollo thus address'd.
Dryden.

His suit was common; but, above the rest,
To both the brother-princes thus address'd.
Dryden.

8. To address [in law] is to apply to the king in form.
The representatives of the nation in parliament,
And the privy-council, they address'd the king to have it recalled.
Swift.

ADDRESS. n. s. [address, Fr.]
1. Verbal application to any one, by way of peroration; petition.
Henry, in knots involving Emmas's name,
Had half confess'd and half conceal'd his flame.
Upon this tree; and, as the tender marks,
Grew with them, and widen'd with the bark,
Venus had heard the virgin's soft address,
That, as the wound, the passion might increase.
Prior.

Most of the persons, to whom these addresse'd are made, are not wise and skilful judges, but influenced by their own foul appetites and passions.
Warre's Improvement of the Mind.

Courtship.

They often have reveal'd their passion to me:
But tell, me whose address thou favour'st most;
I long to know, and yet I dread to hear it.
Swift.

A gentleman, whom, I am sure, you yourself
Or have approved, made his address's to me.
Dryden.

3. Manner of addressing another; as, we say, a man of an happy or a pleasing address;
a man of an awkward address.

4. Skill, dexterity.
I could young and memorable instances from my own observation, of events imputed to the profound skill and address of a minister, which,
in reality, were either more effects of negligence, weakness, humour, passion, or pride, or at best but the natural course of things left to themselves.
Swift.

ADD. m. n. f. [from addres.]
The person that address'd or petitioned.

ADDITION. n. f. [from addition.] A word applied to those muscles that bring forward, close, or draw together the parts of the body to which they are annexed.
Quinny.

ADDITIONAL. adj. [from addition.] That which is added.
Our calendar being once reformed and set right, it may be kept for, without any considerable caution, for many ages, by omitting one leap-year in the end of every 134 years.
Holder on Time.

The greatest wise, that ever were produced in one age, lived together in so good an understanding with each other, and so much generosity, that each of them receives an additional luster from his contemporaries.
Addition.

They include in them that very kind of evidence, which is supposed to be powerful: and do, within, surpass several other additional proofs, of great force and clearness.
Artillery.

ADDITIONAL. n. f. Addition; something added. Not in use.
May be some little additional, may further the incorporation.
Barnet.

ADDITIONARY. adj. [from addit.] That which has the power or quality of adding.
The additury fiction gives to a great man a larger share of reputation than belongs to him, to enable him to serve some good end or purpose.
Addititious.

ADDITIONAL. adj. [from add.] What has the power or quality of adding.
The additury fiction gives to a great man a larger share of reputation than belongs to him, to enable him to serve some good end or purpose.
Addititious.

ADDIT. v. a. [from add.] To make addit; to corrupt; to make barren.
This is also evidenced in eggs, whereas the found ones sink, and such as are added swim; as do also those that are termed hypomena, or wind-eggs.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

ADDIT. v. n. To grow; to increase.
Object.

Where I embraceth the tree very fore,
Kill ivy, else tree will addit no more.
Talfier; Husbandry.

ADDIT-PATED. adj. Having added brains. See ADDLE.
Poor flames in metre, dull and addit-pated,
Who rhyme below even David's plaints transfixed.
Pater.

ADDRESS. v. a. [addresser, Fr. from derez, Span. from dirigir, directum, Lat.]
1. To prepare one's self to enter upon any action; as, be address'd himisf to the work. It has to before the thing.
With him the Palmer else, in habit fed much gen,
Himself address'd to that adventure hard.
Swift.
ADH

Adhesive. adj. [from adhesion.] Stick ing; tenacious. If flow, yet, adhesive to the trad.

To ADHIBIT. v. a. [adhibites, Lat.] To apply; to make use of.

Salt, a necessary ingredient in all sacristies, was adhibited and required in this view only as an emible of purification.

Prefaitd Forbes's Letter to Mr. Bllsh.

ADHIBITION. n.f. [from adhibitus.] Application; use.

To ADJACENCY. n.f. [from adjacents.] Lat.

1. The state of lying close to another thing.
2. That which is adjacent. See ADJACENT.

Because the Cape hath sea on both sides near it, and other lands, remote as it were, eqal distance from it; therefore, at that point, the needle is not distracted by the vicinity of adja-cents.

Brewer's Pullar Eorates.

ADJACENT. adj. [adjacents, Lat.] Lying near or close; bordering upon something.

It may corrupt within itself, although no part of it issue into the body adjacent.

Bacon.

Uniform pellicul medium, such as water, have no sensible reflection but in their external superficies, whereas they are adjacent to other superficies of a different density.

Newton.

ADJACENT. n.f. That which lies next another.

The sense of the author goes visibly in its own train, and the words receiving a determined sense from their connections and adjacents, will not consent to give countenance and colour to what must be supported at any rate.

Locke.

ADIAPHOROUS. adj. [a'diapberus, Gr.] Neutral; particularly used of some spirits and faults, which are neither of an acid or alkaline quality, nor faulty.

Our adiaiphorous spirit may be obtained, by dis tilling the liquor that is afforded by woods and divers other bodies.

Brewer.

ADIAFHYRI. n.f. [adiafia, Gr.] Neutrality; indifference.

To ADJECT. v. a. [adjectis, adjectum, Lat.] To add; to put to another thing.

ADJECION. n.f. [adjeclion, Lat.]

1. The act of adjecting, or adding.
2. The thing adjected, or added.

That unto every pound of sulphur, an adjection of one ounce of quicksilver unto every pound of pete, one ounce of sal-ammoniacum, will much extend the force, and consequently the reports, I find no revery.

Brown's Pulver Eoratii.
2. To put off; to defer; to let fl ay to a future time.

Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Whys halt thou thus adjourn'd?
The grace for his merits due,
Being to do your tours tamed.
Crown high the goblets with a cheerful draught;
Enjoy the present hour, adjourn the future thought again.
The formation of animals being foreign to my purpose, I shall adjourn the consideration of it to another occasion.

Adjudgment. n. f. [adjournment, Lat.]
1. An allignment of a day, or a putting off till another day.

Adjudgment in eyes, an appointment of a day, when the justices in eyes mean to sit again.

2. Delay; procrastination; dimission to a future time.

We will and we will not, and then we will not again, and we will. At this rate we run our lives out of adjournments from time to time, out of a fantastical levity that holds us off and on, betwixt hawk and buzzard.

Adjournous. adj. [adipous, Lat.] Pat. Didi.
Adjurt. n. f. [adipitus, Lat.] A passage for the conveyance of water under ground; a passage under ground in general, a term among the miners.
For conveying away the water, they stand in need of sundry devices; as, aditus, pumps, and wheels, driven by a stream, and interchangeably filling and emptying two buckets.

Adjourn. n.f. [from adoe, aditum, Lat.]
The act of going to another.

To Adjudge. v. a. [adjudice, Lat.]
1. To give the thing controverted to one of the parties by a judicial sentence, with the particle to before the person.
The way of disputing in the schools is by pinning on one topical argument; by the success of which, victory is adjudged to the opponent, or defendant.

The great competitors for Rome, Caesar and Pompey, on Pharsalian plains, where fell Belona, with one final stroke, Adjourn'd the empire of this globe to one. Phillips.

2. To sentence, or condemn to a punishment; with to before the thing.
But though thou art adjudged to the death; yet I will favour thee in what I can. Shaksp.

3. Simply, to judge; to decree; to determine.

He adjudged him unworthy of his friendship, purposing sharply to revenge the wrong he had received.
Kyd.

To Adjudicate. v. a. [adjudice, Lat.]
To adjudge; to give something controverted to one of the litigants, by a judicial sentence.

Adjudication. n. f. [adjudication, Lat.]
The act of judging, or of granting something to a litigant, by a judicial sentence.

To Adjudicate. v. a. [adjudge, Lat.]
To yoke to; to join to another by a yoke.

ADJ. 2. Learning is but an adjunct to itself, and where we are, our learning likewise.
Skak.

But I make haste to consider you as abstracted from a court, which (if you will give me leave to use a term of love) is only an adjunct, not a property, of happiness.
Dryden.

The talent of discretion, in its several adjuncts and circumstances, is no where so serviceable as to the clergy.

2. A person joined to another. This sense rarely occurs.

He made him the associate of his heir-apparent, together with the lord Cottington (as an adjunct of singular experience and truth) in foreign travels, and in a bafflement of Westm. Locke.

A'junct. adj. United with; immediately consequent.

So well, that what you bid me undertake, though that my death were adjunct to my act, I'd do.

Adjudication. n. f. [adjunctio, Lat.]
1. The act of adjoining, or coupling together.

2. The thing joined.

Adjudicative. n. f. [adjunctivus, Lat.]
1. He that joins.

2. That which is joined.

Adjuration. n. f. [adjuration, Lat.]
1. The act of adjuring, or proposing an oath to another.

2. The form of oath proposed to another.

When they learned men saw fickleness and farrny cured, they deemed it a shame to the demons and evil spirits to confound themselves, no gods, by persons, whom only made use of prayer and adjurations in the name of their crucified Saviour; how could they, who doubt of their Saviour's power on the like occasions?

Adjuration on the Christian Religion.

To ADJURE. v. a. [adjure, Lat.]
To impoie an oath upon another, prescribing the form in which he shall swear.

Thou know'st, the magistrates and princes of my country came in, sufficed, commanded, threatened, urged, Adjurd by all the bonds of civil duty, and of religion, preft to such as it was, How honourable.

Ye lamps of heaven! he, spake, and lifted high his hands now free, thence a venerable fly!
Ye famous altar! whose flames I fed,
Be all of you adjured.

Dryden.

To ADJURT. v. a. [adj ur, Fr.]
1. To regulate; to put in order; to settle in the right form.
Your Lordship removes all our difficulties, and supplies all our wants, faster than the most visionary politician can adjust his scheme.

2. To reduce to the true state or standard; to make accurate.
The mixtures of modern modes, for the most part, want standards in nature, whereby men may reconcile and adjust their significations; therefore they are very various and doubtful.

3. To make conformable. It requires the particle to before the thing to which the conformity is made.
As to the accomplishment of this remarkable prophecy, whoever reads the account given by Josephus, wherein he speaks of their sacrifices and ceremonies, with what it is of our Saviour's, would think the historian had been a Christian; and that he had nothing else in view, but to adjust the event to the future.

ADJURTMENT. n. f. [adjurtment, Fr.]
1. Regulation; the act of putting in method; settlement.

The father and carrier adjurtment of this affair, I am constrained to adjourn to the larger treatise.
Woodward.
4. To administer the sacraments, to distribute them.

Have not they the old popish custom of administering the blessed sacrament of the holy eucharist without their wafer? Hocker.

5. To administer an oath; to propose or require an oath authoritatively; to tender an oath.

Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven, to keep the oath that we administer. Shakespeare.

6. To administer physic; to give physic as it is wanted.

He was carried on men's shoulders, administering physic and phlebotomy. Wafer's Voyage.

7. To administer to; to contribute; to bring supplies.

I must not omit, that there is a fountain rising in the upper part of my garden, which forms a little wandering rill, and administers to the pleasure, as well as the plenty, of the place. Spectator.

8. To perform the office of an administrator, in law. See Administrator.

Neal's order was never performed, because the executioner did not administer. Archibald and Pope.

ADMIRATION, n. s. [administratio, Lat.]

1. The act of administering or conducting any employment; as, the conducting the public affairs; dispensing the laws.

I then did as the person of your father; The image of his power lay then in me: And in the administration of his laws. While I was busy for the commonwealth, Your highness pleased to forget my place. Shakespeare.

In the short time of his administration, he shone so powerfully upon me, that, like the heat of a Russian summer, he ripened the fruits of poetry in a cold climate. Dryden.

2. The active or executive part of government.

If you pass for a maxim in state, that the administration cannot be placed in too few hands, nor the legislature in too many. Swift.

3. Collectively, to whom the care of public affairs is committed; as, the administration has been opposed in parliament.

In regard to sacraments, to observe their force, and their form of administration. Hocker.

4. Distribution; exhibition; dispensation.

There is, in sacraments, to observe their force, and their form of administration. Hocker.

By the universal administration of grace, begun by our blessed Saviour, enlarged by his apostles, carried on by their immediate successors, and to be completed by the rest to the world's end, and all types that darkened this faith are enlightened. Spinal's Sermons.

ADMIRATIVE, adj. [from admistrator, Lat.]

That which administers; that by which any one administers.

ADMINISTRATOR, n. s. [admiistrator, Lat.]

1. Is properly taken for him that has the goods of a man dying intestate committed to his charge by the ordinary, and is accountable for the same, whenever it shall please the ordinary to call upon him thereunto. Covell.

He was wonderfully diligent to observe what became of the king of Arragon, in holding the kingdom of Cadille, and whether he old held it in his own right, or as administrator to his daughter. Bacon's Henry VII.

2. He that officiates in divine rites.

I feel my confidence bound to remember the death of Christ, with some society of Christians, or other, since it is a most plain command whether the person, who distributes these elements, be only an occasional or a settled administrator. Watts.

3. He that conducts the government.

The reverence of the prince, or chief administrator of the civil power. Swift.

ADMINISTRATRIX, n. s. [Lat.] She who administers in confluence of a will.

The office of administrator.

ADMINISTRATORSHIP, n. s. [from administrator.] The quality of being administrable.

To be admired; worthy of admiration; of power to excite wonder: always taken in a good sense, and applied either to persons or things.

The more power he hath to hurt, the more admirable is his praise, that he will not hurt. Sidney.

God was with them in all their afflictions, and, at length, by working their admirable deliverance, did testify that they had him in whom they trusted. Hocker.

ADMIRABLE, adj. [admirabilis, Lat.]

What admirably things occur in the remains of several other philosophers! Short, I confess, of the rules of Christianity, but generally above the lives of Christians. South's Sermons.

You can at most To an indifferent lover's praise pretend: But you would spoil an admirable friend. Dryden.

The quality of being admirable; the power of raising wonder.

So as to raise wonder; in an admirable manner.

ADMIRABLY, adv. [from admirable.] The theatre is the most splendid of any I ever saw, and so admirably contrived, that, from the very depth of the floor, the lowest found may be heard distinctly to the farthest part of the audience, as in a whispering place; and yet, raise your voice as high as you please, there is nothing like an echo to cause the least confusion. Addison.

ADMIRAL, n. s. (Fr. of uncertain etymology.)

An officer or magistrate that has the government of the king's navy, and the hearing and determining all causes, as well civil as criminal, belonging to the sea. Covell.

2. The chief commander of a fleet.

He arts, in battle at sea, overthrew Redecius, turned-Admiral, in Spain, in which fight the admiral, with his son, and seven of his gallies taken. Keillor.

Addison.

A most admirable friend. Dryden.

What admirably things occur in the remains of several other philosophers! Short, I confess, of the rules of Christianity, but generally above the lives of Christians. South's Sermons.

You can at most To an indifferent lover's praise pretend: But you would spoil an admirable friend. Dryden.

To ADMIRER, v. a. [admirare, Lat. admiring, fr. admiring.] 1. To regard with wonder; generally in a good sense.

'Tis here that knowledge wonder, and there is an admiration that is not the daughter of ignorance. This induced famously both the undeserving effect; but the philosophic passion truly admires and adores the supreme efficient. Giovanni.

2. It is sometimes used, in more familiar speech, for to regard with love.

3. It is used, but rarely, in an ill sense.

You have displeas'd the mirth, broke the good meeting With molt admir'd disorder. Shaksp. Macbeth.

ADMIRER, n. s. [from admirer.]

1. The person that wonders, or regards with admiration.

Neither Virgin nor Horace would have gained to great reputation, had they not been the friends and admirers of each other. Addison.

Who must to shun or hate mankind pretend, Some admirers, and others a friend. Pope.

2. In common speech, a lover.

ADMIRRINGLY, adv. [from admirer.] With admiration; in the manner of an admiring.

The king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mournfully. Shaksp. All's well that ends well. We may yet further admire, and observe, that men may give freethread where they have not given before. Boyle.

ADMISSIBLE, adj. [admittit, admittimus, Lat.] That which may be admitted.

Suppose that this supposition were admitsimus, yet this position cannot be inconsistent with the eternity of the divine nature and essence. Holt's Origin of Mankind.

ADMISSION, n. s. [admitter, Lat.] 1. The act or practice of admitting.

There was also enacted that charitable law, for the admission of poor felons, without fee, whereby poor men became rather able to vext, than unable to fret. Bacon's Henry VII.

By means of our military situation, and our rare admiring of strangers, we know most part of the habitable world, and are ourselves unknown. Bacon's New Atlantis.

2. The state of being admitted.

My father saw your illustrious parent, And my admission shew'd his face to you. Dryden.
ADM

Admiration; the power of entering, or being admitted. All things enter some degree of heat, none even freezing, nor in the length and severest frost; especiallly those, where there is such a fire and disposition of the parts as gives free and easy admittance to this heat. Woodward's Natural History.

4. The elements are now in a few regions, except the earth. All metals may be calcined by strong waters, or by admittance of salt, sulphur, and mercury.

5. The allowance of an argument; the grant of a position not fully proved.

To ADMITT. v. a. [admitte, Lat.] 1. To suffer to enter; to grant entrance. Milton. Does not one table Bavius still admit? Pope.

2. To suffer to enter upon an office; in which sense the phrase of admission into a estate, &c. is used. Johnson.

The treasurer found it no hard matter to far to terrify him, that, for the king's service, as was pretended, he admitted, for a fix-clerk, a person recommended by him. Chaucer.

3. To allow an argument or position. Suppose no weapon can thy valour's pride Subdue, that by no force thou mayst be won, Admit no steel can hurt or wound thy hide, And be it heav'n hath such favour done. Fair. 1618.

This argument is like to have the less effect on me, seeing I cannot easily admit the inference. Locke.

4. To allow, or grant in general; sometimes with the particle in.

If you once admit of a latitude, that thoughts may be excited, and images raised above the life, that leads you insensibly from your own principles to mine. Dryden.

ADMISSIBLE. adj. [from admit.] The perfirm or thing which may be admitted. Adams. There is not a harder bladder than the whale, that can withstand a ball; and a parliament not admissible, a faculty that need not the fun to scatter it. Brown.

The clerk, that is presented, ought to prove to the bishop, that he is a deacon, and that he has orders; otherwise, the bishop is not bound to admit him; for, as the law then stood, a deacon was admissible. Asfle's Parergon.

ADMISSION. n. s. [from admit.] The act of admitting; allowance or permission to enter.

We cannot, any man's concet, to think it lawful, that every man which lietbe should take up his charge in the church; and therefore a solemn admission is of such necessity, that, without it, there can be no church-choir. Hooker.

As to the admission of the weighingly clearest parts of the air into the blood, through the coats of the veins, it seems contrary to experiments upon dead bodies. Arbeau in Alimenta.

2. The power or right of entering.

1 If I do line one of their hands — the gold Which buys admission. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Surely a daily expectation at the gates, is the readiest way to gain admittance into the house. Scott's Sermons.

There's news from Bertran; he desires Admissio to the kings, and cries aloud, This day shall end our fears. Dryden.

There are some ideas which have admittance only through one sense, which is peculiarly adapted to receive them.

3. Causing or prerogative of being admitted to great persons: a senec now out of use.

Sir John, you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, of great adventisse, authentick in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtly, and learned preparations. Shakespeare.

4. Concealment of a position.

No cor the Pythagorean give easy admittance thereunto; for, holding that separate souls succes- sively supplied other bodies, they could hardly allow the raising of souls from other worlds. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To ADMIT. n. s. [admittere, Lat.] To mingle with something else. Hawkins.

ADMISSION. n. s. [from admis.] The union of one body with another, by mingling them. Mercury may be calcined by strong waters, or by admittance of salt, sulphur, and mercury.

Raven. The elements are now in a few regions, except the earth. All metals may be calcined by strong waters, or by admittance of salt, sulphur, and mercury. Woodward's Natural History.

ADMISSION. n. s. [admittere, Lat.] The body mingled with another; perhaps sometimes the act of mingling.

Whatever science, or artifice, at any time redounds in it, must be derived from the admittance of another sharp bitter substance. Harvey on Conversions.

A wasp which to the eye appears to be nothing but a mere flutter in the air, to the fly, to the bee, doth, infoments a pungent admittance of salt, sulphur, alum, or some other mineral. Woodward's Natural History.

To ADMONISH. 1. To warn of a fault; to reprovet, gen- tly; to counsel against wrong practises; to put in mind of a fault or a duty; with the particle of, or against, which is more rare; or the infinitive mood of a verb.

One of his cardinals, who better knew the inte- rest of affairs, advised him against that un- fallible piece of ingenuity. Beacham in Pocket.

He of his wicked ways Shall them admishe, and before them set The paths of righteousness. Milton.

But when he was admonished by his subject, he changed, gently circling in the air, and falling, to the ground. Dryden.

ADMONISHER. n. s. [from admonish.] The person that admonishes, or puts another in mind of his faults or duty.

Hence was a mild yet heaven-like, a countrystile fit for the gentle times of Augustus. Dryden.

ADMONISHMENT. n. s. [from admonish.] Admition; the notice by which one is put in mind of faults or duties; a word not often used.

But yet be wary in the admonishment. — Thy grave admonishment prevail with me. Shakespeare's Henry V. p. 1.

To th' infinitely Good we owe Immortal thanks, and his admonishment. Received, with solemn pious obedience Immutably his sovereign will, the end. Of what we are. Milton.

ADMONITION. n. s. [admonitio, Lat.] The hint of a fault or duty; counsel; gentle reproval.

They must give our teachers leave, for the saving of faults, to intermingle sometimes with other more necessary things, admonition concerning thes things not unessential. Hooker.

ADMONITORY. adj. [admonitorius, Lat.] That which admonishes.

The sentence of reason is either mandatory, shewing what must be done; or else permissive, declaring only what may be done; or, thirdly, admonitory, opening what is the most convenient for us. Hooker.

ADMURMURATION. n. s. [admormurare, Lat.] The act of murmuring, or whispering to another. Diz.'

To ADMove. 1. To move a thing to another. A word not in use.

If, upon the power of lodestone or iron, we ad- move the north-pole of the lodestones, the powders, or small divisors, will erect and conform them- selves thereto. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

ADO. n. s. [from the verb to ad, with a before it, as the French afferir, from a and faire.] 1. Trouble, difficulty.

He took Clementina prisoners, whom, with much ado, he keepeth alive; the Helots being villainously cruel. dryden.

They moved, and in the end perused, with much ado, the people to bind themselves by solemn oath. Hooker.

He kept the borders and marches of the pale with much ado, he held many parliaments, wherein many laws were made. Sir John DCourt.

With much ado, he partly kept awaie; Or, sufficiently, and set his people at ease. Dryden.

2. Battle; tumult; business; sometimes with the particle about.

Let's follow, to see the end of this ado. Shakespeare.

All this ado about Adam's fatherhood, and the greatness of its power, helps nothing to establish the power of those that govern. Locke.

It has a light and ludicrous dence, implying more tumult and show of businesse, than the affair is worth: in this finer it is of late generally used.

I made no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus. Shakespeare. Henry IV. p. 1.

We will keep our adow, or friend or two. - Shakespeare. Henry IV. p. 1.

It may be thought we hold him carefully, Being our kinman, if we reveal much. Shakespeare.

Come, says Puck, without any more ado, his thing go to breakfast; cats don't live upon dialo- gues. L'Estrange.

ADOLESCENCE. n. s. [adolescentia, Lat.] ADOLESCENCY. The age succeeding childhood, and succeeded by puberty; more largely, that part of life in which the body has not yet reached its full per- fection.

He was so far from a boy, that he was a man born, and at his full stature, if we believe John, who puts him in the late adolescence, and makes him twenty-five years old. Brown.

The fons must have a tedious time of childhood and adolescence, before they can either themselves
ADO

To ADOP'T. v. a. [adopt, Lat.] 1. To take a son by choice; to make him a son, who was not so by birth. 2. To adopt a manner of being.

ADOPTED. adj. [from adopted.] After the manner of something adopted.

ADOPTED. v. a. [from adopt, Lat.]. He that gives some one by choice the rights of a son.

ADOPTION. n. f. [from adopt, Lat.] 1. The act of adopting, or taking one's self what is not native.

ADOPTIVE, adj. [from adoption, Lat.] 1. He that is adopted by another, and made his son.

ADOPTIVE. adj. [from adopt, Lat.] That which is adopted by another; that which is worthy of divine honours.

ADOPTIVELY. adv. [from adopt, Lat.] In a manner worthy of adoption.

ADORATION. n. f. [from adore, Lat.] 1. The external homage paid to the Divinity, distinct from mental reverence. 2. Homage paid to persons in high place or esteem.

ADORER. n. f. [from adore.] A worshipper; a term generally used in a low sense; as, by lovers, or admirers.

ADORATION, n. f. [from adore.] 1. To adore; to respect, in the highest degree of reverence or regard; to reverence; to honour; to love.

ADORABLE, adj. [from adore, Lat.] That which is worthy of divine honours.

ADORABLE. adj. [from adore.] That which is to be adored; that which is worthy of divine honours.

ADORABLELY. adv. [from adorable, Lat.] The quality of being adorable; worthy of divine honours. 2. To deck the porch with ornaments.

ADORABLE. adj. [from adorable.] That which is adorned with the garments of salvation, that he covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decked himself with Ornaments, and as a bride adorned herself with her jewels. To ADORN. v. a. [adorn, Lat.] 1. To adorn; to deck the porch with ornaments.

ADORNED. adj. [from adorn.] Adorned; decorated; a word peculiar to Milton. Stell's to realities yield all her bows. Made for adorn, for thy delight the more. MILTON. ADORNMENT. n. f. [from adorn.] Ornament; embellishment; elegance; not now in use.

ADVENT. v. a. [from advent, Lat.] It was confounded; nor to the heavens, before they had motion and advancement.

ADVENTUROUS. adj. [from adventure.] Of adventure; of the history of the world.

ADVENTUROUSLY. adv. [from adventurous, Lat.] In the ground.

ADVENTUROUSLY. adv. [from adventurous, Lat.] To travel; towards the ground; from a higher situation towards a lower.

ADVENTURER. n. [from adventure, Lat.] A freebooter; a wild man; a man of wicked life.

ADVENTURE. n. [from adventure, Lat.] A freebooter; a freebooter.

ADVENTURE. n. [from adventure, Lat.] A freebooter; a freebooter.

ADVENTUROUSLY. adv. [from adventurous, Lat.] To travel; towards the ground; from a higher situation towards a lower.

ADVENTUROUSLY. adv. [from adventurous, Lat.] It is confounded; nor to the heavens, before they had motion and advancement.
festival to advance the nature of man to its highest perfection, than the precepts of Christianity!

To heighten; to grace; to give lufture to.

As the calling dignifies the man, so the man more much advance his calling. As a garment, though it warms the body, has a return with an advantage, being much more warm by it.

Swift's Sentiments.

To forward; to accelerate.

These three last were flower than the ordinary Indian wheat of itself; and this culture did rather increase than advance.

Bacon.

To propose; to offer to the publick; to bring to view or notice.

Phedon 1 hight, quoth he, and do advance My anucfly from famous Coradin. Fairy Queen.

I dare not advance my opinion against the judgment of so great an author; but I think it fair to leave the decision to the publick.

Dryden.

Some or not advance a judgment of their own, but catch the fpanding nation of the town. Poes.

ADVANCE, n. s. [from To advance.]

1. The act of coming forward.

All the foot were put into Abington, with a resolution to quit, or defend, the town, according to the manner of the enemy's advance towards it.

Parnell.

So, like the fat's advances, your titles show; Which, as the rife, does the warmer grow. Waller.

2. A tendency to come forward to meet a lover; an act of invitation.

In vain all the practis'd wiles, In vain those eyes should have import; Not all her advances, all the smiles, Can move one unrelenting heart. Walshe.

His genius was below the full of his sown bear; Who, though he cannot spell, is wise enough to read a lady's eyes; And will each accidental glance produce a kind of wonder. Swift.

He has described the unworthy passion of the goddess Calypso, and the indecent advances she made to detain him from his own country. Poes.

That prince applied himself first to the Church of England, and upon their refusal to fall in with his measures, made the like advances to the dissenters. Swift.

3. Gradual progress; rise from one point to another.

Our Saviour raised the ruler's daughter, the widow's son, and Lazarus; the first of these, when he had, at last expired the second, as he was carried to the grave on his bier; and the third, after he had been laid out. And having, by their gradual advances, manifested his divine power, he at last executed the highest and most glorious degree of it; and raised them all by his own all-quickening, all-lightening, all-grace, and according to his own expenses (re- diction.

Atterbury.

Man of study and thought, that reason right, And love of truth, do make no great advances to the devours of it. Locke.

4. Improvement; progress towards perfection.

The principle and object of the greatest importance to the world to the good of mankind, and for the advancement and perfection of human nature. Hume.

ADVANCEMENT, n. s. [advancement, Fr.]

1. The act of coming forward.

This advancement, taken daily, advancements, and, I hope, in time, will raise our language to the utmost perfection. Swift.

2. The state of being advanced; preferment.

The Protes of the North Finding his usurpation most unjust, Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne. Shakespeare.

3. The act of advancing another.

In his own grave, he death himself More than in your advancement. Shakespeare's King Lear.

4. Improvement; promotion to a higher state of excellence.

Nor can we conceive it unwonted unto thofe worthies, who endeavour the advancement of learning. Bacon's, 'Pulgar Errors.

5. Settlement on a wife. This sense is now diffused.

The juncture or advancement of the lady, was the third part of the principality of Wales. Bacon's 'Pulgar Errors. [from advancement.] He that advances any thing; a promoter; forwarder.

Said after the death of a great officer, who was judged no advancement of the king's matters, the king failed to his solicition. Tell me truly, what say you of this matter? Ben Jonson. The reports are greater advancement of defamatory designs, than the very first contrivers. Government of the Tongue.

ADVANTAGE, n. s. [from To advance.]

1. Superiority; often with of or ever before a distinction.

In the practical prudence of managing such gifts, the lady may have some advantage over the clergy; whose experience is, and ought to be, less of this world than the other. Sprat.

All other and men of no would evidently have the advantage of us, and a much furer title to happiness than we. Atterbury.

2. Superiority gained by fratagem, or unlawful means.

The common law hath been this benefit, whereby they make advancement, and work it to their own purposes. Spence's State of Ireland.

But specially he took advancement of the night for such p'r'y attempts, insomuch that the bruit of his manly advances were spread everywhere. Machevis. v. 7.

Great malice, backed with a great interest yet can have no advantage of a man, but from his own expectations of something that is without him. Addison.

As soon as he was got to Sicily, they sent for him back; designing to take advancement, and prosecute him in the absence of his friends. Swift.

3. Opportunity; convenience.

Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Defdmona alone. Shakespeare.

4. Favourable circumstances.

Like jewel to advancement fet, Her beauty by the shade does set. Waller.

A face, which over-fhines, appears to advan- tage in the deepest facet; and the dark complexen is not a little alleviated by a black hood. Addison.

True wit is nature to advantage dec'd. What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd. Pope.

5. Superior excellence.

A man born with such advantage of constitution, that it先进es not the image of his mind. Glavonius.

6. Gain; profit.

For thou saidst, what advantage will it be unto thee, and what profit shall I have, if I be clear from my sins? Job.

—Certain it is, that advancement now fits in the room of conscience, and fetches all. Swift's German.

7. Overplus; something more than the mere lawful gain.

We owe this much within this wall of flesh.

There is a soul counta the her creditor, And with advantage means to pay thee love. Shakespeare.

You said, you neither lend nor borrow Upon advancement. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

8. Preponderance on one side of the comparison.

Much more should the consideration of this pattern arm us with patience and ordinary caution; especially if we consider his example with this advantage, that though his sufferings were wholly underwed, and not for himself but for others, yet be bore them particularly. Swift.

To ADVANTAGE, u. a. [from the noun.]

1. To benefit.

Convey what I set down to my lady: it shall advance more than ever the hearing of letter did. Shakespeare.

The trial hath endagam'd thee no way. Rather more honour left, and more eftence. Neal, Shakespeare's King Lear.

Milton.

The great business of the senses being to make us notice of what hurts or advantage the body, it is wisely ordered by nature, that pain should accompany the reception of several ideas. Locke.

We should have purfued some other way, moreeffectual, for difturbing the common enemy, and advantaging ourselves. Swift.

2. To promote; to bring forward; to gain ground.

The notes that explained the souls of wise men about the moon, and those of fools wander- ed about the earth, advantaged the conceit of this effect. Brown's, 'Pulgar Errors.

To enable it with considerations that the Royal Society, were to advance it in one of the best capacities in which it is immeasurable. Glavonius's Essays Sciencet.

ADVANTAGEABLE, adj. [from advancement.]

Profitable; convenient; gainful. As it is advantageable to a physician to be call'd to the cure of declining diseases, so it is for a commander to suppress a faction which has pass'd the height. Sir H. Waden.

ADVANCED, adj. [from To advan- tage.] Polièced of advantages; com- modiously situated or disposed.

In the most advantageable temper, this disposition is but comparative; whereas the most of men labour under disadvantages, which nothing can rid them of. Glavonius.

ADVANTAGE-GROUND, n. s. Ground that gives superiority, and opportunities of annoyance or resistance.

This excellent man, who stood not upon the advantage-ground before, from the time of his promotion to the archbishoprick, provoked or un- covered the envy, and reproached, and malice, of men of all qualities and conditions who agreed in nothing else. Clarembor.

ADVANTAGEOUS, adj. [advantage.] 1. Of advantage; profitable; useful; op- portune; convenient.

The time of sickness, or affliction, is, like the God of the day to Adam, a feast of pecuniary pro- priety for the voice of God to be heard; and may be improved into a very advantageous opportunity of beguiling or increasing spiritual life. Hammond's Apologies.

Some advantage, a thing may be achieve'd By sudden unct, either with hell-fire To wake his whole creation; or poofes As our own. Milton.

2. In use with relation to persons, and followed by re.

Since every painter paints himself in his own works, 'tis advantageous to him to know himself, to the end that he may cultivate those talents which make his genius. Dryden.

ADVANTAGEOUSLY, adv. [from advantage.]

ADVENTURous. [Advantageous.] Conveniently; opportunely; profitably. It was adventurously fortunate, being an enemy's passage from it to India, by sea. Adventurously

ADVANCED. adj. [advancement.] Quality of being advantageous; profitableness; usefulness; convenience. The last property, which qualifies God for the first object of our love, is the advantages of his to us, both in the present and the future life.

To ADVANCE. v.t. [advancing.] To accede to something; to become part of something else, without being essential; to be superadded. A case considered in judicature, is filled an accidental case; and the accidental of any act, is said to be whatever advances to the act itself already subluminated. Advancing.

ADVENT. adj. [adventurer, Fr.] Adventuring; ven
ing; coming out of outward causes; superadded. Being thus divided from truth in themselves, they may not yet be considered by adventurous deduction; for they are daily mocked into error, and subterfus.

ADVANTAGE. n. [from advantage.] Advantage; that which is extrinsically added; that which comes from outward causes; a word scarcely in use.

As for the rigorous heat, it is thus far true, that, if the proportion of the adventurously heat be greatly preponderating natural heat and spirits of the body, it tendeth to dissipation or at least to alteration.

Advantajous. adj. [adventitious, Lat.] That which advances; accidental; superadded; extrinsically added, not efficaciously inherent.

Differences of continuous get an adventurously strength from colour, besides their material cause from the humouris. Though we may call the obvious colours natural, and the others adventitious; yet such changes of colours from whatever cause they proceed, may be properly taken in. By the adventurously fire.

If his blood boil, and the adventurously fire raise his high parts, and higher wight require to temer and alloy the burning blood, the waters must be brought, which by digestion get new cooler.

Dryden.

In the second kind, of all the many forces reckoned up by lapidaries, there are not above three or four that are original; their diversities, as sufferer, colour and hardness, arising from the different mixtures of other adventitious mineral matter.

ADVENT. n. [from advent, Lat.] The thing or person that comes from without: a word not now in use. Thus the natives be not so many, but that there may be no room enough for them; and for the advents also.

ADVENTUALLY. adj. [from advent, Lat.] Relating to the season of advent.

1. As daily use one other collect; or, names-

ADVENTURE. n. [French.]

1. An accident; a chance; a hazard; an event of which we have no direction.

The general summoned three cañons; one desperate of succour, and not desirous to dispute the defence, presently yielded; but two flound upon their adversary.

Hayward.

2. In this sense is used the phrase, at all adventure. [2 P. adventures, Fr.] By chance; without any rational scheme. Blows flew at all adventures, wounds and deaths given and taken unexpected; many scarce know their enemies from their friends. Hayward. Where men do not perceive probable connection, there men's opinions are the effects of chance and hazard, of a mind floating at all adventures, without choice and without direction.

Lecture.

3. The occasion of casual events; an enterprize in which something must be left to hazard. For I must love, and am resolv'd to try my fate, or, falling in this adventure, die.

Dryden.

4. This noun, with all its derivatives, is frequently written without ad; as, venture, ventures.

ADVENTURE. v.t. [adventurer, Fr.]

1. To try the chance; to dare.

Be not angry, Most mighty prince, that I have adventure'd To try your taking of a false report. Shakespeare.

The tender and adventurously woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole foot of yours upon, for delicateness and tender-soul, Deser. xxvili. 26.

To ADVENTURE. v.t. To put into the power of chance.

For my father sought for you, and adventure'd his life for, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian. Judges xix. 17.

It is often used with the reciprocal pronoun as, he adventure'd himself.

ADVENTURER. n. [adventurer, Fr.] He that seeks occasions of hazard; he that puts himself in the hand of hazard. He is a great adventurer, said he. That hath his sword through hard assay forsworn.

Spenser.

The kings of England did not make the conquest of Ireland; it was begun by particular adventurers, and other voluntaries, who came to seek their fortunes.

Sir J. Davies.

He intended to hazard his own action, that to the more easily he might win adventurers, who else were like to be left forward. Raleigh.

Had it been for the British, which the late wars drew over, and multitudes of soldiers festered there, Ireland had, by the last war, and plague, been left delictus.

Tempus.

Their wealthy trade from pirates' rapine fires, Our merchants shall no more adventure's be.

Dryden.

ADVENTUREsome. adj. [adventure.] The same with adventurously; a low word, scarcely used in writing.

ADVENTUREsomeness. n. [adventurousness.]

The quality of being adventureous.

Dryden.

ADVENTUROUS. adj. [adventureous, Fr.]

1. He that is inclined to adventures; and, consequently, bold, daring, courageous. At land and sea, his eye a watchful sight, Was never known a more adventurous knight; Who oftener drew his sword, and always for the right.

Dryden.

2. Applied to things, that which is full of hazard; which requires courage; dangerous.

But I'm already troubled you too long,

Nor dare attempt a more adventurous fame.

My humble vessel demands a safer theme. Addison.

ADVENTUROUSLY. adv. [adventurously.] After an adventurous manner; boldly; daringly. They are both hanged; so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously.

Shakespeare's Henry V.

ADVERB. n. [adverbium, Lat.] A word joined to a verb or adjective, and solely applied to the use of qualifying and re daining the latitude of their significations, by the intimation of some circumstance thereof; as, of quality, manner, degree.

Chalmers' Latin Grammar.

ADVERBIAL. adj. [adverbialiter, Lat.]

That which has the quality or structure of an adverb.

ADVERBIALLy. adv. [adverbialiter, Lat.]

Like an adverb; in the manner of an adverb.

I should think also was joined adverbially with troy'd, did Virgil make use of so equivocal a adverb.

Addison.

ADVERSAry. n. [adversarius, Fr. adversarius, Lat.]

An opponent; antagonist; enemy: generally applied to those that have verbal or judicial quarrels; as, controversiists or litigants; sometimes to an opponent in fable combat. It may sometimes mean an open profecion of enmity; as we say, a secret enemy is worse than an open adversary.

Yet am I noble, as the adversary I came to cope. Shakespeare's King Lear.

These rites and ceremonies of the church, therefore, which were the sole name now that they were when holy and virtuous men maintained them against profane and deriding adversaries, their own children have in desirion.

Hooker.

While the adversary of God and man,

Satan, with thoughts inflam'd, of highest design,

Put on swift wings. Milton.

An adversary makes a quicker search into us, and covers every one with an imperfection in our tempers. A friend exaggerates a man's virtues; an enemy infames his crimes. Addison.

ADVERSAriative. adj. [adversariavius, Lat.]

A term of grammar, applied to a word which makes some opposition or variety; as, in this sentence: This diamond is rare, but it is rough. But is an adversariative conjunction.

ADVERSER. adj. [adversarius, Lat.]

In prope it has now the accent on the first syllable; in verse it is ac cented on the first by Shakespeare; on either, indifferently, by Milton; on the last, by Dryden; on the first, by Reu.

common.

F 2
ADVER'RS. n. f. [adverteri.] 1. Adversity. a. The state of being in an adverse manner; oppositely; unfortunately.

b. What I think, I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. If the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it.

Shakespeare.

ADVER'SITY. n.f. [adversité.] Adversity; calamity; that is, opposition to our wishes.

3. The cause of our sorrow; affliction; misfortune. In this sense it may have a plural.

Let me embrace these four adversities. For wise men say, it is the wiser course.

Shakespeare’s Henry VI.

The state of unhappiness; misery.

Concerning deliverance itself from all adversity, we think no man is in adversity, unless we feel some small hindrance of our welfare in this world, but when some notable affliction or croft, some great calamity or trouble befalleth us. To be so minded, is a matter of admiration.

The Lords of the Turks.

They were to advertise the chief lords of the duchies of their subjects, occasioned by his absence.

Knolle’s History of the Turks.

To ADVERT. v. n. [advertere.] To attend to; to regard; to observe, with the particle so before the object of regard.

The mind of man being not capable at once to advert to more than one thing, a particular view and examination of such an innumerable number of vat bady, will afford matter of admiration. To the Creation. Now to the universal whole advert.

The earth regard as of that whole a part in which white flame more noble worlds abound; Writens, ye glorious orbs, which hang around.

Blackmore.

We sometimes say, To advert the mind to an object.

ADVER'RSITY. n. f. [adverteri.] Attention to; regard to; consideration. Chiding may make Aemnesus his chide, and give it, but where it may set its eye upon, but a foter adverserice to its proposals, and it will move the whole world.

Decay of Prigs.

ADVER'TENCY. n. f. [advertere.] The fame with adverserence. Attention; regard; heedfulness.

To ADVERTIZE. v. a. [advertis.] Active in giving intelligence; monitory: a word not now in use.

As I was then Advertising, and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am full Attorned at your service. Shakespeare. Much Ado. 1. To draw towards evening:

Dis.

ADVICE. n. f. [auidi, advis, Fr. from ad- vice, low Lat.] 1. Counsel; infraction: except that infraction implies superiority, and advice may be given by equals or inferiors.

Break we our watch up, and, by my advis, Let us impact what we have seen to-night.

Shakespeare. Hamlet.

O troubled, weep, and coward as thou art!

Without thy poor advice, the labouring heart To worfe extremes with swifter steps would run; Not fav’d by virtue, yet by vice unbon’d, Prince.

2. Reflection; prudent consideration: as, he always acts with good advice.

What he hath won, that he hath forfeited:

So hot a speed, with such advice disposed,

Such temperate order, in so fierce a course,

Dost want example.

Shakespeare. King John.

3. Consultation; deliberation: with the particle of a single.

Great princes, taking advice with workmen, with no left co’fet, set their things together.

Bacon’s Essay.

4. Intelligence: as, the merchants received advice of their loss.

This sense is somewhat low, and chiefly commercial.

ADVICE-BOAT. n. f. A vessel employed to bring intelligence.

ADVISABLE. adj. [from advis.] Prudent; fit to be advised.

I some judge it advisable for a man to account with his heart every day; and this, no doubt, is the belt and fuchest course; for still the oftner, the better.

Shakespeare’s Sonnet.

It is not advisable to reward, where men have the tenderness not to punish. L’Esposo’s Tables.

ADVISABleness. n. f. [from advisable.] The quality of being advisable, or fit; fitnes; propriety.

To ADVI’SE. v. a. [adviser.] 1. To counsel: with the particle to before the thing advised.

If to the store they go’ard.

— Brother, I advise you to the helm.

Shakespeare. King Lear.

I would advise all gentlemen to learn merchant accounts; and not to think it a skill that belongs not to them.

Lokta.

When I consider the frugalities and cautions I bare by in your way, methinks it looks as if I advised you to something which I would have advised as, but in effect not done.

Lokta.

2. To give information; to inform; to make acquainted with anything; often with the particle of before the thing told.

You were advis’d, his flesh was capable Of wounds and fears; and that his forward spirit Would lift him, where most trade of danger rang’d.

Shakespeare.
ADV

1. Such discourse bring on,
As may adjure him of his happy state
Happiness in his pow'rs, left free to will.

Paradise Lost.

To Advise. v. n.
1. To consult: with the particle quib before the person consulted; as, be advised quib his companions.
2. To consider: to deliberate. Advise it this be worth Attempting, or to be left untried here, Hatching vain empires.

Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

1. Aiding with deliberation and design; prudent; wise.

Let his travel appear rather in his difcourse, than in his apparel or gesture; and, in his difcourse, let him be rather advised in his answers, than forward to tell stories.

Bacon's Essays.

2. Performed with deliberation; done on purpose; acted with design.

By that which we work naturally, as, when we breathe, sleep, and move, we feel the glory of God, as natural agents do; albeit we have no express purpose to it, that we end not, nor any advised determination therein to follow a law.

Hooker, B. I. p. 49.

In my school-days, when I had left one shift, I took with the fellow of the false name.
The false-name way, with more advised watch, To find the other forth; by vent'ring both, I oft found both.

Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.

Adviseably, adv. [from advised.] Soberly; heedfully; deliberately; purposely; by design; prudently.

This book, advisedly read and diligently followed but one year at home, would do more than three years travel abroad.

Aeschylus.

Advisability, n. f. [from advised.] De-liberation; cool and prudent procedure.

While things are in agitation, private men may not think their thoughts to the consideration of those that are in authority; to whose care it belongs, in prescribing concerning indifferent things, to proceed with all just advisabilities and moderation.

Sir John Suckling.

Adviseness, n. f. [from advised.] De-liberation; cool and prudent procedure.

While things are in agitation, private men may not think their thoughts to the consideration of those that are in authority; to whose care it belongs, in prescribing concerning indifferent things, to proceed with all just advisabilities and moderation.

Sir John Suckling.

Advise. v. n. [from advised.] The perfon or thing which adulates.

To Advulate, v. n. ['adulterer', 'adulterus, Lat.] To commit adultery with another: a word not classical.

Sir John Suckling.

1. To commit adultery.
   But fortune, oh!

Shakespeare.

2. To corrupt by some foreign admixture; to contaminate.

Common pot-ashes, bought of them that fell it in shops, who are not so foolishly knavish as to adulterate them with salt-petre, which is much dearer than pot-ashes.

Dryden's Sat. & Soc. Scienc., p. xvi.

The present wars has so adulterated our tongue with foreign words, that it would be impossible for one of our great-grandfathers to know what his posterity have said.

Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

They never fail of their most artful and indefatigable address, to silence the importunity adulterer, whose very power avails their excuses.

Rogers's Sermons.

ADULTERATION, n. f. ['adulteration, Fr. adultration.'] Platter; high compliment.

Of the highest platter, of the greatest compliment.

By and thy ceremony give thee cure.
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulteration?

Shakespeare's Henry V.

They who flattend him most before, mentioned him now with the greatest bitterness, without impairing the least crims to him, committed since the time of that existed adulteration, or that was not as much known to them, as it could be now.

Clarendon.

ADULTERER, n. f. ['adulterer, Lat.] A flatterer.

ADULTERATE, adj. [adulterarius, Lat.] Flattering; full of compliments.

ADULTERITY, n. f. ['adulterus, Lat.'] Grown up;
Past the age of infancy and weaknesses.

They would appear as able to approve themselves, not only to the confessor, but even to the catechist, in their adult age, than they were in their minority; as having clearer even through the principles of their religion, since they census them to avoid contradiction.

Dean of York.
The earth, by these applauding schools, its face,
This single crop of men and women bred;
Who grown adults, so change, it seems,
End, made and female, propagate their kind.

Blackmore.

ADULT. n. f. A person above the age of infancy, or grown to some degree of strength; sometimes full grown: a word used chiefly by medicinal writers.

The depredations without a fracture, can but seldom occur; and then it happens to children, whose bones are more pliable and soft than those of adults.

Sharpe's Surgery.

ADULTERESS, n. f. [from adulter.] The flate of being adulterous. See Adolescence.

To ADULTER. v. n. ['adulterer, Fr. adulterus, Lat.] To commit adultery with another: a word not classical.

Sir John Suckling.

1. Adulterates hourly with thine uncle John.

Shakespeare.

2. To corrupt by some foreign admixture; to contaminate.

Common pot-ashes, bought of them that fell it in shops, who are not so foolishly knavish as to adulterate them with salt-petre, which is much dearer than pot-ashes.

Dryden's Sat. & Soc. Scienc., p. xvi.

The present wars has so adulterated our tongue with foreign words, that it would be impossible for one of our great-grandfathers to know what his posterity have said.

Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

ADULT. n. f. [from adulterate.] That ince Nuence, that adulterate means.

Shakespeare.

2. Corrupted with some foreign mixture.

It does indeed differ no more, than the maker of adulterate wares does from the vender of them.

Swift's Miscellaneous.

ADULTERATION, n. f. [from adulterate.] The quality of being adulterate, or counterfeited.

ADULTERER, n. f. [from adulterate.] The person guilty of adultery.

With what impatience must the mule behold
The wife by her procuring husband sold.
For the law makes null th' adulterer's deed
Of lands to her, the cuckold must succeed.

Dryden's Joviall.

ADULTERESS, n. f. [from adulterate.] A woman that commits adultery.

The Spartan lady replied, when she asked,
What was the punishment for adulteries? There are no such things here.

Government of the Tongue, § 3.

Helen's rich attire,
From Argos by the fam'd adulterst brought.
With golden crowns and winding foliage wroght.

Dryden's Pindar.

ADULTERINE, n. f. ['adulterine, Fr. adulterinus, Lat.] A child born of an adulterer: a term of canon law.

ADULTEROUS, adj. [adulter, Lat.] Guilt of adultery.

'Th' adulterous Antony, met large
In his abominations, turns off his head.
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That notes against us.

Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

An adulterous person is tied to restitution of the injury, so far as it is repairable; and to make provision for the children, that they may not injure the legitimate.

Thinks on whose faith th' adulterous youth rely'd.
Who promis'd, who procured the Spartan bride?

Dryden's Amor.

ADULTERY, n. f. ['adulterium, Lat.] The act of violating the bed of a married person.

All thy domestic griefs at home be left.
The wife's adulter, with the defiant's theft.
The very raking thought which can intrude
Forget false friends, and their ingratitude.

Dryden's Joviall.

ADUMBRENT. adj. [from adumbren.] That which gives a flight resemblance.

To ADUMBRENT. v. n. ['adumbren.] To flow out to give a flight likeness;
To exhibit a faint resemblance, like that which shadows afford of the bodies which they represent.

Heaven is designed for our reward, as well as refuge; and therefore is adumbrened by all those positive excellencies, which can endear recommend.

Dean of Pisty.

ADUMBREATION, n. f. [from adumbren.]
ADUANTION. n. f. [from ad and unus, Lat.]. The state of being united; union; a word of little use.

When, by glaciation, wood, straw, dust, and water, are supposed to be united into one body, there is no such real union or aduantion; but only hardening the aqueous parts of the liquor into ice, the other bodies, being accidentally present in that liquor, are frozen up in it, but not therefore united.

ADUATION, n. f. [aeducere, Lat.] Crookedness; flexure inwards; hookedness.

There can be no question, but the aduation of the pouces and brack of the hawks, is the cause of the great and habitual immobility of these birds, of the long robbe.

ADUQUITY, n. f. [ad vocum, Lat.] Crookedness; bending inwards; hookedness.

The birds that are speakers, are parrots, pies, jays, daws, and ravens; of which parrots have an aduant bill, but the others have not.

ADUOCY. n. f. [from ad and voca.] The act of pleading; vindication; defence; apology; a word in little use.

If any there are who are of opinion that there are no antipodes, or that the stars do fall, they shall not want herein the applause or advocacy of Satan.

Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. 1.

ADUOCATE. n. f. [advocatus, Lat.]

1. He that pleads the cause of another in a court of judicature.

An advocate, in the general import of the word, is he that pours the pleading and management of a judicial cause. In a strict way of speaking, only that person is called an advocate, who is the patron of the cause, and is often, in Latin, termed legis, and, in English, a person of the long robe.

Of the great &dquo;advocates&dquo; that grind the poor.

Dryden's Periustr.

2. He that pleads any cause, in whatever manner, as a controvertist or vindicator.

If the dures trust me with her little babe, I'll thro' the king, and undertake to be her advocate to the louf. Shakespeare, Hamlet.

Of the several forms of government that have been, or are, in the world, that cause seems commonly the better, that has the better advocate, or is advantaged by farther experience.

Timp's Miscellanies.

3. It is used with the particle for before the person or thing, in whose favour the plea is offered.

Foes to all living worth except your own, and advocates for folly dead and gone.

Pope's Epistles.

4. In the scriptural and sacred sense, it stands for one of the offices of our Redeemer.

AER, or AE. A diphthong of very frequent use in the Latin language, which seems not properly to have any place in the English; since the a of the Saxons has been long out of use, being changed to s, simple, to which, in words frequently occurring, the e of the Romans is, in the same manner, altered, as in equator, equinocial, and even in Earth.

As the fame of the fame, a goy, and therefore, a goat-eyed, the goat being subject to this ailment.] A tumour or swelling in the great corner of the eye, by the root of the nose, either with or without an inflammation: also a plant so called, for its supposed virtues against such a distemper.

Quincy.

Aeglops is a tubercle in the inner canthus of the eye. W. Homan's Surgery.

AEGOUR. n. f. [written instead of aegologue, from stille, from still, etymology.] A pastoral; a dialogue in verse between goat-herds.

Which moved him rather in aegologues otherwise to write, doubting, perhaps, his ability, which he little needed, or nothing to furnish our tongue with this kind wherein it failed.

Spenser's Paphysals.

AEGYPTIACUM. n. f. An ointment containing only of honey, verdigrease, and vinegar.

AE, or of EA, or of AL [in compound names, as in the Greek compounds] signifies all, or altogether. So Aelius is a complete conqueror; Albert, alhililuious; Aelred, altogether reverend; Alfred, altogether peacefull. To these Pammachius, Pancratio, Pamphilus, &c. do in some measure answer.

Gibson's Camden.

ELF [which, according to various dialects, is pronounced elf, elfen, elph, elph, elfe, and, at this day, elf] implies affluence. So Aelius is victorious; and Aelvold, an auxiliary governor; Aelfrida, a leader of affluence; with which Bettius, Symmachus, Epicurus, &c. bear a plain analogy. Gibson's Camden.

AENIGMA. See ENIGMA.

AERIAL. adj. [aerius, Lat.]

1. Belonging to the air, as consisting of it.

The thunder, when to roll.

With terror through the dark aerial ball.

Paradies Lost.

2. Produced by the air.

The gifts of heav'n my following songPartant.

Thro' the aerial or the wat'ry sky.

Pope.

3. Inhabiting the air.

Where those immortal shapes

Neptune's Odyssey.

Of bright aerial spirits live infected.

In regions mild, of calm and serene air.

Paradies Regained.

Aerial animals may be subdivided into birds and flies.

Leulus.

4. Placed in the air.

Here subterraneous works and cities see

There towns aerial on the wat'ry sea.

5. High; elevated in situation, and therefore in the air.

A spacious city flood, with firmest walls

Sure mounted, and with numerous turrets crowned,

Aerial spires, and diminutive, the seat

Of kings and heroes resolute in war.

Phillips.
quality of being affable; easiness of manners; courteousness; civility; condescension. It is commonly used of superiors.

Hearing of her beauty and her wit, Her affability and bashful modesty, Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour.

He was of a most flowing courtly and affability to all men, and so dexterous to oblige them, that he did not enough consider the value of the obligation, or the merit of the perfoun. Clarendon.

All instances of charity, sweetness of conversation, affability, admonition, all significations of tenderness, care, and watchfulness, must be expressed towards children. Taylor.

It is impossible for a public minister to be so open and easy to all his old friends, as he was in his private condition; but this may be bought out by an affability of address. Le Fèvre.

Affable. adj. [affable, Fr. affabils, Lat.] 1. Easy of manners; accoatable; courteous; complaisant. It is used of superiors.

He was affable, and both well and fair spoken, and would not frame to adjuration of words, where he desired to affect or persuade anything that he took to heart. Bacon.

Her father is an affable and courteous gentleman. Shadyl. Tom. Shrew.

Gentle to me and affable hath been Thy condescension, and shall be honour'd ever With grateful memory. Milton. Par. Lost. b. viii.

2. It is applied to the external appearance - benign; mild; favourable.

Augustus appeared, looking round him with a serene and affable countenance upon all evidences of his age. Tailer.

Affability. n. f. [from affable.] Courteous; affability.

Affably, adv. [from affable.] In an affable manner; courteously; civilly. Affaissorial. adj. [affable, Fr.] Skillfully made; complete; finished in a workman-like manner. Dict.

Affabulation. n. f. [affabulation, Lat.] The moral of a fable. Dict.

Affair. n. f. [affaires, Fr.] Business; something to be managed or transacted. It is used for both private and public matters.

I was not born for courts or great affairs; I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers. Pope.

A good acquaintance with method will greatly assist every one in ranging, disposing, and managing all human affairs. Watts's Legist.

What St. John's drill in late affairs, What Ormond's value, Oxford's cessions, To aid their sinking country lent, Was all destroy'd by one event. Swift.

To Affear. v. n. [from affir, Fr.] To confirm; to give foundation to; to establish an old term of law.

Bleed, bleed, poor country! Great tyranny, thou thy basf, faith; For good folks dare not check thee! His title is affe. Johnson, Stan. Marbl. Marce.

Affay. n. f. [from the verb affe.]

1. Affection: passion; sensation.

It seemeth that as the feet have a sympathy with the head, so the wrists have a sympathy with the heart; we feel the affections and passions of the heart and face often not discerned by the pulse. Bacon's Natural History, p. 97.

2. Quality; circumstance.

I think it difficult to make out one single ulcer, as authors describe it, without other symptoms or affections joined to it. Wilken.

This is only the antiquated word for affection.

To AFFECTION. v. a. [affater, Fr. affrister, affichan, Lat.] 1. To act upon; to produce effects in any other thing.

The fun

Had fire his precept to move to shine,
As might affect the earth with cold and heat,
Scarcely tolerable. Milton's Paradise Lost. b. x.

The generality of men are wholly governed by names, in matters of good and evil; so far as the qualities relate to, and afford, the actions of men. Stuke's Sermons.

Yet even those two particles do reciprocally affect each other with the same force and vigour, as they would do at the same distance in any other situation imaginable. Bentley's Sermons.

2. To move the passions.

As a thinking man cannot but be very much affected with the idea of his appearing in the presence of that Being, whom now can foretell he must be much more affected, when he considers, that this Being, whom he appears before, will examine the actions of his life, and reward or punish him accordingly. Addison, Spectator, No. 413.

3. To aim at; to endeavour after: spoken of persons.

A przeder

His silence next, but when he spake; War are thy words, and glad I would obey. But this proud man affects imperial sway. Dryden's Blad.

4. To tend to; to endeavour after; spoken of things.

The drops of every fluid affect a round figure, by the mutual attraction of their parts; as the globe of the earth and sea affects a round figure, by the mutual attraction of its parts by gravity. Le Fèvre's Deicks.

5. To be fond of; to be pleased with; to love; to regard with fondness.

That little which some of the heathen did chance to hear, concerning such matter as the sacred Scripture plentifully containeth, they did in wonderful fort affect. Hooker, b. 6.

There is your crown; and he that wears the crown immortal,
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more, Than as your honour, and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Think not that wars we love, and little affairs; Or that we hate civil wars, and peace.
But none but a woman could a man direct to tell us women what we must affect. Dryd. Wife of Bath.

6. To make a show of something; to study the appearance of any thing; with some degree of hypocricy.

Another nymph, amongst the many fair, Before the rest affected still to stand,
And watch'd my eyes, preventing my command. Nevtur's Pier.

These often carry the humour so far, till their affected coldness and indifference quite kills all the friendliness of a lover. Addison, Spectator, No. 174.

Coquet and coy at once her air,
Bothibusled, though both seem neglected; Carleful she is with artful care,
Affection to seem unaffected. Congr.

The confuloscous husband, whom like symptoms fester,
Charges on her the guilt of their disease;
Affection fury, acts a madman's part,
He'll rip the fatal secret from her heart. Greeceville.

7. To be in an unnatural and constrained manner.

Spenso, in affecting the ancients, wits no language; yet I would have read for his matters, but as Virgili read Ennius. Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

8. To AFF

2. To con"ict of some crime; to attain with guilt; a phrase merely juridical.

By the civil law, if a dowry with a wife be promised and not paid, the husband is not obliged to allow her alimony. But if her parents shall become bankrupt or infirm, she shall have alimony, unless you can affect them with fraud, in promising what they knew they were not able to perform.

AFFECTION. n. s. [affectation, Fr. affectation, Lat.]

1. Fondness; high degree of liking; commonly with some degree of culpability.

In things of their own nature indifferent, if either council or particular men have at any time, with found judgment, adhered conformity between the church of God and infidels, the cause thereof hath been somewhat else than only affection of dissimilitude.

Hooker, b. iv. 27.

2. An artificial show; an elaborate appearance; a false pretence.

It has been, from age to age, an affection to love the pleasure of fools, among those who cannot possibly be supposed qualified, for passing life in that manner. Spectator, No. 264.

AFFECTIONATE. participle adj. [from affection.]

1. Moved; touched with affection; internally disposed or inclined.

No marvel then if he were ill affected.

Shaksp., King Lear.

The model they seemed affected to in their dictionary, was not like to any of the foreign reformed churches now in the world. Clarendon.

2. Studied with over-much care, or with hypocritical appearance.

These antics, lapping, affected phantasties, these new tunes of accent.

Shaksp. Rome and Juliet.

3. In a personal sense, full of affection; as, an affectionate lady.

AFFECTIONATELY. adv. [from affection.]

1. In an affected manner; hypocritically; with more affection than reality.

Perhaps they are affectionately ignorant; they are so willing it should be true, that they have not attempted to examine it.

Government of the Tongues, p. 5.

Some indeed have been so affectionately vain, as to counterfeit immortality, and have stolen their death, in hopes to be esteemed immortal.

Brown's Polycarp Errors, b. vii. c. 10.

By talking of theil family of one hundred and ten thousand pounds, by a tax upon a few commodities, it is plain, you are either naturally or affectionately ignorant of our condition.

Swift.

2. Studiously; with labouring intention.

Some misperceptions concerning the divine attributes, tend to the corrupting men's manners, as if they were defended and affectionately chosen for that purpose.

Diey of Folly.

AFFECTIONATENESS, n. s. [from affection.]

The quality of being affected, or of making false appearances.

AFFECTIONATION. n. s. [affection, Fr. affection, Lat.]

1. The act of being affected by any one or agent. This general sense is little in use.

Some men there are love not a gaping pig; some that are mad if they behold a cat; and others, when the bagon'fings' th'no'le,

Cannot contain their haunts, for affection.

Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

2. Passion of any kind.

Then 'gan the Palmer thus; mort wretched man,

That to affection does the bridle lend;

In their beginning they are weak and wan;

But from the thought that grows to fearful end.

Fairly Byron.

Impate it to my late solitary life, which is prone affection.

Sidney, b. 1.

AFFECTIONATION. as joy, grief, fear, and anger, with such like, being, as it were, the fundry fashions and forms of appetite, can neither rise at the concourse of a thing pleasant, nor yet choose but rise at the sight of some things.

Hooker, b. i.

To speak truth of Coriolanus,

I have not known when his affections sway'd

But that his heart the breath of Julia's gear.

Zea! ought to be composed of the highest degrees of pious affections; of which some are mild and tender, some sharper and more vehement.

I present nothing beyond this to your affections, to excite your love and desire. Tilson.

My king is tangled in affection to a creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.

Shaksp. 2Hercules.

What warmth is there in your affections towards any of these princely suitors.

Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

Make his interest depend upon mutual affection and good correspondence with others.

Collar on General Indiscretions.

Nor at first sight, like beauty adorns the fair; For your lives, and you alone shall have

His last affection, as his early care.

Page 4.

Good-will to any object; zeal; passionate regard.

I have reason to distrust mine own judgment, as that which may be overthrown by my affection and to affection to this cause.

Bacon.

Set your affection upon my words; observe them, and ye shall be instructed.

William, v. 1.

His affection to the king was without blemish, and his affection to the church so notorious, that he never deserted it.

Clarendon.

All the precepts of Christiandom command us to moderate our passions, to temper our affections towards all things below.

Temple.

Let not the mind of a fludent be under the influence of warm affections to things of sense, when he comes to consider the state of death.

Watts's Improvement of the Mind.

5. State of the mind, in general.

There grow,

In my most calm compos'd affections, such

As a gentle noise, that will not wake,

I should cut off the nobles for their lands.

Shaksp. Macbeth.

The man that hath no musick in himself,

Nor is mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,

Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils.

The motions of his spirit are dull as null.

And his affections dark as Erebos.

Let no such man be trusted.

Shaksp. Merit of Venice.

6. Quality; property.

The certainty and accuracy which is attributed to what mathematicians deliver, must be refraught to what writers of fiction, concerning those purely mathematical difficulties, substantiated and geometry, where the affections of quantity are absolutely considered.

Begge.

The mouth being necessary to conduct the voice to the shape of its cavity, necessarily gives the voice some particular affection of found in its passage before it to the lips.

Gibson's Elements of Speech.

God may have joined incorporeal souls to other kinds of bodies, and in other kinds of souls; and, from those different laws of union, there will arise quite different affections, and natures, and of the compound being living.

Benson's General of Sermons.

7. State of the body, as acted upon by any cause.

It seemed to me a venereal gonorrohea, and others thought it arose from some scabrous affection.

Wisham's Surgery.

AFFECTIONATION. as lively representation in painting.

Affection is the lively representation of any passion whatsoever, as if the figures stood not upon a cloth or board, but as if they were acting upon a stage.

Watt's Architecture.

9. It is used by Shakespeare sometimes for affection.

There was nothing in it that could index the author of affection.

Away with the last affection of old; to the war of France.

Bacon's Moral Vie.

3. Fond; tender.

He found me sitting, bededing this picture, I know not with how affectionate countenances, but, I am sure, with a most affectionate mind. Shaks. Lusiad.

Affectionate, and undying bear

The most delicious morrel to their young.

Tomlin's Spring.

4. Benevolent; tender.

When we reflect on all this affectionate care of Providence for our happiness, with what reason must we observe the little effect it has on men!

Roger's German.

AFFECTIONATELY. adv. [from affectionate.] In an affectionate manner; fondly; tenderly; benevolently.

AFFECTIONATENESS, n. s. [from affectionate.] The quality or state of being affectionate; fondness; tenderness; good-will; benevolence.

AFFECTIONATELY. adj. [from affectionate.]

1. Affected; conceived. This sense is now obsolete.

An affectionals that consist solely without book, and utter it by great pitch.

Shaksp.'s Twelfth Night.

2. Inclined; mentally disposed.

Be kindly affected one to another.

Rom. xii. 10.

AFFECTIONATELY. adv. [from affectionate.] In an affectionate manner.

DIFFERENT. adj. [from affectionate.] That which affects; that which strongly touches. It is generally used for painful.

Pain is so uneasy a sentiment, that very little of it is enough to corrupt every enjoyment; and the effect God intends this variety of ungrateful and affectionate affections should have on us, to reclaim our affections from this valley of tears.

Roger.

AFFECTIONATENESS, n. s. [from affectionate.]

Palliation.

DIFFERENT. adj. [from affectionate.] Full of passion; as, an affectionate speech; a word little used.

AFFECTIONATELY. adj. [from affectionate.]

A law term, signifying to confirm. See TO APPEAR.

AFFEKTORS, n. s. [from affecte.]

Such as are appointed in court-leets, &c., upon oath, to mulct such as have committed faults arbitrarily punishable, and have no express penalty fined or by statute.

Cawdell.

AFFECTION, n. s. [affection, from affecte, Fr.]

1. A marriage-contract.
AFF

At last such grace I found, and means I wrought,
That I that lady to my spouse had won,
According of friends, content of parents sought,
Affiance, made, my hopes began.

2. Truth in general; confidence; secure reliance.
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall—
Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond affection?

3. Truth in the divine promises and protection.
To this genie it is now almost confined.
Religion receives man into a covenant of grace,
Wherein is pardoned, and forgiveness promised, and engaged,
And bestowed upon every obedient condition, etc.,
Humility, prayer, and affection in him.

AFFINITY, n. f. [affinite, Fr. from af- finis, Lat.]
1. Relation by marriage; relation contracted by the husband to the kindred of the wife, and by the wife to those of the husband. It is opposed to conjugancy, or relation by birth.

In this sense it has sometimes the particle with, and sometimes to, before the peron whom the relation is contracted.

This usage is not approved by the necessities of rage killing many guildines, either from affinity to the tyrant, or emmity to the tyrant-killer.

Salmon made affinity with Pharaoh King of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter.

2. A breach was made with France itself, notwithstanding it did an affinity, to lately accomplished; as if indeed (according to that pleasant maxim of state) kingdoms were never married.

Weston.

2. Relation to connexion with; resemblance to: spoken of things.
The British tongue, or Welch, was in use only in this island, having great affinity with the old Gallic.

All things that have affinity with the heavens, move upon the center of another, which they benefit.

Bacon. Elyf saw.

The art of painting hath wonderful affinity with that of poetry.

Dryden. Deserius. Prof. Man is more distinguished by devotion than by reason, as several brute creatures discover something like reason, though they betray not any thing that bears the least affinity to devotion.

Aldinon. Spokl No 201.

To AFFIRM. v. a. [from the noun affirmation.]
1. To betroth; to bind any one by promise to marriage.
To me, fair maid, or rather widow sad,
His was affianced long time before,
And much by both gave and had;
False, errant knights, infamous, and forewarned.

Fair Rich.

She should Angelo have married, was affirmed to be her by oath, and the nuptials appointed; between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, his brother was wrecked, having in that volley the doyle of his sister.

Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.

2. To give confidence.
Stranger! whither thou art, securely rest
Affianced in my faith, a friendly guest.

Pop's Ode on

AFFIANCE. n. f. [from affiance.] He that makes a contract of marriage between two parties. Dit.

AFFIDAVIT. v. a. [from affidae, Lat. And from adfer. See Affidavit.] Mutual oath; mutual oath of fidelity. Dit.

AFFIDAVIT, n. f. [affidentis signis, in the language of the common law, made oaths.] A declaration upon oath.
You said, if I return not next three in Leats, I should be in remitter of your grace; in the interim my letters should take place of affidavits.

Dane.

Coast Recherche should have made affidaveit that his sarrants had been affirmed, and then Monfieur Meinger would have done him justice.

Spotsblo. N visa.

AFFECTED, participial adj. [from the verb affect, derived from affect, Lat. Brought upon the phraze affect, multited.] Join'd by contract; advanced.

Be we affected, and such assurance taken,
Affidavit in the other's agreement hand.

Stokes.

AFFIRMATION, n. f. [affidus, and felix, Lat.] Admond: the act of taking a son.

Chawer.

AFFINAGE, n. f. [affina, Fr.] The act of refining metals by the cupel. Dit.

AFFINED, adj. [from affinet, Lat.] Join'd by affinity to another; related to another.

If partly affined, or leag'd in office,
Their oath deliver more or less than truth,
Their set no folder.

Schiller's Othello.

AFFIRMATIVE, adj. [from affirm.] 1. That which affirms, opposed to negative; in which feene we use the affirmative absolutely, that is, the affirmative position.

Whether there are such beings as not, is sufficient for our purposes, that many have believed the affirmative.

Dryden.

2. That which can or may be affirmed: a sense used chiefly in science.

As in algebra, where affirmative quantities vanish or scale, there negative ones begin to manifest their qualities and temper; particularly according to the degree of that perfection, which is, or ought to be, begotten by the efficacy of the authority, or the reason, inducing them.

Taylor.

AFFIRMATIVELY, adv. [from affirmative.] In an affirmative manner; on the positive side; not negatively.

The reason of man hath no such restraint; concluding not only affirmatively, but negatively; not only affirming, there is no magnitude beyond the law heavens, but also denying, there is any vacuity within them.

Brown's Pal'tic Errors.

AFFIRMER. n. f. [from affirm.] The person that affirms.

If by the word virtue, the affirmers extend our whole duty to God and man; and the denial, by the word vice, means only courage, or, at least, our duty toward our neighbors, without including, in the idea of it, the duty which we owe to God.

Wat's Logick.

To AFFIX. v. a. [affix, affixum, Lat.] 1. To unite to the end, or to posteriori; to affixion.

He that has settled in his mind determined ideas, with names affixed to them, will be able to discern their differences one from another.

Locke.

If men constantly offered applause and disgrace where they ought, the principle of fame would have a very good influence on public conduct; though on secret vicissitudes it lays no restraint.

Hog's Senecas.

2. To connect confluentially.
The doctrine of indefiniteness of places, in working whatever it works, if it be acknowledged, there is nothing to be effect to gratitude.

Hog's Senecas.

3. Simply to fasten or fix. Obsolete.

Her modest eyes, abashed to behold
So many gazers and beholders.

Upon the low ground affixed are.

Spect.

AFFIX. n. f. [affixum, Lat.] A term of grammar. Something united to the end of a word.

In the Hebrew language, the noun has its affix, to denote the pronouns possessive or relative.

Latin Grammar.

AFFIXION, n. f. [from affix.] 1. The act of affixing. Dit.

APPALATION.
AFFLATION, n. f. [afflato, afferatum, Lat.] The act of flowing upon any thing; concourse. It is almost always used figuratively. I shall not relate the afflum of young nobles from hence into Spain, after the voice of our prince being there had been raised. —W.

AFFLATUS, n. f. [Lat.] Communication of the power of prophecy. The poet writing against his genius, will be like a prophet without an afflum. Spence on the Odyssey.

To AFFLICT, v. a. [affligere, afflœtum, Lat.]
1. To put to pain; to grieve; to torment. It teacheth us how God thought fit to plague and afflige them; it doth not inapt in what form and manner we ought to punish the sins of offenders in others. —Hosmer, b. v. § 37.

2. To suffer adversity, and to be troubled with unseasonable necessity. Hence the word made bizarre, because what doth afflige me! The lights burn blue—is it not death midnight! Cold tearful drops stand on my trembling fich. Shaksp. Rich. III.

Giveth not every mind to heaviness, and afflige not thyself in thine own counsel. Exch. xxviii. 31.

A father affliged with untimely mourning, when he hath made an image of his child fon taken away, he supposed as a God, which is a dead man, and delivered to those that were under him ceremonies and sacrifices. Wisdom.

A melancholy tear affliged my eye, and my heart was as a sudden sigh. Prior.

2. The passive to be affliged, hath often at before the causal noun; by is likewise proper. The mother was affliged at the loss of a fine boy, who was her only son, that she died of grief of it. Addison, Spect.

AFFLIC'TEDNESS, n. f. [from affligere.] The state of afflication, or of being affliged; sorrowfulness; grief. AFFLIC'TION, n. f. [from affligere.] The period that affliges.

1. The cause of pain or sorrow; calamity. To the flesh, as the apostle himself granthath, all affliction is naturally grievous; therefore nature, which causeth fear, teacheth to pray against all adversity. We'll bring you to one that you have corned of money; I think to repay that money will be a hindrance. Shakespeare.

2. The state of sorrowfulness; misery: opposed to joy or prosperity. Besides you know. Prosperity's the very bond of love, While fresh complexion, and whole heart to.

Affliction alter. Shaks. Winter's Tale. Where shall we find the man that bears afflic'tion, Great and majestic In his griefs, like Cato? Addison's Cato.

Some virtues are only seen in afflication, and some in prosperity. Addison, Spectator, No 257.

AFFLIC'TIVE, adj. [from affligere.] That which causeth afflication; painful; tormenting. They bound martyrdom a duty dressed up indeed with all that was terrible and afflic'tive to human nature, yet not at all the last duty. Swift.

Nor can they find Where to retire themselves, or where appease Th' afflic'tive keen edge of food, expost To winds, and storms, and jaws of savage death. Phillips.

AFFLUE'NCE, n. f. [affluentia, Fr. afferen'tia, Lat.]
1. The act of flowing to any place; concourse. It is almost always used figuratively. I shall not relate the affluence of young nobles from hence into Spain, after the voice of our prince being there had been raised. —W.

2. Exuberance of riches; dream of wealth; plenty. Those degrees of fortune, which give fulness and affluence to one faction, may be wanted and penury in another. Let joy or ease, let affluence or content, and the gay confidence of a life well spent, Calm the pensive, infant every grace. Pope.

AFFLUENCY. n. f. The famed with affluence.

AFFLUENT adj. [affluens, Fr. afferen't, Lat.]
1. Flowing to any part. These parts are no more than foundation-plints of the ensuing body; which are afterwards to be increased and raised to a greater bulk, by the affluence of blood that is transmitted out of the mother's womb, to the infant, in parturition. —Boyle.

2. Abundant; exuberant; plentiful. I see thee, Lord and end of my desires, Loaded and blest with all the affluent store, Which human vows at smakmg frithes implore. Prior.

AFFLUENTNESS, n. f. [from affluens.] The quality of being affluent.

AFFLUX. n. f. [affluens, Lat.] The act of flowing to some place; affluence.

AFFREc'T, v. a. [affrigere, or affriger, Fr. which Meany derives from fragor; perhaps it comes from fragus.] To fright; to terrify; to strike with fear. This word is now not in use. The same to wight he never would disclose, But when as monsters huge he would dismay, Or daunt unequal armies of his foes, Or when the flying heavens he would affray. —Queen.

AFFRA'Y, or AFFRA'MENT. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A tumultuous affait of one or more persons upon others; a law term. A battle: in this sense it is written fray.

2. Tumult; confusion; out of use. Let the night be calm and subterranean. Without tempestuous forms or fruile'affra'. —Spenser.

AFFRIc'TION. n. f. [affrigere, Lat.] The act of rubbing one thing upon another. I have divers times observed, in wearing silver-hilted f华尔s, that, if they rubbed upon my clothes, if they were of a lightsomely-coloured cloth, the affrigation would quickly blacken them; and, crouniously hereunto, I have found pens blacked to almost all over, when I had a while carried them about me in a silver case. —Prior.

To AFF'R'GH'T, v. a. [See Fright.] To affect with fear; to terrify. It generally implies a sudden imprefion of fear. Thy name affrigh't me, in whom I found death. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Godlike his courage form'd, whom onlooker Could soften, nor the face of death affright. Waller.

He, when his country (threatened with alarm) Requires his courage and his conquering arm, Shall, more than once, the Punic bands affright. Dryden's Aeneid.

2. It is used in the passive, sometimes with at before the thing feared. Thus thou not be affright'd at them: for the Lord thy God is among you. —Deut. viii. 19.

3. Sometimes is with a participle before the thing feared. As one affright'd

With hellish fiends, or furies mad a'proach, He then uproar. —Queen.

AFFRIP'T. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Terror; fear. This word is chiefly poetical.

As the moon, cleasht with cloudy night. Doth they to him that walks in fear and fail affright. —Queen.

Wide was his parish; not contracted close. In streets, but here and there a straggling house; Yet still he was at hand, without request, To serve the sicks, to succour the disconsol'd; Tempting, on foot, alone, without affright. The dangers of a dark tempestuous night. —Dryden's Fables.

2. The
2. The cause of fear; a terrible object; dreadful appearance.

3. To hold, as for the gods.

4. Used to express "if you please," "may it please you," etc.

5. To express the negative of "ought to." If you please? I think not.

AFL

AFO

AFO

AFO

2. The cause of fear; a terrible object; dreadful appearance.

3. To hold, as for the gods.

4. Used to express "if you please," "may it please you," etc.

5. To express the negative of "ought to." If you please? I think not.

AFL

AFO
After time.  adv. [from after and time.] In time past.

O thou that art waxen old in wickedness, now thou which thou hast committed offences art come to light.

AFTER, adv.; adj. [from the verb afer : it should therefore properly be written with f.]

1. Struck with fear; terrified; fearful.
2. To peremptory with them, to terrify, and make them afraid with thy form. Psalm lxxvi. 15.

It has the particle of before the object of fear.

There, boasting life, and yet of death afraid, in anguish of her spirit, thus she prayed.

Dryden's Fable.

If, while this wearied flesh draws breathing, not satisfied with life, afraid of death, it happily be thy will, that I should know Glimpse of delight, or pause from anxious woe; From own, from infant now, great sire, sip it. The clouds that pour my soul. Prior.

AFTER, adv. [from a and freshly. See FRESH. Anew; again, after intermission.

The Germans serving upon great horses, and charged with heavy armour, received great hurt by light horsemen, the Turks, with their swift horses, easily slaying their charge, and again, at their pleasure, charging them asfofr, when they saw the heavy horses almost weary.

Dryden's History of the Turks.

When once we have attained these ideas, they may be excited byfresh of the use of words.

Watts's Logick.

AFTER, adv. [from a and front.] In front; in direct opposition to the face.

These four came all after, and mainly thrice at me. Shakespeare's Henry IV, p. i.

AFTER, prep. [afteen, Sax.]

1. Following in place. After is commonly applied to words of motion; as, he came after, and stood behind him. It is opposed to before.

What says Lord Warwick, shall we after them?—After them I say, let us, if we can. (Shakespeare's Henry VI.

2. In pursuit of.

After whom is the king of Israel come out? and whom doth thou pursue? After a dead dog, after a flea.

Sir R. Danke.

3. Behind. This is not a common use.

Sometimes I placed a third prism after a second, and sometimes also a fourth after a third, by which the image might be often refided sideways. Newton's Opticks.

4. Posterior in time.

Good after ill, and after pain delight; Alterate, like the feeces of day and night. Dryden's Fables.

We shall examine the ways of conveyance of the sovereignty of Adam to princes that were to reign after him. Locke.

5. According to.

He that dwelleth in Spain our over-sash, is no good mint-man, but takes greatness of kingdoms according to bulk and currency, and not after their intrinsic value.

Bacon.

6. In imitation of.

There are, among the old Roman fuates, severall of Venus, in different figures and habits: as there are many particular figures of her made after the same design. Addison's Italy.

This allusion is after the oriental manner: thus in the Plafms now frequently are compared to cedars. Pope's Odyssey, not

AFTER, adv. In succeeding time. It is used of time mentioned as succeeding some other. So we cannot say, I shall be happy af-
AGA

AGA. n. f. (From after and times.) Succeeding times. See After-time.

AGA. n. f. (From after and times.) Succeeding times. See After-time.

AGA. n. f. (From after and time.) The motion of the sea after a storm.

AGA. n. f. (From after and suit.) The contravention of expedients after the occasion of using them is past. See Afterthought.

AGA-WRATH. n. f. (From after and wrath.) Anger when the provocation seems past. That meant each other's aid, like man and wife.

AGA

AGA. n. f. (From after and times.) Succeeding times. See After-time.

AGA. n. f. (From after and time.) The motion of the sea after a storm.

AGA. n. f. (From after and suit.) The contravention of expedients after the occasion of using them is past. See Afterthought.

AGA-WRATH. n. f. (From after and provision against, or in opposition to, a time of misfortune, but by degrees acquired a neutral sense. It sometimes has the sense elliptically suppressed, as, against he comes, that is, against the time when he comes.

Hence they brought into a deadly fall. Wherein were fair diphers, and ready dight with drapes festival, against the vains should be minisht.

The like charge was given them again, the time they should come to settle themselves in the land promised unto their fathers. Hosea.

Some say, ever after that feast cometh, whereof the Saviour's birth is celebrated, the kind of dancing fingers all night long: and then they say no spirit walks abroad; the nights are wholesome, then no planets, no fair tales, no which hath power to charm; no hollow'd and so gracious is the time. Shakes. Henry VI.

To that purpose, he made haste to Bethel, that all things might be ready against the prince came thither from many tales that fairer. Jeremiah.

Against the promis'd time provides with care, and hardens in the wood the robes he was to wear. Dryden.

All which I grant to be reasonably and truly said, and only desire they may be remembered against another day. Shillingst. Gent.

Want of milk. Did.

Agape, adv. [from andгазе.] Staring with eagerness; as, a bird gapes for meat.

In himself was all his hate; more felon than the scoundrel post that waits. On princes, when their rich retinue long. Of horses led, and grooms besmirch'd with gold; Dazzles the crowd, and sees them all.

Dazzle the crowd, and let them all gasp. Philops.

The whole crowd stood agape, and ready to take the doctor at his word. Speculat. n. 197.

Agarick, n. [agaricum, Lat.] A drug of use in phthis, and the dying trade. It is divided into male and female; the male is used only in dying, the female in medicine; the male grows on oaks, the female on larches.

There are two excrences which grow upon trees, both of them in the nature of mushrooms; the one the Romans call birrus, which grows upon the roots of oaks, and was one of the diseases at their table; the other is medicinal, that is called agarich, which grows upon the tops of oaks; though it be affirmed of some, that it growth at all the roots. Ranon.

Agas't. adj. [This word, which is usual, by later authors, written agast, is, not improbably, the true word derived from agasæ, which has been written agast, from a mistaken etymology. See Achat.] Struck with terror; amazed; frightened to allotment.

In confud'd march foulard, th' adventurous bands, With fluid'd burning Lourale, and eyes agast, View'd their lamentable hurt, and triumph. No. 42.

Age., n. [agues, Fr. achatet, Lat.] A precious stone of the lowest clats, often clouded with beautiful variegations. In shape no bigger than an agate stone, on the forefinger of an alderman.

Skatef. Rome and Fals. Ages are only varieties of the flint kind; they have a grey brown ground, clouded, incased, op. spotted with different colours, chiefly d'ac, black, brown, red, and sometimes blue. Woodward.

Agay, adj. [from agat.] Partaking of the nature of age.

An agay was above two inches in diameter; the whole covered over with a fleble cæreÆeous crust. Woodward.

To Agaze u. s. [from and gazes, to set a gazing; as, amaze, amply, and others.] To strike with amazement; to stupify with sudden terror. The verb is now out of use.

See as a traveilosly, so they lap epy.

Amaz'd knight toward them gallop'd fast,
That seemed from some feared feet to fly,
Another grisy thing that him agaz'd.

Shakes. participl. adj. [from age; which see.] Stuck with admiration; terrified to stupidity.

Hundred he fast to hilly, and none dare stand him;
Here, there, and every where, ear'd he saw;
The French exclaim'd, "The devil was in arms;"
All the whole army stood round the show. Shakes. Henry VI.

AGE. n. &. [age, Fr. ancienly eage, or age; it is deduced by Menage from etatium, of ætias; by Janius, from ætas, which, in the Teutonic dialects, signified long duration.

1. Any period of time attributed to something as the whole, or part, of its duration: in this sense, we say, the age of man, the several ages of the world, the golden or iron age.

One man in his time plays many parts, His life being even age. Shakespeare.

And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt fourteen years; in the whole age of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years. Gen. 47. 9.

2. A fession or generation of men.

Hence, halting, springs care of posterities, For things their kind ever-liking make.
Hence wise, that old men do plant young trees, The fruit whereof another age shall take. Sir J. Davisc.

Next to the Sun, Dull'd Restor of mankind, by whom New he'v'n, and earth, shall to the age rise; Go down from here' s d'licitous Mil'ns! Paradise Lost.

No drolling age.

Ever felt the raptures of poetic rage.
Rel. comm.

3. The time in which any particular man, or race of men, lived, or shall live; as, the age of heroes.

No longer now the golden age appears, When patriarchs walk with'v'd a thousand years. Pope.

4. The space of a hundred years; a familiar period; a century.

5. The latter part of life; old-age; oldness.

You see how full of change his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little; he always loved our father, and with what poor judgment he hath now call'd her off. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Boys must not have the ambitious care of men, Nor must the weak anxiety of age. Rel. comm. On this occasion, where they have said The loves delighted, and the grace's play'd;

Infatul age will trace his cruel way,
And leave sad marks of his destructive sway. Prior.

6. Maturity; ripeness; years of discretion; full strength of life.

A solemn admission of provosts, all that either, being of age, desire that admitted for themselves, or that, in infancy, are by others preferred that the charity of their children.

We thought our fires, not with their own content, Had, use we came to age, our portion lap.

Dydox.

7. In law.

In a man, the age of fourteen years is the age of discretion; and twenty-one years is the full age. In a woman, at seven years of age, the lord her father may sell in his tenents for and to marry here to the age of nine years, she is durable; at twelve years, she is able fraudly and lawfully to conclude her former consent given to marriage; at fourteen, she is entitled to receive her land into her own hands, and shall be out of word at the death of her ancestor: at sixteen, she shall be out of word, though, at the death of her ancestor, she was within the age of fourteen years; at twenty-one, she is able to alienate her lands and tenements. At the age of fourteen, a stippling is enabled to choose his own guardian; at the age of fourteen, a man may confess to marriage. Conell.

Aged. adj. [from age. It makes two syllables in poetry.]

1. Old; fricken in years; applied generally to animate beings.

If the comparison do stand between man and man, the aged, for the most part, are her experienced, least subject to rash and unadvised passions. Homer.

Novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of knowledge, as it is to confess to vanity in any undertaking. Shakes. Mefor, fil. Mefor. Rem. II.

Agedly, adv. [from aged.] After the manner of an aged person.

Agen. adv. [agen, Sax.] Again; in return. See Again.

This word is now only written in this manner, though it be in reality the true orthography, for the sake of rhyme.

Thus Venus: Thus her son reply'd aged;
None of your fathers have we heard or seen.

D. Agency, n. [from agent.]

1. The quality of acting; the state of being in action; action.

A few advances there are in the following papers, tending to the superintendence and agency of Providence in the natural world. Wordsworth a Pref. to Nat. History.

2. The office of an agent or factor for another; business performed by an agent.

Some of the purchasers themselves may be content to live cheap in a worse country, rather than be at the change of exchange and agencies. Swif.}

A'gent, adj. [agents, Lat.] That which acts; opposed to patient, or that which is acted upon; the principal agent.

This grace is oft truly ascribed unto the force of imagination upon the body agent: and then, by a secondary means, it may upon a dier body; as, for example, if a man carry a ring, or some part of a beast, etc. A measure which it will help him to obtain his love, it may make him more lucrative, and again more confident and perspicuous than otherwise he would be. Burn's Nats. Dig.

A gent. n. &. 1. An actor; he that acts; he that possesses the faculty of action.
AGG

The occasion of its not healing by agglutination, as the other did, was from the alteration the teeth had begun to make in the bottom of the wound.

William's Surgery.

AcGl*utate.* n.s. [from aggregate.] That which has the power of procuring agglutination.

To AGGRANTIZE. v. a. [aggredier, Fr.]. To make great; to enlarge; to exalt; to improve in power, honour, or rank. It is applied to persons generally, sometimes to things.

If the king should set it not better than the pope did, only to aggrandize confusious churchmen, it cannot be called a jewel in his crown.

Abbott's Paragon.

To AGGRANIZEMENT. n. f. [aggrandissement, Fr.]. The state of being aggrandized; the act of aggrandizing.

To AGGRANDIZER. n. f. [from aggrandize.] The person that aggrandizes or makes great.

To AGGRASS. v. a. [aggredier, Lat.].

1. To make heavy, uted only in a metaphorical sense; as, to aggrandise an ac culation, or a punishment.

His will who reigns above to aggrandise.

Their pens, laden with fruits, like that
Which grew in Paradise, the fruit of Ever
By the hand of the beneficent Lady
Ambitious Turm's in the press appears.

And aggrandizing crimes augment their fears.

Dryden.

2. To make any thing worse, by the addition of some particular circumstance, not essentially.

This offence, in itself to reconcil'd, was set in him aggrandized by the motive thereof, which was not only a mines or discontent, but an afflicting mind to the people.

Monad. Henry VII.

AGRASSIVE. n.s. [from aggrandise, aggredier, Lat.]. To commit the final act of violence; to begin the quarrel.

The glorious pax advance,

With mingled anger, and collected might;

To turn the way, and tell aggresive France,

How Britain's land and Britain's friends can fight.

Fothergill.

AGRESSION. n.s. [aggress, aggredier, Lat.]. The first act of injury; concommitment of a quarrel by some act of iniquity.

There is no distinction of a compound word, without an union of the two letters, and these may be also on the other hand, a compound word of family and aggression.

St. George.

AGRESSOR. n. f. [from aggress.]. The person that first commences hostility; the assailant or invader, opposed to the defendant.

Fry in nature's face.

But how, if nature's face be spared

Then palsey the aggressor: set his look to 'em.

Dryden.

So in another unfortunate case, to be obdliged to retrieve the estate of both author's, whose works are so long forgotten that we are in danger already of applying the first derogation.

Pipe and Scott.

AGREVANCE. n.s. [See *GRIE*VANCE*.] Injury; hardship inflicted; wrong endured.

To AGREE. v. a. [from *pravus, Lat.]. Sec. 'To grseve,' i. a. small bits, of a very fragrant scent. It is hot, drying, and accounted a strengthen-er of the nerves in general. The best is of a blackish purple colour, and so light as to swim upon water. Quin.

"AGIJO. n.f. [An Italian word, signifying cafe or conveniency.] A mercantile term, used chiefly in Holland and Venetian, for the difference between the values of bank notes, and the current money.

Chambers.

To AGI'EN, v. a. [from, gift; Fr. a bed or relling-place, or from, gift, i.e.
flanknote.] To take in and feed
the cattle of strangers in the king's forest, and to gather the money. The officers that do this, are called agisxers, in English, gift or gift-takers. Their function is termed agisment; as, agisment upon the sea-banks. This word agis is also used, for the taking in of other men's cattle into any man's ground, at a certain rate per week.

Blunt.

AGISMEN'T, n.f. [See AGIIS.] It is taken by the canon lawyers in another sense than is mentioned under agis.
They seem to intend by it, a mode of composition, or mean rate, at which some right or due may be reckoned;
perhaps it is corrupted from adjustment,
or adjustment.

AGISTOR, n.f. [from agis.] An officer of the king's forest. See AGI.

AGISTABLE, adj. [from agis; agistabilis,
Lat.] That which may be agisted, or put in motion; perhaps that which may be disputed. See AGISE, and AGI-TATION.

To AGI'TATE, v. a. [agis, Lat.] 1. To put in motion; to shake; to move nimbly; as, the surface of the waters is agitated by the wind; the vessel was broken by agitating the liquor.
2. To be the cause of motion; to actuate;
to move.

Why, give him gold enough, and marry him to a puppy, or an agist baby, or an old troth, and ne'er a tooth in his head.
Shakespeare's Twelfth of the Sherbro.

2. The pendants at the ends of the cheves of flowers, as in tulips.

AG'INESS. n.f. [from agmen, Lat.] Belonging to a troop.

AG'NAIL, adj. [from ange, grievous, and angle, a nail.] A disease of the nails; a whistow; an inflammation round the end of a nail.

AGNATIO, n.f. [from agnatus, Lat.] Descent from the same father, in a direct line, distinct from cognation, or confangunity, which includes descendants from females.

AGNITY, n.f. [from agnitio, Lat.] Acknowledgment.

To AG'NIKE, v. a. [from agnoeo, Lat.] To acknowledge; to own; to avow.
This word is now obsolete.

I do agnike.

A natural and present ability
I find in handcrifs. Shakespeare's Othello.

AGNOMINATION, n.f. [agnominatio, Lat.] Allusion of one word to another, by resemblance of sound.

The British continueth yet in Wales, and some villages of Cornwall intermingled with provincial Latin, being very significaftive, copious, and glamoury running upon agnomination, although much in aspirations. Camden.

AGNUS CASTUS, n.f. [Lat.] The name of the tree commonly called the Ghost Tree, from an imaginarv virtue of preferving chastity.

Of Iaurum comes, woodbine many more.
And wreaths of it, to agnus others born. Dryd.

AGO', adv. [exan, Sax. past or gone; whence writers formerly used, and in some provinces the people still use, agno for ago.] Past; as, long ago; that is, long.
long time has past since. Reckoning time towards the present, we use fate; as it is a year since it happened: reckoning from the present, we use age; as it happened a year ago. This is not, perhaps, always observed.

The great supply
Are wreak'd three nights ago on Godwin sands.

This night by others and myself I know,
For I have seen their sovereign long age,
Oft have been caught within the winding train.

Dryden's Fables.

I will set down an account of a discourse chanced to have with one of them some age.

Addison's Foundlers.

Ag'o. adv. [A word of uncertain etymology; the French have the term a gens, in low language; as, ils vivront a gens, they live to their wish; from this phrase our word may be, perhaps, deduced.]

1. In a state of desire; in a state of warm imagination; heated with the notion of some enjoyment; longing; strongly excited.

As for the sense and reason of it, that has little or nothing to do here; only let it be found full and round, and chime right to the humour, which is at present a-gue (just as a big, long, tall thing is said to be employed even adornation from a Spaniard), and, no doubt, with this powerful, fickle engine, the rabble driver shall be able to carry all before him.

Such a Screen.

2. It is used with the verbs to be, or to sat; as, he is a-gue, or you may sit him a-gue.

The gawdy gypsy, when she's a-gue, In jewels deckt, and at each car a bob, Goes flaunting o'er the land with her trim of pride, Thanks all the folks as do's justify it.

This maggot has no fences for him ague, but he gets him a filthy, fleshy hat, builds a castle in the air, and conceits both the Indies in his coun-ier.

L'Estrange.

3. It has the particles on, or, for, before the object of desire.

On which the gueus are all a-gue. And gueus is what they are called. Hudde, can't.

Gyspian generally diggle into these parts, and set their heads of our servant-maids a-gue for husbands, that we do not expect to have any busidee done as it should be, which they are in this country.

Addison's Spectators.

A-guing. participial adj. [from a and going] In action; into action.

Their first movement, and imprised motions, demand the impulse of an almighty hand to set them first in motion.

Taylor.

Aغو'ne. adv. [אגז] Ago; past. See Aco.

Is he such a princely one, As you speak him long a-gue?

John Gay's Fairy Prints.

A'gonism. n. f. [אגרות] Contra-tender for a prize.

Dibdib.

A'gonist. n. f. [אגרות] A contender for prizes.

Dibdib.

A'gonistes. n. f. [אגרות] A prizefighter; one that contends at πάρενθερ public foeminity for a prize. Milton has so styled his tragedy, because Samson was called out to divert the Philistines with feats of strength.

A'gonistical. adj. [from agonistes] Relating to prize-fighting.

Dibdib.

To A'gonize. n. [from agonize, low

Vol. I.

Latin; ἄγωνιζε, Gr. agonizó, Fr.] To feel agonies; to be in excessive pain.

Don't thou behold thy poor distracted heart
Thus rent with agonizing love and rage.

And ask me what it means? Art thou not false?

Rowe's Jane Shore.

Or touch, if, tremblingly alive all over,
To imas and agonie at this:

A'gonoth'ieck. adj. [ἀγωνιθ'ιεκς] and ἄγωνιθ'ιεκς, Gr.] Proposing publick conventions for prizes; giving prizes; presiding at publick games.

Dibdib.

A'GONY. n. f. [אגרות] a low Lat.

Agr'a.'ments. n. [from agonize, low

Lat.]

1. To be in concord; to live without contention; not to differ.

The more you agree together, the left hurt can your enemies do your friends.

Fleas of Epic Poetry.

2. To grant; to yield to; to admit; with the particles to or upon.

And persuaded them to agree to all reasonable conditions.

We do not prove the origin of the earth from a chaos; seeing that is agreed on by all who give it any origin.

Burke.

3. To settle amicably.

A form of words were quickly agreed to between him.

A.parl. and Conv. of Clarendon.

4. To settle terms by stipulation; to accord: followed by with.

Agree with the adversary quickly, whilst thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

Mat. xvi. 25.

5. To settle a price between buyer and seller.

Friend, I do thee no wrong; didst thou not agree with me for a penny?

Mat. xxvi. 13.

6. To be of the fairest mind or opinion.

He exceedingly provoked or underwrought the envy, and reproach, and malice of men of all qualities and conditions, who agreed in nothing else.

Clarendon.

Milton is a noble genius, and the world agrees to confess it.

Weiss' Improvement of the Mind.

7. To concur; to co-operate.

Must the whole man, thinking the same, return to the cold mantle and call'd un

And never shall those parties agree that were in life this individual he?

Prior.

8. To settle some point among many, with upon before a noun.

Strifes and troubles would be endless, except they meet in a common sentiment agreed by some whom they should agree upon.

Haller.

If men, skilled in chemical affairs, shall agree to write clearly, and keep men from being stunned by dark or empty words, they will be reduced either to write nothing, or books that may teach us something.

Boyle.

9. To be confident; not to contradict;

with to or with.

For many a time witness against him, but this very witness agreed against the man.

Mark, xvi. 6.

They that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galillean, and thy speech agreeth thereto.

Mark, xvi. 70.

With equal firmness, I the less fix'd to all this, because it agrees very well with what has been affirme to me.

Boyle.

10. To fuit with; to be accommodated;

with to or with.

The soul feedeth time own people with angels food, and didst fond them from heaven bred according to every taste.

Wilhelm.

His principles could not be made to agree with that constitution and order which God had settid in the world; and, the better, must needs stand with common sense and experience.

Locke.

11. To cause no disturbance in the body.

I have often thought, that our prefcribing affe milks in such frail quantities, is injudicious; for, undoubted, with such as it agrees with, it would perform much greater and quicker effects, in greater quantities.

Avicenius.

A'gree'E. n. a.

1. To put an end to a variance.

The law from far, or formed for to far, Some troubles upbraiding, or contemptuous fray,

Whereo he drew in hale to it agree.

Fairy Queen, b. ii.

2. To make friends; to reconcile.

The mighty rivals, whose destructive rage
Did the whole world in civil arms engage.

Are now agreed.

Restor.

II

A'gree'able.
AGREEABLE. adj. [agreeable, Fr.]
1. Suitable to; consistent with; conformable to. It has the particle to, or with.
2. This suite of blood is agreeable to many other animals, as fgrs, hares, and other felines.
3. The delight which man has in popularity, fame, sublimity, and subjection of other men's minds, seemeth to be a thing, in itselfs, without contemplation of consequences, agreeable and grateful to reason.
4. That which is agreeable to the nature of one thing, is many times contrary to the nature of another.

AGREEMENT. n. s. [agreement, Fr. in law Latin agraemationem, which Coke would willingly derive from aggregatio sacramentum.]
1. Concord. What agreement is there between the hymns and the dog? and what peace between the rich and the poor?
2. Refemblance of one thing to another.
3. Compact; bargain; conclusion of controversy; stipulation.
4. Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree.
5. Agreeable to; with; suitableness to; with the particle to.

AGREABLENESS. n. s. [from agreeable.]
1. Conformity with; suitableness to; with the particle to.
2. The quality of pleasing. It is used in an inferior sense, to mark the production of satisfaction, calm and lazing, but below rapture or admiration.
3. Refemblance; likeness; sometimes with the particle between.
4. The agreement is likewise in the agreement of the kernel man and the other parts of the universe.

AGREABLY, adv. [from agreeable.]
1. Consistently with; in a manner suitable to.
2. They may look into the affairs of Judea and Jerusalem, agreeably to that which is in the law of the Lord. 1 Esd. xviii. 12.
3. Pealingly.

AGREEABLELY, participial adj. [from agreeable.]
Settled by consent.

AGREEABNESS. n. s. [from agreeable. Confluence; suitableness.

AGREED. participial adj. [from agree.]

AGREE. n. s. [agreement, Fr. in law Latin agraemationem, which Coke would willingly derive from aggregatio sacramentum.]
1. Concord. What agreement is there between the hymns and the dog? and what peace between the rich and the poor?
2. Refemblance of one thing to another.
3. Compact; bargain; conclusion of controversy; stipulation.
4. Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree.

AGREEABLE, or AGRESTICAL adj. [from agreeable, Lat.] Having relation to the country; rude; rustic. Dict.

AGRICULTURE. n. s. [from agricultura, Lat.] The art of cultivating the ground; tillage; husbandry, as distinct from pasturage.

AGRICULTURAL, n. s. [agriculturum, Lat.] The name of a plant. The leaves are rough, hairy, pennated, and grow alternately on the stem. The flowers are in a short cup containing the stamens of one leaf, which is divided into five segments: the flowers have five or six leaves, and are formed into a long spike, which expand in form of a rose; the fruit is oblong, dry, and prickly, like the burdock; in each of which are contained two kernels.

AGRICULTIV, n. s. [agricultivus, Lat.] To look terrible. Out of use. Speaker.

AGROUND, adv. [from a and ground.]
1. Stranded; hindered by the ground from passing farther.
2. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that object.

AGUE. n. s. [ague, Fr. accent.] An intermitting fever, with cold fits succeed

AGUE,FIT. n. s. [from ague and fit.]
The paroxysm of the ague.

AGUE TREE. n. s. [from ague and tree.]
A tree sometimes given to fainfairs.

AGUAR, or AGUA, n. s. [from a and gaye. See Guese.] To dree; to adorn; to deck: a word now not in use.

AGUISH, adj. [from aguish.]
Having the qualities of an ague.

AGUISHNESS. n. s. [from aguish.] The quality of resembling an ague.

AGUIRRE, n. s. [from a and gaye.] Interjection. 1. A loud nothing noting sometimes dislike and cenure.
2. Sir Walter Raleigh's Effigy. Say what you feel, and whether you are bound! Were you, by trefh of weather, called agrained? Drayton's Envid.
3. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that objection.

AGUE. n. s. [ague, Fr. accent.] An intermitting fever, with cold fits succeed

AGUES, adj. [from a and gaye.]
Struck with an ague; shivering; chill; cold; a word in little use.

All hurt behind, back red, and faces pale, With flight and ague fear! Shaksp. Coriolanus.

AGUES FIT. n. s. [from ague and fit.]
The paroxysm of the ague.

AGUES, FIT. of fear is overthrown. Shaksp. Rich. II.

AGUES, FIT. proof. adj. [from ague and proof.]
Proof against agues; able to resist the cauts which produce agues, without being affected.

When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not cease at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. They told me I was every thing: 'tis a lie; I am not ague proof. Shakespeare's King Lear.

AGUES, TREE. n. s. [from ague and tree.]
A name sometimes given to fainfairs.

AGUES, or AGUA, n. s. [from a and gaye. See Guese.] To dree; to adorn; to deck: a word now not in use.

AGUES, adj. [from aguish.]
Having the qualities of an ague.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] The name of a plant. The leaves are rough, hairy, pennated, and grow alternately on the stem. The flowers are in a short cup containing the stamens of one leaf, which is divided into five segments: the flowers have five or six leaves, and are formed into a long spike, which expand in form of a rose; the fruit is oblong, dry, and prickly, like the burdock; in each of which are contained two kernels.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] To look terrible. Out of use. Speaker.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] Interjection. 1. A loud nothing noting sometimes dislike and cenure.
2. Sir Walter Raleigh's Effigy. Say what you feel, and whether you are bound! Were you, by trefh of weather, called agrained? Drayton's Envid.
3. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that objection.

AGUES, or AGUA, n. s. [from a and gaye.]
Having the qualities of an ague.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] The name of a plant. The leaves are rough, hairy, pennated, and grow alternately on the stem. The flowers are in a short cup containing the stamens of one leaf, which is divided into five segments: the flowers have five or six leaves, and are formed into a long spike, which expand in form of a rose; the fruit is oblong, dry, and prickly, like the burdock; in each of which are contained two kernels.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] To look terrible. Out of use. Speaker.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] Interjection. 1. A loud nothing noting sometimes dislike and cenure.
2. Sir Walter Raleigh's Effigy. Say what you feel, and whether you are bound! Were you, by trefh of weather, called agrained? Drayton's Envid.
3. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that objection.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] A name sometimes given to fainfairs.

AGUES, or AGUA, n. s. [from a and gaye. See Guese.] To dree; to adorn; to deck: a word now not in use.

AGUES, adj. [from aguish.]
Having the qualities of an ague.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] The name of a plant. The leaves are rough, hairy, pennated, and grow alternately on the stem. The flowers are in a short cup containing the stamens of one leaf, which is divided into five segments: the flowers have five or six leaves, and are formed into a long spike, which expand in form of a rose; the fruit is oblong, dry, and prickly, like the burdock; in each of which are contained two kernels.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] To look terrible. Out of use. Speaker.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] Interjection. 1. A loud nothing noting sometimes dislike and cenure.
2. Sir Walter Raleigh's Effigy. Say what you feel, and whether you are bound! Were you, by trefh of weather, called agrained? Drayton's Envid.
3. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that objection.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] Having the qualities of an ague.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] The name of a plant. The leaves are rough, hairy, pennated, and grow alternately on the stem. The flowers are in a short cup containing the stamens of one leaf, which is divided into five segments: the flowers have five or six leaves, and are formed into a long spike, which expand in form of a rose; the fruit is oblong, dry, and prickly, like the burdock; in each of which are contained two kernels.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] To look terrible. Out of use. Speaker.

AGUES, FIT. n. s. [from a and gaye.] Interjection. 1. A loud nothing noting sometimes dislike and cenure.
2. Sir Walter Raleigh's Effigy. Say what you feel, and whether you are bound! Were you, by trefh of weather, called agrained? Drayton's Envid.
3. It is likewise figuratively used, for being hindered in the progress of affairs; as, the negotiators were agreed at that objection.
AIR

But safe repose, without an air of breath,
Dwells here, and a dumb quiet next to death.

Let warm airs through trembling objects play,
And Albion's cliffs resound the rural lay.

4. Scent; vapour.
Sinks which the winds frighten above are not the moon's percissions, but each air at a time has some mixture with man's body; and so infuse themselves, and betray the spirits. Bacon.

5. Blat; pellucid vapour.
All the bloud's vanities of heaven fall
On her ingrateful head; strike her with bones,
You taking air in Quintessent's Shaks, King Lear.

6. Any thing light or uncertain; that is as light as air.
O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in air of your fine looks,
Lives like a drunken falcon on a mast.
Ready ev'ry nod to tumble down.

Dyden's Fables.

7. The open weather; air unconfined.
The gatten was inclus'd within the square,
Where young Emilia took the morning air.

Dyden.

8. Ven; utterance; emission into the air.
I would have ask'd you, if I didn't frame,
If still you liv'd? you gave it air before me.
But tell me if we were not both of a facet.
For then we might have liv'd without a crime.

Dyden.

9. Publication; exposure to the publick view and knowledge.
I am sorry to find it has taken air, that I have been bloud in the press.

Dryden's Fables.

10. Intelligence; information. This is not now in use.
It grew from the airs which the princes
And states arrived from their ambassadors and agents here.
Bacon's History VII.

11. Muck, whether light or serious; found; air modulated.
This muck crept by me upon the waters,
Allying both their fury and my passion,
With its sweet air.

Shakespeare's Tempest.
Ca'd in some muck; I have heard, false airs
Can charm our senses, and expel our cares.

Denbon's Spy. The same airs, which some entertain with most delightful transports, others are importune.
You may smelt the sun's black down, and Chambers's Sciency.

Since we have such a treaty of words for proper for the airs of muck, I wonder that perils should give so little affright.

Borne on the swelling notes, our fouls aspire,
While solemn airs improve the sacred fire
And angels lean from heav'n to hear!

—When the foul is funk with cares,

12. Poetry; a song.
The repeated air
Of sad Electra's tear had the pow'rs
To fare th' Athenian sails from ruin bare.

Paradise Regained.

13. The mien, or manner, of the person; the look.
Her graceful innocence, her ev'ry air,
Of gesture, or leaf action, overspread her mien.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

For the air of youth
Hopeful and cheerful, in thy blood shall reign
A melodious damp of cold and dry.

The roll of springs down, and left confume
The balm of life.

Milton's Paradise Lost.
But, having the life before us, besides the experience of all they knew, it is no wonder to hit some airs and features, which they have mistific'd.

Dryden on Dramatic Poetry.

There is something wonderfully divine in the airs of this picture.

If you should parade all thy figures past,
And breathe an air divine on ev'ry face.

Pope.

14. An affected or laboured manner or gesture; as, a lofty air, a gay air.
Whom Ancus follows with a fawning air;
But vain within, and proudly popular.

Dryden's Envid. vi.

There are of these sorts of beauties, which last but for a moment; as, the different airs of an assembly, upon the light of an unexpected and uncomposted object, force peculiarly of a violent passion, some graceful action, a smile, a glance of an eye, a disearful look, a look of gravity, and a thousand other such like things.

They whole lives were employed in intiugues of state, and they naturally give themselves airs of kings and princes, of which the ministers of other nations are only the representatives.

Addison's Remarks in Italy.

To curl their waving hairs,
Afflict their blues, and inflate their airs.

Pope.

He simulate and affect an entire set of very different airs, which moveth himself: a being of an exquisite nature.

Swift.

15. Appearance.
As it was communicated with the air of a facet,
It found its way into the world.

Pope's Dunciad to the Pope of the Last.

16. [in horsemanship.] Airs denote the artificial or practiced motions of a nagged horse.
Chambers.

To Air, a. a. [from the noun a.

1. To expro to the air; to open to the air.
The others make it a matter of small commendation in itself, if they are minding else but a and the repons, which their place requires.

Herrick. b. v. x. 99.

Please to make principally of few or more, where these hath been a little milleror, the chamber and bed-drawn kept close, and not air'd.

Bacon's Natural History, N. 696.

We have had, in our time, experience twice or thrice, when both the judges, that fat upon the jell, and numbers of shelf that attended the bullfords, or were present, sickened upon it, and died. Therefore, it was good-wise, that in such cases, the jail were air'd, before they were brought to the bull's head, and air'd by the Natural History, N. 696.

As the ants were airing their provisions one winter, up comes a hungry grasshopper to them, and begs a charity.

L'Estrange's Fables.
Or wicker-baskets weave, or air the corn.

Dryden's Virg.

2. To gratify, by enjoying the open air, with the reciprocal pronoun.
Nay, say a little—
Were you but riding forth to air yourself.
Such parting were too petty.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

I ascended the highest hill of Bagdad, in order to pass the rest of the day in meditation and prayer.
As I was here airing myself on the tops of the mountains, I fell into a profound contemplation on the vanity of human life.

Addison, Spectator.

3. To air liquors; to warm them by the fire: a term used in conversation.

4. To breed in nits. In this sense, it is derived from aere, a heat; it is now out of use.

You may add your busie, dargours, confurcious, yea and sometimes desperite deceitful, one from another, of the other men's wits; which, if they were allowed to air naturally and quitly, there should be free sufficient, to kill not only the particular, but even all the good housewives chickens in a country.

Coren's Survey of Cornwall.

AIRBLADDER, n. f. [from air and bald.]

1. Any cuticle or vehicle filled with air.
The pulmonary artery and vein pass along the surfaces of these airbladders, in an infinite number of ramifications, which divide the lungs into different parts.

2. The bladder in fishes, by the contraction and dilatation of which, they vary the properties of their weight to that of their bulk, and rise or fall.

Though the airbladder in fishes seems necessary for swimming, yet some are so formed as to form without difficulties.

AIR BUILT, adj. [from air and build.]
Built in the air, without any solid foundation.

Hence the fool's paradise, the flatman's scheme.
The airbuilt castle, and the golden dream.
The mad's romantical, with Leviathan's flame.
And poet's vision of eternal fame.

Pope's Dunciad, b. iii.

AIR-DRAWN, adj. [from air and drawn.]
Drawn or painted in air: a word not used.

This is the very painting of your fear.
This is the air-drawn dagger, which, you said,
Led you to Duncan.

Shakespeare.

AIRER. n. f. [from To a.
He that exposeth to the air.

AIRHOLE, n. f. [from air and hole.]
A hole to admit the air.

AIRINESS, n. f. [from airy.]
1. Openness; exposure to the air.
2. Lightness; gaiety.

The French have indeed taken worthy pains to make classical learning speak their language; if they have not succeeded, it must be imputed to a certain talkativeness and airiness represented in their tongue, which will never agree with the fastidious of the Romans, or the solemnity of the Greeks.

Ficlion.

AIRING. n. f. [from air.]
A short journey or ramble to enjoy the free air.
This little fleet serves only to fetch them wine and corn, and to give them their airing in the summer's season.

Addison.

AIRLESS, adj. [from airy.]
Wanting communication with the free air.
Nor flanny towers, nor walls of beaten brafs,
Nor airless dungeons, nor strong links of iron,
Can be sensitive to the strength of spirits.

Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

AIRLING. n. f. [from air, for gossip.]
A young, light, thoughtful, gay person.

Same more there be, flight airyng, will be won.
With dogs, and horses, and perhaps a whore.

Bun Jonyn.

AIRPUMP, n. f. [from air and pump.]
A machine by which the means the air is exhausted out of proper vessels. The principle on which it is built, is the elastic of the air; as that on which the water-pump is founded, is on the gravity of the air.

The invention of this curious instrument is ascribed to Otto de Guericke, confoul of Magdeburg, in 1654.
But his machine laboured under several defects; the force necessary to work it was very great, and the progress very slow; it was to be kept under water, and allowed of no change of objects for experiments.

Mr. Boyle, with the assistance of Dr. Hooke, removed several inconveniences; though, still, the working was laborious, by reason of the pressure of the atmosphere at every expiration. This labour has since removed moved by Mr. Hawkebee; who, by adding a second barrel and pilon, to ride as the other fell, and fall as it rose, made the pressure of the atmosphere on the descending one, of as much service as it was of diffuseness in the ascending one. Vream made a further improvement by reducing the alternate motion of the hand and winch to a circular one.

Chambers.

The air that, in exhausted receivers of air-pumps, is exhausted from minerals, and fluids, and flints, and liquors, is as true and genuine as toelectric and density, or rate of motion, as that we respire in; and yet this mixture is so far from being fit to be breathed in, that it keeps animals in a moment, even sooner than the absence of air, or a vacuum itself.

AEROSMPT. n. f. [from air and foart].

A passage for the air into mines and subterraneous places.

By the finking of an afoart, the air hath liberty to circulate, and carry out the fumes both of the miners and the damps, which would otherwise stagnate there.

AER. adj. [from air; aereum, Lat.]

The air is the transmission, or emission, of the thinner and more airy parts of bodies; as, in colours and infections; and this, of all the rest, the most corporeal.

2. Referring to the air; belonging to the air.

There are fishes that have wings, that no strangers to the air region.

Bible.

3. High in air.

Whose rivers he be forake the fields below.

And, with their brightness through airy channels flow.

Addison.

4. Open to the free air.

Joy'd to range abroad in faire attire

Thus the wide compass of the airy coast.

Spenser.

5. Light as air; thin; unsubstantial; without solidity.

I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's trace.

Steev's Humour.

Still may the hand the wand'ring troops constrain

Of bodily grace, and gay refinement.

Corneille.

6. Wanting reality; having no steady foundation in truth or nature; vain; trifling.

Nor think with wind

Of airy threats to awe, whom yet with deeds

The same may not.

Monck's Paradise Lost.

Nor (to avoid such mean'ness) soaring high,

With empty found, and airy notions, fly.

Rees's Faminary.

I have found a complaint concerning the sea, city of money, which occasioned many airy prophecies for the remedy of it. Temple's Missolinades.

7. Fluttering; loose; as if to catch the air; full of levity.

The painters draw their nymphs in thin and airy beauty; but the weight of gold and of embroidery is reserved for queens and goddesses. Dryden.

By this name of Ladies, he means all young persons, slender, finely shaped, airy, and delicate; such as are formed as Neapolitan beauties.

Daven.

8. Gay; sprightly; full of mirth; vivacious; lively; spirited; light of heart.

He that is merry and airy at dinner when he feels a full tempest on the sea, or dances when God thunders from heaven, regards not when God speaks to all the world.

AISLE. n. f. [Thus the word is written by Addison, but perhaps improperly; since it seems deductible only from, either aisle, a wing, or alley, a path, and is therefore to be written aisle.]. The walks in a church, or wings of a quire.

The abbey is by no means so magnificent as one would expect from its endowments. The church is one huge nef, with a double aisle to it; and, at each end, is a large quire.

AISLE, or ALLE. n. f. [supposed, by Skinner, to be corrupted from istic]. A formal open space in a church.

AFTUING. v. n. [from affuing, or istic, Gr.]. An additional pipe to water-works. Ditto.

To AKE. v. n. [from istic, Gr. and therefore more grammatically written ake].

1. To feel a lying pain, generally of the internal parts; distinguishted from smart, which is commonly used of uneasiness in the external parts; but this is no accurate account.

To sue, and be deny'd, such common grace,

My wounds ask at you! Shakespeare.

Let us gather ake, and it endures

Our other healthful members with a fence

Of pain.

Shakespeare.

Wreck the pleasure of drinking company, the very advices of such as thine, and aching head, which, in some men, are sure to follow: I think no body would ever let wine touch his lips.

His limbs must ake, with daily toils oppress'd,

Ear long-wi'd night brings necessary rest.

Prior.

2. It is frequently applied, in an improper sense, to the heart; as, the heat ake; to imply grief or fear.

Shakespeare has used it, still more licentiously, of the soul.

My soul ake.

To know, when two authorities are up,

Neither supreme, how low can confound.

May enter.

Shelley's Ciuilism.

Here fame d'flusades him, where his rear prevails,

And yearly, by turns, his ake heart affails.

Addison.

Akin. adj. [from a and kin.]

1. Related; allied by blood; used of persons.

I do not envy thee, Pamela; only I wish, that being thy sister in nature, I were not so far off ake in fortune.

Shylock.

2. Allied by nature; partaking of the same properties; used of things.

The canoe'd pass'ons of envy is nothing akin to the felicity of the ake.

L'Estrange's Fable.

Some limbs again in bulk or stature

Unlike, and not akin by nature,

In concept a, like modern fables,

Because one serves the other's ends.

Prior.

He separates it from questions with which it may have been complicated, and differing from them from questions which may be akin to it.

Ward's Improvement of the Mind.

AL. ATTE, ADE, do all seem to be corruptions of the Saxon Apeal, noble, famous; as also, Aling and Aling, are corruptions of Apeeling, noble, splendid, sumner.

At, Ail, being initials, are derived from the Saxon Helbo, ancestor; and so, oftentimes, the initial aling, being met with by the Normans from the Saxon ealb.

Gibson's Camden.

ALASTER. n. f. [abeledanze]. A kind of soft marble, calter to cut, and less durable, than the other kinds; some is white, which is most common; some of the colour of horn, and transparent; some yellow, like honey, marked with veins. The ancients used it to make boxes for perfumes.

Savoy.

Yet I'll not shed her blood,

Nor fear that whiter skin of hers than snow,

And smooth as monarch's: alaster, alaster, Made of alaster.

I cannot forbear mentioning part of an alaster column, found in the ruins of Libia's pestile. It is of the colour of fire, and may be seen over the high altar of this small island in a river.

ALACRIously, adv. [from alacritas, supposed to be formed from alacritus; or of alacritas, I have found no example.]

Of course,

Without dejection.

Epmamondas alacrity expir'd, in confidence that he left behind him a perpetual memory of the victories he had achieved for his country.

Government of the Tongue.

ALACRITY, n. f. [alacritus, Lat.]

Cheerfulness, expressed by some outward token; sprintselines; gayety, liveliness; cheerful willingness.

These orders were, on all sides, yielded unto with no less alacrity of mind, than elation, unable to hold out any longer, were wont to show then when they take conditions, such as it like him to offer them, which hath them in the narrow strait of advantage.

Homer.

Give me a bowl of wine;

I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Shakespeare.

He, 'g'd that now his fes should find a fho.

With half alacrity, and force renew'd.

Springs upward.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Never did men move joyfully obey,

Or fonor underbide the sign to fly:

With such alacrity they have away,

As if, to pradle them, all the fates body.

Dryden.

ALAM'PRE. n. f. [The lowest note but one in Guido Arcine's scale of mulick.

ALAMO' DE. adv. [à la mode, Fr.]

According to the fashion: a low word.

It is used likewise by shopkeepers for a kind of thin filken manufacture.

ALARM. n. f. [from the French à Parme, to arms; as, crier, à Parme, to call to arms.]

1. A cry by which men are summoned to their arms; as, at the approach of an enemy.

When the congregation is to be gathered together, you shall blow, but you shall not found an alarm.

Numbers God.
ALCHEMY. n. s. [of Al, Arab. and Arab.] 1. The more sublime and occult part of chemistry, which proposes for its object the transmutation of metals, and other important operations.

There is nothing more dangerous than this deluding art, which changes the meaning of words, as alchemy doth, or would do, the substance of metals; maketh of anything what it listeth, and bringeth, in the end, all truth to nothing.

O he fits high in all the people's hearts; And that which would appease offence in us, His countenance, like richly alchemy, Will change to virtue and to wholesomeness.

Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

To compare this, All honour's mimic, all wealth alchemy.

Donn.

2. A kind of mixed metal used for spoons, and kitchen utensils.

White alchemy is made of pan-brooms one pound, and arsenicum three ounces; or alchemy is made of copper and auripigmentum.

Bacon's Physical Remain.

They bid cry,

With trumpets regal sound, the great result:

Tow'rds the four winds, four speedy cherubims
Put to their mouths the sounding alchemy,
By herald's voice explain'd. Milton's Paradise Lost.

ALCOHOL. n. s. An Arabick term used by chemists for a high rectified dephlegmated spirit of wine, or for any thing reduced into an impalpable powder.

Quinty.

With trumpets regal sound, the great result:

Tow'rds the four winds, four speedy cherubims
Put to their mouths the sounding alchemy,
By herald's voice explain'd. Milton's Paradise Lost.

ALCOHOLIZATION. n. s. [from alcohalize.] The act of alcoholizing or rectifying spirits; or of reducing bodies to an impalpable powder.

To ALCHEMIZE. w. a. [from alchemy.] 1. To make an alcohol; that is, to rectify spirits till they are wholly dephlegmated.

To compensate powder till it is wholly without roughness.

ALCOVE. n. s. [al and keran, Arab.] The book of the Mahometan precepts and credenda.

If this want did satisfy the confidence, we might not only take the present covenant, but subliterate to the council of Trent; yet, and in the Turkish alphabet; and force to maintain and defend chiefe of them.

Swedley against the Covenant.

ALCOVE.
ALE

ALECOVE. n.f. [allebo, Span.] A reek, or part of a chamber, separated by an arch, or partition, and other correspondent ornaments; in which is placed a bed of flate, and sometimes seats to entertain company. Trescony.

The weary'and champion hali'd in olde alcoves. The noblest boast of thy roman'c groves. Of, if the mufe-prague, thine eye be seen. By Fosdromo and other smooth greens, In dreams he hal'd by heroes' mighty shads, And hear old Chaucer warble through the glades.

Deep in a rich above the prince was laid, And slept beneath the pompos colonade.

Pepe's Oddities.

ALERD. n.f. [aluar, Lat.] A tree having leaves resembing those of the hazel; the male flowers, or katskins, are produced at remote distances from the fruit, on the same tree; the fruit is squamos, and of a conical figure. The species are, 1. The common or round-leaved alder. 2. The long-leaved alder. 3. The beaked alder. These trees delight in a very moist soil. The wood is used by turners, and will endure long under ground, or in water.

Miller.

Without the groo, a various fylene fleague Appea'd around, and groves of living green; Poplar and alders ever quivering play'd, And fmaling ephym form'd a fragment fpade.

Pepe's Oddities.

ALDERLYEST. adj. superficial. [from ald, old, elder, and lieue, dear, beloved.] Most beloved; which has held the longest posfession of the heart.

The mutual conference that my mind had had In courtly company, or at my beads, With you, mine OldeLyeftLover. The true, Makes me the bolder. Shaksp. Henry VI., p. ii.

ALDERMAN. n.f. [from ald, old, and man.]

1. The name as senator, Cowell. A governor or magistrate, originally, as the name imports, chosen on account of the experience which his age had given him.

Tell him, myself, the mayor, and alderman, Are come to have some conference with his grace. Shaksp.

Though my own alderman confer'd my days, To me committing their eternal graces, Their full-fled heroes, their paciick major, Their annual trophies, and their monthly war. Pope’s Dunciad.

2. In the following passage it is, I think, improperly used.

But if the trumpet's clangour you abhor, And dare not be an alderman of war, Take to a shop, behind a counter. Dryd. Jouv. Sat.

ALDRMANLY. adv. [from alderman.] Like an alderman; belonging to an alderman.

Thee, and many more, suffered death, in envy to their virtues and fuperior genius, which embolden them to exigencies (wasting an alderman's discretion) to attempt the vice out of the common forms. Swift's Miscellanies.

ALE. n.f. [cale, Sax.]

1. A liquor made by infusing malt in hot water, and then fermenting the liquor.

You must be feeling chlfrting. Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude ruffian? Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

2. A merry-meeting used in country places.

And all the neighbourhood, from old records Of antick proverbs drawn from Whitson lord, And their authorities at wakes and alders, With country precedents, and old wives tales, We bring you now. Ben Jonson.

ALEBERRY. n.f. [from ale and berry.]

A beverage made by boiling ale with spice and fugar, and tops of bread: a word now only used in conversation:

Their albedonias, candles, poplars, each one, Syllibubs made at the making pale, But what are composed of a pot of good ale.

ALE-BREWER. n.f. [from ale and brewer.]

One that professeth to brew ale.

The summer-made male flies ill, and is disliked by most of our alerbremen. "Mercurius's Husbandry.

ALECONE. n.f. [from ale and con.]

An officer in the city of London, whose business is to inspect the measures of publick houses. Four of them are chosen or rechozen annually by the common-hall of the city; and, whatever might be their use formerly, their places are now regarded only as sinecures for decayed citizens.

ALECOST. n.f. [perhaps from ale, and costus, Lat.] The name of an herb.

Died.

ALE'CROMANCY, or ALEC'TROMANCY. n.f. [alactorum, and magico.] Divination by a cock.

Died.

ALEGAR. n.f. [from ale and eager, four.] Sour ale; a kind of acid made by ale, as vinegar by wine, which has left its spirit.

ALEGAR, adj. [alligre, Fr. alacritas, Lat.] Gay; cheerful; sprightly: a word not used.

Coffee, the root and leaf bitter, and leaf tobacco, of which the Turkes are great takers, do all condense the spirits, and make them froogh and aleger.

Bacon: Natural History.

ALEHOOF. n.f. [from ale and hoop, head.] Groundivy, so called by our Saxons ancestores, as being their chief ingredient in ale. An herb.

Alehoof, or groundivy, is, in my opinion, of the most excellent and most general use and viribus, of any plants we have among us. Temple.

ALISHOE. n.f. [from ale and beak.] A hoose where ale is publicly sold; a tilting-house. It is distinguished from a tavern, where they sell wine.

Thus unmeditative now,
Why should hard-favoured grief be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an alehoof guest?

Shakespeare.

One would think it should be no easy matter to bring any man of sense in love with an alehoof; indeed of so much sense as seeing and smelling around to see being this strong encounter of both; as would quickly feel it. But this did not the love of good fellowship reconcile to these nuisances. Swift.

ALISHOE-KEEPER. n.f. [from ale-hoof, and keeper.] He that keeps ale publicly for sell.

You resemble perfectly the two alishoek-keepers in Holland, who were always among the barmasters of the town, and taxed one another's bills alternately.

Letter to Swift.

ALEKIGHT. n.f. [from ale and knigh.] A pot-compassion; a tippler; a word now out of use.

The old ale-kights of England were well de- placed by Hanville, in the ale-kights-colours of that time.

ALEMBICK. n.f. A vessel used in distilling, consisting of a vessel placed over a fire, in which is contained the substance to be distilled, and a concave closely fitted on, into which the vapours arise by the heat; this cover has a hole or spout, into which the vapours rise, and by which they pass into a serpentine pipe, which is kept cool by making many convolutions in a tub of water; hence the vapours are condensed, and what entered the pipe in flames, comes out in drops.

Though water may be rared to invisible vapours, yet it is not changed into air, but only scattered into minute parts; which meeting together in the alembick, or in the receiver, do freely return into such water as they confined before.

Boyle.

ALE'LENGTH. adv. [from a for at, and lengths.] At full length; along; stretched along the ground.

ALE'RET. adj. [alere, Fr. perhaps from alacritas, but probably from à l'art, according to art or rule.]

1. In the military sense, on guard; watchful; vigilant; ready at a call.

2. In the common sense, brisk; pert; pe- tulant; smart; implying some degree of centre and courage.

I saw an alert young fellow, that cocked his hat upon a friend of his, and accepted him, Well, Jack, the old pig is dead at last. Addison, Spectator.

ALE'RETNESS. n.f. [from alert.]

The quality of being alert; sprightliness; pertness.

That alertness and unconcern for matters of common life, a campaign or two would infallibly have given them. Addison, Spectator.

ALE'BASTER. n.f. [from ale and baster.] An officer appointed in every court leets, and sworn to look to the alehe and the goodness of bread and ale, or beer, within the precincts of that lordship.

Cowell.

ALE'PAT. n.f. [from ale and war.] The tub in which the ale is fermented.

ALE'NEW. n.f. [from ale and new.] The juice that fruit ale is fermented.

ALE'WASHED. adj. [from ale and wash.] Steeped or soaked in ale: not now in use.

Sapper.

ALE'WIFE. n.f. [from ale and wife.] A woman that keeps an alehouse.

Perhaps.
Perhaps he will swagger and sect, and threaten to beat and butcher an alien, or take the goods by force, and throw them down the bad halfpence.

Swift's Dr. Syntax's Letters.

ALEXANDER. n. f. [Alyacon, Lat.] The name of a plant.

ALEXANDER'S FOOT. n. f. The name of an herb.

ALEXANDINE. n. f. A kind of verse borrowed from the French, first used in a poem called Alexander. They confit, among the French, of twelve and thirteen syllables, in alternate couplets; and, among us, of twelve.

Our numbers should, for the most part, be lyrical, or narrative, wherever the majesty of thought requires it, they may be fetched to the English heroic of five feet, and to the French Alexander of six.

Then, at the last and only couplet, struck
With some unmeaning thing they call a thought,
A needless Alexander ends the song.

That, like a wounded foal, drags its slow length along.

Popes Essay on Criticism.

ALEXIPHARMIC. adj. [from aliefia and oXeXoXeXa]. Which drives away poison; antidotal; that which opposes infection.

Some antidotal quality it may have, since not only the bone in the heart, but the horn of a deer is alexipharmic.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

ALEXITRICAL, or ALEXITRICK. adj. [from aliefia]. Which drives away poison; that which refists fevers.

ALGATES. adv. [from all and gate]. When. Gate is the same as aliis; and all used for away in the Scottifh dialect.] On any terms; every way: now obsolete.

Nor had the horse ever ridden mine,
But that Ronald's horse &'n then down fell,
And with the fall his legs fiick'd to loos;
That, for a space, there must be algates dwell.

Fairfax.

ALGEBRA. n. f. [an Arabic word of uncertain etymology; derived, by some, from Geber the philosopher; by some, from gefer, parchement; by others, from algefer, a boneteller; by Menage, from algabarat, the restitution of things broken.] A peculiar kind of arithmetick, which takes the quantity fought, whether it be a number or a line, or any other quantity, as if it were granted, and, by means of one or more quantities given, proceeds by consequence, till the quantity at first only supposed to be known, or at least some power thereof, is found to be equal to some quantity or quantities which are known, and consequently itself is known. This art was in use among the Arabs, long before it came into this part of the world; and they are supposed to have borrowed it from the Perarians, and the Perarians from the Indians. The first Greek author of algebra was Diophantus, who, about the year 800, wrote thirteen books. In 1494, Lucas Pacioli, or Lucas de Bursa, a cardinal, printed a treatise of algebra, in Italian, at Venice. He says, that algebra came originally from the Arabs. After several improvements by Vieta, Oughtred, Harriot, Descartes, Sir Isac Newton brought this art to the height at which it still continues.

Trevoux. Chambers.

It would surely require no very profound skill in algebra, to reduce the difference of nine from thirty.

Swift.

ALGEBRICK.

ALGEBRICAL.

1. Relating to algebra; as, an algebraical treatise.

2. Containing operations of algebra; as, an algebraical computation.

ALGEBRIST. n. f. [from algebra.] A person that understands or practices the science of algebra.

When any dead body is found in England, no algebraist or unclesphor can use more fallacious propositions, to find the demonstration or cipher, than every unconcerned person dares to find the murderers.

Green's Bills of Mortality.

Confounding themselves to the synthetick and analytic methods of geometrical and algebraical, they have too much narrowed the rules of method, as though every thing were to be treated in mathematical forms.

Watts's Logick.

ALGID. adj. [aligius, Lat.] Cold; chilly.

ALGIDITY. n. f. [from algid.] Chillyness.

ALGINNESS. n. f. Cold.

ALGIFIC. adj. [from alger, Lat.] That which produces cold.

ALGOR. n. f. [Lat.] Extreme cold; chills.

ALGORIZED. n. f. Arabic words, Algorithm, which are used to imply the six operations of arithmetick, or the science of numbers.

ALGOS. adj. [from alger, Lat.] Extremely cold; chilly.

ALIAS. adv. A Latin word, signifying otherwise; often used in the trials of criminals, whose danger has obliged them to change their names; as, Simon, alias Smith, alias Baker; that is, otherwise Smith, otherwise Baker.

ALIBILE. adj. [alibilis, Lat.] Nutritive; nourishing; or that which may be nourished.

ALID. adj. [alidus, Lat.]

1. Foreign, or not of the same family or land.

The mother plant admires the leaves unknown of alis trees, and applies not her own. Dryden.

From native soil
Ex'd by fate, torn from the tender embrace
Of his young guiltless progeny, he leeks
Inglorious shelter in an alien land.

Philips.

2. Exfranged from; not allied to; adverse to: with the particle from, and sometimes to, but improperly.

To declare my mind to the disciples of the fire, by a familiarity not alien from their profession.

Bayle.

The sentiment that suits, is a conviction of the deplorable state of nature, to which sin reduced us; a weak, ignorant creature, alien from God and the world, and forever hostile to all good and godliness, and a prey to the great deceiver.

Roger's Sermons.

They encouraged persons and principles, alien from our religion and government, in order to strengthen their faction.

Swift's Miscellanies.

ALIEN. n. f. [alienus, Lat.]

1. A foreigner; not a denizen; a man of another country or family; not one allied; a stranger.

Sir Islab Newton brought this art to the height at which it still continues.

Trevoux. Chambers.

It would surely require no very profound skill in algebra, to reduce the difference of nine from thirty.

Swift.

Sir Islab Newton brought this art to the height at which it still continues.

Trevoux. Chambers.

It would surely require no very profound skill in algebra, to reduce the difference of nine from thirty.

Swift.
2. It is used also of any thing thrown or falling to fall upon.

But forms of stories from the proud temple's height
Four down, and on our banner'd helms alights.

Dryden.

ALI, s.f. [from a] and [a]... Like with resemblance; without difference; in the same manner; in the same form. In some expressions it has the appearance of an adjective, but is always an adverb.

The darkness hideth not from thee; but the light shineth as the day; both in the darkness and the light art thou equal.

Ex. 19:5

With thee converting, I forget all time;
All reasons, and their change, all pleasable.

Paradise Lost.

Riches cannot refuse from the ground:
That which alights the monarch and the flame.

Dryden.

Let us unite at least in an equal zeal for those capital exhibitions which we Alighly embrace, and are also concerned to maintain. Atterbury.

Two handmaids wait the throne; alight in place, but differing far in figure and in face.

ALIMENT. n.s. [alimentum, Lat.] Nourishment; that which nourishes; nutrition; food.

New parts are added to our substance; and, as we view them, we daily see our cuntrivances, an account, how the aliment is prepared for nutrition, or by what mechanism it is distributed.

Glorieux's Swift's Scientific.

All bodies which, by the animal faculties, can be changed into the fluids and solids of our bodies, are called aliments. In the largest fishes, by alum, I understand every thing which a human creature takes in common diet, a nut, drink, and food.

Cf. but, friend, spice, vinegar.

Aliments.

Alimentary adj. [from aliment.] That which has the quality of aliment; that which nourishes; that which feeds.

The fun, that light imports to all, receives from all his alimental recompenses; to him nature and virtue.

And except they be watered from higher regions, these words must lose their alimental sap, and wither.

Brown.

The indigent, when the fun in Leo rises, Forget not, at the foot of every plant,
To sink a circulative, and daily pour A just supply of alimental streams.

Exhausted (cl.

Philips.

ALIMENTAL. adj. [from aliment.] So as to serve for nourishment.

The substance of gold is invincible by the power of heat, and that not only alimentally in a substantial mutation, but also medicamenteally in any corporeal conversion.

Brown's Valp. Essayers.

ALIMENTARINESS. n.s. [from alimentary.] The quality of being alimentary, or of affording nourishment.

Diz.

Alimentary adj. [from aliment.] That which belongs or relates to aliment.

The solution of the aliment by malnutrition is necessary; without it, the aliment could not be digested for the changes which it effects as pitheth through the alimentary duct.

Aubelst on Aliments.

2. That which has the quality of aliment, or the power of nourishing.

I do not think that water supplies animals, or even plants, with nourishment, nor serves for a vehicle to the alimentary ducts to convey and distribute them to the several parts of the body.

Roy on Creation.

Of alimentary roots, some are pulpy and very nutritious; as, turnips and carrots. They have a fattening quality.

Aubelst on Aliments.

ALIMENTATION. n.s. [from aliment.] 1. The power of affording aliment; the quality of nourishing.

Plants do nourish; man, animals, and all do not have an accommodation, but have a nourishment.

Bacon's Natural History.

ALIMONIOUS. adj. [from alimony.] That in which nourishes: a word very little in use.

The plethons renders us lean, by feeding our fields, whereby they are incapacitated of digellign the alimentums humouris into fist.

Harvey on Concupiscence.

ALIMONY. n.s. [alimonia, Lat.] Alimony signifies that legal proportion of the husband's estate, which, by the election of the ecclesiastical court, is allowed to the wife for her maintenance, upon the account of any separation from him, provided it be not caused by her elopement or adultery. Aldiss's Parerga.

Before they settled hands and hearts,
Till alimony or death parts them.

Hudibras.

ALIQUANT. adj. [aliquantus, Lat.] Parts of a number, which, however repeated, will never make up the number exactly; as, 3 is an aliquant of 10, thrice 3 being 9, four times 3 making 12.

Aliquot parts of any number or quantity, such as will exactly measure it without any remainder; as, 3 is an aliquant part of 12, because, being taken four times, it will just measure it.

Alieh. adj. [from ali.] Resembling ale; having qualities of ale.

Stirring it and beating down the yeas, gives it the forest ale taste.

Mariner's Hmmary.

ALITURE. n.s. [alitura, Lat.] Nourishment.

Diz.

ALIVE. adj. [from a and live].

1. In the state of life; not dead.

Nor well after, nor wholly dead they were,
But some faint signs of feebie life appear.

Dryden.

Not youthful kings in battle field's alive,
Not egorious virgins who their charms preserve.

Pope.

2. In a figurative sense, unextinguished; undestroyed; active; in full force.

Those good and learned men had reason to wish, that their proceedings might be favoured, and the good affection of such as inclined toward them, kept alive.

Hobbes.

3. Cheerful; sprightly; full of alacrity.

She was not so much alive when the whole day, if the first more than fix hours of it were.

Pope.

In a popular sense, it is used only to add an emphasis, like the French du monde; as, the left man alive; that is, the left, with an emphasis. This sense has been long in use, and was once admitted into serious writings, but is now merely ludicrous.

And to those brethren said, ride, ride by lives,
And unto battle do yourselves address.

For yonder comes the pow'rful knight alive,
Prince Arthur, flower of grace and nob'st soul.

Fair Quain.

The earl of Northumberland, who was the proudst man alive, could now look upon the destruction of monarchy with any pleasure.

Clarendon.

John was quick and understood business, but no man alive was more careless in looking into his accounts.

Aubelst.
ALKALIC, adj. [from alkalii.] That which has a tendency to the properties of an alkali.

All animal diet is alkaline or anti-acid.

ALKALI. n. f. [The word alkali comes from an herb, called by the Egyptians kalh; by us, glutin. 'This herb they burnt to ashes, boiled them in water, and, after having evaporated the water, there remained at the bottom a white salt; this they called kal, or alkali. It is corrosive, producing putrefaction in animal substances to which it is applied. Arbuthnot on Aliments.] Any substance which, when mingled with acid, produces effervescence and fermentation.

ALKALINE. adj. [from alkali.] That which has the qualities of alkali.

Any watery liquor will keep an animal from freezing very long, by diluting the fluids, and consequently keeping them from an alkaline state. People have lived twenty-four days upon nothing but water.

To ALKALIZE. v. a. [from alkali.] To make bodies alkaline, by changing their nature, or by mixing alkalies with them.

ALKALIZATION. n. f. [from alkali.] The act of alkalizing, or impregnating bodies with alkali.

ALKANET. n. f. [anchusa, Lat.] The name of a plant. This plant is a species of bugloss, with a red root, brought from the southern parts of France, and used in medicine.

ALKKENGI. n. f. A medicinal fruit or berry, produced by a plant of the same denomination; popularly also called winter-currant; the plant bears a near resemblance to Solanum, or Nightshade; whence it is frequently called in Latin by that name, with the addition or epithet of ascariarium.

ALKERIES. n. f. In medicine, a term borrowed from the Arabs, denoting a celebrated remedy, of the consequence of a concoction; whereof the kerness berries are the basis. The other ingredients are pippin-cyder, rose-water, tincture, ambergris, musk, cinnamon, aloes-wood, pearls, and leaf-gold; but the sweet are usually omitted. The convallaria kernes is chiefly made at Montpellier. The grain, which gives it the denomination, is no where found so plentifully as there.

ALK. a. f. [All, Æl, calle, alle, Sax. oll, Welsh, al; Dutch, alle, Germ. Al, Gr.] 1. Being the whole number; every one.

Brutus is an honourable man; for are they all, all honourable men.

To graze the herd all leaving.

Devour'd each other.

'Tis a great encouragement of all the assurance of a future reward.

2. Being the whole quantity; every part.

Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work.

3. The whole quantity, applied to duration of time.

On those pastures cheerful -

All the year doth fit and sing.

And rejoicing, smiles to see.

Their green backs wear his lively.

4. The whole extent of place:

Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice.

The whole fitter.

5. All the quantity, applied to duration of time.

The Saxons could call a corset a fixed far, which is all one with stilte crieves, or corsets.

Shakefpeare's Merchant of Venice.

All adv. [See ALL, adv.]

1. Quite; completely.

How is my love all ready forth to come.

Knew, Rome, that all alone Marcus did fight within Coriolanus.

Shakefpeare's Coriolanus.

He knew his load.

That, all amaz'd, the grief let fall the book.

Shakefpeare.

The Saxons could call a corset a fixed far, which is all one with stilte crieves, or corsets.

2. For a large consequence.

And signifies the same with none.

Nihilcrat.

3. All the quantity, applied to duration of time.

Shall bear the roots, and fixt the sacred ground.

Dryden.

I do not remember he any where mentions exactly the title of the first-born, but all along keeps himself under the shelter of the indefinite term, heir.

Locke.

Justice may be furnished out of fire, as far as her word goes; and courage may be all over a continued blaze.

Addison.

If e'er the mower durb'd his farthing spore.

Then th' inms join'd them in publick tribute.

Where, all beside the rail, rang'd beggars lie.

And from each other catch the delusive fire.

Gay.

Accordingly; wholly; without any other consideration.

I am the temper of most kings, who love to be in debt, are all for present money, no matter how they pay it afterward.

Dryden.

3. Only; without admixture of any thing else.

When I shall wed;

That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my ease and duty.

Sure I shall bear many like my filter,

To love my father all.

Shakefpeare, King Lear.

4. Although.

This sense is truly Tuctonick, but now obsolete.

Do you not think th' accomplishment of it sufficient work for one of man's simple heads.

All were light the red but signify.

Addison.

5. It is sometimes a word of emphasis; nearly the same with yea.

A shepherd's fayn, say, did thee bring.

All as his strayng flock he fed;

And, when his honour hath thee read,

Cave paid for thy hardhead.

Spen'er's Paffalets.

ALL. a. f. 1. The whole; opposed to part, or nothing.

And will then derfakes her eyes on me.

On me, whose whole all not equals Edward's money?

Shakefpeare.

Nought's had, all's spent.

Where our defire is got without content.

Shakefpeare's Macbeth.

The youth shall fludy, and no more engage.

Their flattering wishes for uncertain age.

No more with fruitslesse cars, and cheater rides.

Chace fleeting pleasure through the maze of life.

Finding the wretched all they here can have,

But prentent food, and but a future grave.

Prior.

Our all is but ake, and irretrievable loot, if we fadly facet.

Addison.

2. Every thing.

Then shall we be news-rammed.—All the better; we shall be the more remarkable.

Shakefpeare.

Up with my tent, here will I lie to-night;

But where to-morrow!—Well, all is one for that.

Shakefpeare.

All the fitter, Lentsbus: our coming is not for salvation; we have business.

Ben Jonson.

3. That is, every thing is the better, the same, the fitter.

Sperete and pow'r, thy giving, I assume;

And glad she shall reign, when in the end

Thou shalt be all in all, and I in thee,

For ever; and in me all whom thou lov'st.

Milton.

They that do not keep up this indifference for all but truth, put coloured spectacles before their eyes, and look through false glasses.

Shakefpeare.

The phrase and all is of the same kind.

They all fell to work at the roots of the tree, and left it in little foothold, that the first blast of wind laid it flat upon the ground, neft, eagles, and crows.

Dryden.

A torch, fruit and all, goes out in a moment, when dipped in the vapour.

Addison's Remarks in Italy.

5. All is much ufed in composition; but, in moit inferences, it is merely arbitrary; as, all-commanding. Sometimes the words compounded with it, are fixed and classical; as, Almighty.

When it is connected with a participle, it seems to be a noun; as, all-surrounding: in other cases an adverb; as, all-complified, or completely accomplished. Of these compounds, a small part of those which may be found is inersted.

ALL-BEARING, adj. [from all and bear.] That which bears every thing; omniporous.

Thus while he spoke, the sovereign plant he drew.

Where on th' all-bearing earth unmark'd it grew.

Pepys.

ALL-CHEERING. adj. [from all and cheer.] That which gives gayety and cheerfulness to all.

Soon as the all-cheering fan Should, in the fairest ear, begin to draw The fandy curtains from Aurora's bed.

Shakefpeare.

ALL-COMMANDING, adj. [from all and command.] Having the sovereignty over all.

He.
Ally.

1. The metal of a bafer kind mixed in coins, to harden them, that they may wear less. Gold is alloyed with silver and copper, two carbons to a pound Troy; silver with copper only, of which eighteen pennyeight is mixed with a pound. Cowell thinks the alloy is added, to countervail the charge of coinage; which might have been done only by making the coin less.

2. Any thing which, being added, abates the predominant qualities of that with which it is mingled; in the same manner, as the admixture of bafer metals allays the qualities of the firft mafs.

3. Alloy being taken from bafer metals, commonly implies something worse than that with which it is mixed. The joy has no allegy of jealousy, hope, and fear.

Alye.

1. Affirmation; declaration.

2. The thing alleged or affirmed.

Hath he not twir our sovereign lady here With ignominious words, though darkly couched? As if the bad o'father some to fuce False allegations, to o'therow his flat.

Alye.

1. A plea.

I omitted none, means to be infinmed of my errant; and I expected no excefs in any negligence on account of youth, want of leisure, or any other like allegations.

To ALEGE. v. a. [allege, Lat.]

1. To affirm; to declare; to maintain.

2. To plead as an excuse, or produce as an argument.

Surely the present form of church-government is fair, as no law of God, or reason of cause, hath hitherto been alleged of force sufficient to prove them ill, who, to the utmost of their power, withstand their destruction therew.

If we forfake the ways of grace or goodness, we cannot allege any colour of ignorance, or want of instruction; we cannot say we have not learned them, or were not taught them.

Sprat.

He hath a clear and full view, and there is not no more to be alleged for his better information.
ALL

ALLEGRABLE. adj. [from allege.] That which may be alleged.

Allɢer'ment. n. f. [from alleg.] The same with allegation.

All'ger. n. f. [from alleg.] He that alleges.

The narrative, if we believe it as confidently as the famous allegory of Parnassus, appear so, I would argue, that there is no other principle requisite, than what may result from the happy mixture of several bodies.

All'gion. n. f. [allegions, Fr.] The duty of subject to the government.

I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts, Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths, Even in the presence of the crowned king.

We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves,
To hold your slaughtering hands, and keep the peace.

The house of commons, to whom every day petitions are directed by the several counties in England, professing all allegiance to them, govern absolutely; the lords concerning, or rather submitting to whatsoever is proposed.

All'giant. adj. [from alleg.] Loyal; conformable to the duty of allegiance: a word not now used.

For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor underlaver,
I can nothing render but allegate, thanks.

The place is to be understood allegorically; and what is thus spoken by a Phalanx with wisdom, is, by the poet, applied to the goddess of it.

All'gically adv. [from allegory.] After anagogical manner.

Virgil often makes Iris the messenger of Juno, All'gical'dly. adv. [allelogically.] Used for the air.

The idea is to be understood allegorically, and what is thus spoken by a Phalanx with wisdom, is, by the poet, applied to the goddess of it.

All'gicalness. n. f. [from allegorical.] The quality of being allegorical.

To Alle'gorige. v. a. [from allegory.] To turn into allegory; to form an allegory; to take in a fable not literal.

All'gory. n. f. [allelogra.] A figurative discourse, in which something other is intended, than is contained in the words literally taken; as, willful tis the daughter of diligence, and the parent of authority.

Milton gives us a very fine allegory of our allegory too long, but either we make ourselves obscure, or fall into allegation, which is childish.

This word nymphs nothing else but, by allegory, the vegetable humour or moisture that quickens and giveth life to trees and flowers, whereby they grow.

A allegration. n. f. A word denoting one of the six divisions of time. It expresses a sprightly motion, the quickness of all, except Præter. It originally means gay, as in Milton.

Alle'ly. n. f. [allée, Lat.] A grave kind of music.

To Alle'viate. v. a. [alleve, Lat.] 1. To make light; to ease; to soften:
The pains taken in the speculative, will much alleviate me in describing the profitable part.

Harvey.

Most of the diaphans are the effects of shaded plenty and luxury, and must not be charged upon our Makers, who, notwithstanding, have provided excellent medicines, to alleviate those evils which we bring upon ourselves.

Brayley.

2. To extenuate, or soften; as, he alleviated his fault by an excuse.

A le'viation. n. f. [from alleviate.] 1. The act of making light, of allaying, or extenuating.

All apologies for, and alleviations of faults, though they are the heights of humanity, yet they are not the favours, but the duties of friendship.

Wordsworth.

2. That by which any pain is eased, or fault extenuated.

This lots of one firth of their income will fall heavily on them, who shall feel it, without the alleviation of any profit.

Locke.

A'ley. n. f. [allée, Fr.] 1. A walk in a garden.

And all within were walks and alleys wide,
With footing warm, and leading inward to Spencer.

Where alleys are close gravelled, the earth putth forth the first year knuirgrows, and after lilies.

vanous Natural History.

Yonder allée green,
Our walk at noon, with branches overgrown.

Milton.

Come, my fair love, our morning's task we lof,
Some labours in the open air did choose;
Nours is not great, the dawning boughs to crop,
Whole ten luxuriant growth our alleys hop.

Dryd.

The thriving plants, ignoble brooks and meads,
Now swept those alleys they were born to shado.

Pope

2. A pasture in towns narrower than a street.

A back friend, a shoulder clapper, one that commands the passages of alleys, crooks, and narrow lands.

Shakespeare.

All'i ance. n. f. [alliance, Fr.] 1. The state of connection with another by confederacy; a league. In this sense, our histories of Queen Anne mention the grand alliance.

2. Relation by marriage.

A bloody Hymen shall th' alliance join
Betwixt the Trojan and th' Aulacian line. Dryd.

3. Relation by any form of kindred.

And, for alliance declin'd the caue.
My father left his head.

Shaksp. Henry IV.

A drawback, with gods as near, that join
In dire alliance with the Thesan line.

Thence th' Arsce flour, and martial war succeed.

Pope

4. The act of forming or contriving relation to another; the act of making a confederacy.

Divest, your fan, that with a fearful sound
Leads disconsolate droops in foreign soil.
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions.

Shaksp. Richard III.

5. The persons allied to each other.

I would not boast the greatness of my father.
But point out new alliances to Cain.
Adleigh.

All'iency. n. f. [allecy, Lat. to entice or draw.] The power of attracting any thing; magnetism; attraction.

The feigned central alliency is but a word, and the manner of it still occult.

Goldsb.ure.

To Alli'gate. v. a. [allegate, Lat.] To tie one thing to another; to unite.

All'ga'tion. n. f. [from alligate.]

1. The act of tying together; the state of being tied.

2. The arithmetical rule that teaches to adjust the price of compounds, formed of several ingredients of different value.

All'i ga'tor. n. f. The crocodile. This name is chiefly used for the crocodile of America, between which, and that of Africa, naturalists have laid down this difference, that one moves the upper, and the other the lower jaw; but this is now known to be chimerical, the lower jaw being equally moved by both.

See Crocodile.

In his shady deep a tonnIBLE hang,
An alligator Sin., and other foes
Of ill-tha'd fishes.

Shakespeare.

Ail'gus. in rows large poppy-heads were drawn,
And here a truly alligator hung.

Gotth. Diction.

All'i ga'ture. n. f. [from alligate.] The link, or ligature, by which two things are joined together.

Alli'sion. n. f. [all'dy, allion, Lat.] The act of striking one thing against another.

There have been not any islands of note, or confederate extent, town and call off from the continent by earthquakes, or forested from it by the boisterous alligation of the sea.

Woodward.

All'i tra'tion. n. f. [ad and littera, Lat.] Of what the critics call the alliteration, or beginning of several words in the same verse with the same letter, there are instances in the old and best writers, as,

Beneath biggest born.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

All'o ca'tion. n. f. [allecate, Lat.] The act of speaking to another.

All'o dial. adj. [from allodium.] Held without without any acknowledgment of superiority; not feudal; independent.

ALL'S DIUM. m.s. [A word of very uncertain derivation, but most probably of German origin.] A polieion held in absolute independence, without any acknowledgment of a lord paramount. It is founded on, or feudal, which intimated some kind of dependence. There are no allodial lands in England, all being held either mediately or immediately of the king.

ALLONGE. m.s. [Allonges, Fr.] 1. A pass or thrust with a rapier, so called from the lengthening of the space taken up by the fencer.

2. It is likewise taken for a long reign, when the horse is trotted in the hand.

To ALLO. v. a. [This word is generally spoken baillon, and is used to dogs, when they are excited to the chase or battle. It is also used in opposition to, or by imitation from the French allois; perhaps from all le, look all; shewing the object.] To set on; to incite a dog, by crying allo.

Allen th y. f. rious maffis; bid him vex. The noxious herd, and print upon their ears.

A fee mortal of their past offense. Flam.

ALLOW. m.s. [allowiam, Lati.] The act of speaking to another; address conversation. Dict.

To ALLOW. v. a. [from lat.] 1. To distribute by lot.

2. To grant.

3. To allow; to parcel out; to give each his share.

Since fame was the only end of all their studies, a man cannot be too copious in allowing them their due portion of it. Talbot.

ALLOW. m.s. [from allot.]

1. That which is allotted to any one; the part, the share, the portion granted.

There can be no thought of it: it is quiet in this world, but in a regeneration to the allotment of God and nature.

E. Long.

Though it is our duty to submit with patience to most knotty allotments, yet thus much we may reasonably and lawfully ask of God.

Rogers's Sermons.

2. Part appropriated.

It is laid out into a grove for fruits and shade, a vineyard, and an allotment for olive and berries. Brom.

ALLOTTERY. m.s. [from allot.] That which is granted to any particular person in a distribution. See ALLOTMENT.

Allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament. Skatefare.

To ALLOW. v. a. [allow, Fr. from allouer, Lati.] 1. To admit; as, to allow a position; not to contradict; not to oppose.

The principles that are allowed for true, help, that men of right reason are, the principles allowed by all mankind.

ALLOWANCE. m.s. [from allot.] 1. Admission without contradiction.

That which wisdom did first begin, and hath been with good men long continued, challenge allowance of them that succeed, although it pleads for itself nothing.

Without the notion and allowance of spirits, our philosophy will be tame and defective in one main part of it.

2. Sanction; licence; authority.

They should therefore be accommodated to seize and make use of their reason, before they give allowance to their inclinations.

3. Permission, freedom from restraint.

4. A settled rate, or appointment for any use. Lecky.

The actual in plantations ought to be expedited almost as in a fortified town, that it, with certain allowance.

And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king's a daily rate for every day all his life.

5. Abatement from the strict rigour of a law, or demand.

The whole poem, though written in heroic verse, is of the Flanders nature, as well in the thoughts as in the expression, as both have the same grounds of allowance for it. Dryden.

Parents never give allowances for an innocent passion.

6. Established character; reputation.

His book is chiefly timbred, and his name by every expert and approved allowance. Skatef.

ALLOW. v. a. [See ALLEY.]

1. Bafer metal mixed in coinage.

That precious weight and fineness, by law appropriated to the pieces of each denomination, is called the standard. Fine silver is silver without the mixture of any other metal. Alloy is bafer metal mixed with it. Lecky.

Let another piece be coined of the same weight, whereby the silver is taken, and paid for, or other alloy, put into the place, it will be worth but half as much; for the value of the alloy is to be reckoned.

2. Abatement; diminution.

The pleasures of fende are probably refined by being past a more exquisite degree than they are by men; for they taste them fresher and purer without mixture or alloy. Astor.

ALLOWABILITY. n.f. [from alloue.]

1. That which may be admitted without contradiction.

It is not allowable, what is observable in many pieces of Raphael, where Magdalene is represented, before our Savour, washes his feet on her knees; which will not concur with the text.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. That which is permitted or licensed; lawful; not forbidden.

In actions of this sort, the light of nature alone may discover that which is in the light of God allowable. Hooker.

I was, by the freedom allowable among friends, tempted to vent my thoughts with negligence. Bryde.

Reputation becomes a signal and a very peculiar blessing to magnificates; and their pursuit of it is not only allowable but laudable.

Attorney's Sermons.

ALLOWABleness. n.f. [from allowable.]

The quality of being allowable; lawfulness; exemption from prohibition.

Lots, as to their nature, use, and allowableness, in matters of recreation, are indeed impugned by some, though better defended by others. Chambers's Sermons.

ALLOWANCE. n.f. [from allow.] 1. Admission without contradiction.

That which wisdom did first begin, and hath been with good men long continued, challenge allowance of them that succeed, although it pleads for itself nothing.
any hardfasts detest from it; and punishments, which may more deter from evil, than any sweet ness, are thereless.

The golden sun, in splendour like heav’n
Alas! of his eye.
Milton’s Paradise Lost.
All these are ali’d to the inhabitants of the North, so as there is no hope that they will ever serve faithfully against them.
Spenier on Ireland.
Wants, troubles, paffions, closer still ally
To the fun all’d.
From him they draw the animating fire.
Thousan.

To ALLY. n. s. [aliter, Fr.] 1. To unite by kindred, friendship, or conferency.
2. To make a relation between two things, by similitude, or resemblance, or any other means.

Two lines are indeed remotely ali’d to Virginia’s fence, but they are too like the tenderness of Vorl.

Dryden.

Ally’s. n. s. [aliter, Fr.] One united by some means of connexion; as marriage, friendship, conferency.

He in court flood on his own feet; for the moth of his ally’s rather leaned upon him than shared her cares.
Wilton.

We could hinder the accession of Holland to France, either as subjects, with great immunity for the encouragement of trade, or as an inferiour and dependent ally under their protections.
Temples.

ALMAC’G’NAR. n. s. [An Arabick word, written variously by various authors; by D’Herbelot, almacantar; by others, almucantar.] A circle drawn par allel to the horizon. It is generally used in the plural, and means a series of parallel circles drawn through the several degrees of the meridian.

ALMAC’G’NAR’S STAFF. n. s. An in strument commonly made of pear-tree or box, with an arch of fifteen degrees, used to take observations of the sun,
about the time of its rising and setting, in order to find the amplitude, and con sequently the variation of the comas.

Chambers.

Almanack. n. s. [Derived, by form,
from the Arabick al, and manah, Heb.
to count, or compute; by others, from al,
Arabic, and mun, a month, or manad, the count of the months; by others, from a Teutonick original, al and mon, the moon, an account of every month, or month; all of them are probable.] A calen dar; a book in which the revolu tions of the seasons, with the return of feasts and fairs, is noted for the ensuing year.
It will be said, this is an almanack for the old year; all hath been well, Spain hath not afflied this kingdom.
Bun.

This almanack made his almanack give a tolera ble account of the weather, by a direct invencion of the common prognosticators.

Government of the Tongue.
Beware the woman too, and their her fight.
Who in these studees does herself delight;
By whom a greasy almanack is borne,
With often hardness, like chaff amber worn.
Dryden.
I’ll have a fairing almanack printed on purpose for her use.
Dryden’s Spanish Friar.

ALMANDE. n. s. [Fr. almanqne,
Ital.] A ruby coarser and lighter than the oriental, and nearer the colour of the granate.

Dios.

ALMIGHTINESS. n. f. [from almighty.]
Unlimited power; omnipotence; one of the attributes of God.
In fervent to the world for a witness of his al mighty, whom we outwardly honour with the cheer of outward things.

Sir Walter Raleigh.

In the wilderness, the bittten and fhe ftorks, the unicorn and the elk, live upon his provisions, and rever its power, and feel the force of his almi tines.
Taylor.

ALMIGHTY. adj. [from all and mighty.]
Of unlimited power; omnipotent.
The Lord appeared unto Abram, and faid unto him, I am the allmighty God; call my name hereafter, and be thou perfect.
Gen. xvii. 1.

He will you in the name of God almighty,
That you divide yourself, and lay apart
The borrow’d gifts, that, by gift of heav’n,
By law of nature and of nations, long
To him and to his s.

Skatefeares.

ALMORTH. n. s. [amand, Fr. derived by Menage from annandola, a word in low Latin; by others, from Almanack, a Ger man; supposing that almonds come to France from Germany.] The nut of the almond tree, either sweet or bitter.

Round an almond, and the clear white colour will be altered into a dirty one, and the fefil bulb into an oily one.
Lock.

ALMOND. n. s. [amygdalus, Lat.] It has leaves and flowers very like those of the peach tree, but the fruit is longer and more comprefled; the outer green coat is thinner and drier when ripe, and the fefil is not fo rugged.

Like to an almond tree, mounted high
On top of Green Sefiens, all alone,
With blossoms brave bedecked daintily.
While tender locks do tremble every one,
At every little breath that under heav’n is blowen.

Faby Nyea.
Mark well the rowing almonds in the wood;
If odorous blooms the bearing branches lead.
The gibe will answer to the fylvan reign,
Great heats will follow, and large crops of grain.
Dryd.

ALMONDS OF THE THROAT, OR TONE
SILS, called improperly almonds of the ear, are two round glands placed on the fides of the bafis of the tongue, un der the common membrane of the fau ces; each of them has a large oval fins, which opens into the fauces, and in it are a great number of fifferent ones, which difcharge themselves through the great fins of a mucous and lippeper matter into the fauces, larynx, and epiph gus, for the mollifying and lubraci king those parts. When the epiph gus muscle acts, it comprifes the al monds, and they frequently are the occa
tion of a fore throat.

Quinsy.
The tonsil, or almons of the ear, are also frequently inflamed in the king’s evil; which tu mour may be very well reckoned a part of it.

Wilson’s Surgery.

ALMOND-FUNCRE, OF ALMOND-FUR
NACE, called also the Scoop, is a pecu liar kind of furnace used in refining, to separate metals from cinders and other foreign fubftances.

Chambers.

ALMORS.
ALM

ALMONEs, or ALMNER, n. s. [eleemos-narius, Lat.] The officer of a prince, or other person, employed in the distri-tion of alms. Drudg.

ALMONY, n. s. [from almoner.] The place where the almoner resides, or where the alms are distributed.

ALMO'S. adv. [from all and most; that is, most part of all. Skinner.] Nearly;

well again; in the most degree to the whole, or to universality.

Who is there also, whose mind, at some time or other, love or anger, fear or grief, has not suffered, to some degree, that it could not turn in any other object.

Lamb.

ALMS, n. s. [in Saxon, ealmer, from eleosyn ana, Lat.] What is given gratially in relief of the poor. It has no fingular.

My arm's knes,

Which bow'd but in my slumber, bend like his

That hath received an alms. Shakespeare.

The poor beggar hath a just demand of an alms from the rich man; who is guilty of fraud, injustice, and ingratitude, if he does not afford relief corresponding to his abilities. Swift.

ALMS-BASKET, n. s. [from alms and bafket.] The basket in which provisions are given to be put away.

There sweepings do as well,

As the best order'd meal.

For who the refresh of these guests will fix,

Needs for them the alms-basket of wit.

Ben Jonson.

We'll stand up for our properties, was the beggar's fong that lived upon the alms-broker.

L'Estrange's Fable.

ALMSDEED, n. s. [from alms and deed.] An act of charity; a charitable gift.

This woman was full of good works, and almsded which the did.

1. A n. s. 36.

It was a rich man, Richard, where art thou?

Thus art not here: murder is thy almsdeed;

Petitioner for blood thou meet'st put back. Shaksp.

ALMS-GIVER, n. s. [from alms and giver.] He that gives alms; he that supports others by his charity.

He endowed many religious foundations, and yet was he a great alms-giver in secret, which showed that his works in publick were dedicated rather to God's glory than his own. Baron.

ALMSHOUSE, n. s. [from alms and house.] A house devoted to the reception and support of the poor; an hospital for the poor.

The way of providing for the clergy by tithes, the device of almshouses for the poor, and the sorting out of the people into parishes, are manifest. Hooker.

And to relief of Lazarus, and weak age.

Of indigent faint Stage, part corporal $69.

A hundred almshouses right well supplied. Shaksp.

Many penitents, after the robing of temples and other raine, build up an hospital, or almshouse, out of the ruins of the church, and the East.

L'Estrange.

Behold you almshouses, next, but void of state,

Where age and want be looking at the gate. Pope.

ALMSMAN, n. s. [from alms and man.] A man who lives upon alms; who is supported by charity.

I'll give my jewell for a set of beads;

My gorgious piece for a herinsage:

My gay apparel for an almsman's gown. Shaksp.

ALMUG-TREE, n. s. A tree mentioned in scripture. Of its wood were made muntious instruments, and it was used also in rails, or in a馵airie. The Rabbins generally render it corals, others

ebony, brasil, or pine. In the Septuag.

it is transliterated 'wareb,' and in the Vulgate, Libra Finaia. But corral could never answer the purpoze of the almugim; the pine-tree is too common to be imported from Ophir; and the Thivrum, or citrus-tree, much esteemed by the ancients for its fragrance and beauty, came from Mauritania. By the wood almugim, or alumim, or simply gumnim, taking al,

for a kind of article, may be understood oily and gummy sorts of wood, and particularly the trees which produce gum ammonia, or gum arabick; and is, perhaps, the same with the Sittim wood mentioned by Moses. Cab.

And the same: also of Hiram that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of almug-trees and precious trees. 1 Kings. 11.

ALNAGAR, ALNAGER, or ALNARGER.

n. s. [from almage.] A measurer by the ell; a sworn officer, whose busines formerly was to inspect the affize of woollen cloth, and to fix the feals appointed upon it for that purpose; but there are now three officers belonging to the regulation of cloth-manufactures, the查封er, measurer, and alnager.

Ditt. I

ALNAGE, N. S. [from almage, and nage, Fr.] Ell-measure, or rather the measuring by the ell or yard. Ditt.

ALNIGHT, n. s. [from all and night.] A service which they call allnight, is a great cake of wax, with the wick in the middle; whereby it comes to pass, that the wick festeth the nourishment further down. Ditt.

ALOES, n. s. [Abrus, as it is supposed.] A term applied to three different things.

1. A precious wood used, in the East, for perfumes, of which the best sort is of higher price than gold; and was the most valuable present given by the king of Siam, in 1680, to the king of France.

It is called Tambac, and is the heart, or innermost part, of the aloe-tree; the next part to which is called Colembac, and is sometimes imported into Europe, and though of inferior value to the Tambac, is much esteemed: the part next the bark, is called the Pala, or Pala amouque, or eagle-wood; but some account the eagle-wood not the outer part of the Tambac, but another species. Our knowledge of this wood is yet very imperfect.

2. Aloe is a tree which grows in hot countries, and even in the mountains of Spain.

3. Aloe is a medicinal juice, extracled, not from the odoriferous, but the common aloes trees, by cutting the leaves, and exposing the juice that drops from them to the sun. It is distingufhed into Secottorine and Caballine, or horse aloes: the first is so called from Secotta; the second, because, being colorer, it ought to be confined to the nfe of tawters. It is a warm and strong cathartic.

ALOETIC. adj. [from ales.] Cont-

taining chiefly of alos.

It may be excited by aloetic, feamenoniate, or acriminious medicines. Wmman's Surgery.

ALOETICK, n. s. [from ales.] Any medicine is so called, which chiefly confines of alos.

ALOFT, adv. [halter, to lift up. Dan.

Loft, lift, Leland; so to alos is, into the air.] On high; solvo, in the air: a word used chiefly in poetry.

For I have read in stories old,

That love has wings, and soars aloft.

Suckling.

Uprost he right, and bore aloft his shield

Confiscuous from afar, and overlook'd the field.

Dryden.

ALOFT, prep. Above.

The great luminary

Alfet the vulgar constellations thick.

From his lonely chair, where science due,

Dipenseth light from far. Milton's Paradise Lost.

ALOY, n. s. [aeryt] Unreasonableness; absurdity.

Ditt.

ALONE, adj. [alleen, Dutch; from al and een, or one, that is, single.]

1. Without another.

The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;

But with us ourselves let us decide it then. Shaksp.

If by a mortal hand my father's throne

Could be defended, twas by rule alone. Dryden.

God, by whole alone power and conversation we all live, and move, and have our being. Bently.

2. Without company; solitary.

Eagles we see fly alone, and they are but sheep which always herd together. Sidney.

Alone, for other creature in this place.

Living, or lifelike, to be found was none. Milton.

I never durch in darkness be alone. Dryden.

ALONE, adv. [a longue, Fr.]

1. At length.

As you now, may do a mighty stroke; some laid along.

And bound with burning wires, on spokes of wheels a hing.

Dryden.

2. Through any space measured lengthwise.

A firebrand carried along, leave a train of light behind it. Baron's Natural History.

Where Utens glides along the lowly lands,

Or the black water of Pomptone stands. Dryden.

3. Throughout; in the whole; with all precision.

Sloth, all along in his Proverbs, gives the title of fool to a wicked man. Tindelys.

They were all along a croft, untoward sort of people. Swift.

4. Joined with the particle with; in company; joined with.

1 your
I your commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Hence then! and evil go with thee hence!
Thy offspring, to the place of evil, Hell. Milton.

Religious zeal is subject to excess, and to a faint, when something is mingled with it which it should not have; or if it wants something that ought to go along with it.

Sprat.

5. Sometimes with is understood.

Command thy flavel, my free-born soul disdain'd
A tyrant's curb, and refuse breaks the restraint.
Take this along; and no dispute shall rise
(Though mine the woman) for my ravish'd prize.

Dryden.

6. Forward; onward. In this sense it is derived from alons, French.

Come then, my friend, my genius, come along,
Thou master of the poet and the song. Pope.

Alo'ngt. adv. [a corruption, as it seems, from along.] Along; through the length.
The Turks did keep strict watch and ward in all their posts along the sea coast.

Knolles: History of the Turks.

Aloof. adv. [all off, that is, quite off.]

1. At a distance; with the particle from.
It generally implies a small distance,
such as is within view or observation.

Then bade the knight this lai ye leaste aloof,
And to an hill herself withdraw aside,
From whence the might in whole beheld the battle's proof,
And else be safe from danger far deferred.

Fair Play.

As next in worth,
Came singly where he stood, on the bare ground,
While the promiscuous crowd stood yet aloof.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

The noise approaches, though our palace stand
Alone from fleets, encompass'd with a wall.

Dryden.

2. Applied to persons, it often infinuates caution and circumspection.

Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay. Shaksp.

Going northwards, aloof is long as they had any doubt of being pursued; at last, when they were out of reach, they turned and crossed the ocean to Spain.

The king would not, by any means, enter the city, until he had aloft seen the crost set up upon the greater tower of Granada, whereby it became Christian ground. Bacon.

The lake is hooed by a river, one of brads,
the other of clay.
The water carried them away. and the earthen vessel kept aloft from other.

L'Estrange's Fables.

The strong may fight aloof. Ancus Rad' the force far near, and by pertaining dy'd.

Dryden's Fables.

3. In a figurative sense, it is used to impart art or cunning in conversation, by which a man holds the principal question in a distance.

Nor do we find him forward to be founded;
But with a crafty modestness keeps aloof.
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

4. It is used metaphorically of persons that will not be seen in a design.

1. It is necessary the great join; for, if the hand aloft, there will be full fufficentions: it being a received opinion, that he's a great interest in the king's favour and power.

Suckling.

5. It is applied to things not properly belonging to each other.

Love's not love,
When it is mingled with regards that fland
Alas from the whole point. Shakespeare's K. Lear.

At'o'und. adv. [from a and loud.] Loudly;
With a strong voice; with a great noise.

Shakespeare's State of Incense.

Methods for the advancement of poetry, a in the power of a prince, limited like ours, by a strict execution of the laws already in force. Swift.

Methinks, already I your ear survey,
Arise near thy city of a wall
Already you a degraded goad,
And all your honour in a whisper aloft.

Page.

All. adv. [also, Dutch.] Also; likewise:
A word now out of use.

Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

At one end she had a journey to renew. Fairy Queen.

O. also. adv. [from all and fs.]

1. In the same manner; likewise.
In these two, no doubt, are contained the causes of the great deserts, as according to Moses, so also according to necessity, let our world afford no other treasures of water.

Euripides's Theory.

2. Also is sometimes near the same as and, and only conjoins the members of the sentence.

God do so to me, and more also.

1 Samuel, xiv. 44.

Altar. n.f. [altare, Lat.] It is observed by Janius, that the word altar is received, with christianity, in all the European languages; and that altar is used by one of the Fathers, as appropriated to the Christian worship, in opposition to the ore of gentilism.

1. The place where offerings to heaven are laid.
The goddess of the nuptial bed,
Thir'd with her vain devotions for the dead,
Rede'd the tablet, and solemnised
Which incense offer'd, and her altar held.

Dryden.

2. The table in Christian churches where the communion is administered.

Her grace roe, and, with modest pace,
Came to the altar, where the kneel'd, and fainstak'd
Cell her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd by beauty.

Shakespeare.

Altarage. n. f. [alteragium, Lat.] An amount arising to the priest from oblations, through the means of the altar.

Apoll's Paragon.

Altar-clotn. n. f. [from altar and cloth.] The cloth thrown over the altar in churches.

I found set down the wealth, books, hangings,
and altar cloth, which our kings gave this abbey.

Foxe's Book of Martyrs.

To ALTER. v. a. [alterer, Fr. from alter,
Lat.]

1. To change; to make otherwise than it is.
To alter, seems more properly to imply a change made only in some part of a thing; as, to alter a writing, may be, to blot, or interpolate it; in that change, it may be, to substitute another in its place. With one of them; as, her face is altered from pale to red.

Do you note
How much her grace is altered on the fudden?
How long her face is drawn? how pale the books,
And of an earthly cold? Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

After appropriated to the worship of God, by his own appointment, must continue so, till himself hath otherwise declared for who dears alter what God hath appointed?

Smillingవ.

2. To take off from a persuation, practice, or fault.
For the way of writing plays in verse, I find it troublesome and low; but I am no way altered from my opinion of it, at least with any reasons which have opposed it.

Dryden.

To ALTER. v. n. To become otherwise than it was; as, the weather alters from bright to cloudy.

Alterable. adj. [from alter; alterable, Fr.]
That which may be altered or changed by something else; different from changeable, or that which changes, or may change itself.

That alterable respects are realities in nature, will never be admitted by a confused and,
uncertain

Our condition in this world is mutable and un, certain, alterable by a thousand accidents, which we can neither foresee nor prevent. Rogers with they had been more clear in the decla-tions upon that mighty point, Whether the settlement of the succession in the House of Hanover be alterable or no? Swift.

ALTHOUGH. n. f. [from alterable.] The quality of being alterable, or adimitting change from external causes.

ALTERNATELY, adv. [from alterable.] In such a manner as may be altered.

ALTERABLE. n. f. [from alterable.] The breeding, nourishing, or fostering of a child.
In Ireland they put their children to fosterers:
the rich fell, the meaner fostered the alterage of their children; and the reason is, because, in the opinion of the people, fostering has always been a stronger alliance than blood.

Sir John Davies on Ireland.

ALTERANCE. n. f. [from alter; alteration, Fr.] That which has the power of proceding changes in any thing.

And whether the body be alterate or altered, evermore a perception precedeth operation; for alle bodies would be alike one to another.

ALETION. n. f. [from alter; alteration, Fr.]

1. The act of altering or changing.
Alternation, though it be from worse to better,
hath in it inconveniences, and thence weight.

Hooker.

2. The change made.
Why may we not presume, that God doth even make for such change or alteration, as the very condition of things themselves doth make necessary to their being?

So he, with difficulty and labour hard,
Mov’d on:
But he once past, soon after, when man fell,
Strange alteration! Sin, and Death, amin.

following his track (such was the will of heav’n)
Past him a broad and beaten way.

Milton.

No other alteration will satisfy; nor this neither,
very long, without an utter abolition of all order.

Scarr.

Apius Claudius admitted to the senate the sons of those who had been slaves; by which,
and succeeding alterations, that council degenerated into a body of commonalty.

Swift.

ALETIVE. adj. [from alter.]
Medicines called alterationes, are such as have no immediate sensible operation, but gradually gain more power by continued use, by changing the humours from a state of distemper to health.
They are opposed to evacuants.

Young.

ALTERATION. n. f. [alteration; alteration,
Lat.] Debate; controversy; wrangle.

By this hot pursuit of lower controversies among statesmen, and agreeing in the principal foundations thereof, they concinate hope, that, about the higher principles themselves, time will cause alteration to grow.

Hooker.

Their whole life was little elie than a perpetual wrangling and alteration; and that, many times, rather for victory and ostentation of wis, than a fober and fearefull search of truth.

ALETIVE adj. [alteratus, Lat.] Ating by turns, in succession each to the other.

And God made two great lights, great for their use
To man; the greater to have rule by day,
The lesser by sight, alteration.

Milton.

ALTERANCE. n. f. [from alteration.] Action performed by turns.

VOL. I.
AM.

1. do not altogether disapprove of the manner of interpreting texts of scripture through the style of your sermon.

2. Conjunctly "; in company. This is rather all together.

AMENDED. Jointly, with you, me, and altogether with the duke of Suffolk, we'll quickly hold Duke Humphry from his feat. Shakespeare.

AMULET. n. s. [from a and lunum; this is, ancient tale.]

Amulets are small pieces used in chemistry, without buttons, and fitted into one another, as many as there is occasion for, without littering. At the bottom of the furnace is a pot that holds the matter, and is fastened on, and at the top is a bead, to retain the waters that rise up. Quincy.

ALUM. n. s. [alum, Lat.].

A kind of mineral salt, of an acid taste, leaving in the mouth a sense of freshness, accompanied with a considerable degree of astringency. The ancient naturalists allowed two sorts of alum, natural and fictitious. The natural is found in the island of Mya, being a kind of brittle stone, very light, white, and porous, and fraught with filaments resembling silver, England, Italy, and Flanders, are the countries where alum is principally produced; and the English make alum is made from a British mineral stone, in the hills of Yorkshire and Lancashire.

Succedaneum alum is a composition of common alum, with rose-water and whites of eggs boiled together, to the consistence of a paste, and thus moulded at pleasure. As it cools, it grows hard as a stone.

Burnt alum is alum calcined over the fire. It is when alum is a sort of fine lime stone, of various colours, most commonly white, bordering on green; it riffs in threads or fibres, resembling those of a feather, whence its name from alum, a Latin word. By long beating the white of an egg with a lump of alum, you may bring it, for the most part, into white curets. Bogn.

ALUM STONE. n. s. A stone or calcined in surgery; perhaps alum calcined, which then becomes corrosive. She gorged with oyxarat, and was in a few days cured, by touching it with the vitriol and alum stone. Wijnman.

ALUMINOUS. adj. [from alum]. Relating to alum, or containing of alum.

Nor do we reasonably conclude, by force of a cold and without any alum, it is able awhile to rectify the fire, that, from a peculiarity of nature, it suffuseth and liveth in it. Brown.

The tumour may have other mixture with it, to make it of a vitriolic or alumino nature. Wijnman's Surgery.

ALWAYS. adv. [It is sometimes written allways, compounded of all and ways; ealdepoga, Sax. tutuia, Ital.]

1. Perpetually; throughout all time: opposed to sometime, or to never.

That which sometime is expedient, doth not always continue.

2. Constantly; without variation: opposed to sometimes, or to now and then.

He is always great, when some great occasion is presented to him. Dryden.

AM. A. M. stands for artium magister, or master of arts; the second degree of our universities. In some foreign countries, is called doctor of philosophy.

AM. The first person of the verb to be.

[See To be.]

And God said unto Moses, I am that I am: and he said, thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you. Exodus, iii. 14.

Come then, my soul: I call thee by that name; Thou art thing, from whence I know I am; For knowing that I am, I know thou art.

Since that most words exist, which can impart.

AMABILITY. n. s. [from amabilis, Lat.].

Loveliness: the power of pleasing.

No rules can make amability our minds and understandings make that; and so it is our fate. Taylor.

AMADETO. n. s. A port of pear. [See pear] so called, says Stithon, from the name of him who cultivated it.

AMADOR. n. s. A port of pear. [See pear.]

AMAIN. adv. [from maire, or maigle, old Fr. derived from magnus, Lat.]. With vehemence: with vigour; fiercely; violently.

It is used of any action performed with precipitation, whether of fear or courage, or of any violent effect.

Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain, to signify that rebels there are up. Shakespeare. What! when we the swall, purd'd, and struck, With he'nm all'g'ng twis'm, and bol'ght, The deep to spla'ng, and ream. Milton.

The hills, to their supply, vapour and exhalation, dust and mist, sent up amain. Milton.

Like light'n'ng sudden, on the warriour train, Beats down the trees before him, shakes the ground. The forest echoes to the cracking found, Shout the fierce youth, and clamours ring around. Dryden.

AMALGAM. n. s. [from a, and ymagin.]

The mixture of metals procured by amalgamation. See amalgame.

AMALGAME. n. s. [from amalgam.] The act or practice of amalgamating metals. See amalgame.

The infusion of the amalgam appears to proceed from the new texture resulting from the coalition of the mingled ingredients, that make up the amalgam. Dryden.

To AMALGAME. v. a. [from amalgame.] To unite metals with quicksilver, which may be practiced upon all metals, except iron and copper. The use of this operation is, to make the metal soft and ductile. Gold is, by this method, drawn over other materials by the gilders.

AMALGAMATION. n. s. [from amalgam.]

The act or practice of amalgamating metals.

Amalgamation is the mixing of mercury with any of the metals. The manner is this: in gold, the rest are answerable: Take fix parts of mercury, mix them hot in a crucible, and put them to one part of gold made hot in another crucible: fire them well that they may incorporate; then call the mass into cold water, and wash it. Bacon.

AMANDATION. n. s. [from amand, Lat.]

The act of sending on a missive, or employment.

AMANUELS. n. s. [Lat.]

A pernon who writes what another dictates.

AMARETHN. n. s. [from amaruthn, Lat. from a and magistus]. The name of a plant.

Among the many species, the most beautiful are, 1. The tree amaretto. 2. The long-pendulous amaretto, with reddish coloured seeds, commonly called Love-let a bleeding.

2. In poetry, it is sometimes an imaginary flower, supposed, according to its name, never to fade.

Immortal amareth / a flower which once in paradise, fell by the tree of life.

Began to bloom, but soon, for man's offence, To heaven remov'd, where first it grew, there grows,

And how 's it lost, finding the front of life?

And where, in the river of lights, thou mild of heaven, Rolls o'er Elyan down's her amber stream:

With these, that never fade, the spirits elect Bind their rebellions lock, and turn'd with beams.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

AMARTHINE. adj. [amaranthinus, Lat.] Relating to amarthes; consisting of amaranes.

By the streams that ever flow,

By the fragrant winds that blow

O'er the Elyan flows now,

By those happy souls that dwell

In yellow meads of alphodel,

Or amaretto bowers.

Pray.

AMARANTH. n. s. [amaranthus, Lat.].

2. Bitternest.

What amaranth or scion is deprecating in choler, it acquires from a combination of melancholy, or external malign bodies.

AMARETH. n. s. [amarethus, Lat.]

Amaretto.

AMASMENT. n. s. [from amasus]. A heap; an accumulation; a collection.

What is now, is but an amasement of imaginary conceptions, prejudices, ungrounded opinions, and infinite impurities. Glavives's Sceptic Science.

To AMASS. v. a. [amass, Fr.]

1. To collect together in one heap or mafs.

The rich man is not blamed, as having made use of any unlawful means to amass riches, as having stolen by fraud and injustice. Atterbury's Sermons.

When we would think of infinite space, or duration, we, at first step, usually make some very large idea, as perhaps of millions of ages, or miles, which possibly we double and multiply several times. All that we thus amas together in our thoughts, is possible, and the assemblage of the great number of putative ideas of space or duration.

Loe. 2. In a figurative sense, to add one thing to another, generally with some share of reproach, either of eagerments or indifference.

Such as amas all relations, must err in some, and be unbelieving in many. Brown's Pol. Errors.

Do not content yourself with mere words, let your improvements only amas a heap of unintelligible phrases. Warte's Imps. of the Mind.

The life of Hanner has been written, by amasing all the traditions and history the writers could meet with, in order to tell a story of him to the world. Pope.

AMAS. n. s. [amas, Fr.]. An amasement; an accumulation.

This pillar is but a mediocrity or amas of all the precedent ornaments, making a new kind by itself. Wattam.

Te AMATE. v. a. [from a and mate]. See Mate.

1. To accompany; to entertain as a companion; it is now obsolete.

A lovely being of feminine fate, Courted of many a jolly paramour, The which did them in modest wife amate, And each one sought his lady to aggregate.

Fairy Queen.

2. To terrify; to strike with horror. In this fene, it is derived from the old French matter, to craft or subdue.

AMATOK.
AMATO'SCULIST, n. s. [amatorius, Lat.] A little insignificant lover; a pretender to affection. Dict. Amatory. adj. [amatorius, Lat.] Relating to love; causing love. He is the same thing whether one ravish Lucrétia but does not marry her, or one amatory potions not only allure her, but necessitate her to satisfy his lust, and incline her effectually, and draw her involuntarily, to follow him spontaneously.

AMARO'SIS, n. s. [amarus.] A diminuendo of fight, not from any visible defect in the eye, but from some distemper of the inner parts, occasioning the refractions of flies and dust floating before the eyes; which appearances are the parts of the retina hid and compressed by the blood-veasts being too much diffused; so that, in many of its parts, all sense is lost, and therefore no images can be painted upon them; whereby the eyes, continually rolling round, many parts of objects falling upon them, are obscure. The cure of this depends upon a removal of the flagitations in the extremities of those arteries which run over the bottom of the eye.

7. To AMAZE. v. a. [from a and maze, perplexity.] 1. To confound with terror. Yes, I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, that I shall brandish my sword before them, and they shall tremble at every moment; every man for his own life in the day of the fall. Ezekiel. 2. To put into confusion with wonder. God is a very beautiful, and with your dazzling virtues, your courage, truth, your innocence and love, Amur and charm mankind. Smith. 3. To put into perplexity. They cannot all be amazed him. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked. Shakespeare. Amaz'edly, adv. [from amazed.] Confusedly; with amazement; with confusion. I speak amazedly, and it becomes My marvel, and my massage. Stands Macbeth thus amazed? Come, others, chase us in his frights. Shakespeare. Amazedness, n. s. [from amazed.] The state of being amazed; astonishment; wonder; confusion. I was at the opening of the fact, till the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it. Shake. AMazement, n. s. [from amaze.] Such a confused apprehension as does not leave reason its full force; extreme horror; horror. He awoke not at all; but adding new fears, others chase us in his frights. With fliny eyes, and heartless hollow ears, Afoot it 4 flood, as one that had dy'd. Infernal fuels, with their chains unity'd.

But look! amazement on thy mother first. O step between her and her fighting foes! Conceit in weakest bodies amazes works. Shakespeare.

2. Extreme dejection. He ended, and his words impression left Of much amazement on the inward crew, Distressed and surpris'd with deep dismay. At these false tidings. Milton. 3. Height of admiration. Has you some age past, this race of glory Run, with amazement we should read your story! But living virtue, all achievements past, Meets easy fill to grapple with at last. Waller. 4. Atonement; wonder at an unexpected event. They knew that it was he which fit for arms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple, and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him. Amazed, partic. adj. [from amaze.] Wonderful; astonishing.

It is an amazing thing to see the present downfall of Italy, when one considers what incredible multitudes it abounded with during the reign of the Roman emperors. Additional.

AMAZINGLY, adv. [from amazing.] To a degree that may excite astonishment; wonderfully. If we arise to the world of spirits, our knowledge of them must be amazingly imperfect, when they are so little heard of and dilused as they are, it is a formidable difficulty belonging to it for the worst philosopher to answer. White's Logick.

AMAZON, n. s. [a and mazoph.] The Amazons were a race of women famous for valour, who inhabited Caucasus; they are so called from their cutting off their breasts, to use their weapons better. A warlike Woman; a virago. Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an amazon, And fightest with the sword. Shakespeare. AMAGES, n. s. [Lat.] A circuit of words; a circumlocutionary form of speech; a multiplicity of words; an indirect manner of expression. They gave those complex ideas names, that they might be better comprehended; and they thought things were daily conversant in, without long amblings and circumlocutions; and that the things were continually to give and receive information about, might be the easier and quicker understood. Locke.

AMAGIOUS, adj. [from amagh.] Circumlocutory; perplexed; tedious. Dict. AMASS'dE, n. s. [amass'dit, Fr.] Embalmy; character or business of an ambassadour: a word not now in use. When you disgrac'd me in my amass'de, Then I despair'd you from being, Shakespeare. AMASS'ADVOUR, n. s. [amassadour, Fr. ambassador, Sp. In Spain, it is written differently, as it is supposed to come from the French or Spanish language; and the original derivation being uncertain, it is not easy to settle its orthography. Some derive it from the Hebrew בֵּאֵר, to tell, and וָשָׂא, a messenger; others from ambulatus, which, in the old Gaulish, signified a servant; whence ambulans, in low Latin, is found to signify servitor, and ambulatio, a servant; others deduce it from ambuca, in old Teutonic, signifying a government, and Janissarians mentions a possibility of its descent; from amass, and others from am for ad, and bas, low, as supposing the act of sending an ambassadour, to be in some sort an act of submission. All these derivations lead to write ambassadour, not ambassadour. A perfon sent in a public matter from one sovereign power to another, and supposed to represent the power from which he is sent. The person of an ambassadour is inviolable. Ambassadour is, in popular language, the general name of a messenger from one sovereign power, and sometimes, ludicrously, from common peracons. In the juridical and formal language, it signifies particularly a minister of the highest rank residing in another country, and is distinguished from an envoy, who is of less dignity. Give first admissit to the ambassadours. Shakespeare.

Raid'd by these hopes, I sent no news before, Nor ask'd your leave, nor did your faith inspire; But come without a pledge, my own ambassador. Shakespeare.

Oft have their black ambassadors appear'd Laden with gifts, and fill'd the courts of Zamas. Addison.

AMBASSADRESS, n. s. [ambassadrit, Fr.] 1. The lady of an ambassadour. 2. In a ludicrous language, a woman sent on a message. Well, my ambassadress, Come you to make war, and loud defiance, Or does the peaceful olive grace your brow? Rev. AMBASSAGE, n. s. [from ambassadour.] An embassy; the business of an ambassadour.

Maximilian entertained them with dilatory answers; so as the formal part of their ambassage might well warrant their further stay. Bacon. AMBER, n. s. [from amber, Arab., whence the lower writers formed amberam.] A yellow transparent substance of a gummy or bituminous consistence, but a resinous taste, and a smell like oil of turpentine; chiefly found in the Baltic sea, along the coasts of Prussia. Some authors refer it to the original of amber to the minerals, and some even to the animal kingdom. Pliny describes it as a resinous juice, oozing from aged pine and fir, and discharged thence into the sea. He adds, that it was hence the ancients gave it the denomination of succinium, from succus, juice. Some have imagined it a concretion of the tears of birds: others, the urine of a beast; others, the form of the lake Lephtit, near the Atlantic; others, a concretion formed in the Baltic, and in some fountains, where it is found swimming like pitch. Others suppose it amber tricked into the form of ambergris; but this opinion is also discredited, as good amber having been found in digging at a considerable distance from the sea, as that gathered on the coast. Because amber waxes it is thought it contains all of aromatic plants, elaborated by heat into a crystalline form. Within some pieces of amber have been found leaves and insects included, which seem to indicate that the amber was originally in a fluid state, or that, having been exposed to the sun, it was softened, and rendered susceptible of the leaves and insects. Amber, when boiled, draws leaves or air; and if, which is by friction, is brought to yield light yellow copiously in the dark. Some distinguish amber into yellow, white, brown, and black: but the latter are very few to be of a different nature and denomination than the one called by the other amberists. Timeous; Chambers.

Liquid amber is a kind of native balsam or resin, like turpentine; clear, reddish, or yellow, of a pleasant pleasant smell, almost like ambergris. It flows from an incision made in the bark of a fine large tree in New Spain, called by the natives Clenpers.

If light penetrates any clear body, that is coloured, as pointed glass, amber, water, and the like, it gives the light the colour of its medium.

No interwoven seas a garland made, To hide his brows within the vulgar shade; But the canopied arms of his temples spread, And tears of amber trickled down his head.

The spoils of elephants the roofs inlay, And decked him with amber, gold, and jet.

Amber. adj. Confusing of amber. With layers, and rags, and double charge of brav'ry, With amber bracelets, heads, and all this knavy. Shakespeare.

Amber-drink. n.f. Drink of the colour of amber, or resembling amber in colour and transparency. All your clear amber-drink is flat. Bacon.

Ambergris. n.f. [from amber and gris, or grey; that is, grey amber.] A fragrant drug, that melts almost like wax, commonly of a greyish or ash colour, used both as a perfume. Newton concludes, Some imagine it to be the excrement of a bird, which, being melted by the heat of the sun, and washed off the shore by the waves, is swallowed by whales, who return it in back of a victim's condition. Others conclude it to be the excrement of a cetaceous fish, because sometimes found in the intestines of such animals. But we have no instance of any excrement capable of melting like wax, and in the creature that is described, its origin, and its place of residence, is quite unknown. Great Britain.

Amber-tree. n.f. [frutex Africani amberis.] A shrub, whose beauty is in its small evergreen leaves, which grow as close as heath, and, being bruised between the fingers, emit a very fragrant odour. Miller.

Amber-tree. n.f. [Lat.] 1. A man who has equally the use of both his hands.

2. A man who is equally ready to act on either side, in party disputes. This sense is ludicrous.

Ambidextr'ity. n.f. [from ambidexter.] 1. The quality of being able equally to use both hands.

2. Double dealing.

Ambidextr'ous. adj. [from ambidexter, Lat.] 1. Having, with equal facility, the use of either hand.

Ambidextr'ousness. n.f. [from ambidextrous.] The quality of being ambidextrous. Diz.

Ambient. adj. [ambiens, Lat.] Surrounding; encompassing; investing. This which yields or falls All space, the ambient air interads. Milton. The thickness of a plate requisite to produce any colour, depends only on the density of the plate, and not on that of the ambient medium. Newton's Opticks.

Ambiguity. n.f. [from ambiguis, Doubtfulness of meaning; uncertainty of signification; double meaning; With ambiguity they often entangle themselves, not marking what both agree to the word of God in itself, and what in regard of outward accidents. Act of Cokburn. We can clear these ambiguities, And know their spring, their head, their true defect. Shakespeare.

The words are of single signification, without any ambiguity; and therefore I shall not trouble you, by lengthening for an interpretation, when there is no difficulty; or distinction, when there is no difference.

Ambiguous. adj. [ambiguous.] 1. Doubtful; having two meanings; of uncertain signification.

Ambiguously. adv. In an ambiguous manner; doubtfully; uncertainly; with double meaning.

Ambiguyness. n.f. The quality of being ambiguous; uncertainty of meaning; duplicity of signification. Ambi-Logy. n.f. [from ambo, Lat. and logus.] Talks of ambiguous or doubtful signification. Diz.

Ambiloiqous. adj. [from ambo and loqui, Lat.] Using ambiguous and doubtful expressions. Diz.

Ambiloiqous. n.f. [ambiliquium, Lat.] The use of doubtful and indeterminate expressions; discoursive of doubtful meaning.

Ambition. n.f. [ambisit, Lat.] The desire of something higher than is possessed at present.

1. The desire of prehernion or honour. Who would think, without having such a mind as Antiphus, that so great goodness could not have bound gratefulness and to his high advancement and his father's content? and so, our ambition.

2. The desire of any thing great or excellent. The quick'ning power would be, and, would read? The sense would not be only, but be well! But wit's ambition loth to the least, for it desires in elders' bliss to dwell. Dryden. Urge them, while their souls Are capable of this ambition? Left seal, now melted by the wind's breath Of past petitions, pity, and remorse. Cool and congruous again to what it was. Shakespeare. It is used to with a verb, and of before a noun. I had a very early ambition to recommend myself to your Lordship's patronage. Addison.

There was an ambition of wit, and an affectation of gayety. Pope's Preface to his Letters.

Ambitious. adj. [ambitious.] 1. Seized or touched with ambition; desirous of advancement; eager of honours; aspiring. It has the particle of before the object of ambition, if a noun; or, if expressed by a verb. We form ambitious God's whole work 't undo. Dryden.

The neighbouring monarchs, by thy beauty led, Contend in crowds, ambitious of thy bed: The world is at thy choice, except our own; Except but him thou canst not choose alone. Dryden.

You have been pleased not to suffer an old man to go furnished out of the world, for want of that protection, which of him had been so long ambitious. Dryden.

Trayan, a prince ambitious of glory, descended to mouthes of the Tigris and Euphrates, and went upon the ocean, where, seeing a vellic trading to the Indies, he had thoughts of3outstanding Alexander. Arbuthnot or Swift

2. Eager
2. Eager to grow bigger; aspiring.

The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exalted with the threatening clouds.

Ambition. adv. [from ambitious.]
In an ambitious manner; with eagerness of advancement or preference.
Whit: glad hearts did our aspiring men
See the appearance of the prince's feet;
And each ambitiously would claim the ken,
That with swift eyes did distant sight assist.

Here Flecknoe, as a place to fame well known,
Ambitiously designed his Sh--t's throne.

Ambitious. n. f. [from ambitious.]
The quality of being ambitious.
Ambitious. n. f. [ambo, Lat.]
Aim; to aim. comp; circuit; circumference. dict.

To move upon an amble. See Ambler.
It is good, on some occasions, to enjoy as much of the power, as will not endanger our future;
and to provide ourselves of the virtuous fence, which will be sure to amble, when the world is upon the hardset test.

To move easily, without hard shocks, or shakings.
Who ambles time withal?—A rich man
That hath not the gout; for he lives merely, because he feels no pain; knowing no burden of heavy tedious burthen: him time ambles withal.

A laudible fence, to move with submission, and by direction; as a horse that ambles utes a gait not natural.
A laughing, toying, wheeling, whimpering the,
Shall make him amble on a golliwog's meagle,
And take the difficult with a hand as patient,
As 'er did Hercules. men.

To walk daintily and affectedly.
I am rude, I am, and want love's majesty,
To truft before a wanton ambling nymp.

Ambler. n. f. [from 7c amble.] A pace or movement in which the horse removes both his legs on one side; as, on the far side, he removes his fore and hinder leg of the same side at one time, whilst the legs on the near side stand still; and, when the far legs are upon the ground, the near side removes the fore leg and hinder leg, and the legs on the far side stand still. An amble is the first pace of young colts, but when they have strength to trot, they quit it. There is no amble in the manage; riding-masters allow only of walk, trot, and gallop. A horse may be put from a walk to a gallop without stopping; but he cannot be put from an amble to a gallop without a stop, which interrupts the uniformity of the manage.

Amlingly. adv. [from ambling.]
With an ambling movement.
Ambrosia. n. f. [ambrosia.]
1. The imaginary food of the gods, from which every thing emanating pleasantly to the smell or taste is called ambrosia.

2. The name of a plant.
It has male, yellowish flowers, produced on separate parts of the same plant, the fruits, having no viable petals; the fruit which succeeds the female flowers, is shaped like a club, and is prickly, containing one oblong seed in each.

The species are, 1. The mare or sea ambrosia.
2. Taller uninvited sea ambrosia.
3. The tallest Canada ambrosia.

Ambrosial. adj. [from ambrosian.]
Partaking of the nature or qualities of ambrosia; fragrant; delicious; delectable.

Thus while God spake, ambrosial fragrance fill'd
All heaven, and in the blessed spirits elect
Sence of new joy ineffable diffus'd. Milton.

The gifts of heaven my following song purifies,
Aerial hand, and ambrosial down.
Dryden.

To further shews the ambrosial spirit flies,
Sweet to the world, and grateful to the fates.

Ambry. n. f. [a word corrupted from almamy.]
1. The place where the almonies live, or where alms are distributed.

2. The place where plate, and utensils for house-keeping, are kept; also a cupboard for keeping cold viaticals: a word still used in the northern counties, and in Scotland.

Ambre. n. f. [from ambio, Lat. and are.]
A double ace; so called when two dice turn up the ace.

I had rather be in this choice, than throw ambre ace for my life.
Shakespeare's All's well that ends well.

This will be yet clearer, by considering his own instance of calling ambre ace, though it partake more of contingency than of fraction. Suppose the presence of the party's hand who did throw the dice, supposing the figure of the table, and of the dice themselves, supposing the measure of force applied, and supposing all other things which did concur to the production of that cast, to be the very same they were, there is no doubt but in this case the cast is necessary.

Ambulation. n. f. [ambulate, Lat.]
The act of walking.
From the occult and invisible motion of the muscles, in motion, proceed more offensive latitudes than from ambulation.

Ambulatory. adj. [ambule.]
1. That which has the power or faculty of walking.

The gradient, or ambulatory, are such as require some basis, or bottom, to uphold them in their medias: such were those self-moving machines, which, unless violently detainted, would of themselves run away. William's Math. Magi.

2. That which happens during a passage or walk.
He was sent to conduct hither the princes, of whom his majesty had an ambulatory view in his trunks.

3. Moveable; a term applied to a court, or a court which removes from place to place for the exercise of its jurisdiction.

Ambury. n. f. A bloody wart on any part of a horse's body.

Ambuscado. n. f. [ambuscate, Sp.] A private plot in which men lie to surpise others; ambush.

When I behold a fashionable table set out, I fancy that gouts, fever, and lethargies, with innumerous diversities, lie in ambush among the dishes.

Ambuscado. n. f. [ambuscade, Span.] A private plot, in order to surprise an enemy.

Sometimes he driveth o'er a soldier's neck.
And then he dreams of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambushes, Spanish blades,
Of health's five fathom deep.

Ambush. n. f. [ambush, Fr. le bois, a wood; whence ambushers, to hide in woods, ambushes being commonly laid under the concealment of thick forests.

1. The place where soldiers or assassins are placed, in order to fall unexpectedly upon an enemy.

The reftire retired deceitfully towards the place of their ambush, whence issued more. Then the east maintained the fight. But the enemy, intending to draw the English further into their ambush, turned away at an easy pace.

Charges, charges, their ground the faint Taxalians yield.
Bold in close ambush, base in open field.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.

2. The act of surprising another, by lying in wait, or lodgmg in a secret plot.
Nor shall we need,
With dangerous expedition, to invade
Whole high ambushes, or fatal deeps
Or ambush from the deep. Milton's Paradise Lost.

3. The flate of being poscd privately, in order to surprize; the state of lying in wait.

4. Perhaps the persons placed in private stations.
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life's duration.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.

Ambushment. n. f. [from ambush; which fie.
Ambush; surprize; a word now not used.

Like as a wily fox, that having spied
Where on a funny bank the ancient play,
Full clowly creeping, the hinder foot,
Lies in ambush of his hoped prey.

Ambush. adj. [ambuscated.]
Burnt; scalded.
Died.

Ambushion. n. f. [ambuscated.]
A burn; a scald.

A Me. n. f. [email, Fr.] The matter with which the variegated works are overlaid, which we call enamelled.
The materials of glass melted with calcined tin, compacts an unphilosophical body. This white ename is the basis of all those fine concretes that goldsmiths and artificers employ in the curious art of enamelling.

Ambre. n. adv. [a word of which the original has given rise to many conjeables.
Scatterer writes, that it is Arabick; and the Rabbies make it the compound of the initials of three words, signifying the Lord is a faithful king; but the word seems merely Hebrew, and, with a long train of derivatives, signifies firmness, certainty, fidelity. A term used in devotions, by which, at the end of a prayer, we mean, so be it; at the end of a creed, so it is.
AME

One cried, God blest us! and, Amen! the other.
As they had been at their hangman's hands. Listening to their fears, I could not say Amen. They did say God blest us. Shake. Macb. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, from everlasting and to everlasting. Amen.

Amenable. adj. [amenable, Fr. amenable quelqu'un, in the French courts, signifies, to oblige one to appear to answer a charge exhibited against him.] Responsible; subject to as to be liable to enquiries or accounts.

Again, because the inferior court were less and poor, and not amenable to the law, he provided, by another act, that five of the chief and eldest persons of every city, should bring in all the idle portions of their townsmen, to be justified by the law.
Sir John Davies on Ireland.

Amenage. n.f. [They seem to come from amove, Fr.] Conduct; behaviour; micm: words diffused.
For he is fit to use in all affairs, whether for amends or injuries, or else for wife and civil governance. Spooner.

Well lend him so far space, Th'manner, by his arms and amenage, When under him he saw his Lybian need to prance.

To Amend. v. a. [amender, Fr. amendes, Lat.] 1. To correct; to change any thing that is wrong to something better.
2. To reform the life, or leave wickedness. In these two cases we usually write mend. See Mend.

Amongst your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Jerem. viii. 7.
3. To restore passages in writers, which the copyists are supposed to have depraved; to recover the true reading.

To Amend. v. n. To grow better. To amend differs from to improve; to improve supposes or not denies that the thing is well already, but to amend implies something wrong.
As men are prone to either amend or impair, I may declare it unto you, Sidney.

At his touch Such fastiny hath Heaven given his hand, Shakespeare. Midsummer. This word in French, signifies a fine, by which recom pense is supposed to be made for the fault committed. We use, in a cognate signification, the word amends.

Amendment. n.f. [amendment, Fr.] A change from bad for the better.
Before it was prefixed on the stage, some things in it have passed your approbation and unamended and wholly neglected.

Man is always mending and altering his works; but nature observes the same tenour, because her works are so perfect, that there is no place for amendments; nothing that can be represented. Ray on the Creation.

There are many natural defects in the understanding, capable of amendment, which are overlooked and wholly neglected.

2. Reformation of life.
Our Lord and Saviour was of opinion, that they which would not be drawn to amendment of life, by the testimony which Moses and the prophets have given, concerning the wiles that follow sinners after death, were not likely to be perfidious by other means, although God from the dead shou'd have raised them up preachers.

Behold! famine and plague, tribulation and anguish, are sent as scourges for amendments.

Though a serious purpose of amendment, and true acts of contrition, before the habit, may be accepted by God; yet there is no sure judgment whether this purpose be serious, or these acts true acts of contrition.

Hammond's Practical Catechism.

Your honour's prayers hearing your amendments, Are to play a pleasant comedy. Shake.

Amendment. n.f. [amendatio, Lat.] It signifies, in law, the correction of an error committed in a process, and expir'd before or after judgment; and sometimes after the party's feeling advantage by the error. Blount.

Amender. n.f. [from amend.] The person that amends anything.

Amends. n.f. [amends, Fr. from which it seems to be accidentally corrupted.] Restitution; compensation; atone ment.

I have too uselessly punished you. Your compensation makes amends. Shakespeare.

The commended recovered, little or nothing returns to those that had suffered the wrong, but commonly all run into the prince's pockets. Robinson's Ellys.

There is, a prayer's chain'd, fiercely drawn
The air impur'd also, close and damp,
Whither doth the dust? but here I feel amends.
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing pure and sweet.
With day-spring born; here leave me to rejoice.
Milton.

Some little hopes I have yet remaining, that I may make the world some part of amends for many ill pleas, by an heroic poem. Dryden.

If our laws be immutable, this makes abundant amends and compensation for the facilities of life, and sufferings of this State. Trollope.

It is a strong argument for restitution hereafter, that virtues persons are very often unfortun ate, and vicious persons prosperous; which is repugnant to the nature of a being, who appears infinitely wise and good in all his works; under which we may suppose that such a prosperous distribution, which was necessary for carrying on the designs of providence in this life, will be rectified and made amends for in another. Spenser.

Amenity. n.f. [amenitie, Fr. amanite, Lat.] Pleaflanctees; agreeableness of situation.
If the fiction of Babylon was fact at first as in the days of Herodotus, it was a fact of amenity and pleasure.
Brown.

Amenatical. adj. [amentatus, Lat.] Hanging as by a thread.
The girt tree hath amenaticus flowers or kata rhous. Miller.

To Amerce. v. a. [amercier, Fr. opermos meriser, signifies to give the original.]
1. To punish with a pecuniary penalty; to exact a fine; to inflict a forfeiture.

It is a word originally juridical, but adopted by other writers, and is used by Spenser of punishments in general. Wherever one that mislitch then her make, shall be by him amerc'd with penance due.

Spenser.

But I'll amerce you with fo strong a fine, 'That you shall all repent the loss of mine.'

All the sultans were considered amerc'd; yet this proved but an intellectual remedy for those mischiefs.

Hale.

2. Sometimes with the particle in before the fine.

They shall amerce him in an hundred dukes of silver, and give him unto the master of the dam fel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel.

Sometimes it is used, in imitation of the Greek construction, with the particle of.
Millions of spirits, for his fault amerc'd Olympos', and from eternal splendours flung For his revolt.

Amercer. n.f. [from amerce.] He that sets a fine upon any misdemeanour; he that decrees or inflicts any pecuniary punishment or forfeiture.

Amerement. n.f. [from amerce.] The pecuniary punishment of an offender, who stands at the mercy of the king, or other lord in his court. Cowell.

All amercements and fines that shall be imposed upon them, shall come unto themselves.

Spenor's State of Ireland.

Amerage. n.f. [a corruption of the word ambas ace, which appears, from very old authorities, to have been early softened by omitting the $.] Two aces on two dice.

But then my study was to cog the stage, And dext'rously to throw the lucky face! To thun amb aces, that swept my stakes away; And watch the box, for fear they should convay Fal's boxes, and put upon me in the play.

Dryden.

Ame's. n.f. [corrupted from amer.] A priest's vestment.

Dict.

Ametrical. adj. [from a and method.] Out of method; without method; irregular.

Ametyst. n.f. [Aquamarin, contrary to wine, or contrary to drunkenness; so called, either because it is not quite of the colour of wine, or because it was imagined to prevent inebriation.]

A precious stone of a violet colour, bordering on purple. The oriental ametist is the hardest, finest, and most valuable; it is generally of a dross colour, though some are purple, and others which like the diamond. The German is of a violet colour, and the Spanish are of three kinds; the belt are the blackest or deepest violet: others are almost quite white, and some few tinged with yellow. The French ametist is not extremely hard, but easy to be engraved upon, and is most in value to the emerald.

Some stones approached the granate complexion; and several nearly resembled the uricke. Woodward.

Ametyst [in heraldry] signifies the same colour in a nobleman's coat, that purpore does in a gentleman's.

Ametystine. n.f. [from ametyst.] Refembling an amethyst in colour.

A kind of ametystine stone, not composed of crystals or grains, but one entire maily stone.

Greece.

Auable. adj. [aimable, Fr.] Lovely; pleasing.

That which is good in the actions of men, doth not only delight as profitable, but as amiable also.

Hestor.

She told her, while he kept it, 'Twould make her amiable, subdue my father Entirely in her love; but if he left it, Or made the gift of it, my father's eye Should hold her loathed.
Shakespeare. Othello.

2. Pretending love; shewing love.

Lay amiable liege to the honesty of this Ford's wife; use your art of wooing. Shakespeare.

Aiableness. n.f. [from amiable.] The quality
A MI

quality of being amiable; loveliness;
power of exciting love.

As from the natural gaiety and amiableness of the young man wears off, they have nothing left to commend them, but lie among the lumber and refuse of the world.

A M I B L Y . adj. [from amicability.] In an amicable manner; in such a manner as to excite love.

A M I C A B L E R N E S S . n.f. [from amicableness.] The quality of being amicable; friendliness; goodwill.

A M I C A B L Y . adv. [from amicably.] In an amicable manner; in a friendly way; with goodwill and concord.

A m i c . n. f. [from amicis.] Attends.

A M I D . prep. [from amid, or midst.] midst.

1. In the midst; equally distant from either extremity.

Of the fruit

Of each tree in the garden we may eat;
But of the fruit of this, a fruit amid
The garden, God hath said, ye shall not eat.

Milton.

The two ports, the bongi, and Dan alietti's statue of the great duke, amid the four flares, chained to his pedestal, are very noble figures.

2. Migbled with; surrounded by; in the midst of another thing.

And my rock with, was my voice I tear,
And, but bewitch'd, who's this wick'd man?

Sidney.

A M I D E R A T E . [from amideate.] To make amiable.

A M I S . n.f. [amicis, Lat.; amicī; Lods.

To A M I T . v. a. [amicīs, Lat.] To lofe:
A word little in use.

Ice is water congealed by the frigidity of the air, whereby it acquireth no new form, but rather a confidence or determination of its diffusity, and amicably not its effusiveness.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

A M I T . n. f. [amicīs, Fr. amicīs, Lat.]

Friendship, whether publick between nations, opposed to war; or among the people, opposed to discord; or between private persons.

The prophet David did think, that the very meeting of men together, and their accompanying one another to the house of God, should make the bond of their love ineradicable, and tie them in a league inviolable among themselves.

Hooker.

The monarchy of Great Britain was in league and unity with all the world.

Sir John Davies on Ireland.

You have a noble and a true conclave.

Go! amicably, which is not an otherwise thought.

In bearing thus the absence of your lord.

Swift.

And ye, oh Tyrants, with immortal hate
Pursue this race, this service dedicate
To mock the heart of common men.

'Twixt us and them no league nor unity.

Dunbar.

A M M O N I A C . n. f. The name of a drug.

GUM AMMONIAC is brought from the East Indies, corrupted to a great degree by the process of the precious plant. Dioscoreas says, it is the juice of a kind of frugal growing in Barbary, and the plant is called agatheia. Pliny calls the tree argabelia, which, he says, grows in Ethiopia, or Syria; and Suidas, whence the gum takes its name. It ought to be in dry drops, white within, yellow without, easily fusible, refrain, somewhat bitter, and of a yellowish take, and somewhat like quicksilver.

This gum is well to have served the ancients for incense, in their sacrifices.

Sawry Treasour.

SA T AMMONIAC is a volatile salt of two kinds, ancient and modern. The ancient salt, described by Pliny and Dioscorides, was a native salt, generated in those large inns where the crowds of pilgrims, coming from the temple of Jupiter Ammon, used to lodge; who roasting upon canes and staves, and those creatures in Cyrene, where that celebrated temple stood, urinating in the Raies, or in the treated pans, out of this urine, which is remarkably strong, crepte a kind of salt, denominated sometimes from the temple, Ammoniac, and sometimes from the country, Cyreneia. No more of this salt is produced there; and, from this deficiency, some ffreed thereof never to come from thence in this pro- portion; and the dung of camels affords the stronger.

Our chemists imitate the Egyptian sat ammoniac, by taking one part of the dung of camels and four of a hot well or urine; with which some mix that quantity of foot, and putting the whole in a vessel, they raise it by its fffusion, a white, friable, fufus, sublimable, and finally, they call sat ammoniac.

Chambers.

A M M O N I A C A L . adj. [from ammonic.]

Having the properties of ammonic salt.

Human blood calcined, yields no fixed salt; nor is it a sat ammoniac; for that remains immutables by repeated dilutions; and still ammoniac destroys the hypocrasy of animal fats, and turns them alkaline; so that it is a salt neither quite fixed, nor quite volatile, nor quite acid, nor quite alkaline, nor quite ammoniacal; but soft and agreeable, resembling most nearly the nature of sat ammoniac.

Author.
AMMUNITION. n. s. [supposed by some to come from ammunis, which, in the barbarous ages, seems to have signified supply of provision; but it purely may be more reasonably derived from munus, fortification; chouf à munitions, things for the fortresses.] Military stores.

They must make themselves defensible against strangers; and must have the affluence of some able military men, and convenient arms and ammunitions for their defence.

The colonel flaid to put in the ammunition he brought with him; which was only twelve barrels of powder, and twelve hundred weight of match.

All the rich mines of learning raffle are,  To furnish ammunition for his war. Denham.

But now his ammunition spent,  His naked valour is his only guard:  Rare thunders are from his dumb cannon sent,  And solitary guns are fiercely heard. Dryden.

AMMUNITION BREAD. n. s. Bread for the supply of the armies or garrisons.

AMNESY. n. s. [ἀμνίας.] An act of oblivion; an act by which crimes are digested, or the government, to a certain time, is omitted; in which they can never be brought into charge.

I never read of a law enacted to take away the force of all laws, by which a man may safely commit upon the last of June, what he would infallibly be hanged for, if he committed it on the first of July; by which the greatest criminals may escape, provided they continue long enough in power to acquit their crimes, and, by shifting them a while, deceive the legislature into an amnesia.

AMNIOCIST. n. s. [amnicola, Lat.] Inhabiting near a river.

AMNIGENOUS. n. s. [amnigenus, Lat.] Born of a river.

AMNION. n. s. [Lat. perhaps from AMNIONS.] u\[\text{ü-və]}. The innermost membrane with which the fetus in the womb is most immediately covered, and with which the end of the secondaries, the chorion, and alactotomes, are ejected after birth. It is whiter and thinner than the chorion. It also contains a number of small vessels, separated for that purpose, with which the fetus is protected. It is outwardly clothed with the avascular membrane and the chorion, which sometimes stick to each other, that they can be separated from the amnion. It has also its velum from the same origin as the chorion.

A.M.O.M. n. s. [Lat.] A fort of fruit.

The commentaries on Pliny and Dioscorides suppose it to be a fruit different from ours. The modern ammnion appears to be the film of the ancients, or hoarfome fibro-parly. It resembles the muciferous grape. This fruit is brought from the East Indies, and made of teats. It is of a hot spicy tate and smell. Tremend, Qeodii.

C.A.N.G. [prop. [amanc, amcman, Sax. ANGST.] on.

I. Mingled with; placed with other persons or things on every side.

Among strawberries grow here and there some forage-pasture; and you shall find the strawberries usually those leaves more far more large than the fel lows. The voice of God they heard, Now walking in the garden, by soft winds Brought to their ears, while day declin'd they heard, And from his presence hid themselves, among The thickets trees, both man and woman. Milton.

2. Conjoined with others, so as to make part of the number.

I have then, as you see, observed the failings of many great with among the moderns, who have attempted to write an epic poem. Dryden.

There were, among the old Roman statues, several of Venus in different postures and habits; as there are many particular figures of her made after the same design. Addison.

A'MORIST. n. s. [from amor.] An inamorato; a gallant; a man professing love.

Female beauties are as fickle in their faces as their minds; though casuists should spare them, age brings in a decay of beauty; leaving dotes upon red and white perplexed by incontinence both of the continuance of their mistress's kind- nesses, and her beauty, both which are necessary to the minute toys and quirks of courtly love. Boyle.

AMOROSO. n. s. [Ital.] A man enamoured.

A'MOROUS. adj. [amoros, Ital.] 1. In love; enamoured; with the particle of before the thing loved; in Shakespeare, on. 'Sure my brother is amorous of Hero; and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it.' Shakespeare.

The amorous matter owned her potent eye, Sigh'd when he look'd, and trembled as he drew; Each flowing line confirm'd his first surprise, And as the piece advance'd, the passion grew. Prior.

2. Naturally inclined to love; disposed to fondness; fond.

Ape, as soon as they have brought forth their young, keep their eyes fastened on them, and are never weary of admiring their beauty, so amorous is nature of whatsoever the produces. Dryden's Design.

3. Relating, or belonging to love.

I that am not thy'd for sportive tricks, Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass, I that am madly in love. Shaksp. Rich. III.

And into all things from her air inspir'd The spirit of love, and amorous delight. Milton, in the amorous net.

First caught they like'td and each his liking chose. Milton.

O! how I long my careless limbs to lay Under the plantain's shade, and all the day With amorous eyes to entertain,

Invoke the muses, and improve my vein! Weiler.

A'MOROUSLY. adv. [from amorously.] Fondly; lovingly.

When thou wilt furnish in that live-bath, Each fish, which every channel hath, Will amorously to them, Glad to catch the racy, than thou him. D'ean.

A'MOROUSNESS. n. s. [from amorously.]

The quality of being amorous; fondness; lovingness; love.

All Gyneca's actions were interpreted by Bafilus, as proceeding from jealousy of her amorousness. Sidney.

Lindos HIS has, and amorousness enough to make him find it more easy to defend fair ladies, than to defend himself against them. Boyle on Courtes

A.M.O.R'T. adv. [a la mort, Fr.] In the state of the dead; dejected; depressed; spiritless.

How fares my Kate? what, sweeting, all amort? Shaksp. Taming of the Shrew.

AMORTIZATION. n. s. [amortissement, Fr.] The right or act of transferring lands to mortmain; that is, to some community, that never is ceafe.

Every one of the religious orders was confirmed by one pope or others; and they made an especial provision for them, after the laws of amortization were derived and put in use by princes.

A'MORTIZE, u. a. [amortir, Fr.] To alien lands or tenements to any corporation, guild, or fraternity, and their successors; which cannot be done without licence of the king, and the lord of the manour.

This did concern the kingdom, to have forms sufficient to maintain an able body out of penury, and to amortize part of the lands unto the yeomen, or middle part of the people. Bacon.

A.M.O.V.E. u. a. [amovere, Lat.] 1. To remove from a poll or fiction: a juridical fence.

2. To remove; to move; to alter: a scene now out of use.

Therewith, amor'd from his fober mind, And lives he yet, fald he, that wrought this act? And do the heavens afford him vital food?

Fairy Queen.

A'MO.U.N.T. u. n. [moniter, Fr.] 1. To rise to in the accumulative quantity; to compose in the whole; with the particle of, it is used of some few sums in quantities added together.

Let us compute a little more particularly how much this will amount to, or how many ounces of water would be necessary to compose this great ocean rowling in the air, without bounds or banks. Burnet's Theory.

2. It is used, figuratively, of the confluence rising from any thing taken altogether.

The errors of young men are the ruin of business; but the errors of aged men amount to but this, that more might have been done, or sooner.

Bacon.

Judgments that are made on the wrong side of the jigger, amount to no more than an affection of skill, without either credit or effect.

L'Étranger.

A'MO.U'R. n. s. [amourez, Fr. amour, Lat.] An affair of gallantry; an intrigue; generally used of viciosous love. The word sounds like co in poor.

No man is so general and diffusive a lust, as to prostitute his amours all the world over; and let it burn never so outrageously, yet the impure flame will either die itself, or consume the body that Sarbors it.

The relief youth search'd all the world around; But how can I judge in his amours be found?

Addison.

A'MPER. n. s. [ampere, Sax.] A tumour, with inflammation; bile: a word said, by Skinner, to be much in use in Effex; but, perhaps, not found in books.

AMPHIBIOUS. adj. [ampi and biws.] 1. That which partakes of two natures, so as to live in two elements; as, in air and water.

A creature of amphibious nature.

On land a beast, a fish in water. Huldrat.

Those are called amphibious, which live freely in the air, upon the earth, and yet are observed to live long upon water, as if they were natural inhabitants of that element; though it be worth the examination to know, whether any of those creatures that live at ease, and by choice, a good while, while, or at any time, upon the earth, can live, a long time together, perfectly under water.
AMP

Fish contain much oil, and amphibious animal parts were somewhat of the nature of this fish, are oily.

2. Of a mix nature, in allusion to animals that live in air and water.

Trd of amphibious breed, Monty fruit or mony, and the various fishes springing from it. By the fire exhale from dung.

Amphidiousness, n. f. [from amphibious.] The quality of being able to live in different elements.

Amphibological, adj. [from amphibiological.] Doubtful.

Amphibologically, adv. [from amphibiological.] Doubtfully; with a doubtful meaning.

Amphibology, n. f. [amphibolization.] Discourse of uncertain meaning. It is distinguished from equivocation, which means the double signification of a single word; as, into two names, is amphibology; capture leporis, meaning, by leporis, either hare or lice, is equivocation.

Now the fables, whereby men deceive others, and are deceived themselves, the ancients have divided into verbal and real; of the verbal, and such as conclude from one, the word the word, and but two worthy of our notation; the falsity of equivocation, and amphibology.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

And he that told 'em, 'gainst leporis, from blacke to be,

Might prove it by this amphibology.

Things are not what they seem.

Peres on Chorlewood.

In defining obvious appearances, we are to use what is most plain and easy; that the mind be not

Confused by amphibology into fallacious deductions.

Gloriole.

Amphibolous, adj. [amphibolous, andםוב. ] Told from one to another; striking each way.

Nev. there be such an amphibolous quarrel, both parties claiming themselves to be the kings, and making use of his name in all their remonstrance, to justify their action.

Amphibology. n. f. [amphibology, andםוב. ] Equivocation; ambiguity.

Amphiboeana. n. f. [Lat. amphibologia.] A serpant supposed to have two heads, and by confection to move with either end foremost.

That the amphibola, that is, a smaller kind of serpent, which moves forward and backward, both two heads, or one at either extremity, was affirmed by Nicander, and others.

Sausen, and סב, andםובב תחת.

Amphibolica, n. f. [Lat. amphibolico.] Of סב and סב, a shadow. Those people dwelling in climates, wherein the hedges, at different times of the year, fall both ways; to the north pole, when the sun is in the south; and to the south pole, when he is in the northern.

Those are the people who inhabit the torrid zone.

Amphitheater. n. f. [of Gk. άμφιθεάτρης, of סב and סב, to show.] A building in a circular or oval form, having its area encompassed with rows of seats one above another; where spectacles might behold spectacles, as stage-plays, or gladiators. The theatres of the ancients were built in the form of a semi-circle, only exceeding a full semi-circle by one fourth part of the diameter; and the amphitheatre is two theatres joined together; so that the longest diameter of the amphitheatre was to the semicircle, as 3 to 1.

Within, an amphitheatrum appeared in degrees; to sixty paces round,

That when a man was placed in one degree, height was allowed for him above to see. Dryden.

| 1. Large; wide; extended. |
| Large, wide, extended. |
| In universal beauty, shedding herbs, And fruits, and flowers, on Nature's ample laug. |
| Dryden. |
| 2. Great in bulk. |
| Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief? |
| She took 'em, and read 'em in my presence, And now and then in ample terms, made known. Her delicate cheeks. |
| Shak. King Lear. |
| 3. Unlimited; without restriction. |
| Have what you ask, your presents receive; And where and when you please, with ample leave, |
| Dryden. |
| 4. Liberal; large; without parsimony. |
| If we speak of strict justice, God could no way have been bound to require man's labours in so large and ample manner as human felicity doth import; in as much as the dignity of this feat so far the other's value. |
| Hume. |
| 5. Magnificent; splendid. |
| To dissease the prince the more willingly to undertake his relief, the poet made ample promises, that, within so many days after the fame should be raised, he would advance his highness's levy with two thousand men. |
| Clarendon. |
| 6. Diffusive; not contracted; as, an ample narrative, that is, not an epitome.

Ampleness, n. f. [from ample.] The quality of being ample; largeness; splendour.

Impossible it is for a person of my condition to produce any thing in proportion to the splendour of the body you represent, or of the places you bear.

To AMPLE, o. a. [amplify, Lat.] To enlarge; to make greater; to extend.

He shall take upon him not to reduce or express, but to expand and dilate; to add and amplify.

Brown.

Amplification, n. f. [from amplification.]

Enlargement; exaggeration; extent.

Obvious matters are not of an amplification, but ought to be restrained and infected in the hidden fold.

Swift's Parergon.

2. Diffusion; enlargement.

The orators, and the prejudice and profuseness of public readers, may plead excuse for any amensions or repetitions that may be found, whilst I labour to express myself plain and plain.

To AMPLE, o. a. [amplify, Lat.] To enlarge; to spread out; to amplify.

Dick.

Amplification, n. f. [amplification, Fr. amplification, Lat.]

1. Enlargement; extension.

2. It is usually taken in a rhetorical sense, and implies exaggerated representation, or diffuse narrative; an image heightened beyond reality; a narrative enlarged with many circumstances.

Thus familiarly, when an instance of an amplification is told, in what manner defects have been things unknown seem greater than they are, and are more freely received with amplifications above their nature.

Davel.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The poet justifies for relating such incredible amplifications. It may be answered, if he had put them before the event, for these instances, he had been unpersuadable; but they suit well the character of Alcina.

Est.

Amplification, n. f. [from amplify.] One that enlarges any thing; one that exaggerates; one that represents any thing with a large display of the best circumstances; it being usually taken in a good sense.

Davel.

could need an amplifier's mouth, for the point of one thing.

Sidney.

To AMPLIFY, o. a. [amplifier, Fr.]

1. To enlarge; to increase any material substance, or object of fience.

So when a great moneyed man hath divided his chaffs, and coins, and bags, he semeth to himself richer than he was; and therefore a way to amplify any thing, is to bring it to a more ample and distinct anatomy at it is in several parts, and to examine it according to the several circumstances.

Bacon.

All contrivances that proceed from more narrow to more broad, do amplify the sound at the coming.

Bacon.

2. To enlarge, or extend any thing incorporeal.

As the reputation of the Roman pretors grew up in these blind ages, so grew up in them with a defect of amplifying their power, that they might be as great in temporal forces, as men's opinions have formed them in spiritual matters.

Religious.

3. To exaggerate any thing; to enlarge it by the manner of representation.

Thy general is my liver; I have been

The book of the good acts, whence men have read it, is unparallel'd, and whoever builds on a bull of fience, is in such a bull.

Since I have plainly laid open the negligence and envous of every age that is past, I would not willingly seem to flatter the present, by amplifying things worse, and true judgment of those defects that have laboured in this vineyard.

Davel.

4. To enlarge; to improve by new additions.

In paraphrasing the author's words are not strictly followed, his fene to is amplified, but not altered, as Words's translation of Virgil.

Dryden.

I feel age advancing, and my health is insufficient to increase and amplify these remarks, to confirm and improve these rules, and to illuminate the several pages.

Watts.

To AMPLIFY, o. a. Frequently with the particle on.

1. To speak largely in many words; to lay one's self out in diffusion.

When you affect to amplify on the former branches of a discourse, you will often lay a necerity upon yourself of contriving the latter, and prevent yourself in the midst into any new.

Watts's Logick.

2. To form large or pompous representations.

An excellent medicine for the stone might be conceived, by amplings apprehensions to break a diamond.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

I have sometimes been forced to amplify on others; but here, where the subject is fruitful,

that that the harvest overcomes the reaper, I am shamed by my children.

Henceforward I do not invent; and as there was really a people called Cyclopes, for they might be men of great stature, or giants.

G. O. Dickens.

AMPLITUDE, n. f. [amplitude, Fr. amplitude, Lat.]
1. Extent.
Whatever I look upon, within the amplitude of heaven and earth, is evidence of human ignorance.

2. Large; vast.
Men should learn how few a thing the true inquisition of nature is, and accustom themselves, by the light of particular, to enlarge their minds to the amplitude of the world, and not reduce the world to the narrowness of their minds. Bacon.

3. Capacity; extent of intellectual faculties.
With more than human gifts from heaven
adorn'd,
Perfections absolute, grace divine,
And amplitude of mind to greatest deeds. Milton.

4. Splendour; grandeur; dignity.
In the great frame of kingdoms and commonwealths, it is in the power of princes, or effates, to add amplitudes and greatnesses to their kingdom.

5. Copiousness; abundance.
You should say everything which has a proper and direct tendency to this end; always propor-tioning the multitude of your matter, and the ful-ness of your discourse, to your great design;
the length of your time, to the convenience of your hearers.

6. Amplitude of the range of a project, denotes the horizontal line subtending the path in which it moved.

7. As a figure, an arch of the horizon, interspersed between the true east and west point thereof, and the centre of the sun or star at its rising or setting. It is eastern or western, when the star rises; and western or occidental, when the star sets.
The eastern or western amplitude are also called northern or southern, as they fall in the northern or southern quarter of the horizon.

8. Magnetic amplitude is an arch of the horizon contained between the sun at his rising, and the east or west point of the compass; or, it is the difference of the rising or setting of the sun, from the east or west parts of the compass.

AMPLY, adv. [ampli, Lat.]
1. Largely; liberally.
For whose well-being,
As amply, and with hands so liberal,
They have provided all things.

2. At large; without reserve.
At return
Of him for lately promis'd to thy bed,
The woman's food, obscurely thin foretold,
Now where known, thy Saviour, and thy Lord.

3. At large; copiously; with a diffuse detail.
Some parts of a poem require to be amply written, and with all the force and elegance of words; which must be cast into shadows that is, passed over in silence, or but faintly touched.

The Design of Dr. Syntax.

To AMPUTATE. v. a. [amputate, Lat.]
To cut off a limb: a word used only in chirurgery.

Among the cruellers, it was complained, that their surgeons were too active in amputating fractured member.

Wynken's Surgeons.

AMPUTATION. n. f. [amputation, Lat.]
The operation of cutting off a limb, or other part of the body, which is either a. Of the limbs, from a rupture or fracture, or from being forcibly amputated. In the instance of a leg, as is the common form of the operation.

b. Of the limbs, from disease.

A U S E R , m. f. [ausaer, Fr.]
That he amuses, as with false promises.
The French word is always taken in an innocent.

AMUSEMENT, adj. [from amuse].
That which has the power of amusing.
I know not that this is a current word.

But am'nd.
Beholds the amuse arch before him fly.

Then vanish quite away.

AMYGDALATE. adj. [amygdalate, Lat.]
Made of almonds.

AMYGDALINE. adj. [amygdaline, Lat.]
Relating to almonds; resembling ammonds.

Any. article. [ane; Saxon; an Dutch; one;
German.] The article indefinite, used before a vowel, or b mute. See A.

1. One, but with less emphatic; as, there flands a houfe.

Since he cannot be always employed in study, reading, and conversation, there will be many an hour, besides what his exercises will take up.

2. Any; or some; as, an elephant might swim in this water.

He was no way at an uncertainty, nor ever in the least at a concerning any branch of it. Leckey.

A wit's a feather, and a chief a rod.
As honed man's the match of God. Pope.

3. Sometimes it signifies, like a, some particular flate; but this is now disused.

It is certain that odours do, in a small degree, nourish; especially the odour of wine; and we see men hungrily do; to smell hot bread.

4. An is sometimes, in old authors, a con-trah of and if.
He can't fatter, he!
An honest mind and plain; he must speak truth,
As they will take it; so if not, he's plain. Shakesp.

5. Sometimes a contraction of and before.
We'll know
The clerk will not wear hair on his face that had it.

He will ar' he if he live to be a man. Shaksp.

6. Sometimes it is a contraction of as if.
My next petty correspondent, like Shakepeare's lines in Pyramus and Thisbe, runs an' it were any nighttime.

A.N.A. adv. [ana.]
A word used in the precipitations of phisick, importing the like quantity; as, wine and honey, a and ana 3 i; that is, of wine and honey each two ounces.

In the fame weight innocence and prudence
Anax of each does the jut mixture make.
Cowley.

He'll bring an apothecary with a chargeable long bill of anes.

D. Dygen.

A. N. A. n. f. Books so called from the last fyllables of their titles; as, Scaligerana, Thamirana; they are loose thoughts, or causal hints, dropped by eminent men, and collected by their friends.

A N A C P I T E C k. adj. [anaconde].
Reflected, or reflected; an annaconpectick, found,
found, an echo; an anacampstic hill, a hill that produces an echo.

Anacampstics. n.s. The doctrine of reflected light, or catoptrics. It has no singular.

Anacampstick. n.s. [See Catharick.] Any medicine that works upwards.

Quincy.

Anagaphologia, n.s. [ἀναγάφωλος] A resuscitation, or summary of the principal heads of a discourse. Dods.

Anachorete. n.s. [sometimes with Ana- .] outwardly an ascetic; a monk who, with the leave of his superiour, leaves the convent for a more aultere and solitary life. Yet it is not love dead here, but here doth fit. Wov'd to this trench, like an ascetic. Dods.

Anachronism. n.s. [from ana and chron.] An error in computing time, by which events are misplaced with regard to each other. It seems properly to signify an error by which an event is placed too early; but is generally used for any error in chronology.

This leads me to the defence of the famous anachronisms in making Æneas and Dido contemporaries, though it is certain, that the time from almost two hundred years before the building of Carthage.

Dods.

Anacrasicks. n.s. [айд and κλωμα.] The doctrine of refracted light; dioptrics. It has no singular.

Anadiplosis. n.s. [ἀναδιπλωμα.] Re-duplication; a figure in rhetoric, in which the last word of a foregoing member of a period becomes the first of the following; as, be retained his virtues amid all his misfortunes, misfortunes which only his virtues brought upon him.

Anagogical. adj. [ἀναγωγικός.] That which contributes or relates to spiritual elevation, or religious rapture; mysterious; elevated above humanity. Dods.

Anagogically. adv. [ἀναγωγικά.] Mysteriously; elevated; religiously exalted.

Did.

Anagogically. adv. [from anagogical.] Mysteriously; with religious elevation.

Anagram. n.s. [アイα and γράμμα.] A conceit arising from the letters of a name transposed; as, this, of W. I. L. I. a. m. N. a. J., attorney-general to Charles I. a very laborious man, I may in law.

Though all her parts be not in his usual pace, She hath yet the anagrams of a good face:

If I might put the letters but one way
In that dearth of words what could we say?

Dods.

Thy genius calls thee not to purchase fame In keen tambour, but mild anagram.

Dods.

Anagrammatize. v. n. [ἀναγραμματίζειν.] To make anagrams.

Analeptic. adj. [ἀναλεπτικός.] Conforting; corroborating: a term of physic.

Analeptic medicines cheer the nerves, and renew the spirits and strength. Quincy.

Analogical. adj. [from analog.] Analogous having relation.

When I see my analogical motions in animals, though I cannot call them voluntary, yet I see them spontaneous, I have reason to conclude that in their principles are not simply mechanical.

Hale.

Analogical. adj. [from analogy.]

1. Used by way of analogy. It seems properly distinguished from analogous, as words from things; analogous signifies having relation, and analogous having the quality of representing relation.

It is looked on only as the image of the true God; and that not as a proper likeness, but by analogy of representation.

When a word, which originally signifies any particular idea or object, is attributed to several other objects, not by way of resemblance, but on the account of some evident reference to the original idea, it is peculiarly called an analogical word; to a found or a healthful pulse, a found digestion, found feces, found speeches, found words, found whole infections, found doctrine, or found speech, is by way of resemblance to health, and the words are metaphorical.

Watt's Logic.

2. Analogous; having resemblance or relation.

There is placed the minerals between the inland and vegetable province, participating something analogical to either. Hale's Orig. of Mankind.

Analogically. adv. [from analogical.] In an analogical manner; in an analogous manner.

I am convinced, from the simplicity and unicity of the Divine Nature, and of all his works, that there is some one universal principle, running through the whole system of creatures analogically, and connected in an analogical way.

Chopin.

Analogicalness. n.s. [from analogical.] The quality of being analogous; fitness to be applied for the illustration of some analogy.

Analogism. n.s. [ἀναλογικός.] An argument from the cause to the effect.

To Analogize. v. a. [from analogy.]

To explain by way of analogy; to form some resemblance between different things; to consider something with regard to its analogy with something else. We have systems of material bodies, entirely figured and situated, if separately considered; they represent the object of the definition, which is analogous to the species or precipitation. Chopin.

Analogous. adj. [from ana.]

1. Having analogy; having some resemblance or proportion; having something parallel.

Exercise makes things easy; that would be otherwise very hard; as, in labour, watching, heats, and colds, and then there is something analogous in the exercise of the body. It is folly and infirmity that makes us dislike and forbear.

L'Ebrange.

Many important consequences may be drawn from the observation of the most common things; and analogous reasonings from the causes of them.

Arbuthnot.

2. It has the word to before the thing to which the resemblance is noted.

This incorruptible substance may have some sort of existence, analogus to corporeal extensior: though we have no adequate conception hereof. Locke.

Analogy. n.s. [ἀναλογία.]

1. Remembrance between things with regard to some circumstances or effects; as learning is said to enlighten the mind; that is, it is to the mind what light is to the eye, by enabling it to discover what was hidden before.

2. When the thing to which the analogy is supposed, happens to be mentioned, analogy has after it the particles to or with; when both the things are mentioned after analogy, the particle between or which is void.

If we make Juvenal express the cullions of our country, rather than of Rome, it is when there was some analogy between the cullions. Dryden.

3. By grammarians, it is used to signify the agreement of several words in one common mode; as, from levé is formed level; from slate, slate; from grieve, grief.

Analyze. n.s. [ἀναλήσις.]

1. A separation of a compound body into the several parts of which it consists.

There is an account of the fall of man, in some places, in the form of a tree, or branch, which grows extremely fast; so that the analogy of the fall of any one place, may, perhaps, be the best method of finding such contents of the soul as are within the reach of the man.

Orbell.

2. A consideration of any thing in parts, so that one particular is first considered, then another.

Anals.

Analogy conudes in making experiments and observations, and in deriving general conclusions from them by induction, and admitting of no objections but such as are taken from experiments, or other certain truths.

Newton; Opticks.

3. A solution of any thing, whether corporeal or mental, to its first elements; as, of a sentence to the simple words; of a compound word, to the particles and words which form it; of a tune, to simple notes; of an argument, to simple propositions.

We cannot know any thing of nature, but by an analogy of its true cause, till we come to the first principles of natural motions, we are still but ignorant.

Graunt.

Analytical. adj. [from analyze.] 1. That which resolves any thing into first principles; that which separates any compound. See Analysis.

2. That which proceeds by analogy, or by taking the parts of a compound into distinct and particular consideration.

Dekker hath here infinitely outdone all the philosophers that went before him, in giving a particular and analytical account of the universal fabric; yet he intends his principles but for hypothesis.

Analytically, adv. [from analytically.] In such a manner as separates compounds into simples. See Analysis.

Analysis, n. s. [Analysis.] The manner of resolving compounds into the simple constituent or component parts, applied chiefly to mental operations.

He was in logic a great critic, profoundly skilled in analysis.

Analytic method takes the whole compound as it stands, or, at least, as it stands compared with us, and leads us into the knowledge of it, by resolving it into its first principles, or parts, its generic nature, and its special properties; and therefore it is called the method of resolution. Watts's Logic.

To analyze, v. t. [from to analyze.] To resolve a compound into its first principles.

See Analysis.

Chemistry enabling us to separate bodies, and in some measure, to analyze them, and take an shin- der their heterogeneous parts, in many chemical experiments, we may record, besides those which we know, what manner of bodies we employ; art having made them more simple or uncompounded, than nature alone is wont to present us. Boyle.

It is an uncertainty of any nature finding its last principles; if it be enquired why such an action is to be avoided, the immediate answer is, because it is sin.

Norton's Miscell.

An analysis of every sentence is distinctly made, and predicated, proposition, subject, object, cause, effect, formal, ultimate, categorical, and subsequently, it is analyzed alphabetically and metaphysically. This last is what is chiefly meant in the theological schools, when they speak of analyzing a text of scripture.

Watts's Logic.

Analyzer, n. s. [from to analyze.] That which has the power of analyzing.

Particular reasons incline me to doubt, whether the fire be the true and universal analyzer of mixt bodies.

Anamorphosis, n. s. [ἀναμόρφωσις and μορφή.] Deformation; a perspective projection of any thing, so that to the eye, at one point of view, it shall appear deformed, in another, exact and regular representation. Sometimes it is made to appear confused to the naked eye, and regular, when viewed in a mirror of a certain form.

Ananas, n. s. The pine-apple.

The species are: 1. Oval-shaped pine-apple, with a white flesh. 2. Pyramidal pine-apple, with a yellow flesh. 3. Pine-apple, with smooth leaves. 4. Pine-apple, with thinning green leaves, and scarce any spines on their edges. 5. The olive-colored pine.

Miller.

From there both ananas, thus the phrase.

Olive of vegetable life, beyond what else.

The poets imagine it to be in the golden age. Thomas.

Ananas, wild. The same with pineapple. See PENGUIN.

Analophora, n. s. [ἀναλοφορά.] A figure; when several clauses of a sentence are begun with the same word, or found; as, Where is the wife? Where is the fisher? Where is the dissector of this world?

Anaplerotic, adj. [ἀνάπλερος.] That which fills up any vacuity; used of applications which promote flesh.

Anarch, n. s. [See Anarchy.] An author of confusion.

Him thus the anarch old,
With faulting speech, and venge thereof.

Anarchical, adj. [from anarchy.] Confused, without rule or government.

This anarchical and obfuscating frame of human nature, the faculties belonging to the material world preface to determine the nature of subjects belonging to the supreme Spirit.

Cleon.

Anarchy, n. s. [ἀναρχία.] Want of government; a state in which every man is accountable; a state without magisterial.
5. The act of dividing anything, whether corporeal or intellectual.
When a moneyed man hath divided his cheifs, he hath parted from his goods rather than he was; therefore, to a way of anyifying anything, is to break it, and to make an anatomy of it in several parts. Bacon

4. The body sprawling its integuments; a skeleton.
O that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth, Then with a passion I would shake the world, And cause from deep that fell anatomy, Which cannot hear a feeble body's voice. Shakespeare

5. By way of irony or ridicule, a thick meagre person.
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-faced villain.
A mere anatomy, a mountebank, A thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller, A nester, hollow-egg, sharp looking wretch.
A living dead man. Shakspeare, Comedy of Errors.

ANATON. n. s. The fum which swims upon the molten glafs in the furnace, which, when taken off, melts in the air, and then congeals into common falt. It is likewise that falt which gathers upon the walls of vats.

ANCESTRAL. n. s. See AMBULAY.

ANCESTROR. n. s. [ancestor, Lat. anci-estros, Gr.] One from whom a person descends, either by the father or the mother. It is distinguished from predeceffor, which is not, like ancestor, a natural, but civil denomination. An hereditary monarch succeeds to his ancestor; an elective, to his predecessor.

And the lies buried with her ancestors, O, in a tomb where never feanch kept, Say of the father of the Mountebank. Mus. Lads about North.

Cham was the paternal ancestor of Nicholas, the father of Chus, the grandfather of Nimrod; whose son was Belus, the father of Nimrod. Raleigh

If I live, I pray thee what am I? I know.
My father, grandfathers, and great grandfathers too:
If farther I derive my pedigree,
I can but guess beyond the fourth degree.
The rest of my forgotten ancestors
Were boys of earth, like him, or sons of whores. Dryden.

ANCESTRIL. adj. [from ancestor.] Claimed from ancestors; relating to ancestors; a term of law.

Restriction in actions annulable, was anciently a law in England. Hale.

ANCESTRY. n. s. [from ancestor.]
1. Lineage; a series of ancestors, or progenitors; the persons who compose the lineage.

Phenomenon, quoth he; and do advance
Mine ancestry from famous Cordus; Whom fate to raise me to renown did bid. Spenser.

A tenacious adherence to the rights and liberties transmitted from a wife and virtuous ancestors, publicly fore-handing to his countrymen, are the support and ornaments of government.

Say what facetious ancestry ye claim.
Recorded eminence in dauids name. Pope

2. The honour of decent; birth.
Title and ancestry render a good man more illustrious, but an ill one more contemptible. Addison ANCESTRY-MOT. n. s. [from ancient, and therefore properly to be written anctory.] Antiquity of a family; ancient dignity; appearance or proof of antiquity.

Waving, wedding, and repeating, is a Scotch

ANC. n. s. [from anchorage] 1. The hold of the anchor.
Smilling comprehends all trades which use either forge or file, from the anchorage to the watchmaker; they all working by the same rule, though not with equal exactness; and all using the same tools, though by different names. Mason.

ANCHORAGE. n. s. [from anchorage.] 2. The set of anchors belonging to a ship.
The bark that hath discharged her freight, Returns with precious loading to the bay,
From whence at first she weighed her anchorage. Shakespeare

The duty paid for the liberty of anchoring in a port.
ANCHORED. particip. adj. [from to anchor.] Held by the anchor.

Like a well-twisted cable, holding fast
The anchor's weight in the lowest sand. Wilton.

ANCHORET. n. s. [contrasted from anchorite. anchor, anchorite, anchorite, anchor.] A recluse; a hermit; one that retires to the more severe duties of religion.

His poetry indeed he took along with him; but he made that an anchorite as well as himself.

You describe so well your hermitical state of life, that none of the ancient anchorites could go beyond you, for a case in a rock, with a fine piping, or any of the accommodations that fall to a solitary life. Pope.

ANCHONY. n. s. [from anchor, Span. or anchor, Ital. of the same signification.] A little sea-fish, much used by way of sauce, or feasting.

We invent new sauces and pickles, which reflect on the animal frame; in fact all virtu, as the fastacid gtridges of meat; the fait pickles, of fish, anchoris, etcares. Flyer.

ANCIENT. adj. [ancien, Fr. antiquus, Lat.]
1. Old; that happened long since; of old time; not modern. Ancient and old are distinguished; old relates to the duration of the thing itself, as, an old coast, a coat much worn; and ancient, to time in general, as, an ancient drefs, a habit used in former times. But this is not always observed, for we mention old custom; but though old be sometimes opposed to modern, ancient is seldom opposed to new, when new means modern.

Ancient tenure is that whereby all the manors belonging to the crown in St. Edward's or William the Conqueror's days, did hold. The number and names of which manors, as all others belonging to common persons, he caused to be written in books, after a survey made of them, now remaining in the Exchequer, and called Deeds of Deeds; and such as by that book appeared to have belonged to the crown at that time, are called ancient dominions. Corroll.

2. Old; that has been of long duration.
With the ancient is wisdom, and in length of days understanding. Job, xli. 32.

Those affairs, that God comprehended all things, and that God was of all things, the most ancients, because he never had any beginning. Raleigh.

Industry
Gave the tall anchor to his axe. Thomson

3. Past; former.

The story was 14 or longer days.
We begin our ancient backerings. Shakspeare.

ANCIENT. n. s. [from ancient, adj.] 1. Those
...
The patient's father takes his silent stand;
Intent, his angle trembling in his hand;
With looks unsmiling, he hopes the scaly breeder
And eyes the dancing cork and bending rod.

To A'NGLE. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To fish with a rod and hook.
   The lady's angling in the crystal lake,
   Feath on the waters with the prey they take.
   Shakespeare.

2. To try to gain by some insinuating artifices, as fish are caught by a bait.
   If he spake courteously, he angled the people's hearts:
   if he were silent, he must upon some dangerous plot.
   By this face,
   This seeming brow of justice, did he win
   The hearts of all that he did angle.  Shakespeare.
   The pleasant' angling is to see the fish,
   Cut with her golden oar the river stream,
   And greedily devise the treacherous bait:
   So angle we for Beatrice.  Shakespeare.

A'NGLE-ROD. n. f. [angle roede, Dutch.]
The stick to which the line and hook are hung.

It differeth much in greatness; the smallest being fit for catching of hoores; the second bignes is used for angle-rods; and, in China, for beating of offenders upon the thighs.

Bacon.
He makes a Man-fly to a miracle; and furnishes the whole country with angle-rods.
Addison.

A'NGLE. n. f. [from angle.]
He that fishes with an angle,
He, like a patient angler, are he brooks,
Would let them play, while upon the look.

Dryden.
Neither do birds alone, but many fifts of fish feed upon insects; as is well known to anglers, who bait their hooks with them.
Ray.

A'NGLICISM. n. f. [from Anglo, Lat.] A form of speech peculiar to the English language; an English idiom.
They corrupt their title with untutored anglifications.
Millen.

A'NGOBER. n. s. A kind of pear.

A'NGOUR. n. s. [Anger, Lat.] Pain.
If the patient be surprised with a liphtheysen anger, and great oppresses about the stomach, expect no relief from cordials.
Harvey.

A'NGRILY. adv. [from anger.]
In an angry manner; furiously; peevishly.
Walter.
I will not stir nor winces, nor speak a word, nor look upon the iron angrily.
Shakespeare.

A'NGRY. adj. [from anger.]
1. Touched with anger; provoked.
Oh let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak:
peradventure there shall be thirty found ther.
Gen. xviii. 30.

2. It seems proper to require, when the object of anger is mentioned, the particle at before a thing, and with before a person; but this is not always observed.
Your Coriolius is not much mutit, but with his friends: the communwealth doth stand, and to would do, where he angry at it.  Shakespeare.
Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye told me neither: to God did I mean before you to preferre lie.
Gen. xiv. 5.
I think it a vast pleasure, that whenever two people are in bed regard one another, so many found so easily and are angry at them.
Swift.

3. Having the appearance of anger; having the effect of anger.
The north wind driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue.
Prov. xxv. 23.

4. In chirurgery, painful, inflamed; smarting.
This
This, being accompanied by the thinner parts of the blood, grows red and angry; and, wanting its due regents into the masts, lifts a part of its hard swelling, and, in a few days, opens into a matter, and so discharges.

A ngu ish, n. f. [anguish, Fr. anger, Lat.] Excessive pain either of mind or body; applied to the mind, it means the feeling of sorrow, and is seldom used to signify other passions.

Not all so cheerful when the fiend, As was her sisters; whether dead did dwell, Or anguish, in her heart, is hard to tell.

Virgil's but anguish, when 'tis [asvel], By occasion walk'd, and circumstantial.

True virtue's soul is always in all deeds done. Dryden.

Virtue's but anguish, when 'tis [asvel],
By occasion walk'd, and circumstantial.; True virtue's soul is always in all deeds done. Dryden.

The deprecation, which is so great as their cruelty. Wits and malice confederate to find out such deaths, and those of such incredible anguish, that only the manner of dying was the punishment, death itself the deliverance. South.

Perpetual anguish his [asvel] anxious heart,
Not bent by business, nor composed by rest;
No music cheers him, no bosom can please.

A nguished, adj. [from anguish.] Seized with anguish; tortured; excessively pained; not in use.

Feel no touch
Of confidence, but of fame, and be Anguish'd, not that 'tis [asvel], but that 'tis [asvel]. Donne.

A ngu ar, adj. [from angle.] 1. Having angles or corners; cornered.
As for the figure of crystal, it is for its most part hexagonal, or six cornered, being built upon a confused matter, from whence, as it were from a root, angular figures arise, even as in the amethyst and balfastes. Browne's Pulver Errors

2. Confounding of an angle.
The distance of the edges of the knives from one another, at the distance of four inches from the angular point, where the edges of the knives meet, was the eighth part of an inch. Newton's Opticks.

A ngu a l i ty, n. f. [from angular.] The quality of being angular, or having corners.

A ngularly, adv. [from angular.] With angles or corners.

Another part of the same solution afforded us an ice angularly figured. Ryle.

A ngu lar ne ss, n. f. [from angular.] The angularly figured.

A ngu l a te, adj. [from angle.] Formed with angles or corners.

Topazes, amethysts, or emeralds, which grow in the fissures, are ordinarily crystallized, or shot into angularized figures; whereas, in the stones, they are found rude lamps, like yellow, purple, and green pebbles. Woodward.

A ngu lo sity, n. f. [from angular.] Angularity; cornered form.

A ngu los, adj. [from angle.] Hooked; angular.

Now can it be a difference, that the parts of solid bodies are held together by hooks, and angular involutions; kinds; the coherence of the parts of these is of as difficult a conception. Glasseville.

Angu'st, adj. [anguish, Lat.] Narrow; strait.

Angestation, n. f. [from anguish.] The act of making narrow; draughting; the state of being narrowed.

The cage of a bird is referred either to the grumines of the blood, or to contraction of the same; wherein it takes possession, by some anguish upon it by part of the tumour. Woffman.

Anim ANI

Animals are such beings, which, besides the power of growing, and producing their like, as plants and vegetables have, are endowed also with sensation and spontaneous motion. Mr. Ray gives two schemes of tables of them.

Animals are either

Sanguineous, that is, such as have blood, which breathe either

Cattle, which are either

Two veins in their heart, and those

Viviparous,

One vein, as the whole kind,

Terebellar, as quadrupeds;

Oriparous, as birds.

And one ventricle in the heart, as frogs, toads, and reptiles.

Gills, as all aquatic fishes, except the whole kind.

Exuvaneous, or without blood, which may be divided into Greater and those either

Naked,

Terrificial, as naked nails.

Aqunxikis, as the poulis, cuttle-fish, &c.

Covered with a covering, either

Crustaceous, as lobsters and crab.

Tellusial, either

Univerte, as limpets.

Bivalve, as oysters, mussels, cockles, Turbonis, as periwinkles, flints, &c.

Litter, as infects of all forts.

Viviparous hairy animals, or quadrupeds, are either

Hominis, which are either

Whole-footed or hoofed, as the horse and ass.

Cloven-footed, having the foot divided into two principal parts, called bifidula, either

Such as have not the cud, as fowls,

Ruminant, or such as chew the cud; divided into

Such as have perpetual and hollow horns.

Bovine, as cow, or quadrupeds, as the rhinoceros and bipotamus.

Clawed or digitated, having the foot divided into two parts or toes, having two nails, as the camel-kind.

Manurs, or claws; either

Univerte, as the elephant;

Divided, which have either

Bovine nail, and an animal-shaped foot, as ape

Bovine, and more pointed nails, which, in respect of their teeth, are divided into such as have

Many teeth, or cutters, in each jaw;

The greater, which have

A shorter front, and rounder head, as the cat-kind.

A longer front, and head, is the dog-kind.

The latter, the vurm or weasel-kind.

Only two large and remarkable tooth, which are all pungivorous, and are called the hare-kind.

Ray.

Vegetables are proper enough to repair animals, as being near of the same specific gravity with the animal juices, and as consisting of the same parts with animal substanences, spirit, water, fire, col. earth; all which are contained in the sap, which they derive from the earth. Aristotle in Anim.

Some of the animated substances, having various organic or instrumental parts, fitted for a variety of motions from place to place, and a spring of life within themselves, as bees, birds, fishes, and insects; these are called animals. Other animated substances are called vegetables, which have within themselves the principles of another sort of life in growth, and the various productions of leaves and fruits, such as we find in plants, herbs, and trees.

War's Logick.

2. By
2. By way of contempt, we say of a stupid man, that he is a ʃipid animal.

Animal, adj. [animalis, Lat.]
1. That which belongs or relates to animals.

There are things in the world of spirits, wherein our ideas are very dark and confused; such as their union with animal nature, the way of their acting on material beings, and their conversion with each other. Watts's Logic.

2. Animal functions, distinguished from natural and vital, are the lower powers of things, as the will, memory, and imagination.

3. Animal life is opposed, on one side, to intellectual, and, on the other, to vegetable.

Animal is used in opposition to spiritual or rational; as, the animal nature.

Animalcule n.s. [animalculam, Lat.]
A small animal; particularly those which are in their first and smallest state.

We are to know, that they all come of the seed of their own kind, that were before laid there.

Animality n.s. [from animal] The state of animal existence.

The word animal first only signifies human animal. In the minor propinio, the word animal, for the same reason, signifies the animal of a grove; thereby it becomes an ambiguous term, and unfit to build the conclusion upon. Watts.

To animate. v. a. [anima, Lat.]
1. To quicken; to make alive; to give life to: as, the soul animates the body; man must have been animated by a higher power.

2. To give powers to; to heighten the powers or effect of any thing.

But none, ah! none can animate the lyre, And the mute strings with vocal sounds inspire: Whether the learner's Minerva be his theme, Or chant Diana bathing in the stream; None can recite their heavenly psalms so well As Heisen, in whose eyes ten thousand Cupids dwell.

Dryden.

3. To encourage; to incite.

The more to animate the people, he stood on high, and cried, America be heard, and cried unto them with a loud voice.

He was animated to expostulate, by the prediction of a footsawyer, that one should succeed Pope Leo, whose name should be Adrian.

Animate. adj. [from To animate.] Alive; possessing animal life.

All bodies have spirits and pneumatical parts within them; but the main differences between animates and inanimate, are two: the first is, that the spirits of things animate are all contained within themselves, and are branched in veins and secret canals, as blood vessels; and, in living creatures, the spirits have not only branches, but certain cells or veins where the principal spirits do refer, and whereunto the rest do refer; but the spirits in things inanimate are flat in, and cut off by the tangible parts, and are not pervious one to another, as air is in bones.

Nobler birth
Of creatures animate with gradual life,
Of growth, fertility, reason, all full'mant up in man.

Milton.

There are several topics used against atheism and idolatry: such as the visible marks of divine wisdom and goodness in the works of the creation, the discernment of faults with matter, and the admirable structure of animate bodies.

Animate. participle adj. [from animate.] Lively; vigorous.

Warre'th the fires with animated sounds; Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds. Dry.

Animateness. n.s. [from animate.] The state of being animated.

Animatia. n.s. [from animate.] The act of animating or enlivening.

Plants or vegetables are the principal parts of the third day's work. They are the first producer, which is the word of animation. Bacon.

The state of being enlivened.

Two circumstances of all enlivening are its beginning and encrescence; and the act of two more to run through its face and declination.

Brown's Pulpit. Errors.

Animative adj. [from animate.] That which has the power of giving life, or animating.

Animator. n.s. [from animate.] That which gives life, or any thing analogous to life, as motion.

Those bodies being of a congenial nature, do readily receive the impression of their motor, and, if not fettered by their gravity, conform themselves to situations, wherein they best unite to their animators. Brown.

Animose adj. [animalis, Lat.] Full of spirit; hot; vehement.

Animoseness. n.s. [from animate.] Spirit; heat; vehemence of temper. Ditto.

Animosity. n.s. [animalis, Lat.] Vehemence of hatred; passionate malignity. It implies rather a disposition to break out into outrages, than the outrage itself.

They were free to bring passion, animosity, and malice enough of their own, what evidence ever they had from others. Chaucer.

If there is not some method found out for allaying their heats and animosities among the fair sex, one does not know to what outrages they may proceed. Addison.

No religious fecu ever carried their aversion for each other to greater heights than our state parties have done; who, the more to inflate their passions, have mixed religious and civil animosities together; borrowing one of their applications from the church. Swift.

Anisie. n.s. [animis, Lat.] A species of apium or parsley, with large sweet-scented seeds. This plant is not worth propagating in England for use, because the seeds can be had much better and cheaper from Italy. Miller.

Ye pay the tythe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weigher matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: they ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Matt. xixii. 23.

Anker. n.s. [ancher, Dutch.] A liquid measure chiefly used at Amsterdam. It is the fourth part of the aam, and contains two flksans: each flksan consists of sixteen mangles; the mangle being equal to two of our wine quarts. Chambers.

Ankle. n.s. [analeep, Saxon; asclep, Dutch.] The joint which joins the foot to the leg.

One of his ankles was much swelled and ulcerated on the instep, in several places. Wieland.

My simple system shall suppoze, That Alrae goes to the toes, That then the mounts by just degrees, Up to the ankles, legs, and knees. Pehr.

Ankle-bone. n.s. [from ankle and bone.] The bone of the ankle.

The fine-bone, from the knee to the instep, is made by slowing one half of the leg with a fine hollow; the ankle-bone will swell itself by a shadow given underneath, as the knee. Peri.

Annalist. n.s. [from annals.] A writer of annals.

Their own annals has given the same title to that of Symmposium. Aubrey.

Annals. n.s. without singular number. [annales, Lat.] Histories digested in the exact order of time; narratives in which every event is recorded under its proper year.

Could you with patience hear, or I relate, Of the triumphs of our fate? Through such a train of woes if I should run, The day would sooner than the tale be done!

Dryden.

We are assured, by many glorious examples, in the annals of our religion, that every one, in the like circumstances of distress, will not set and argue thus; but thus will every one be tempted to act.

Parker.

Annats. n.s. without singular. [annates, Lat.]
1. First fruits; because the rate of first fruits paid for spiritual livings, is after one year's profit. Cowell.

2. Maltes laid in the Romish church for the space of a year, or for any other time, either for the soul of a person deceased, or for the benefit of a person living. Aylliff. Pargeter.

To Anneal. v. a. [ glean, to glean, Sax.]
1. To heat glafs, that the colours laid on it may be fixed.

By when the dust anned in glass thy story, Then the light and glory More rev'tend grows, and more doth win, Which else flows wa'st, bleak, and thin.

When you purpose to anneal, take a plate of iron made fit for the oven; or take a blue stone, which being made fit for the oven, lay it upon the crofs bar of iron.

Which her own inward symmetry reveal'd, And like a picture done, in glass anned. Dryd.

To heat glafs after it is blown, that it may not break.

To heat any thing in such a manner as to give it the true temper.

To Annex. v. a. [annexd, annexum, Lat.]
1. To unite to at the end; as, he annexed a codicil to his will.

2. To unite, as a smaller thing to a greater; as, he annexed a province to his kingdom.

3. To unite a posteriori; annexion always presupposing something; thus we may say, punishment is annexed to guilt, but not guilt to punishment.

Concerning fate or destiny, the opinions of those learned men, that have written therein, may be falsely received, and they not the least annexed and fastened an irritable necessity, and make it more general an universally powerful than it is. Aulighe.

Nations will decline to low
From virtue, which is reason, that no wrong,
But justice, and some fatal curse annex'd,
Despises them of their outward liberty. Milton.

O man, dost not the author of the law, which is annexed to your office, 1 speak of that only which is inborn and inherent to your person? Dryd.

He cannot but love virtue wherever it is, and annex happiness always to the exercise of it.

Aubrey.

The temporal reward is annexed to the bare performance of the action, but the eternal to the obedience.

Rogers.

Ann L. 25.
ANNEX. n. f. [from fo annex.] The thing annexed; addition.

Failing in his first attempt to be but like the highest in heaven, he had obtained of men to be the same on earth, and hath accordingly assumed the annexes of divinity. Brown.

ANNEXATION. n. f. [from annex.] 1. Conjunction; addition. If we can return to that charity and pesteable mindness, which Christ to vehemently recommend to us, we have at our own promise, that the whole body shall be full of light, Mark vi. that all other christian virtues will, by way of concatenance or annexation, attend them. Hammond.

2. Union; act or practice of adding or uniting.

How annexations of benefits first came into the church, whether by the prince's authority, or the pope's licence, is a very great dispute. Spence.

ANNEXMENT. n. f. [from annex.] 1. The act of annexing; addition.

It is necessary to engage the fears of men, by the annexation of such penalties as will overbalance temporal pleasure. Rogers.

ANNEXIBLE. adj. [from annexible.] That which may be reduced to nothing; that which may be put out of existence.

To ANNEXILATE. v. a. [add and nibil- lum, Lat.] 1. To reduce to nothing; to put out of existence.

It is impossible for any body to be utterly annexible; but that, as it was the work of omnipotence of God to make something of nothing, so it requires the like omnipotency to turn somewhere into nothing. Bacon.

Thou taught'st me, by making me
In every wise, both I and thee,
'To invent and practise this one way 'tannexible all three.

He displeased of God's mercy; he, by a declamation of all hopes, annexed his mercy. Brown's Fugitive Errors.

Whose friendship can stand against affaults, strong enough to annihilate the friendship of puny minds; such an one has reached true constancy. Shadwell.

Some imagined, water sufficient to a deluge was created, and, when the business was done, disbanded and annexed. Woodward.

2. To destroy, so as to make the thing otherwise than it was.

The flood had altered, deformed, or rather annexed, this place, so no man can find any mark or memory thereof. Raleigh.

3. To annul; to destroy the agency of any thing.

There's no reason, that any one commonwealth should annexiate that wherupon the whole power has agreed. Hooker.

ANNIHILATION. n. f. [from annihilate.]

The act of reducing to nothing. The state of being reduced to nothing.

God hath his influence into the very essence of things without which their utter annexiation could not choose but follow. Hooker.

That knowledge, which as spirits we obtain,
Is to be valued in the midst of pain:
Annexations were to lose heaven more:
We are not quite dead, where thought can fear.

ANNIVERSARY. n. f. [anniversary, Lat.] 1. A day celebrated as it returns in the course of the year.

For encouragement to follow the example of the saints, and to call those to the place of their martyrdom, to praise God for them, and to preserve the anniversary of their sufferings.

ANNIVERSARY adj. [anniversary, Lat.] Returning with the revolution of the year; annual; yearly.

The heavens whirled about with admirable celerity, most constantly finishing its anniversaries. Ray.

They are giving any worship to a creature, as inconsistent with christianity; but confess the honour and esteem for the martyrs, which they expressed by keeping their anniversaries days, and other religious examples. Stillingfleet.

ANNVS DOMINI. [Lat.] In the year of our Lord; as, anno domini, or A.D. 1751; that is, in the seventeenth hundred and fifty-first year from the birth of our Saviour.

ANNOSACE. n. f. [from anno, but not now in use.]

It hath a double signification. Any hurt done either to a publick place, as highway, bridge, or commonalty, or to a private, by laying any thing that may breed infection, by extraching, or such like means. The writ that is brought upon this transgression. See NOTE, the word now used. Plutarch.

ANNOLIS. n. f. An American animal, like a lizard.

ANNOTION. n. f. (annotate; Lat.) Explications or remarks written upon books; notes.

It might appear very improper to publish annotations, without the text itself whereinunto they relate. Burton.

ANNOTATOR. n. f. (Lat.) A writer of notes or annotations; a scholiast; a commentator.

I have notes that respect for the annotators, which they generally meet with in the world.

Fellon in the Glossary.

To ANNOUNCE. v. a. (announce, Fr. announce; Lat.) 1. To publish; to proclaim.

Of the Mephit I have heard foretold
By all the prophets; of thy birth at length Announced by Gabriel with the first I know. Milton.

2. To pronounce; to declare by a judicial sentence.

Thou, mighty Jove, mean time, thy glorious care,
Who model nations, publish laws, announce
Or life or death. Prior.

To ANNOY. v. a. (annoy, Fr. To inconvenience; to vex; to tease; to molest.

Woe to poor man; each outward thing annoys him;
He breathes in sorrow grief, that most destroys him.

Siddons.

Her joyous presence and sweet company
In full content he there did long enjoy;
No wicked envy, nor vile jealously.

His dear delights were able to annoy. Fable Queen.

ANN. At one who long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick, and fewers, annoy the air,
Forth lifting on a summer's morn to breathe
Among the pleasant villages, and farms.

Adjoin'd, from each thing met conceives delight.

Milton.

Inflicts sordoms on his offensive weapons,
Unles provoked: let them but alone, and annoy them not.

Ray.

ANNROY. n. f. [from the verb.] Injury; molestation; trouble.

Sleep, Richmond, deep in peace, and wake in joy.

Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy.

Shakespeare.

All pain and joy is in their way.

The things we fear bring least annoy.

Than fears, and hope brings greater joy.

But in themselves they cannot stay.

Donne.

What then remains, but, after path annoy.

To take the good viuiiclude of joy? Dryden.

ANNOVANCE. n. f. [from annoy.] 1. That which annoys; that which hurts.

A grain, a dart, a gnat, a wand'r ing hair.

Shakespeare.

Any annoyance in that precious fince.

Crows, ravens, rocoiles, and magpies, are great annoyance to corn. Morewood.

2. The flate of being annoyed; or act of annoying.

The fip venom of their poisoned hearts breaketh out to the sound annoyance.

Hooker.

The greatest annoyance and disturbance of man-kind has been from one of those two things, force or fraud. South.

On any further annoyance or terror of any befieged place, they would throw into it dead bodies.

Wilkins.

ANNYER. n. f. [from annoy.] The peron that annoys.

ANNUAL. adj. [annual, Fr. from annus, Lat.] 1. That which comes yearly.

Annual for me the grape, the rule, renew
The juice noxiferous, and the balsem dew. Pope.

2. That which is reckoned by the year.

The king's majesty does purport honour to you; to which a thousand pounds a-year, annual support, Out of his grace he adds. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

3. That which lasts only a year.

The dying in the winter of the roots of plants that are annual, seemeth to be caused by the great pressure of the fap they being prevented, they will superannuate, if they stand warm. Bacon.

Every tree may, in some fene, be faid to be an annual plant, both leaf, flower, and fruit produced from one season, that was superannuated over the wood the last year. Ray.

ANNUALLY, adv. [from annus.] Yearly; ever year.

By two drahms, they thought it sufficient to signify a heart; because the heart at one year weigheth two drahms, that is, a quarter of an ounce; and, unto fifties years, annually encrath the weight of one drahm.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The whole strength of a nation is in the utmost that a prince can raise annually from his subjeets. Swift.

ANNUITANT. n. f. [from annuity.] He that gives obeyes or receives an annuity.

ANNUITY. n. f. [annuity, Fr.] 1. A yearly rent to be paid for term of life or years. The differences between a rent and an annuity are, that every rent is going out of land; but an annuity charges only the granter, or his heirs, that have afflicted by descent. The second difference is, that, for the recovery of an annuity, no action lies, but only the writ of annuity against the granter,
2. A yearly allowance.

He was generally known to be the son of one evil, and brother to another, who supplied his ex- penses and paid what his anxiety from his father would bear.

Curved.

To ANNUITE. v. a. [from nullus.]

1. To make void; to nullify; to abrogate; to abolish.

That which gives force to the law, is the authority that enables it; and whoever destroys this authority, does, in effect, annul the law.

Rogers.

2. To reduce to nothing; to obliterate.

Light, the pure word of God, to me its extinct, and all her various objects of delight.

Annull'd, which might in part my grief haven't.

Miller.

AN'NULAR. adj. [from annulus, Lat.] In the form of a ring.

That they might not, in bending the arm or leg, rise up, he has tied them to the bones by an- nullous ligaments.

AN'NULARY. adj. [from annulus, Lat.] In the form of rings.

Because continual respiration is necessary, the wind-pipe is made with annullary cartilages, that the files of it may not fall and fall together.

Ray.

ANKLELET. v. n. [from annulet.]

1. A little ring.

2. (In heraldry.) A difference or mark of distinction, which the fifth brother of any family ought to bear in his coat of arms.

ANKLESETS are also a part of the coat-armour of several families; they were anciently reputed a mark of nobility and jurisdiction, it being the custom of prefates to receive their investiture per baccallus & annulum.

AN'NERATE. v. a. [annunco.]

To add to a former number; to unite to something before mentioned.

AN'NERATION. n. f. [annuneration, Lat.]

Addition to a former number.

AN'NUCIATE. v. n. [annunciatus, Lat.]

To bring tidings; to relate something that has fallen out; a word not in popular use.

ANV'NICATION DAY. M. f. [from an- nunciation.]

The day celebrated by the church in memory of the angel's salu- tation of the blessed Virgin; solemnized with us on the twenty-fifth of March.

As the day of the annunciation, or Lady-day, meditates on the incarnation of our blest Saviour: and so upon all the festivals of the year.

A'NODYNE. adj. [from a and doze.]

That which has the power of mitigating pain.

But those with anodyne't alt safety the smart,
And mildly this her medic'd line did impart.

Dryd. Anodynes, or abatifs of pain of the alimentary kind, are such things as relax the tension of the affected nervous fibres, as decoctions of emol- lient substances, those things which destroy the particular sympathy which occasions the pain; or what deafens the sensibility of the brain, by procuring sleep.

Arthus. To AN'OXYGE. part, sient, ensint, Fr.

1. To rob over with unnecessary matter, as oil, or ungents.

Anunil'd me be with deadly venom. Skalky.

Thou shalt have olives throughout all thy courts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit.

Dens. xxvii. 40.

2. To finear; to be rubbed upon.

Warmen waters then, in brazen caldrons borne,

And make in anoint, the oil of anoint, the.

Ano'malous. v. n. [from anomalus, Lat.]

The person that anoint's.

An'o'malismus. m. f. [from anomalus.] Ano- maly; irregularity; deviation from the common rule. Did.

ANO'MALISTICAL. adj. [from anomalus.]

Irregular; applied in astronomy to the year, taken for the time in which the earth paffeth through its orbit, diffinf from the tropical year.

An'o'malous. adj. [a priv. and opus.]

Irregular; out of rule; deviating from the general method or anality of things.

It is applied, in grammar, to words deviating from the common rules of inflection; and, in astronomy, to the seemingly irregular motions of the planets.

There will arise anomalous disturbances not only in civil and artificial, but also in military officers.

Brown's Piog. Errors.

He being acquainted with some characters of every speech, you may at pleasure make him under- stand anomalous pronunciation.

Holder.

Metals are gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, and iron which we may join that anomalous, quicksilver or mercury.

Locke.

AN'O'MALOUSLY. adv. [from anomalus.]

Irregularly; in a manner contrary to rule.

Eve was not solemly begotten, but suddenly fruized, and anomalously produced from Adam.

Brown's Piog. Errors.

ANO'MALY. n. f. [anomalus, Fr. anomala, Lat. anomalie.]

Irregularity; deviation from the common rule.

If we should chance to find a mother disbaching her daughter, had we not been seen, we must charge this upon a peculiar anomaly and bafiness of nature.

South.

I do not purpose the many metaphors in use, but intend to shew how much of those ano- malies in writing might be avoided, and better supplied.

Holder.

A'NO'MY. n. f. [a priv. and opus.]

Break of law.

If sin be good, and just, and lawful, it is no more evil, it is no sin, no anomaly.

Brandtall against Hobbe.

AN'O. adv. [Tunius imagines it to be an elliptical form of speaking for in one, that is, in one minute; Skinner from a and on, or near; Minshew from on an.]

1. Quickly; soon; in a short time.

A little snow, tumbled about.

Dens. a few will come about. Shakespeare.

Shall we see young OBERON? Ben Hecf.

However, writhe, Heven! Skalky.

Hev'-n, writhe thou awe! while we discharge.

Milton.

He was not without design at that prelent, as he shall be made out and anon, meaning by that device to withdraw himself.

Clercmont.

Still as I did the leaves insin'p, With such a purple light they shine, As if they had been made of fire, And pressed down with weight of fame. Waller.

Sometimes; now and then; at other times. In this sense is used ever and anon, for now and then.

Full forty days he pass'd, whether on hill Sometimes, in steadly vale, each night, Or, harb'rd loose in cave, is not reveal'd. Milton.

An'NO'MOUS. adj. [a priv. and opus.]

Wanting a name.

These animals serve also for food to another anxious infest of the waters.

Ray.

They would forswear publish flanders unpun- ished, the authors being anomalous, the imme- diate publishers thereof feckling.

Notes on the Dunciad.

An'NO'MOUSLY. adv. [from anonymus.]

Without a name.

I would know, whether the edition is to come out anonymously, among complaint of dubious editions.

Swift.

A'NO'REXY. n. f. [anorexia.] Inappetency, or loathing of food.

Quinley.

A'NO'THER. adj. [from an and other.]

1. Not the same.

But that will not lay a foundation for perpetual divided, must of necessity find another rule of go- vernment, than that.

Lecky.

2. One more; a new addition to the former number.

A fourth? What will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet? a seventh I'll feee no more.

Skalky.

3. Any other; any one else.

If one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him.

1 Samuel. xii. 25.

Why not of her? prefer't above the rest?

By him with knighthly deeds, and open love pro- lific.

So had another been, where he his vows address'd.

Deyden.

4. Not on one self.

A man shall have diffused his life, his felt, and his whole concerns so far, that he can weep his forsworn with another's eyes; when he has another heart besides his own, both to share, and to respect his grief.

Swift.

5. Widely different; much altered.

When the soul is beaten from its station, and the mounds of virtue are broken down, it be- comes quite another thing from what it was be- fore.

Deyden.

AN'O'RERAI'VES. adj. [See ANOTH- GUESS.]

Of another kind. This word I have found only in Sidney.

If my father had not paid the hardy fool, I might have had another with husband than Da- mietas.

Sidney.

A'NO'THGUSS. adj. [This word, which though rarely used in writing, is some- what frequent in colloquial language, I conceive to be corrupted from another guise; that is, of a different guise, or manner, or form.] Of a different kind.

Oh Hocus! where art thou? It used to go in another guise manner in thy time. — Arthus.
1. To speak in return to a question.

Are we faceless’d? or are the Moors repom’d? Answer these questions first, and then a thousand others. Answer them altogether.

Dryden.

2. To speak in opposition.

No man was able to answer him a word.

Shakespeare.

If it be said, we may discover the elementary ingredients of things, I answer, that it is not necessary that such a discovery should be practicable.

Bacon.

3. To be accountable for: with for.

Those many did not dare to do evil.

Shakespeare.

If the first man that did the act infringed Had answer’d for his deed.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

Some men have fixed in the principles of humanity, and must answer for not being men.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

If there be any absurdity in this, our authors must answer for it.

Foxe.

4. To civilize: to give a justiciary account of: with for.

The night, so impatiently fixed for my left, made little impression on myself; but I cannot answer for my family.

Swift.

5. To give an account.

When they have been once received, and so well improved, let those answer, either to God or man, who have been the authors and promoters of such wife council.

Temple.

He wants a father to protect his youth.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

And rear him up to virtue. You must bear The future blame, and answer to the world, When you refuse the easy heathen means Of taking care of him.

Southey.

6. To correspond to; to suit with.

As in water answereth to face, so the heart of man to man.

Prov. xxviii. 19.

7. To be equivalent to; to fland for something else.

A task is made for laughter, and wine maketh merry; but money answereth all things.

Erri. x. 19.

8. To satisfy any claim or petition of right or justice.

Zelanne with regretful eyes bade him defend himself; for no less than his life would answer it.

Sidney.

Revenge the jarring and disunited contempt Of this proud king, who flees day and night To answer all the debt he owes unto you, Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.

Shakespeare.

Let his neck answer for it, if there is any mar- tial law in the world.

Shakespeare.

Men so soon find their appetites unanswered, than they complain the times are injurious.

Shakespeare.

That yearly rent is still paid, even as the former causes, and we want to be, in parcel, must paid to. Answered.

Bacon.

9. To aö reciprocally.

Say, do you think yet the Roman harp command? Do the things answer to thy noble hand?

Dryden.

10. To stand as opposite or correlative to something else.

There can but two things create love, perfection and usefulness; to which answer, on our part, admiration, and, desire; and both these are centered in love.

Tylor.

11. To bear proportion to.

Weapons must needs be dangerous things, which they answer’d the bulk of so prodigious a person.

Swift.

12. To perform what is endeavoured or intended by the agent.

Our part is, to choose out the most deserving objects, and the most likely to answer the ends of our charity; and when this is done, all is done that lies in our powers; the rest must be left to providence.

Atterbury.

13. To comply with.

He dies that touches of this fruit,

Till all my affairs are answer’d.

Shakespeare.

14. To succeed; to produce the wished event.

Jason followed her counsel, whereas when the event had answer’d, he again demanded the sceptre.

Ralegh.

In operations upon bodies for their vexation or alleviation, the trial in great quantities doth not answer the trial in small; and so deceiveth many.

Shakespeare.

15. To appear to any call, or authoritative summons; in which sense, though figuratively, the following passage may be, perhaps, taken.

 Thou went better in thy grave, than to answer, with thy uncovered body, this extremity of the sile.

Shakespeare.

16. To be over-against any thing.

Fine answer fire, and, by their pale beams, Each battle sees the other’s ember’d face.

Shakespeare.

17. To answer any call, or authoritative summons; in which sense, though figuratively, the following passage may be, perhaps, taken.

It was a right answer of the physician to his patient, that had come eyes. If you have more pleasure in win than in your sight, wine is good.

Locke.

How can we think of appearing at that tribunal, without being answer’d. To give a ready answer to the questions which he shall put to you, about the poor and the afflicted, the hungry and the naked, the sick and imprisoned? Answered.

Atterbury.

2. An account to be given to the demand of justice.

He’ll call you to show him an answer for it.

Shakespeare.

That shall chide your trespass.

Shakespeare.

In law, a constitution of a charge exhibited against a person.

Shakespeare.

A personal answer ought to have three qualities; it ought to be pertinent to the matter in hand; it ought to be conditional; it ought to be clear and certain.

Swift.

An answer-jobber. n. f. [from answer and jobber.] He that makes a trade of writing answers.

Shakespeare.

What disquiets me from having any thing to do with answer-jobbers, is, that they have no confines.

Swift.

A question to which a reply may be made, that which may be answered; as the argument, though fullbe, is yet answerable.

Shakespeare.

2. Obliged to give an account; obliged to answer any demand of justice; or stand the trial of an accusation.

Every chief of every kindred or family should be answerable, and bound to being forth every one of that kindred, at all times, to be justified, when he should be required, or charged with any treason or felony.

Spenzer’s State of Ireland.

When many argue, and when a physician should manifestly prescribe poison to all his patients, he cannot be justly punished, but is answerable only to God.

Swift.

He cannot think ambition more jilted than in his children, than to other men, because that would be to make church government answerable for the errors of human nature.

Swift.

3. Correspondent.

It was but such a likeness as an imperfect glass doth give, answerable enough in some features and colours, but erring in others.

Sidney.

The daughters of Atlas were ladies, who accompanying such as came to be registered among the worthies, because children answerable in Ralegh.

4. Proportionate; suitable.

Only add Deeds to thy knowledge answerable; and add faith, Add virtue, patience, temperance; add love By new come call’d charity, the soul Of all the rest.

Million.

Suitable; suited.

The following, by certain elates of men, answerable, If one of more than one, showed himself, as of soldiers to him that had been employed in the wars, hath been a thing well taken in monarchicals.

Ralegh.

Baron.

If answerable style I can obtain, Of my celestial patrons.

Swift.

5. Equal; equivalent.

There be no kings whose means are answerable unto other men’s desires.

Ralegh.

6. Relative; correlative.

That, to every petition for things needful, there should be some answerable sentence of thanks provided particularly to follow, is not requisite.

Hooker.

A’ answerably. n. [from answerable.] In due proportion; with proper correspondence; suitable.

Relatives.

The breaker is here, if they be entirely, and free from infants, they are answerably deeper.

Brown.”

A’ answerableness. n. f. [from answerable.] The quality of being answerable.

Swift.

A’ answerer. n. f. [from answer.] 1. He that answers; he that speaks in return to what another has spoken.

I know your mind, and I will satisfy for neither will be like a niggardly answerer, going no further than the bounds of the question.

Sidney.

2. He that manages the controversy against one that has written first.

It is very unfair in any writer to employ ignorance and malice together; because it gives his answerer double work.

Swift.

A’ ant. n. f. [amezze, Sax. which Jovius imagines, not without probability, to have been first contracted to ant-, and then softened to an-] An emmet; a pilime. A small insect that lives in great numbers together in hillocks.

We’ll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there’s no learning in the winter.

Shakespeare.

Methinks, all cities now but ant-hills are.

Where when the several labourers I see For children, house, provifion, taking pain, They’re all but ants carrying eggs, bars, and grain.

Donne.

Learn each small people’s genius, policies; The ants republick, and the realm of beasts.

Pope.

A’ ant-bear. n. f. [from ant and bear.] An animal that feeds on ants.

Dives quadrupeds feed upon insects, and some live wholly upon them; as two kinds of lizards called upon ants, which therefore are called in English ant-bears.

Ray.

A’ ant-hill. n. f. [from ant and hill.] The small protruberances of earth in which ants make their nests.

Put blue flowers into ant-hills, they will be flain with glee; because the ants drop upon them their clinging liquor, which has the effect of oil of vitriol.

Ray.

Those who have seen ant-hills, have only perceived perceived those small hafts of corn about their navel.

ANT. A contention for it, or rather and if it; as, an't please you; that is, and if it please you.

ANTACONIST. n. f. [αντι and αντικειμενο].

1. One who contends with another; an opponent. It implies generally a personal and particular opposition.

Our antagonists in those controversies may have met with some rescue to their animosity. Hume.

What was set before him, to have, pull, draw, and break, he still performed.

None daring to appear antagonistic.

It is not that the history of a performer, if well, appears, till the prejudice both of his antagonists and adherents be softened and subdued.

Addison.

2. Contrary.

The short club consists of those who are under five feet; ours is to be composed of such as are above six. Thence we look upon the two extremes and antagonists of the species, considering all these as neutrals, who fill up the middle space. Addison.

In anatomy, the antagonistic is that muscle which counteracts some other.

A contraction of a muscle much produce a fracas in its antagonistic, because the equilibrium is destroyed.

Arbuthnot.

To ANTACONIZE. v. n. [from αντι and αντικειμενο]. To contend against another. Dict.

ANTALOGICK. adj. [from αντι, against, and αλογικo]. That which contains pain; aodynt.

ANTANACLASSIS. n. f. [Lat. from ανταιναικo, from αντικειμενο, to drive back].

1. A figure in rhetoric, when the same word is repeated in a different, if not in a contrary significatio; as, In thy youth learn some craft, that in old age thou mayst get thy living without craft. In the first place, signifies science or occupation; in the second, deceit or bility.

2. It is also a returning to the matter at the end of a long parenthesis; as, Shall that heart (which does not only feel them, but hath all motion of his life placed in them), shall that heart, I say, &c.

Smith's Rhetorick.

ANTAPHRODITICK. adj. [from αντι, against, and ἀφροδιτικo]. That which is efficacious against the venereal disese.

ANTAPOPLETICK. adj. [αντι, against, and ἀποτλετικo, an apoplexy]. Good against an apoplexy.

ANTARCTICK. adj. [αντι, against, and ἀνταρκτικo, the bear or northern contellation]. The southern pole, so called, as opposite to the northern.

They that had sail'd from near the antarctic pole, their treasure safe, and all their vessels whole, in sight of their dear country rude'd be'd. Wordsworth.

Again, where the rock or the land. Waller.

ANTARTHETICK. adj. [αντι, against, and ἀνταρθετικo, the gout. Good against the gout.

ANTASTHATHICK. adj. [from αντι and ἀνταιθα]. Good against the asthma.

ANTE. A Latin particle signifying before, which is frequently used in compositions; as, antediluvian, before the flood; antechamber, a chamber leading into another apartment.

ANTEACT. n. f. [from ante and act]. A former act.

ANTEBELLUMIZATION. n. f. [from ante and ambiulatio, Lat.]. Walking before. Dict.

To ANTECEDE. v. n. [from ante, before, and cede, to go]. To precede; to go before.

It seems confusant to reason, that the fabric of the world did not long anteceede motion. Hume.

ANTECEDENCE. n. f. [from anteceede].

The act or state of going before; precedence.

It is impossible that mixed bodies can be eternal, because there is necessarily a pre-existence of the simple bodies, and an antecedence of their constitution preceding the existence of mixed bodies. Hume.

ANTECEDENT. adj. [anteceedent, Lat.].

1. Going before; preceding. Antecedent is used, I think, only with regard to time; precedent, with regard both to time and place.

To offer, that God looked upon Adam's fall as a sin, and punished it, when, without any antecedent sin of his, it was impossible for him not to fall, seems a thing that highly reproves effeminate equity and goodness. South.

2. It has to before the thing which is supposed to follow.

No one is so hardy as to say, God is in his debt; the debt must therefore be paid; for existence must be antecedent to want. Calilger.

Did the blood first exhalt, antecedent to the formation of the heart? But that is to let the effect before the cause. Bentley.

ANTECEDENT. n. f. [anteceedent, Lat.].

1. That which goes before.

A duty to of mighty an influence, that it is in fact the necessary antecedent, if not also the direct cause, of a sinner's return to God. South.

2. In grammar, the noun to which the relative is subjunctive; as, the man who comes hither.

Let him learn the right joining of substantives with adjectives, the noun with the verb, and the relative with the antecedent. Aitken.

3. In logic, the first proposition of an enthymeme, or argument confining only of two propositions.

Conditional or hypothetical propositions are those whose parts are united by the conditional particle if, as, if the sun be fixed, the earth must move; if there be no fire, there will be no smoke. The first part of these propositions, or that wherein the condition is contained, is called the antecedent, the other is called the consequent. Witty's Logic.

ANTECEDENTLY. adv. [from anteceedent]. In the state of antecedence, or going before; previously.

We cannot so far proceed to his creation, while he yet lay in the barren womb of nothing, and only in the number of possibilities. South.

ANTECESSOR. n. f. [Lat.]. One who goes before, or leads another; the principal.

Dict.

ANTECHEMBER. n. f. [from ante, before, and chamber; it is generally written improperly, antechamber.]. The chamber that leads to the chief apartment.

The emperor has the antechamber path, and this way moves with a disoder'd haste. Dryden.

His antechamber, and room of audience, are little spacious chambers wainscotted. Addison.

ANTECURSOR. n. f. [Lat.]. One who runs before.

Dict.

To ANTEDATE. v. n. [from ante, and dare, to set]; Lat].

1. To date earlier than the real time, so as to confer a fictitious antiquity.

Now thou hast left me one week old.

To-morrow, when thou leav'st, what wilt thou say? wilt thou then antedate some new-made vow, or say, that now we are not left as false persons, which we were? Donne.

2. To take something before the proper time.

Our joys below it can improve, and antedate the bliss above. Popes.

ANTEPONIUM. v. n. [from ante, before, and pilium, a deluge].

1. Exifting before the deluge.

2. Relating to things existing before the deluge.

The text intends only the line of Seth, who descendes unto the genealogy of our Saviour, and the antediluvian chronology. Brown's Pulpit. Err.

ANTEPONIUM. n. f. One that lived before the flood.

We are so far from repining at God, that he hath not extended the period of our lives to the longevity of the antediluvian, that we give him thanks for confirming the days of our trial. Bentley.

ANTELOPE. n. f. [The etymology is uncertain.]. A goat with curled or wrenched horns.

Spenoper.

ANTEMERIDIAN. adj. [from ante, before, and meridian, noon]. Before noon.

ANTEMEDITIC. adj. [αντι, against, and ε&psilon, to vomit]. That which has the power of calming the stomach; of preventing or stopping vomiting.

ANTEMUNDANE. adj. [ante, before, and mundus, the world]. That which was before the creation of the world.

ANTENUMBER. n. f. [from ante and number]. The number that precedes another.

Whatever virtue is in numbers, for conducing to content of notes, is rather to be ascribed to the antecnumen, than to the entire numbers, as that the found returneth after six, or after twelve; so that the seventh or thirteenth is not the matter, but the fifth or the twelfth. Bacon.

ANTEMATE. n. f. [from ante, before, and patum, to feed]. A forreata; something taken before the proper time.

When we exact our bill only in the fasting of our appetites, it might be reasonable, by frequent antemate, to excite our gullet for that profuse perpetual meal. Decy of Pity.

ANTEPEKULT. n. f. [anteepellulimicis, Lat.]. The last syllable but two, as the syllable antepensul is a term of grammar.

ANTEPILICK. adj. [from ante and pilo, a hair]. A medicine against convulsions.

That bizaro is antidote, ipsi judaicus diuretical, coral antepilickical, we will not deny. Brown's Pulpit Ernri.

To ANTEPONDE. v. n. [anteponde, Lat.]. To set one thing before another; to prefer one thing to another.

ANTEPRIMAMENT. n. f. [antenprimamentum, Lat.]. Something to be known in ANTHROPOPHAGI\'S PHILA. n. f. [from anthropophagi, for the sake of a formidable found.

Go, knock, and call; he'll speak like an anthropophagi unto thee; keep off.

ANTHROPOPHAGY. n. f. [from anthropophagi, man, and φαγεῖ, to eat.] The quality of eating human flesh, or man-eating.

Upon slander foundations was raised the unverifiable story of Diomedes his herds. Brown's Vulg. Err. Antidotes.

ANTHROPOSO\'PHY. n. f. [from anthropophagi, man, and σοφία, wisdom.] The knowledge of the name of humanity.

ANTHROPO\'STICK. adj. [from anthropophagi, and ἄντρο, a room.] That which has the power of preventing fleec; that which is efficacious against a lethargy.

ANTHROPOCHONDRI\'ACK. adj. [from anthropophagi, and ἄντρο, a room, and μόρantiphonical, opposite to monarchical.

ANTACID. adj. [from anthropophagi, and νάρ, and τόδε, a flower, and ἀντί, to gather.] A particle much used in composition with words derived from the Greek, and signifies contrary to; as, antiphonical, opposite to monarchical.

ANTICHÆÆ\'E'TICK. adj. [from anthropophagi, and νάρ, a flower, and ἄντρο, a room.] Things adapted to the cure of a bad constitution.

ANTICL\'AMBER. n. f. This word is corruptly written for antichamber, which see.

ANTIC\'HRISTIAN. adj. [from anthropophagi, and νάρ, a flower, and ἄντρο, a room.] Opposite to Christianity.

ANTICHRISTIANISM. n. f. [from antichristian.] Opposition or contrariety to Christianity.

Have we not seen many, whose opinions have fastened upon one another the brand of antichristian? Decay of Poles.

ANTICHRISTIANITY. n. f. [from antichristian.] Contrairety to Christianity.

ACHROMISM. n. f. [from anthropophagi, and νάρ, a flower, and ἄντρο, a room.] Deviation from the right order or account of time.

To ANTICIPATE. v. a. (from Lat.) To take something sooner than another, so as to prevent him that comes after, to take first possession.

God hath taken care to anticipate and prevent every man, to draw him early into his church; to give peace to the preparation, and to engage him in holiness.

If our Apostle had maintained such an antichristian principle engraven upon our souls before all exercise of reason, or what did he talk of seeking the Lord? Not, lest the knowledge of him was innate and perpetual.

Bentley.
No current hold more antipathy,

Than I and such a knave.

Shakspeare.

To this perhaps might be justly attributed most of the sympathies and antipathies observable in men.

Locke.

2. It has sometimes the particle against before the object of antipathy.

I had a mortal antipathy against standing armies in times of peace; because I took armies to be hired by the master of the family, to keep his children in slavery.

Swift.

3. Sometimes it is.

Aye, what provocation I have had?

The strong antipathy of good to bad.

When truth, or virtue, an affront endures,

Th' affront is mine, my friend, and should be

Peter...

4. Formerly with; but improperly.

Tangible bodies have an antipathy with air; and any liquid body, that is more dense, they will draw, condens, and, in effect, incorporate.

Recent.

ANTIPERISTASIS. n. f. [from antigénias, formed of αντι, against, and περίπατος, to stand round.] The opposition of a contrary quality, by which the quality it opposes becomes heightened or intended; or the action by which a body, attacked by another, collects itself, and becomes stronger by such opposition; or an intention of the activity of one quality caused by the opposition of another. Thus quicklime is set on fire by the affusion of cold water; so water becomes warmer in winter than in summer; and thunder and lightning are excited in the presence of the cold air, which is continually cold, and all by antiperistasis. This is an exploded principle in the Peripatetic philosophy.

Th' antiperistasis of age.

Cowley.

The various prodigal dotes extravagants; yet let him and the fortner this day which feed his, luxury, extravagants shall be called in: and by a strange antiperistasis, prodigality shall be kept rate.

Delay of Equity.

ANTIFEESTIVAL. adj. [from αρτί, against, and πειστικός.] In efficacious against the infection of the plague.

Perceptions correct the air before it is attracted by the lungs; or, rather, antifeestival unguents, to antidote the nothils with.

Horace on the Plague.

ANTIPHRASIS. n. f. [from αρτί, against, and φράσις, a form of speech.] The use of words in a fene opposite to their proper meaning.

You now find no cause to repent, that you never diet your hands in the bloody high courts of justices, for called only by antiphrasis.

Shakspere.

ANTIPODAL. adj. [from antipodes.] Relating to the countries inhabited by the antipodes.

The Americans are antipodal unto the Indians.

Brown.

ANTIPODES. n. f. It has no singular.

[from αρτί, against, and πόδης, feet.] Those people who, living on the other side of the globe, have their feet directly opposite to ours.

We should hold day with the antipodes.

If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Shakespeare.

So shines the sun, tho' hence removed, as near

When born, to warm th' antipodes, as here.

Waller.

ANTIPOPE. n. f. [from αρτί, against, and πάπας, pope.] He that usurps the sceptre, in opposition to the right pope.

This.
This house is famous in history, for the retreat of an antipodes, who called himself Felix V. Adjoined.

ANTIPO'TISIS. n. f. [antivors, Lat.] A figure in grammar, by which one case is put for another.

ANTIQUARY. n. f. [antiquarius, Lat.] A man fluentius of antiquity; a collector of ancient things.

All arts, rarities, and inventions, are but the relics of an intellect defaced with time. We admire it now, only as antiquarians do a piece of old coin, for the stamp it once bore. South.

With sharpt'ned sight pale antiquaries peep In the rude ruin of the old adored. Pope.

The rude Latin of the monks is still in intelligible; had their records been delivered in the vulgar tongue, they could not now be understood, yet would be esteemed antiquities.

ANTIQUARY. adj. [This word is improper.] Old; antique.

Here's Nestor,
Instructed by the antiquary times;
He muft, he is, he cannot but be wise. Shakespeare.

To an Admiration. [An. [antique, Lat.]

To put out of use; to make obsolete.

The growth of Christianity in this kingdom might reasonably introduce new laws, and antique or abortive some old ones, that formed less consistent with the Christian doctrine. Hume's Common Law of England.

Milton's Paradise Lost is admirable. But cannot I admire the height of his invention, and the strength of his expression, without defenting his antiquated words, and the perpetual hardships of their sound? Dryden.

Almighty Latium, with her cities crown'd,
Shall like an antiquated table found. Addison.

ANTQUITAEDNESS. n. f. [from antiquat- edness.]

The flue papered antiquated, worn out of use, or obsolete.

ANTIQUE. adj. [antique, Fr. antiquis, Lat. It was formerly pronounced according to the English analogy, with the accent on the first syllable; but now after the French, with the accent on the last, at least in prose; the poets use it variously.]

1. Ancient; old; not modern.

Now, good Cesarfo, but that piece of song;
That old and antique song we heard last night. Shakespeare.

Such truth in love as th' antique world did know.
In such a style as courts might be boast of now. Wallow.

2. Of genuine antiquity.

Thefe are the sole remains of Julius Caesar, which we know to be antique, have the sign of Venus over them. Dryden.

My copper lampas, at any rate,
For being true antique I bought;
Yet wisely melted down my plate,
On modern models to be wrought;
And trifles I alike pursue,
Because they're old, because they're new. Prior.

3. Of false antiquity.

Forth came that ancient lord and aged queen,
Array'd in antique robes down to the ground, And had habitiments right well befit: Fairy Queen. Must he no more divert the roues' mirth?
Not sparkling thoughts in antique words convey?
Smith in the History of Philosophy.

4. Odd; wild; antick.

Name not these living death-heads unto me; For these are not ancient heads be. Dryden.

And foone may a gulling weather-fit,
By drawing forth heav'n's scheme, tell certainly What fashion'd hats, or ruffs, or farts, next year Our giddy-headed antique you' ll wear. Dryden.

An antiquity; a remain of ancient times; an antique rarity.

I came to Edward, now earl of Oxford, my feal of Julius Caesar; as also another set, suppos'd to be a many ancient; both very choice antiques, and set in gold. Swift.

ANTIQUENESS. n. f. [from antique.] The quality of being antique; an appearance of antiquity.

We may discover something venerable in the antiques of the world; for we must for the design of the antique. Addison.

ANTIQUITY. n. f. [antiquitats, Lat.]

1. Old times; time past long ago.

I mention Aristotle, Polybius, and Cicero, the greatest philosophers, the most impartial historians, and the most confusant rhetoricians, of all antiquities. Addison.

2. The people of old times; the ancients.

That such pillars were raised by Seth, all antiquity has avowed. Raleigh.

3. The works or remains of old times.

For the observation of Machiavel, traducing Gregory the Great, that he did what in him he lay to extinguish all heathen antiquities, I do not find that those walls long ago; as it appeared in the deception of Sabinius, who did revive the former antiquities. Bacon.

4. Old age; a ludicrous feme.

If not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit fingle? and every part about you blighted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Shakespeare.

5. Ancientness; as, this ring is valuable for its antiquity.

ANTISKILL. n. f. It has no fagular. [from any and vassal.]

In geography, the people who inhabit on different sides of the equator, who consequently at noon have their shadows projected opposite ways. Thus the people of the north are aan tic to the south of them; the one projecting their shadows at noon toward the north pole, and the other toward the south pole.

ANTICORBUTIC. adj. [from any, against, and forguttum, the scurvy.] Good against the scurvy.

The warm antiscorbutical plants, in quantities, will occasion the shrinking blood, and corrupt the blood. Arkwright.

ANTICORBU' TIC. adj. [from any, against, and forguttum, the scurvy.] Good against the scurvy.

The warm antiscorbutical plants, in quantities, will occasion the shrinking blood, and corrupt the blood. Arkwright.

ANTISPADIS. n. f. [from any, against, and spadum, to draw.] The revolution of any humour into another part.

ANTISPSADI' MOCK. adj. [from any, against, and spadum, the ramp.] That which has the power of relieving the cramps.

ANTISPA'STIC. adj. [from any, and spastis, the cramp.] Medicines which cause a revolution of the humours.

ANTISPLIE'TIC. adj. [from any and spastis.] Efficacous in diseases of the spleen.

ANTISTRUMAT'TIC. adj. [from any, and struma, a scrophulous swelling.] Good against the king's evil.

I prescribed him a distilled milk, with antistruma, and pursed him. W. S. J.

ANTI'THESIS. n. f. in the plural antithesia, [from any, placing in opposition.] Opposition of words or sentiments; contrast; as in these lines:

Though gentle, yet not dull; Strong without rage; without outwelling, full. Denham.

I see a chief, who leads my chosen sons. All arm'd with points, antithesia, and purses. Pope.

ANTI'TYPE. n. f. [antithetos, Gr.] That which is resembled or shadowed out by the type; that of which the type is the representation. It is a term of theology. See Type.

When once upon the wing, he soars to an higher pitch, from the type to the antitype, to the dominion of our Saviour, and, at length, to his kingdom and dominion over all the earth.

Burton's Theory.

He brought forth bread and wine, and was the priest of the most high God; imitating the antitype, or the substance, Christ himself. Taylor.

ANTITYP'I CAL. adj. [from antitype.]

That which relates to an antitype; that which explains the type.

ANTI'VE Na'REAL. adj. [from any, and ne'er, ever.] Good against the venereal disease.

If the lies be joined with it, you will scarce cure your patient without exhibiting antivenereal remedies. W. S. J.

ANTIEI'ER. n. f. [endecusilier, Fr.] Properly the first branches of a flag's horns; but, popularly and generally, any of his branches.

Grown old, they grew less branched, and first lost their brown antlers, or lower ramifications next to the head. Cotton.

A well-grown flag, whose antlers rise High over his front, his beams invade the skies. Dryden.

Bright Diana
Brought hunted wild goats heads, and branching antlers
Of flags, the fruit and honour of her toil. Prior.

ANTOE'CI. n. f. It has no fagular. [Lat. from any, and to, to inhabit.] In geography, those inhabitants of the earth who live under the same meridian, and at the same distance from the equator; the one toward the north, and the other to the south. Hence they have the same longitude, and their latitude is also the same, but of a different denomination. They are in the same semicircle of the meridian, but opposite parallels. They have precisely the same hours of the day and night, but opposite seasons; and the night of the one is always equal to the day of the other. Chambers.

ANTONOMACIA. n. f. [from any, and ouch, a name.] A form of speech, in which, for a proper name, is put the name of some dignitary, office, profession. fellow, or creature; or when a proper name is put in the room of an appellation. Thus a king is called his majesty; a nobleman, his lordship. We say the philosopher instead of Aristotle, and the orator for Cicero: thus a man is called by the name of his country, a German, an Italian; and a grave man is called a Cato, and a wife man a Solumon. Smith's Rhetoric.
ANXIOUS. adj. [anxius, Lat.] 1. Disturbed about some uncertain event; solicitous; being in painful suspense; painfully uncertain.

2. Careful; full of inquietude; unquiet.

3. Careful, as of a thing of great importance.

4. It has generally or before about the object, but sometimes of; I see properly.

ANXIOUSLY, adv. [anxiously] In an anxious manner; solicitously; carefully; with painful uncertainty.

ACT, v. t. to perform or things.

ANY adj. [ang, eng, Sax.] 1. Every; whoever he be; whatever it be.

2. In all its forms, applied indifferently to persons or things.

APE, n. f. [apart, Fr., apartem, Lat.] A part of the house allotted to the use of any particular person; a room; a set of rooms.

APARTMENT, n. f. [apartment, Fr.] A part of the house allotted to the use of any particular person; a room; a set of rooms.

A P E

3. Diftinguished by the first manner heaven and earth, put away waters but in the third place, as comprehending waters in the word earth; but afterwards be name them apart.

4. At a distance; retired from the other company.

So please you, madam, To put apart the great and little.

APARTMENT, n. f. [apartment, Fr.] A part of the house allotted to the use of any particular person; a room; a set of rooms.

A private gallery 'twixt the apartments lay, Not to the fire yet known. Sir J. Denman.

His seat as death, the seat of the departed. Dryden.

Into the queen's apartment takes his way. Dryden.

The most considerable ruin is that on the eastern promontory, where are still some apartments left very high, and arched at top. Addison.

A PATHY, n. f. [a, not, and ã<sup>3</sup>, feeling.] The quality of not feeling; exemption from passion; freedom from mental perturbation.

Of good and evil much they argued then, Passion, and apathy, and glory, and shame. Milton.

To remain insensible of such provocations, is not conffancy, but apathy. South.

In lazy apathy let Stockes boat with his fixed as in frowst. Cowper.

But strength of mind is exercis'd, not Pope.

APART, v. a. [from ape.] To imitate, as an ape imitates human actions.

Apeing the features in every shape, Which, bought at greater cost, becomes him less. Dryden.

Curse on the stirr'ling! how he ape's his feet. Oxenford.

Ambitiously sententious! Addison.

A P E A K, or A P E E K, adv. [probably from a pique.] In a posture to pierce; formed with a point.

A P E S Y, n. f. [apessia.] A lobs of natural concoction.

A P E R, n. f. [from ape.] A ridiculous imitator or mimic.

A P E R I E N T, adj. [aperis, Lat. to open.] That which has the quality of opening; chiefly used of medicines gently purgative.

There be bracelets fit to confort the spirits; and they be of three intentions; refrigerant, corroborant, and aperient. Bagford.

Of the items of plants, some contain a new aperient, and are diuretic and soporific. Arbuthnot.
APE•R•TIVE. adj. [from aperire, Lat. to open.] That which has the quality of opening the excrementitious passages of the body.

They may make both, with the addition of other hairs.

APE•R•TIVE. adj. [aperitus, Lat.] Open.

APE•R•TIVE. n. f. [from aperitus, Lat.]

1. An opening; a passage through any thing; a GAP.

The next in order are the aperiturs; under which term I do comprehend doors, windows, raincoats, chimneys, or other conduits: in short, all these or outlets.

2. The act of opening; or state of being opened.

The plenteous of vellum, otherwise called the mellers, when it happens, causeth an extravasation of blood, either by rupture or aperitum of them.

APE•RT•LY. adv. [aperit, Lat.] Openly; without covert.

APE•RT•NESS. n. f. [from aperit, Lat.] Openness.

The freedom, or aperitum, and vigour of pronouncing, and the cloveness of muffling, and slaines of speaking, render the found divine.

APE•R•TURE. n. f. [from aperitus, open.]

1. The act of opening.

Hence all the facility of joining a companion to a vessel, because from an apocryphal to an aperitum is easier than from one apocryphal to another.

2. An open place.

If memory be made by the sly motion of the fingers through the opened passages, images, without our doubt, pass through the same aperture.

APE•R•T•L•OUS. adj. (of a priv. and extens., a leaf.) Without petals or flower leaves.

APE•R•T•L•O•US•NESS. n. f. [from apertalonus.] Being without leaves.

APEX. n. f. aperit, plur. [Lat.] The tip or point of anything.

The apex, or letter end of it, is broken off.

APHÆ•RESIS. n. f. [αφορέως.] A figure in grammar, that takes away a letter or syllable from the beginning of a word.

APHÆ•LION. n. f. aphasis, plur. [from aphas, and λίον, the lion.] That part of the orbit of a planet, in which it is at the point remotest from the sun.

The reason why the comets move not in the zodiac is, that, in their aphasis, they may be at the greatest distances from one another; and consequently disturb one another's motions the least that may be.

APH•I•TA. n. f. [with αφρολόγες.] The name of the planet, which is imagined to be the giver or disposer of life in a nativity.

DiR.

APHETICAL. adj. [from aphasis.] Relating to the aphasis.

APHILANTHO•P•Y. n. f. [αφιλανθος, without, and αφιλανθικος, love of mankind.] Want of love of mankind.

APHONY. n. f. [αφωνιος, without, and ωνις, speech.] A loss of speech.

APHORIS•M. n. f. [αφορισμός.] A maxim; a precept contracted in a short sentence; an unconnected position.

He will not differ from the truth of there is in the medicine, and, though sometimes they are clustered with that aphorism, will hardly believe the voice of the propo. to be the voice of God.

Hippocrates' Aphorism Errors.

I shall at present consider the aphorism, that a man of religion and virtue is a more useful, and consequently a more valuable, member of a community.

APHORIST•ICALLY. adv. [from aphorism.] In the form of an aphorism; in separate and unconnected sentences.

APHORIST•IC•AL. adj. [from aphorism.] In the form of an aphorism.

These being carried down, feldon mires a cure, as Hippocrates doth hereby aphoristically tell us.

APHRODISI•AC. adj. [from Aphrodis.] Aphrodisiac.

APHRODISI•ACK. n. f. [Venus.] Relating to the venereal desire.

AP'IA•RY. n. f. [from aper, Lat. a bee.] The place where bees are kept.

Those who are killed in bees, when they see a foreign swarm approaching to plunder their hives, have a trick to drive them into some neighbouring apiary, there to make what havoc they please.

APICES of a flower. [Lat. from apex, the top.] Little knobs that grow on the tops of the stamens, in the middle of a flower. They are commonly of a dark purplish colour. By the microscope they have been discovered, but are of such fariae and females, or feed vessels, containing in them small globular, and often oval particles, of various colours, and exquisitely formed.

API•ES. adv. [from a for, and pieces, or thrane. To the part or share of each.

Men, in whose mouths at first nothing but mortification, were come to think that they might lawfully have fix or fever wives apices.

I have to-night dispatched fifteen business, a month's length apices, by an abridgment of secrets.

One copy of this paper may serve a dozen of you, which will be less than a farthing apices.

API•ES. adj. [from ape.] To have the qualities of an ape; imitative.

1. Report of fashions in proud Italy.

Whole manner fill our lady's ape nation Links after, in base awkward imitation. Skythian.

2. Foppish; affected.

Because I cannot flatter, and ask fair,

Drink with French mud, and appo courtsy,

I must be held a sanguine enemy.

Colloquial.

Silly; trifling; insignificant.

All this is but apes savoury; and, to give it a name divine and excellent, is abusive and unjust.

Glovisil.
When a cut rises near the orifice of the artery, it is formed by the apoplexy that runs over the vein, which becomes excessively expanded.

APOPHEGIS. n. s. [apologetic.] Demonstration.

APOPHEGEMS. n. s. [from 4, from, and apoge.] A point in the heavens, in which the sun, or a planet, is at the greatest distance possible from the earth in its whole revolution. The ancient astronomers regarding the earth as the centre of the system, chiefly regarded the apogee and perigee, which the moderns, making the sun the centre, change for the aphelion and perihelion. Chambers.

The sin is in his apogee placed, and when it moveth next, must needs deflect. Fairfax.

It is yet not agreed in what time, precisely, the apogee abhorseth one degree. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

APOPOGONTAL. adj. [from apollogental.] To Apologize. [adj. [from apollogental.]

APOLOGIZE. v. n. [from apologetic.] To plead in favour of any person or thing. It will be much more reasonable to reform than apologist or rhenocheat; and therefore it imports those, who dwell fictitious, to look to the subject of Apologies.

APOLOGICAL. adj. [from apollogical.] To Apologize. [adj.]

APOLOGIST. n. [from To Apologize.] He that makes an apology; a pleader in favour of another.

To Apologize. v. n. [from apology.]

1. To plead in favour of any person or thing.

2. It has the particle for before the subject of apology.

I sought to apologize for my indiscretion in the whole understanding. White's Preparation for Death.

The translation needs not apologize for his choice of this piece, which was made in his childhood. Pope's Preface to Stater.

APOLOGY. n. s. [apologia, Lat. apologia.] I. Defence; excuse. Apology generally signifies rather excuse than vindication, and tends rather to extinguish the fault, than prove innocence. This is, however, sometimes unattended by writers. In her face excuse came prologue, and apology too prompt; Which with bland words at will thus address'd:

APOLOGY. n. s. [apologia, Lat. apologia.]

1. Defence; excuse. Apology generally signifies rather excuse than vindication, and tends rather to extinguish the fault, than prove innocence. This is, however, sometimes unattended by writers. In her face excuse came prologue, and apology too prompt; Which with bland words at will thus address'd:

APOLOGY. n. s. [apologia, Lat. apologia.]

The art of measuring things at a distance. Dict. APONECROSTMETRY. n. s. [from, from, and \(\mu\) \(\nu\) \(\i\) \(\nu\), a nerve.] An expansion of a nerve into a membrane.
The quality of relating to the apotles; apostolical authority.

Apostolick, adj. [from apollick.]

Apostasize, v. n. [from apostasize.]

Apostatize, v. n. [from apostatize.]
The manner of an apostate.

To wear turbans is an apostatical conformity.

To forsake one's profession: it is commonly used of one who departs from his religion.

None revolt from the faith, because they must not look upon a woman to fulfil her, but because they are offended at the perpetration of the faults. If wanton glance, and blithful thoughts, had been permitted by the gospel, they would have apostatized nevertheless.

Apostatize, v. n. [from apostatize.]
The formation of an apostate; the hollowing of a purulent tumour.

Nothing can be more admirable than the many ways nature hath provided for preventing, or curing of fevers; as, vomiting, apothemations, salves,

Apostome, n.s. [ἀπωστόμενον.] A hollow

The apotome, or swelling, filled with purulent matter; an abcess.

With equal propriety we may affirm, that ulcers of the lungs, or apostomes of the brain, do happen only in the left side. Brown's Vulgar Errors. The opening of apostomes, before the suppuration be perfected, weaketh the heat, and renders it vulnerable.

Apostole, n.s. [ἀποστόλος. Latin. ἀποστάλω.] A person sent with mandates or another.

It is particularly applied to them, whom our Saviour deputed to preach the gospel.

But all his mind is bent to holiness; his champion are the prophets and apostles. Shakespeare.

I am far from pretending infallibility; that would be to erect myself into an apostle: a pretence in any one that cannot confirm what he says by miracles.

We know but a small part of the notion of an apostle, by knowing barely that he is sent forth.

Apostleship, n.s. [from apostleship.]
The office or dignity of an apostle.

Where, because faith is in too low degree, I thought I might compose this in me.

To speak things, which by faith alone I see. Dean.

God had ordered it, that St. Paul hath writ epithet; which are all confined within the bounds of his apostleship, and so contain nothing but points of Christian instruction.

Hence.

Apostolical, adj. [from apostolick.]
Delivered or taught by the apostles; belonging to the apostles.

They acknowledge not, that the church keeps any thing as apostolical, which is not found in the apostles' writings, in what other records forever it be found.

 Declare yourself for that church which is founded upon scripture, reason, apostolical practice, and antient history.

Hence.

Apostolically, adv. [from apostolick.]

Apostolicalness, n.s. [from apostolick.]

Apostolick, adj. [from apollick.]

The accent is placed by Dryden on the antepenult. Taught by the apostles; belonging to an apostle.

Their oppositions in maintenance of public superstition against apostolick endeavours, were vain and frivolous.

Or where did I at first tradition strike.

Provided fill it were apostolick?

Apostrophize, v. n. [from apostrophize.]

To address by an apostrophe.

There is a peculiarity in Homer's manner of apostrophizing Eumaeus, and speaking of him in the second person: it is generally applied only to men accosting their gods.

Apostome, n.s. See Apostome. [This word is properly apostom.] A hollow tumour filled with purulent matter.

How an apostome in the mediastyn, breaking, causes a consumption in the parts, is apparent.

Harvey.

To Apostome, v. n. [from apostome.] To apostomate.

Apothecary, n.s. [apotheca, Lat. a repository.] A man whose employment is to keep medicines for sale.

Give men the things of the spirit; give one that is good apostochies; to sweeten my imagination.

Shakespeare.

They have no other doctor but the sun and the fresh air, and that such an one, as never sends them to the apothecary.

Swift.

Wandering in the dark, Physicians, for the tree, have found the balsam;

They, labring for relief of human kind,

With shallow root, some remedies may find;

Th' apothecary searchs the deeps of Dryden.

Apothegm, n.s. [properly apothegmen; which see.] A remarkable saying.

By frequent conversing with him, and lamenting short apothegms, and little pleasant stories, and making useful applications of them, his son was, in his infancy, taught to avoid vanity and vice as monsters.

Witlen's Life of Swift.

Aposthesia, n.s. [ἀπωσπάσις.] Deferation; the rite of adding any one to the number of gods.

As if it could be grave and painted omnipotent, or the nails and the hammer could give it的能力.

Swift.

Allots the prince of his celestial line

An apothegm, and rites divine.

Garth.

Apostome, n.s. [from apostome, to cut off.]

1. In mathematicks, the remainder or difference of two incommeasurable quantities.

2. In music, it is the part remaining of an entire tone, after a greater semitone has been taken from it. The proportion in numbers of the apotome, is that of 2048 to 2187. The Greeks thought that the greater tone could not be divided into two equal parts; for which reason they called the first part απόστειξις, and the other γνωσις. Chambers.

Apostem, n.s. [από, from, and γνωσις, to boil.] A decoction; an infusion made by boiling ingredients.

During this evacuation, he took opening broths and apotomics. Wiseman's Surgery.

Squirts read Garth till apotomies grow cold. Gay.

To Appal: v. a. [appall, Fr. It might more properly have been written appale.] To fright; to strike with sudden fear; to depress; to discourage.

Whist the fable, her great words did appall my tender courage, and my heart appalled. That yet I quame and tremble over all. Fairy Queen.

Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,

Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appall'd air

May pierce the head of thy great conqueror. Shakespeare.

The house of peers was somewhat appalled at this alarm; but took time to consider of it till next day.

Clarendon.

Does neither rage infame, nor fear appal.

Nor the black fear of death that faddens all? Pope.

The monarch curs'd His flaming cress, all other thing appal'd,

Or fliv'ring flies, or chok'd at distance stands. Thomson.

Appallment, n.s. [from appall.] Deception; discouragement; imprefion of fear.

As the furious laughter of them was a great discouragement and appallment to the rest. Bacon's Henry VII.

Apanage, n.s. [appanagium, low Latin; probably from pannis, bread.] Lands set apart by princes for the maintenance of their younger children.

He became tutor for the edification of Chefter, a kind of appanage to Wales, and us'd to go to the king's son. Bacon.

Had he thought it fit

That wealth should be the appanage of wise,

The God of light could 'er no be sophists,

To deal it to the word of human kind. Swift.

Apanageus, n.s. [Latin.] Things provided as means to any certain end, as the tools of a trade; the furniture of a house; ammunition for war; equipage; show.

There is an apparatus of things previous to be adjusted, before I come to the calculation itself. Woodwards.

Ourselves are easily provided for in nothing, but the circumstantial, the apparatus or equipage of human life, that costs so much.

Pope's Letters to Gay.

Apparel, n.s. It has no plural. [ appareil, Fr.]

1. Dress; vesture.

2. External habitation.

Our lace burnt Londin, in apparel new,

Shook off their siles to have treated you. Waller.

At publick devotions, his regal carriage made religion
APP

APP

To APPAREL, a. a. [from apparel, the nature of cloth.]

1. To dress; to clothe. With such robes were the King's daughters that were virgin apparelled. 2 Sum. xii. 18.
Both combatants were apparelled only in their doublets and hose. Hayward.

2. To adorn with dress. She did apparel her apparel, and with the pre- varicances of her body made it most fopustous. Sidney.

3. To cover, or deck, as with dress. They may have trees apparelled with flowers, by boring into them, and putting them in them, and setting feet of violets. Bacon.

4. To fit out; to furnish: not in use. It hath been agreed, that either of them should fend ships to feed well manned and apparelled to fight. Sir J. Hayward.

APPARENTLY, adv. [from apparent, Lat.]

1. Plain; indubitable; not doubtful.
The main principles of reason are in themselves apparent. For to make nothing evident of itself unto man's understanding, were to take away all possibility of knowing anything. Hook.

2. Seeming; in appearance; not real.
The perception intelligible only corrects the report of phantasm, as in the apparent brightness of the sun, the apparent crookedness of the fluid in air and water. Hall's Origin of Kindred.

3. Visible; in opposition to secret.
What secret imaginations we entertained is known to God; this it is apparent, that we have not behaved ourselves, as if we preferred a grateful remembrance of his mercies. Sir H. Wotton.
The outward and apparent sanctity of actions should flow from purity of heart. Rogers.

4. Open; evident; known; not merely suspected.
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent, In my opinion ought to be prevented. Shakespeare's Richard III.

5. Certain; not prepuftive.
He is the next of blood And heir apparent to the British crown. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

APPARENT, n. s. Elliptically used for heir apparent.

APPARENTLY, adv. [from apparent.

Evidently; openly.

Arrest him, officer; I would not spare my brother in this case, If he should come to me apparently. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

APPARITION, n. s. [from appare, Lat.]

My retirement tempted me to divert those melancholy thoughts which the new apparitions of foreign invasion and domestic difficulties gave us. Dryden.

2. The thing appearing; a form; a visible object. I have mark'd A thousand blushing apparitions To dart into her face; a thousand innocent flames In angel whiteness bear away those blusht. Stan.

A glorious apparition I had doubts, And carnal fear, that day dimm'd Adam's eyes. Milton.

Any thing besides may take from me the force of what appeared; which apparition, in form was you.

3. A spectre; a walking spirit. Horatio says 'tis but our phantasy, Touching this drearied sight twice seen of us; Therefore I have not receiv'd the sight. That if again this apparition come, He may appoyse our eyes, and speak to it. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Tender minds should not receive only impressions of goldsins, fpectres, and apparitions, with no- withs, fright them into compliance. Locke.

One of those apparitions had his right hand filled with blood, which he brandish'd in the face of all who came up that way. Tailor.

4. Something only apparent, not real.
Still there's something That checks my joyes—Nor can I yet distinguish Which is an apparition, this or that. Dryden.

5. Astronomically, the visibility of some luminous, opposed to occultation. A month of apparition is the space wherein the moon appeareth, deducting three days wherein it commonly disappeareth; and this contenableness but twenty-six days and twelve hours. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

APPARITORS, n. s. [from appar. Lat.]

To be at hand.

1. Such perсов as are at hand to execute the proper orders of the magistrate or judge of any court of judicature. Aylyst.

2. The lowest officer of the ecclesiastical court; a summner. They showed all the Roman hierarchy, from the pope to the aylyst. Aylyst's Parergon.

To APPAY. w. a. [appayer, old Fr. to fa- tify.

1. To satisfy; to content: whence well appayed, is pleased; ill appayed, is uneasy. It is now obsolete.

How well appayed she was her bird to find!

I am well appayed that you had rather believe, than take the pain of a long pilgrimage. Camden.

So only can high justice reft appayed. Milton.

2. The fenior is obsolete in these times.
Ay, Willy, when the heart is ill appayed, How can baggage any way be well appayed? Spenser.

To APPEACH. w. a.

1. To accuse; to inform against any person.
He did, amongst many others, accuse Sir Will. Stanley, the lord chamberlain. Bacon's Henry VII.

Were he twenty years. My son, I would appach him. Shakespeare's Rich. II.

Diclofe

The state of your affection; for your passions Have to the full appached. Shakespeare.

2. To censure; to reproach; to taint with accu- cation.
For when Cymochles saw the foul reproach, Which them appeach'd great guilties with guilty shame, And inward grief, he fiercely gen appach. Reviews to suffer the passion. Petr. Q.

Nor can, nor dunt thou, traitor, on thy pain, Approach my honour, or thine own main. Dryden.

APPEACHMENT, n. s. [from appach.]

Charge exhibited against any man; accusation.
A busby-headed man gave first light to this appachement; but the eart did avouch it. Hayward.
The duke's answers to his appachements, in number thirteen, I find civilly voided. Wotton.

To APPEAL. w. n. [appeal, Lat.]

1. To transfer a cause from one to another; with the parties to and from. From the ordinary therefore they上诉 to the courts. Haw.

2. To refer to another as judge. Force, or a declared sign of force, upon the person of another, where there is no common superior on earth to appeal to for relief, is the state of war; and it is the want of such an appeal gives a man the right of war, even against an aggressor, though he be in society, and a fellow-subject. Locke.

They knew no foe, but in the open field And to their cause and to the gods appeal'd. Spenser.

3. To call another as witness.
Whether this, that the soul always thinks, be a self-evident proposition, I appeal to mankind. Locke.

4. To charge with a crime; to accuse; a term of law.
One but flatters us, As well appareth by the cause you come, Namely, to appeal each other of high treason. Shakespeare.

APPÆAL, n. s. [from the verb To appeal.]

1. An appeal is a provocation from an inferior to a superior judge, whereby the jurisdiction of the inferior judge is, for a while suspended, in respect of the cause; the cognizance being devolved to the superior judge. Aylyst's Parergon.

This ring Deliver them, and your appeal to us. There make before them. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

Our reason prompts us to a future date. The last appeal from fortune and from fate, Where God's all-righteous ways will be declar'd. Dryden.

There are distributors of justice, from whom there lies an appeal to the prince. Addison.

2. In the common law.
An accusation which is a lawful declaration of another man's crime before a competent judge, by one that feits his name to the declaration, and undertakes to prove it, upon the penalty that may ensue of the contrary; more commonly used for the private accusation of a murderer, by a free person, who had interest in the punishment, and of any felon, by one of his accomplices in the fact. Grotius.

The duke's unjust, Thys to reture your accustome, And put your trial in the villain's mouth. Which here you come to accuse. Shakespeare, Hast thou, according to thy oath and bond, Brought blither Henry Hereford, thy bold son; Here to make good the built upon late appeal Against the duke of Norfolk? Shakespeare.

3. A fummons to answer a charge.
Nor shall the sacred character of king Be urg'd to shield me from thy bold appeal; If he have injur'd thee that makes us equal. Dryden.

4. A call upon any as witness.
The casting up of the eyes, and lifting up of the hands, is a kind of appeal to the Deity, the author of wonders. Bacon.

APPEALANT, n. s. [from appeal.]
He that appeals. Lords appealers,
Your diff'rences shall all rest under peace,
Till we allign you to your days of trial. Shakespeare.

APPEALEER, n. s. [from appeal.]
One who makes an appeal.

To APPEAR, w. n. [appeare, Lat.]

1. To be in sight; to be visible.
As the legibly appared in the skin, the fifth. Lat. xxx. 43.

And half her knee and half her breast appear'd. By art, as negligence, diction'd and bare. Prior.

2. To
APP

2. To become visible as a spirit.
   For when [appears] unto them for this purpose, to make thee a minister of a witness. Acts, xxvi. 16.

3. To stand in the presence of another, generally used of standing before some superiour; to offer himself to the judgment of a tribunal.
   When Saul I come and appear before God? 1 Sam. viii. 2.

4. To be the object of observation.
   Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children. Psalm, xc. 16.

5. To exhibit one's self before a court of justice.
   Keep comfort to you, and this morning fee ye do appear before them. Shall. Hen. VIII.

6. To be made clear by evidence.
   Egfrid did utterly waste and subdue him, as appears out of Beda's complaint against him; and Edgar brought it under his obedience, as appears by an ancient record.

7. To feem, in opposition to reality.
   His spirit and principal care being to appear unto his people, such as he would have them be, and to be such as he appeared. Sidney.

My noble matter will appear such as he is, full of regard and honour. Shall. Hen. VIII.

8. To be plain beyond dispute.
   From experiments, useful indications may be taken, as will appear by what follows. Act. Bost. Tom. I.

A. To appear from To As, To As.

1. The act of coming into fight; as, they were surprised by the sudden appearance of the enemy.

2. The thing seen; as, the remarkable appearances in the sky.

3. Phenomena; that quality of any thing which is visible.
   The advancing day of experimental knowledge doth unfold such appearances, as will not lie even in any virtue which can Glasseville's Scotch.

4. Semblance; not reality.
   He encrusted in estimation, whether by destiny, or whether by his virtues, or at least by his appearances of virtues. Hayward.

5. Phenomenon; supernatural visibility.
   I think a person terrified with the imagination of spectres, more reasonable than one who thinks the appearance of spirits fabulous. Addison.

6. Exhibition of the person to a court.
   I will not even more.

Upon this business my appearance make. In any of their courts. Shall. Hen. VIII.

7. Appearance; supernatural visibility.
   I think a person terrified with the imagination of spectres, more reasonable than one who thinks the appearance of spirits fabulous. Addison.

8. Exhibition of the person to a court.
   I will not even more.

Upon this business my appearance make. In any of their courts. Shall. Hen. VIII.

   Or grant her pallion be sincere.
   How shall she pronounce be clear? Appearance were all so false.

The world must think him in the wrong. Swift.

10. Presence; min.
   Health, wealth, victory, and honor, are introduced without the left, and so evinces their presence, that he gives himself up to her. Addison.

11. Probability; seeming; likelihood.
   There is that which hath no appearance, that this print being utterly unaccompanied with the true person, according to whose person he should

APP

APPEAL. n. f. [appeal, Lat.]
On the side and names are either common or proper. Common names are such as stand for universal ideas, or a whole rank of beings, whether general or special. These are called appellations. So bird, man, man, city, river, are common names; and horses, cats, oaks, beeches; for they all agree to many individuals, and some to many species.

APPELLATIVELY. adv. [from appellative.]
According to the manner of nouns appellative; as, this man is a temple. Hence it is used appellatively, to signify a strong man.

APPELLATIVE. adj. [from appellative.]
That which contains an appeal. See Appellate.

APPELLATE, n. f. [from appeal.]
One who is appealed against, and accused. Dia. To APPEND. v. a. [appendus, Lat. to hang to any thing.]

1. To hang any thing upon another; as, the inscription was appended to the column: the seal is appended to the record.

2. To add to something, as an accedency, not a principal part.

APPENDAGE. n. f. [French.]
Something added to another thing, without being necessary to its essence, as a portico to the house.

Modesty is the appendage of sobriety, and is to chastity, to temperance, and to humility, as the fringe is to a garment.

None of the laws of motion now established, will serve to account for the production, motion, or number of bodies, nor their appendages, though they may help us a little to conceive their appearance and actions.

He was so far from valuing any of the appendages of life, that the thoughts of life did not affect him. Addison.

APPENDANT. adj. [French.]
1. Hanging to something else.

2. Belonging to; annexed; concomitant.

He that despises the world, and all its appendant vanities, is the most secure. Taylor.

He that looks for the blessings appendant to the fountain, must measure them upon no terms, but of a worthy commendation. Taylor.

Riches multiplied beyond the proportion of our character, and the wants appendant to it, naturally deters us from forgetting God. Reger.

3. In law.
   Appendant is any thing belonging to another, as accissorium principalis, with the civilian, or adscriptum subjectum, with the logians. An applicant may be appendant to a man; a common fishing appendant to a freeholder. Cowl.

APPENDANT. n. f. That which belongs to another thing, as an accidental or adventitious part.

Pliny gives an account of the inventors of the forms and appendants of things. Hall's Origin of Mankind.

A word, a look, a tread, will strike, as they are appendants to external symmetry, or indications of the beauty of the mind. Gros.

To APPENDICATE. v. a. [appendus, Lat.]
To add to another thing.

In a palace there is a cafe or fabric of the structure, and there are certain adscriptums, as various furniture, and curious motions of divers things appendicated to it. Hall.

APPENDICATION. n. f. [from appendicatory.]
Adjunct; appendage; annexation.

There are considerable parts and integrations, and appendications unto the manus appendicabilis, impellable to be eternal. Hall.

APPENDIX.
APP

APPENDIX, n.s. [appendices, pl. Lat.] 1. Something appended, or added, to another thing. The cherubim were never intended as an object only, because they are only the appendages of another thing. But a thing is then proposed as an object of worship, when it is set up by itself, and not by way of addition or ornament to another thing. Normandy became an appendix to England, the nobler dominion, and received a greater conformity of their laws to the English, than they gave to it. The Civil Law of England.
2. An adjournment or concomitant. All concurrent appendices of the action ought to be surveyed, in order to pronounce with truth concerning it. Watts.

APPERTAIN, n.s. [appertain, Fr.] 1. To belong to as of right: with is. The honour of deriving this doctrine, that religion ought to be inforced by the word, would be found appertaining to Mahomet the false prophet. Ralston.
2. To belong to by nature or appointment. If the soul of man did serve only to give him being in this life, then things appertaining to this life would content him, as we see they do other creatures. Hobb. And they rushed the preserver with fire, as appertaining to them for the Cure to, they find them in their pots. Shakespeare. Both of them seem not to generate any other effects, but such as appertain to their proper objects and fenders. Dryden. Is it expected, I should know no secrets that appertain to you? Shakespeare. Julius Caesar.

APPERTAINMENT, n.s. [from appertain.] That which belongs to any rank or dignity. The heir of our meffengers, and we lay by our appendaments, visiting of him. Shakespeare.

APPETENANCE, n.s. [appetenance, Fr.] That which belongs or relates to another thing. Can they which beheld the controversy of divinity concern our enquiries in the doubtful appertenance of arts, and received the philosophy of Brown's Pulver Enrouta.

APPETENT, adj. [from To appertain.] Belonging; relating. You know how apt our love was to accord To his desires, and appertain to his honour. Belonging to his honour. Shakespeare.

APPETENCE, n.s. [appetitia, Lat.] Carnal desire; sensual desire.

APPETENCY, n.s. [appetible.] The quality of being definable. That elicitation which the schools intend, is a definable of the conclusion of the whole syllogism, merely from the appertaining of the object, as a man draws a child after him with the fight of a green bough. Bramhall against Hobbes.

APPETIBLE, adj. [appetibilia, Lat.] Definable; that which may be the object of appetite, as those both to flight the most appetible objects, and to controil the most unruly passions. Bramhall against Hobbes.

APPETITE, n.s. [appetitum, Lat.] 1. The natural desire of good; the instinct by which we are led to seek pleasure. The wild properly and strictly taken, is as it were a root attached to the end that man daintier, differeth greatly from that infernial natural desire, which we call appetite. The object of appetite is, whatever sensible good may be wished for; the object of will is that good which reason does lead us to seek. Hocker.
2. The desire of sensual pleasure. Why, he would hang on him, as if increase of appetite had grown. By what it is fed. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

Apple. Urge his hateful luxury, and bellissi appetite in change of lust. Shakespeare's Richard III. Each tree Loden with fairest fruit, that hung to th' eye Tempting, firth'd in me beaten appetite To plague and eat. Merry's Parlioff Life.
3. Violent longing; eagerness after any thing. No man could enjoy his life, his wife, or goods, if a mighty man had an appetite to take the fame from him. Davies. Hesper had an extraordinary appetite to engage Walker in a battle.
4. Power being the natural appetite of princes, a limited monarch cannot gratify it. Earby.
5. Cumber of, stomach; hunger, desire of food. There be four principal causes of appetite; the refrigeration of the stomach, joined with some dryness; contraction, vellication, and abstinence; besides hunger, which is an appetite to eat. Bacon's Natural History.
There is continual abundance, which create such an appetite in your master, that he is not obeyed with any thing, but satisfied with all. Dryden.
6. It has sometimes of before the object of desire.
The new officer's nature needed some restraint to his immoderate appetite of power. Clarendon.

APPETITION, n.s. [appetitio, Lat.] Desire. The actual appetite or satisfaction of appetite in him. Hammond's Practical Catechism.
We find in animals an effeminate or judicial faculty, an appetite called Taure. Siddons.
APPETITIVE, adj. [from appetite.] That which desires, that which has the quality of desiring.
The will is not a bare appetitive power, as that of the sensual appetiter, but is a rational appetite.
I find in myself an appetitive faculty always in exercise, in the very height of activity and invigoration. Milton.

To APPLAUD, n.s. [applaudo, Lat.] 1. To praise by clapping the hand. I would applaud thee to the very echo, That should applaud again. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
2. To praise in general. Nations untern their mighty names shall sound, And worlds applaud that must not yet be found. Pope.

APPLAUNDER, n.s. [from applaud.] He that praises or commends.
I had the voice of my sangle reason against it, crowned in the noise of a multitude of applaudors. Pope's Essay on Man.

APPLAUSE, n.s. [applauso, Lat.] Approbation loudly expressed; praise properly a clap. This general applause, and cheerful shout, Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard. Shakespeare.

Sylla went, And child her barring waves into attention; And fell Charis his muscon'd soft applauso. Milton.
Those that are sou of applaudors, how little do they taste it when they have it! Swift.

APP pLLE, n.s. [applaud, Satir.] 1. The fruit of the apple-tree. Tall thriving trees confect the fruitful mold; The red'ning apple ripens here to gold. Pope's O. 2. The pupil of the eye. He instructed him; he kept him as the apple of his eye. Dryden. v. ii. 10.

APPLE. Apples of love are of three sorts; the most common having long trailing branches, with rough leaves and yellow joints, succeeded by apples, as they are called, at the joints, or not being butched; of a pale orange thinning, and feed, within. Borrow's Hudibras.

APPLE-GRAFT, n.s. [from apple and graft.] A twig of apple-tree grafted upon the flock of another tree. We have seen there and twenty forts of apple graft upon the same old plant, most of them into good trees. Dryden.

APPLE-TART, n.s. [from apple and tart.] A tart made of apples. What, up and down care's like an apple-tart? Shakespeare.

APPLE-TREE, n.s. [from apple and tree.] The fruit of this tree is for the most part holloes, though the fruit itself, and the seeds including the feed are separated by carinaligrous partitions; the juice of the fruit is fourth; the tree large and spreading; the flowers cowl of five leaves, expanding in form of a rosette. There is a great variety of its species. Those for the best are the white juniting, Margaret apple, summer pearmain, summer queenen, embroidered apple, golden reineette, summer white Colville, summer red Colville, silver pipin, aromatik pipin, the gray reineet, haute-bonte, royal ruffeting, Wheeler's ruffeting, Sharp's ruffeting, flase apple, golden pipen, nonpapel, and ruff. Those for the kitchen use are, codding, summer navulpin, summer pearmain, Holland pipin, Kertish pipin, the hanging body, Loan's pearmain, French reineette, French pipin, royal ruffeting, monentie reineette, winter pearmain, bayne, the white, brown-brown, black-brown, the white apple, oaktemple. And those generally used for cider are, Devonshire royal wilding, redbrick apple, the whitan, Herefordshire underleaf, John apple, Cref. and Miller.

Oaks and beeches left longer than apples and pears. Bacon.
Thus apples-tree whose trunks are strong to bear Their sprouting boughs, erect themselves in air.

APPLE-WOMAN, n.s. [from apple and woman.] A woman that sells apples, that keeps fruit on a stall. Yonder are two apple-women scolding, and just ready to uncoll one another. Acti and Pope.

APPLIABLE, adj. [from apply.] That which may be applied. For this word the moderns use applicable; which see. Limitations all these principles have, in regard of the particulars of the matter whereunto they are applicable. Hocker.

All that I have said of the heathen idolatry is applicable to the idolatry of another sort of men in the Romish Church. South.

APPLIANCE, n.s. [from apply.] The act of applying; the thing applied.
Dissectes desperate growths.
By desperate applyers are relieved. Shakespeare.
Are you a rau'd? All: God for your pains, 'tis the apple only Which your define require. Shakespeare.

APPLICABILITY, n.s. [from applicable.] Luc.
APP

The quality of being fitted to be applied to something.

The action of cold is composed of two parts; one prevailing, the other perspiration, which requires applicability.

Applicable, adj. [from apply.] That which may be applied, as properly relating to something.

What he says of the portrait of any particular person, is applicable to pety. In the character, there is a better or worse likeness; the better is a panegyric, and the worse a libel.

Dryden. It were happy for us, if this complaint of applicability only to the heaven worlds.

Applicableness, n.f. [from applicable.] Fitted to be applied.

The knowledge of faults may possibly, by that little part which we have already delivered of its applications, be of use in natural philosophy.mg.

Applicably, adv. [from applicable] In such a manner as that it may be properly applied.

Applicat. n.f. [from apply.] A right line drawn across a curve, so as to bisect the diameter thereof.

Chambers. Application, n.f. [from apply.] 1. The act of applying anything to another, as he mitigated his pain by the application of emollients.

2. The thing applied; as, he invented a new application, by which blood might bedrawn.

3. The act of applying to any person, as a solicitor, or petitioner.

4. A thing from very extraordinary, that a patent should be passed, upon the application of a poor, private, obscure mechanic.

Swift. 5. The employment of means for a certain end.

This is no flint which can be fitted to the use of the sustained body of Christ; it hath no measured certainty of limits, bounds of efficacy unto life it knoweth none, but is also itself infinite in possibility of application.

Homer. 6. In order to be taken with children, there will not be much need of the application of the common rewards and punishments.

Locke. 7. Intenseness of thought; close study.

I have discovered no other way to keep our thoughts concentrated upon the business, but, by frequent repetition and application, getting the habit of attention and application.

Locke. 8. Attention to some particular affair; with the particle to.

His continued application in such publick affairs, as may benefit his kingdoms, diverts him from pleasures.

Addison. This crime certainly deserves the utmost application and wisdom of a people to prevent it.

Addison. 9. Reference to some cæse or situation; as the story was told, and the hearers made the application.

This principle acts with the greatest force in the worth application, and the similarity of wicked men more successfully destroys, than that of good men reforms.

Applicative, adj. [from apply.] That which applies.

The directive command for enufal is in the underdriving, and the application commanded for putting in execution is the will.

Bramhall against Hobbes.

Applicatory, adj. [from apply.] That which comprehends the act of application.

Applicatory, n.f. That which applies.

There are but two ways of applying the death of Child. faith is the inward application, and if there be any outward, it must be the sacraments.

Taylor's Works Communicant. To APPLY. v. a. [applique, Lat.]

1. To put one thing to another.

He laid, and to the sword his throat applied.

Dryden. 2. To lay medications upon a wound.

Apply some speedy cure, prevent our fate.

And succour nature are it be too late.

Addison. God has addressed every passion of our nature, applied remedies to every weakness, warned us of every enmity.

Rogers. 3. To make use of as relative or suitable to something.

This brought the death of your father into remembrance, and illustrated the verse which I formerly applied to him.

Dryden's Fables. 4. To put to a certain use.

The profits thereof might be applied towards the support of the year.

Chambers. 5. To use as means to an end.

These glorious beings are instruments in the hands of God, who applies their services, and governs their actions, and disposes even their wills and affections.

Rogers. 6. To work on the mind upon; to study; with to.

Locke uses above, less properly.

Apply thine heart into instruction, and thine eyes to the words of knowledge.

Pro. xxii. 12. Every man is accomplished to himself that he thinks; and that which his mind is applied about, whilst thinking, is the idea that are there. Locke. It is a sign of a capacious mind, when the mind can apply itself to several objects with a swift transition.

Watts. 7. To have recourse to, as a solicitor or petitioner; or, to: as, I applied myself to him for help.

8. To address to.

God a lie.

To Satan first in his doom apply'd, This in mysterious terms, judged as then best.

Kilton. Sacred vows and mystic song apply'd, To griffy Pluto and his gloomy bride.

Pop. 9. To busy; to keep at work: an antiquated sense; for which we now use apply.

She was skilful in applying his humours; never failing but to fail to despair, nor hope to attain to assurance.

Sidney. 10. To act upon; to ply.

A varlet running towards hallly, Whole flyings, feet, his way apply'd, That running before a cloud of dust did fly.

Pepys. To APPLY, v. n.

1. To suit; to agree.

Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy?

Swift. To have recourse to, as a petitioner.

I had no thoughts of applying to any but himself; he defined I would speak to others.

Swift. 3. To attach by way of influence.

God knows every rank and passion, and in what manner they can be most successfully applied.

Rogers. To APPOINT. v. a. [appointer, Fr.]

1. To fix anything, as to settle the exact time for some transfiguration.

The time appointed of the Father. Galat. iv. 2.

2. To settle any thing by compact.

He said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will pay it.

Gen. 31. Now there was an appointed sign between the men of Israel and the heirs in wait.

Judges, xx. 38. 3. To establish any thing by decree.

It was in the power of the Lord, which set before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the Lord.

2 Sam. v. 21. Unto him thou gavest commandments, which he transfigured, and immediately thou appointedst a death in him, and in his generations. 2 Esd. iii. 7.

O Lord, that art the God of thy soul, thou hast not appointed repentance to the jaws.

Manasseh's Prayer. 4. To furnish in all points; to equip to supply with all things necessary: used anciently in speaking of soldiers.

The English being well appointed, did so entertain them, that their ships departed terribly torn.

Hamann.

APPOINTMENT, n.f. [from appoint.] He that settles or fixes any thing or place.

4. Decree; establishment.

The ways of death be only in his hands, who alone hath power over all flesh, and unto whose appointment we ought with patience meekly to submit ourselves.

Heber. 5. An allowance paid to any man, commonly used of allowances to public officers.

It is a fall of the body, which of them lies specifically, and which flows; and, by appointing the time, take and leave that quality which you desire.

Bacon. To these it were good, that some proper prayer were appointed, and they taught it.

Smith. An officer cannot be appointed out like a common, and shared among distinct proprietors.

Collier. APPOINTMENT, n.f. [from appoint.] A dividing of a rent into two or more parts, or portions, according as the land, whence it issues, is divided among two or more proprietors.

Chambers. To APPROACH, v. a. [approach, L.] 1. To put questions to. This word is not now in use, except that, in some schools, to put grammatical questions to a boy is called to pay him; and we now use pay for puzzle.

Some procure themselves to be surprised at such times as it is like the party that they work upon, will come upon them, and be found with a letter in their hand, or doing something which they are not accustomed to; till the end they may be appointed of those things which of themselves they are desert to use.

Bacon. 2. A latiniun. To apply to.

By malignant patriots vapours, the nutriment is rendered of being applied to the parts.

Harvey.

APPOSI T E, adj. [appositius, Lat.] Proper; fit; well adapted to time, place, or circumstances.

The duke's delivery of his mind was not fit to be held grave and grave; and apply to the times and occasions.

Watts. Neither was Perkin, for his part, wanting to himself, either in gracious and princely behaviour, or in ready and apply answers.

Remarkable instances of this kind have been: but it will admonish reflections very opposite to the design of this present solemnity.

Attornery.

APPOSI TELY.
2. Opinion; sentiments; concession. If we aim at right understanding its true nature, we must examine what apprehension mankind makes of it.

To be false, and to be thought false, is all one in respect of men who act not according to truth, but apprehension.

The apprehensions of scripture are commonly settled in those matters to the vulgar apprehensions and conceptions of the place and people where they were delivered.

Locke.

3. The faculty by which we conceive new ideas, or power of conceiving them. I name them as they pass, and understood their nature, with such knowledge God in'de-

My sudden apprehension.

Milton.

4. Fear. It behoves that the world should be held in awe, not by a vain surmise, but a true apprehension of somewhat which no man may think himself able to withstand.

Herrick.

And he the future evil shall no less

In apprehension, than in substance, feel.

Milton.

The apprehension of what was to come from an unknown, at least unacknowledged source to the clouds, clouded much of that prosperity.

Clarendon.

As they have no apprehension of these things, so they need no comfort against them.

Tullian.

After the death of his nephew Caligula, Claudian was in small apprehension for his own life.

Addison.

5. SuspiTation of something to happen, or to be done.

I'll note you in my book of memory,

And forebode you this apprehension.

Shakespeare.

That he might take away the apprehension, that he meant suddenly to deprive him, he went out orders, which he was sure would come into the enemy's hands, to two or three villages, that they should send proportion of corn into Hadleighhouse.

Clarendon.

6. Seizure. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower;

And go we brethren to the man that took him,

To question of his apprehension.

Clarendon.

7. The power of seizing, catching, or holding.

A lamber hath the chely or great claw of one side longer than the other, but this is not their leg, but a part of apprehension where they seize upon their prey.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

APPREHENSIVE. adj. [from apprehend.] This which may be apprehended, or conceived.

The north and southern poles are incomunicable and fixed points, whereas the one is not apprehensible in the other. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

APPREHENSION. n. s. [from apprehend.] The quality of being apprehensive.

Whereas the vowels are much more difficult to be taught, you will hold, by falling upon them left, great loss by the apprehensions already gained in learning the consonants.

Holden.

APPREHENSIVE. adj. [from apprehension.] In an apprehensive manner.

APPREHENSIVENESS. n. s. [from apprehension.] The quality of being apprehensive.

One that is bound by covenant to serve another man of trade, for a certain term of years, upon condition that the artificer, or tradesman, shall, in the mean time, endeavour to instruct him in his art or mystery.

Cowell.

The gainstained such diligence, that no apprehension, no, no bond swear, could ever be more ready than that young prince was.

Sidney.

He found him such an apprehensive, as knew well enough how to set up for himself.

Wotton.

He called the painter liberty; it teaches him, that he ought not to be subject himself servility, and be bound like an apprentice to the rules of his art.

Dyerdan's DyspepSy.

To APPRENTICE. v. a. [from the noun.] To put out to a master as an apprentice.

Many whose master's apprehensions blanked.

The young who labours, and the old who rest.

Pope.

APPRENTICIbOD. n. s. [from apprentice.] The years of an apprentice's servitude.

But if my apprehension to foreign passagess, and in the end, Having my freedom, boast of nothing else

But that I was a journeyman to grief.

Shakespeare.

APPRENTICESHIP. n. s. [from apprentice.] The years which an apprentice is to pass under a master.

An executor, the simplest that is, there is an apprehensively necessary, before it can be expected anything should work.

Dugby.

Many rushed into the ministry, as being the only callings that the could profess, without convexing any apprenticeship.

Smith.

To APPREHEND. v. w. [apprehend; part. appris.] To inform; to give the knowledge of any thing.

He considers the tendency of such a virtue or vice; he is well apprized, that the representation of some of these things may convince the understanding, and some may terrify the confidence.

Watts.

It is fit he be apprized of a few things, that may prevent his mistaking.

Clayton.

The country be hut up, lard't be the scent,

On church-yard drear (inhuman to relate)

The disappointed growlers fall.

Thomson.

To APPREACH. v. a. [appreach; part. appris.] To draw near locally.

The time to look to; the powers of the kingdom approach space.

Shakespeare.

We soppice Ulises approaching toward Poly-phemus.

Brum.

To DRAW near, as time.

Hark! I hear the sound of coaches,

The hour of attack approaches.

Gay.

3. To make a progresse towards, in the figurative sense, as mentally.

He shall approach unto me; for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me.

Jsr. xxx. 21

To have knowledge in all the objects of contemplation, is what the mind can hardly attain unto; the instances are few of those who have, in any measure, apprach'd towards it.

Drel.

4. To come near, by natural affinity, or resemblance; as, the cat approaches to the tiger.

To APPROACH. v. a.

1. To bring near to. This fence is rather French than English.

This they will nimbly perform, if objected to the extremities; but slowly, and not at all, if apprach'd unto their roots. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

By plunging paper thoroughly in weak spirit of wine, and apprach'g it to a candle, the spirittuous parts will burn, without harming the paper. Dugby.

Approach'd, and looking underneath the fun.

He saw proud Ar,cle.

Dyerdan.

2. To
To come near to.
He was an admirable poet, and thought even to have an approved Honeycomb of a Temple.

Approach. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of drawing near.
If I could bid the seventh welcome with so good a heart as I can bid the other five farewell, I should be glad of him, and say, 'Selt, Merit, of Prince.'
This with our souls
As with our eyes, that after a long darkness
Are dazzled at the approach of sudden light. Diob.

2. Accresce.
Honeys bath in the volatile ground to do good;
the approach to kings and principal persons;
and the raising of a man's own fortunes. Bacon.

3. Hurdle advance.
For Engaged his approach makes as fierce
As water to the furrow of a gulf. Shaksp.

Against beleaguer'd bea'n the giants move;
Hills pil'd on hills, on mountains mountains lie,
To make their mad approach to the sky. Dryd.

Approacher. n. s. [from approach.]
The person that approaches or draws near.

To gau'th'st three ears, like tapitars, that bid welcome,
To knowes and all approaches. Shaksp.

Approachment. n. s. [from approach.]
The act of coming near.

Nothing is more concrete but in the approach of the air, as we have made trial in glasses of water, which will not easily freeze. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Approbation. n. s. [approbation, Lat.]

1. The act of approving, or expressing himself pleased or satisfied.
That not pitt me, but
By learned approbation of my judges. Shaksp.

2. The liking of any thing.
There is no positive law of men, whether received by formal consent, or in councils, or by secret approbation, as in customs, but may be taken away. Hacker.

The bare approbation of goodness and good things, is not properly the willing of that thing, but the name of yeomen of his guard; and that it might be thought to be rather a matter of dignity, than any matter of diflference approbation to his own cause, he made an ordinance not temporary, but to hold in suspension for ever. Bacon.

The heathens themselves had an apprehension of the necessity of some approbation acts of divine worship. Locke.

3. Attestation; support.
How now in health
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to. Shaksp.

Appro. n. s. [from approve, as proof from prove.] Approbation; commendation: a word rightly derived, but old.

O most pleasant instance,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue
Either of commendation or approbation. Shaksp.

To Approbate. v. a. [approbreste, Lat.]
To hassen; to set forward. Ditt.

To Approbinate. v. s. [approbinate, Lat.]
To draw nigh unto; to approach.

To Appropane. v. s. [appropine, Lat.]
To approach; to draw near to.

A ludicrous word.
The clefted blood within my hope,
That from my wounded body flows,
With mortal cries doth garnish my eyes.
My days to approbine an end. Hev.High.

Approvable. adj. [from approbation.]
That which may be approv'd; that which may be restrained to something particular.
This conceit, applied unto the original of man, and the beginning of goodness, is more justly
To approbine an end. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To Approb'ate. v. a. [approbreste, low Lat.]
1. To confess to some particular use or peril.

Things sanctified were thereby in such sort approb'ate unto God, as that they might never afterwards be made common. Homer.

As for this, this is no approbation of this person, this thing, I have read and approv'd, and I have inclin'd it to myself and my own use, and I will ensue no downs, no rival, or companion in its South.
Some they approv'd to the gods.
And some to public, some to private ends. Hor.

Marks of honour are approv'd to the insig.
(There, that he might be invited to reverence. Atherbury.

2. To claim or exercise; to take to himself by an exclusive right.
To themselves approv'n.
The spirit of God, promis'd alike and given. Ps.

Why should any persons engross and approv're the common benefits of fire, air, and water, to themselves?
Every body c'th has an equal title to it, and therefore he cannot approv', he cannot incline, without the consent of all his fellow commoners, all mankind. Locke.

3. To make peculiar to something; to annex by combination.
He need but indulge, with some words of execrable scripture; and his uses, that has approv'd them to the orthodoxy of his church, makes them immediately irreparable arguments.

We, by degrees, get ideas and names, and learn their approv'd combination one with another. Locke.

4. In law, to alienate a benefice. See Approbation.
Before Richard II. it was lawful to approv'e the whole fruits of a benefice to any abbe, the houset finding one to serve the cure; that king redd'ted that horrid evil. Ayliff.

Approv'able. adj. [from the verb.]
Peculiar; confined to some particular use or peril; belonging peculiarly.
He did instruct a band of fifty archers, with the name of yeomen of his guard; and that it might be thought to be rather a matter of dignity, than any matter of difference approv'ation to his own cause, he made an ordinance not temporary, but to hold in suspension for ever. Bacon.
The heathens themselves had an apprehension of the necessity of some approv'ation acts of divine worship. Locke.

Approbation. n. s. [from approv'ate, Lat.]

1. The application of something to a particular purpose.
The mind should have a direct idea of the things, and retain the particular name, with its peculiar approv'ation to the name. Locke.

2. The claim of any thing as peculiar.
He doth nothing but talk of his horses, and makes a great approv'ation to his good parts, that he can flatter himself. Shaksp.

3. The fixing a particular signification to a word.
The name of faculty may, by an approvation that disguiseth its true signe, palliate the absurdity. Locke.

4. In law, a severing of a benefice ecclesiastical to the proper and perpetual use of some religious house, or dean and chapter, bishoprick, or college; because, as formerly, it never weary no right of the simple, the, for reason of their perpetuity, are accounted owners of the fee simple; and therefore are called proprietors.
To an approv'ation, after the licence obtained of the king in chancery, the content of the diocesan, patron, and incumbent, are necessary, if the church be full: but if the church be void, the diocesan and the patron, upon the king's licencce, may conclude. Cawell.

Approv'or. n. s. [from approv'ate.]
He that is possess of an approv'ation of the approv'ations, by reason of their perpetuity, are accounted owners of the fee simple; and therefore are called proprietors. Ayliff's Parerg.

Approv'able. adj. [from approv'ate.]
That which merits approv'ation.
The solid reason, or confirmed experience, of any men, is very approv'able in what profession soever. John's Vulgar Errors.

Approv'aln. s. [from approv'ate.]
Approv'ation; a word rarely found.
There is a center of justice and manners, without whose approv'ation no capital sentences are to be executed. Temple.

Approv'ance. n. s. [from approv'ate.]
Approv'ation; a word not much used.
A man of his learning should not to lightly have been carried away with old wives tales from approv'ation of his own reason. Spenser.

To Approv' u. a. [approv'ate, Fr. approv'ob, Lab.]
To like; to be pleased with.
There can be nothing possibly evil which God approv's, and that he approv's much more than he doth command. Hacker.

What power was that, whereby Medea saw,
And well approv'd, and prize the better course,
When her rebellious fife did o so withdraw.
Her tender pow'rs, that the pur'd the world. Drys.

To express liking.
It is looked upon as infallible for a man to let up his own opinion against that of some learned doctors, or other approved writer. Lard.

To prove; to shew; to justify.
His meaning was not, that Archimedes could simly in nothing be deceived; but that he had in it so much approbation his skill, that he became worthy of credit for ever after, in matters appertaining to the science he was skillful in. Hacker.

In religion,
What dammed error, but some f erro-brow
Will blest it, and approv'n it with a tear? Shaksp.

I'm sorry
That he approv'd the common liar, Sarnle,
Who spoils him thus at Rome. Shaksp.

Should I clow their expiry? Approv'ate.
Firt thy obedience. Mitch.

Refer all the actions of this short life to that state which will never end; and this will approvate infit to be wolden at the last, whatever the world judge of it now. Tillou.

4. To experience: not in ufe.
Oh! 'tis the curfe to live, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love, where they're below'd. Shaksp.

To make, or show, to be worthy of approv'ation.
The first care and concern must be to approv' himself to God by righteousnes, holiness, and purity; and not to account owners of the fee simple.

It has of before the object, when it signifies to be pleased, but may be used without a preposition: as, I approv' your letter, or, of your letter.

I threw you a piece of white and white stuff,
Just fust from the dyer; which you were pleased to approv', and were owner of the thing. Spenser.

Approv'ment. n. s. [from approv'ate.]
Approv'ation; liking.
It is certain that at the first you were all of my opinion, and that I did nothing without your approv.'t. Hayward.

Approv'er.
In the figures the veil is gathered up before them, like an apron, which must fuppose filled with fruits. Addison.

APRON. n. s. [in gunnery.] A piece of lead which covers the touch-hole of a great gun. Spalding.

A PRON MAN. n. s. [from apron and man.] A man who wears an apron; a workman; a manual artificer. Spalding.

Wearing an apron.

The color apricot, and the passion gown'd.

APSIS. n. s. apsides, plural. [a. l.] Is applied, in astronomy, to two points in the orbits of planets; in which they are at the greatest, and the least distance from the sun or earth. The higher apsis is more particularly denominated apogee, or apogee; the lower, perigee, or perigee.

APRONED. adj. [from apron.] Wearing an apron.

The color apricot, and the passion gown'd. Pope.

1. Fit.

This to eminent industry in making profelytes, more of that art than of the other, greater; for that they are deemed to serve as instruments in the cause. After they are through the engraved of their affection; after through a natural inclination unto piety; after through holy opportunities, &c. Lastly, after through a filial delight which they take in giving very large and particular intelligence how all near them stand affected as concerning the same cause. Hooker.

2. Having a tendency to; liable to.

Things natural, so long as they keep those forms which give them their being, cannot possibly be apt or inclinable to do otherwise than they do. Hooker.

My vines and peaches on my best four walls were apt to be a foot or animadversions upon their leaves and fruits. Hooker.

3. Inclined to; led to; disposed to.

You may make her you love believe it; that, I warrant, she is apt to do, than confes she does. Shakespeare's As you like it.

Men are apt to think withal of themselves, and of their nation of their power and strength. Shakespeare.

One, who has not these frights, is a stranger to what he reads, and apt to put a wrong interpretation upon it. Addison.

Even those who are near the court, are apt to declare wrong conceptions, by reasoning upon the motives of ambition. Swift.

What we have always seem to be done in one manner, we are apt to imagine there was but that one way. Swift.

4. Ready; quick; as, an apt wit.

I have a heart as little apt as yours, but yet a brain that leads my use of anger.

Shakespeare.

Better vantage. Shakespeare.

5. Qualified for.

These horses had a while before the king in war, whereunto they were only apt. Shakespeare.

All that were strong and apt for war, even then the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon. 2 Kings.

6. To apt. v. a. [apta, Lat.]

1. To suit; to adapt. We need a man that knows the several graces of history, and how to apt their places. Ben Jonson.
monack, be added to aqua turris, it commences aqua regia, and will then dissolve no metal but gold. Chambers.

The dissolving of silver in aqua regis, and gold in aqua regia, and not vice versa, would not be difficult to know. Locke.

AQUA MIRABILIS. [Latin.] The wonder water, is prepared of cloves, galangals, cabbers, mace, cardomums, nutmegs, ginger, and spirit of wine, digested twenty-four hours, then distilled.

AQUA REGIA, or AQUA REGALIS. [Latin.] An acid water, so called because it dissolves gold, the king of metals. Its essential ingredient is common salt, the only salt which will operate on gold. It is prepared by mixing common salt, or salt amonick, or the spirit of them, with spirit of nitre, or common aqua fortis.

Chambers. He adds to his complex idea of gold, that of freedoms or solubility in aqua regia. Locke.

AQUAVITE. [Latin.] It is commonly understood of what is otherwise called brandy, or spirit of wine, either simple or prepared with aromatics. But some approves the term brandy to what is procured from wine, or the grape; aquavitæ, to that drawn after the fame manner from malt.

Chambers. I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, an Irishman with my wine, bottle, or a thief to walk with my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself.

Aquavitæ. adj. [aqüavitæ, Lat. from aqua, water.]

1. That which inhabits the water. The vast variety of worms found in animals, as well terrestrial as aquatic, are taken into their bodies by meats and drinks. Ray on the Creation. One may be considered as either aerial, terrestrial, aquatic, or amphibious. Aquavitæ are those whose constant abode is upon the water. Locke.

2. Applied to plants, that which grows in the water. Fish and fuch like aquatic, are best defended by drainage. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Aquavitæ. adj. [aquavitæ, Lat.] That which inhabits the water. We behold many millions of the aquatic or water frag in ditches and standing plashes.

AQUEDUCT, n. f. [aqueductus, Lat.] A conveyance made for carrying water from one place to another; made on uneven ground, to preserve the level of the water, and convey it by a canal. Some aqueducts are under ground, and others above it supported by arches.

Among the remains of old Rome, the grandeur of the commonwealth flows least chiefly in temples, highways, aqueducts, walls, and bridges of the city. Addison.

Either the rolls of water are convey'd in natural aqueducts, by nature laid To carry all the humour. Blackmore.

A'QUID. n. f. [aqua, water, Lat.] Watery.

The vehement fire requisite to its fusion, forced away all the aqueous and fugitive moisture. Ray on the Creation.

A'QUILLS. n. f. [aquilas, Lat.] Waterfowls.

A'QUILINE. adj. [aquilinus, Lat. from aquila, an eagle.] Refembling an eagle; when applied to the nose, hooked.

His nose was aquiline, his eyes were blue, Ruby his lips, and feath'rd his brow. Dryd. Gyps fupplies some kind of eagle of curio, from whence the epithet gyps is for an hooked or aquiline nose. Brown.

A'QUOISE. adj. [from aqua, Lat.] Watery; having the qualities of water. Difl.

A'QUOSITY. n. f. [from aqüo.] Water-nefs.

A. R. R. A. n. f. 1: that is, the year of the reign: as, A.R. R. R. 20. Anno regni Georgii rex angl. in the twentieth year of the reign of King George.

A'RAABLE. adj. [from ara, Lat. to plough.] Fit for the plough; fit for tillage; produccive of corn.

His eyes he open'd, and beheld a feld, Part arable, and tithl, wherein were sheaves New reap'd.

'Tis good for arable, a globe that asks Tough teams of oxen, and laborious toaks.

Dyndal.

Having but very little arable land, they are forced to fetch all their corn from foreign countries. Addison.

A'RACHNOIDES. n. f. [from aqüus, a spider, and ëb, form.] 1. One of the tunics of the eye, so called from its resemblance to a cobweb. As to the tunics of the eye, many things might be taken notice of; the prodigious focii of the arachnoide, the acute fente of the retina. Derham.

2. It is also a thin fine transparent membrane, which, lying between the dura and the pia mater, is suppozed to invest the whole substance of the brain. Chambers.

A'RAFGNÉ. n. f. [French.] A term in fortification, which sometimes denotes a branch, return, or gallery of a mine. Difl.

A'RAKES. adj. [from aranes, Lat. a cobweb.] Refembling a cobweb. The curvaceous membrane of the eye converging and dilateth it, and so varie's its focus. Derham.

A'RACTION. n. f. [aratus, Lat.] The act or practice of ploughing.

A'RACTOR. adj. [from ara, Lat. to plough.] That which contributes to tillage. Dih.

A'RALIST. n. f. [from aras, a bow, and balista, an engine to throw flames.] A cros-bow.

It is reported by William Britto, that the arcabala, or arbalist, was first intro’d to the French by our king Richard the fird, who was fhirley armed in it by a quarrer thereof. CandaL A'RBITER. n. f. [Lat.] 1. A judge appointed by the parties, to whose determination they voluntarily submit.

He would put himself into the king’s hands, and make him arbiter of the peace. Bacon.

2. One who has the power of decision or regulation; a judge.

Next him, high arbiter. Chance given. Milton. His majesty, in this great conjuncture, seems to be generally allowed for the sole arbiter of the affairs of Christendom. Temple.

A'RBITRABLE. adj. [from arbitræ, Lat.] Arbitrary; depending upon the will.

The ordinary revenue of a parsonage is in land, called the glebe; in tythe, a fifth part of our goods remitted to God; in other donations bestowed upon God by the people, either in such arbitrable proportion as their own devotion moveth them, or as the laws or customs of particular places do require them. Addi.

A'RBITRAMENT. n. f. [from arbitrare, Lat.] Will; determination; choice. This should be written arbitrament.

Stand fast! I stand at full
Free in thine own arbitrament it stands;
Perfect, within, and outward and required
All temptation to transgress regal.
Milton.

A'RBITRARILY. adv. [from arbitrary.]

With no other rule than the will; despotically; absolutely.

He governed arbitrarily, he was expelled, and came to the deferred end of tyrants. Dryd.

A'RBITRARIVS. adj. [from arbitrary.]

Arbitrarily; depending on the will.

These are standing and inseparable truths, such as have no precarious existence, or arbitrary dependence upon any will or understanding whatever.

A'RBITRARIously. adv. [from arbitrarious.]

Arbitrarily; according to mere will and pleasure.

Where words are imposed arbitrarily, distorted from their common use, the mind must be led into misjudgment. Glasgow.

A'RBITRARY. adj. [arbitrary; Lat.]

1. Despotick; absolute; bound by no law; following the will without restraint. It is applied both to persons and things.

In vain the Tyrian Queen regis her life
For the chaste glory of a virtuous wife.
If lying bard no faithless harmes rehcieve,
And blast her name with arbitrary vice.
Wolf.

Their regal tyrants shall with bonds hide
Their little lufts of arbitrary pride
Nor but to see their vassals’ty’d. Prior.

2. Depending on no rule; capricious.

It may be perceived, with what insecurity we abridge effects depending on the natural period of time, unto arbitrary calculations, and such as vary at pleasure. Beauz’s Plot Evers.

To A'RBITRATE. v. a. [arbiter, Lat.]

1. To decide; to determine.

This might have been prevented, and made whole.

With very easy arguments of love,
Which now the manage of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody ille arbitrate. Shakespeare.

2. To judge of.

Yet were an equal peace of hope and fear
Does arbitrate th’ events, my nature is

To A'RBITRATE. v. n. To give judgment.

It did arbitrate upon the several reports of fends, not like a drawy judge, only hearing, but also directing their verdict. Swift.

A'RBITRARINESS. n. f. [from arbitrary.]

Despotickness; tyranny.

He that by handcrafts of nature, and arbitrariness of commands, uses his children like foreigners, is what they mean by a tyrant. Temple.

A'RBITRATION. n. f. [from arbitrator, Lat.]

The determination of a cause by a judge mutually agreed upon by the parties contending.

A'RBITRATOR. n. f. [from arbitrare.]

1. An extraordinary judge between party and party, chosen by their mutual consent.

Be a good soldier, or upright officer.

An arbitrator from extreme fear.

Dryd.

2. A governor; a president.

Though
ARB

Though heav'n be first
And heav'n's high arbiter fit secure
To his own strength, this place may be expa'd.

3. He that has the power of prefering to others without limit or controul.

Another Bleneheim or Rambilly will make the accelerates matters of their own terms, and arb.

4. The determiner; he that puts an end to any affair.

But now the arbiter of desairs,
Just death, kind umpire of man's life, left
With sweet enlargement does diffuse me hence.

The end crowns all;
And that old common arbiter, time,
Will one day end it.

ARBITREMENT. n. f. [from arbitrer, Lat.]

1. Decision; determination.

Knows the right is incendi against you, even to a moral arbitrement; but nothing of the cir-

2. Compromise.

Luke warm persons think they may accommodate points of religion by middle ways, and witty recommendations as if they would make an arbi-

A'RBORARY. adj. [arborarius, Lat.] Bel-

A'RBORET. n. f. [arbor, Lat. a tree.]

A small tree or shrub.

No arboret with painted blossoms drest.
And phrased from hence, but there is might be found,
To bud out fair, and bud, sweet finely throw them around.

New bid, now seen,
Among thick woven arboris, and hows Imboodreid's on each bank.

A'RBROUS. adj. [arboratus, Lat.] Bel-

1. Belonging to trees; constituting a tree.

A grain of muffard becomes arboris.

2. A term in botany, to distinguish such fungules or mosses as grow upon trees, from those that grow on the ground.

They speak properly, who make it an arboreal excellence, or rather a superplant from a vis-

A'KREIST. n. f. [arcrifte, from ar-

A'KREIST. n. f. [arcrifte, from ar-

A'RBOR. n. f. [from arboret, a tree.]

A bower; a place covered with green

Now ye shall see mine orchard, where, in an

Let us divide our labours: thus, where chance

But the tender, and the cold dews being past, he shoots them all out

So soon as they forth were come to open fight

A'RBOROUS. adj. [from arboret, Lat.]

Belonging to a tree.

The wood from under shady arborious roof

Soon as they forth were come to open fight
Of day-spring, and the fun.

ARC

ARBORINE FINE. n. f. A species of bind-

ARBORICLE. n. f. [archicina, Lat.] Any

ARBORUS. n. f. [archi-

ARBORUS. n. f. [archi-

ARBORUS. n. f. [archi-

ARCH. n. f. [archus, Lat.]

1. A fragment; a part of a circle; not

2. To cover with arches.

Gates of monarchs
Are arc'd to high, that giants may get through.

The proud river which makes her bed at her-

Said he, who with such a curious pile of

1. The tyrant; of the first clans.

The tyrannous and bended arch is done.

There is spring up
An heuristic, say Paradis, or Cranmer.

2. Wagging; mirthful; strangely miche-

This signification it fomes to have

ARCHEANGEL. n. f. [archangelus, Lat.]

One of the highest order of angels.

His form had yet not left.

All its original brightnes, nor appear'd
Less as archeangel wind'd, and the excels
Of glory o'ercraft'd.

'Tis true the archangel's trump I hear.

Nature's great palling-bell, the only call
Of God's that will be heard by all.

ARCHBISHOP. n. f. [archus, Lat.]

The name of a plant, called also Dale nittle.

Belonging to archangels.

'Ceas, and the archbishop pow'p prepar'd
For swift defeat; with him the crows of

ARCHBISHOP. n. f. [archus, Lat.]

The chief place of prospect, or of sig-

You still win the top of the Cornish arches

Hainborough, which may for prospect compare with Rama in Paletina.

Carus.

ARCHBISHOP. n. f. [archus, and

A bishop of the first clans, who superintend the conduct of other bishops of his suffragans.

Cranmer is return'd well welcome.

The archbishop was the known architect of this new fabric.

Clarendon.

ARCHBISHOPRIC. n. f. [from arch-

The state or jurisdiction of an

'Tis the cardinal;

And merely to revenge him on the emperor,

For noe behoving on him, at his asking.

The archbishop of Toledo, this is purr'd.

Shakespeare.

This excellent man, from the time of his promotion to the archbishopric, underwent the envy and malice of men who agreed in nothing else.

Clarendon.

ARCHCHINTER. n. f. [from arch-

The chief chanter.

ARCHDEACON. n. f. [archdescan, Lat.]

One that supplies the bishop's place and office in such manner as to belong to the episcopal function. The law fyles him the bishop's vicar, or viceregent.

ARCHDEACONRY. n. f. [archdeaconus-

The office or jurisdiction of an

ARCHDEACONSHIP. n. f. [archde-

The office of an archdeacon.

ARCHDUKE. n. f. [archbuxus, Lat.] A title gained, by being frequently applied to the boy most remarkable for his prince as, the arch rouge; unless it is derived from Arab, the name of the jeffer to Charles I.

Aurtil, called column, his made. London, [architectura, LAl.] former Heckin. divided beam. Relating to order. The lion has. An infernal, Chief architect and poster of thee woes. Stately, Architective, adj. [from architect,] That performs the works of architecture. House could have the knowledge, particularly the last mentioned, be furnished with architectural materials! Deit. Philos.-Theology. Architectonic, adj. [from arch, chief, and tect, an artificer.] That which has the power, or skill of an architect; that which can build or form any thing.

To try that some more part of either, or all the hypothetical principles, is the architect of this elaborate structure, is to give occasion to demand what proportion of the parts afforded this architect, and what agent made to skillful and happy a mixture. Blackmore.

1. The art or science of building. Architecture is divided into civil architecture, called by way of eminence, military architecture, or fortification; and ecclesiastical, which, besides building of ships and vessels, includes also ports, mole, docks, &c. Clamber.

Our fathers next in architecture build'd, Cities for seaf, and forts for felly build; Then palaces and lofty domes are, These for devotion, and for pleasure theo.

2. The effect or performance of the science of building. The furnishing of the first earth being a piece of divine architecture, attributed to a particular providence. Burnett's Theory.

A'rchitave, n. f. [from a'ch, chief, and trabs, Lat. a beam; because it is suppos'd to represent the principal beam in timber buildings.] That part of a column, or order of a column, which lies immediately upon the capital, and is the lowest member of the entablature. This member is subservient to the different orders; and, in building architecture doors and windows, the workman frequently follows his own fancy. The architave is sometimes called the ronson piece, or master beam, in timber buildings, as portico, clysters, &c. In chimneys it is called the mantle-piece; and over jambs of doors, and lintels of windows, hyperbolic. Builder's Dit.

The materials laid over this pillar were of wood; through the lights wherein the architave could not fall, nor the column itself, being in subantial. Watt's Architecture.

Archives, n. f. without a singular, [archivis, Lat.] The places where records or ancient writings are kept. It is perhaps sometimes used for the writings themselves.

Though we think our words vanish with the breath that utters them, yet they become records in
ARD

In God's court, and are laid up in his archives, as witnesses either for or against us.

Government of the Tangiers.

I shall now only look a little into the Mosaic statutes, to observe what they furnish for this subject.

Woodward.

ARCHWISE. adv. [from arch and wise.]

In the form of an arch.

The court of arches, so called ab arcu et ecclesia, or from Bow-church, by reason of the oblong or elliptical arches, raised at the top with three pillars, in fashion of a bow bent arch.

Agiles Peregrine.

ARCHITECT. adj. [architects, Lat.]

Bow-bearing.

Dict.

ARCHITECTURE. n.s. [from arche, to strain.]

Straining; confinement to a narrow compass.

Arch.

ARCHITECT. n.s. [from arch, the northern constellation.]

Northern; lying under the Archers, or bear. See Arch.

Ever-during flows, perpetual shades Of darkness would conceal their livid blood, Did not the archet tract spontaneous yield A cheering cuple here my with-winen. Philips.

ARCHITECT Circle. The circle at which the northern frigid zone begins.

ARCUTE. adj. [archatus, Lat.]

Bent in the form of an arch.

The cause of the confusion in founds, and the incongruity of species visible, is, for that the light worketh in right lines; but founds, that move in oblique and erratic lines, must needs encounter and disturb the one the other.

Batty's Natural History.

In the gullet, where it permeates the middriff, the carnose fibres are inflected and arculate.

Ray on the Creation.

ARCULATE. adj. [from arcuate.] Bent; inflected.

Dict.

ARCULATION. n.s. [from arculate.]

1. The act of bending any thing; incurvature.

2. The state of being bent; curvature, or crookedness.

3. In gardening. The method of raising by layers such trees as cannot be raised from seed, or that bear no seed, as the elm, lime, alder, willow; and is so called from bending down to the ground the branches which spring from the offsets or stools after they are planted.

Camberer.

ARCATURE. n.s. [arcuaturn, low Lat.]

The bending or curvature of an arch.

Dict.

ARCUABLISTER. n.s. [from arcus, a bow, and batcha, an engine.]

A croftbowman.

King John was espied by a very good archablister, who said, that he would soon dispatch the rebel tyrant. Gold forb'd, vile varlet, quoth the rebel, and fore warned him to consider the depth of one God. Camden's Remains.

ARD. [Saxon.] Signifies natural disposition; as, Godward, is a divine temper; Reinhard, a fiscere temper; Giffard, a bountiful and liberal disposition; Bernard, filial affection. Giffard's Camden.

ARDENCY. n.s. [from ardent.] Arduous; eager, eager; warmth of affection.

Accepted our prayers shall be, if qualified with humility, and ardency, and perseverance, so far as concerns the end immediate to them.

Harshfield's Pratt Catechism.

The ineffable happiness of our Redeemer must needs bring an incense to our common favor to the sanctity of our love for him.

Dict.

ARDENT. adj. [ardens, Lat. burning.]

1. Hot; burning; fiery.

Chymists observe, that vegetables, as lavenders, rue, marjoram, &c. distilled before fermentation, yield oils without any burning spirits; but after fermentation, yield ardent spirits without oils; which, though, by their oil is fermented, converted into spirits.

Newton's Opticks.

2. Fierce; vehement; having the appearance or quality of fire.

A knight of swiftest pace High on a coal-black steed pursues the char.

With flashing flames his ardent eyes were fill'd.

Dryden.

3. Passionate; affectionate; used generally of desire.

Another nymph with fatal pow'r and wise, To damp the flaming beams of Caelus's eye, With haughty pride may her charms confound, And scorn the ardent vows that I have dart'd. Prior.

ARDENTLY. adv. [from ardent.]

Eagerly; affectionately.

With true zeal may our hearts be most ardently inflamed to our religion.

Spright's Sermons.

ARDENTOU. n.s. [ardor, Lat. heat.]

1. Heat.

Joy, joy, a ray of the sun, reflects with a greater ardent and quickness, when it rebounds upon a man from his friends.

Dryden.

2. Heat of affection; as, love, desire, courage.

The tigers shout around with generous rage; He prais'd their ardours, holy pleas'd to fee His bold.

Dryden.

Unmow'd the mind of lachus remain'd.

And the vain ardours of our love restrain'd. Pope.

3. The person ardor or bright. This is only used by Milton.

Nor delay'd the winged fiant,

After his charge receiv'd, but from among a thoufand celestial arduous, where he flew Veild with his gorgeous wings, up-springing light, Flew thro' the midst of heavy n. Paradise Lost.

ARDITY. n.s. [from arduous.]

Height; difficulty.

Dict.

ARDROUS. adj. [ardous, Lat.]

1. Lofty; hard to climb.

High on Paraphan's tip her font the snow'd;

And painted out those arduous paths they trod. Pope.

2. Difficult.

It was a means to bring him up in the school of arts and policy, and to fit him for that great and arduous employment that God design'd him to.

South.

ARDROUSNESS. n.s. [from arduous.]

Height; difficulty.

Are.

The third perfon plural of the present tense of the verb to be; as, young men are, old are cautious.

ARE, or Alami.o. The lovetest note but one in Guido's scale of musick.

Camus: I am, the ground of all accord, Are to please Horton's passion; E, if thou be my friend, C, that loves with all affection. Shakspere.

AREA. n.s. [Latin.]

1. The surface contained between any lines or boundaries.

The area of a triangle is found by knowing the height and one half of the base. Burrough's Logick.

2. Any open surface, as the floor of a room; the open part of a church; the vacant part or flag of an amphitheatere. An inclosed place, as hills, or a bowling-green, or a graft-plot.

Let us conceive a floor or area of roundly length, with the breadth somewhat more than half the longnitude.

The Alban lake is of an oval figure, and, by reason of the high mountains that encompass it, looks like the area of some vast amphitheatre.

Addison.

In areas very'd with Mosallack art, Some whilst the dikes, and some the iarn din. Pope.

To ARE'D, or ARE'D. v. a. [ariedan, Sack. to counsel.] To advise; to direct. Knight's and ladies gentle deeds.

Whole prates having slept in silence long, May, all too soon, the Lecture musick attend. To blazon broad. Fairy Queen.

But mark what I aried thee now: arow, Fly ythier whence thou set fro'it! If from this hour Within these hollows limits thou appear, Back to th' infernal pit I drag thee chain'd. Paradise Lost.

AREFACTION. n.s. [arfaces, Lat. to dry.]

The state of growing dry; the act of drying.

From them, and their motions, principally proceed arrefactions, and most of the effects of nature.

Bacon.

To AREFY. v. a. [arfaces, Lat. to dry.] To dry; to exhaust of moisture.

Heat drieeth bodies that do easily expire, as parchment, leaves, roots, clay, &c. and to dry time or age arses, as in the same bodies, &c.

Bacau's Natural History.

ARENAEOUS. adj. [arena, Lat. sand.] Sandy; having the qualities of sand.

A piece of the bone of the same miners, of a yellow, brown colour, an araneous substance, and with some white far mixed with it.

Woodward on Topiary.

ARENATION. n.s. [from areng, Lat. sand.] Is used by some physicians for a fort of dry bath, when the patient fits with his feet swollen hot. Dict.

ARENOSE. adj. [from arena, Lat. sand;] of sand.

ARENULOUS. adj. [from arenula, Lat. sand.] Full of small sand; gravelly.

AREOTICK. adj. [areotikos.] Attentuates, applied to medicines that disolve viscosities, so that the morbuske matter may be carried off by sweat, or insensible perspiration.

Dict.

ARETOLOGY. n.s. [from areto, virtue, and λύω, to discourse.] That part of moral philosophy which treats of virtue, its nature, and the means of arriving at it.

Dict.

ARGAL. n.s. Hard lees sticking to the sides of wine-veilts, more commonly called tartar.

Dict.

ARGENT. adj. [from argentum, Lat. silver.]

1. The white colour used in the costs of gentlemen, knights, and baronets, supposed to be the representation of that metal.

Rinaldo's Kings.

As swift as fiery light, being kindled new.

His argent eagle, with her silver wings

In field of azure, fair Erminia knew.

Fullfax.

In an argent field, the god of war

Was drawn triumphant on his iron car.

Dryden.

2. Silver; bright like silver.

These argent fields more likely habitats, Translated fants, or middle spirits, hold,

Berwick to angelical and human kind.

Milton.

Or ask of yonder argent fields above,

Why Jove's fascinates are less than Jove.

Pope.

ARGENTATION. n.s. [from argentum, Lat. silver.] An overlaying with silver.

Dict.

ARGENTINE. adj. [argentum, Fr.] Sounding like silver.

Dict.

ARGIL.
ARGIL. n. s. [argill, Lat.] Potters' clay; a fine sort kind of earth of which vessels and vases are made.

ARGILLA. n. s. [argilla, Lat.] Clayey; pertaining to the nature of argil, consisting of argil or potters' clay.

ARGILLous. adj. [argilla, Lat.] Consisting of clay; clayish; containing clay.

Argus. n. s. [from argus.] A deceitful; a dissembler; a controvertist.

Argus. n. s. [from argus.] A revealer; a declarer; a confidant; a scribe.

ARGUMENT. n. s. [argumentum, Lat.] 1. A reason alleged for or against any thing. 2. The subject of any discourse or writing.

ARGUMENTATIVE. adj. [from argumentum] Argumentative is that thing is capable of, supposing it were; we ought not in reason to make any doubt of the existence of that thing.

ARGUMENTATIVE. adj. [from argumentum] Argumentative is that thing is capable of, supposing it were; we ought not in reason to make any doubt of the existence of that thing.

ARIADNE. n. s. [Ital. in the Greek.] An air, song, or tune.

Aristotle. adj. [aristus, Lat. Dry.] Shrewdly, witty; sharp.

ARIETNA. n. s. [Arab.] A ram; one of the twelve signs of the zodiac; the first vernal sign.

Ariete. n. s. [from aries.] 1. To butt like a ram.

Ariel. n. s. [from aries.] 1. The act of butting like a ram.

Ariete. n. s. [from aries.] The act of butting like a ram.

ARIES. n. s. [Lat.] The ram; one of the twelve signs of the zodiac; the first vernal sign.

Ariete. n. s. [from aries.] 1. To butt like a ram.

Ariete. n. s. [from aries.] 1. The act of butting like a ram.

Ariete. n. s. [from aries.] The act of butting like a ram.

ARGUMENT. n. s. [argumentum, Lat.] Reasoning; the act of reasoning. Argumentation is that operation of the mind whereby we infer one proposition from two or more propositions premised. Or it is the drawing of a conclusion, which before was unknown, or doubt full, from the prepositions more known and evident; so when we have judged that matter cannot think, and that the mind of man doth think, we conclude, that therefore the mind of man is not possible. What's my logic? I suppose it is no ill coplick of argumentation to have the prevalance of contempt, by the cause of the subject. A ram.

ARGUMENTATIVE. adj. [from argumentum] Argumentative is that thing is capable of, supposing it were; we ought not in reason to make any doubt of the existence of that thing.

ARGUMENTATIVE. adj. [from argumentum] Argumentative is that thing is capable of, supposing it were; we ought not in reason to make any doubt of the existence of that thing.

ARGUMENT. n. s. [argumentum, Lat.] Reasoning; the act of reasoning. Argumentation is that operation of the mind whereby we infer one proposition from two or more propositions premised. Or it is the drawing of a conclusion, which before was unknown, or doubt full, from the prepositions more known and evident; so when we have judged that matter cannot think, and that the mind of man doth think, we conclude, that therefore the mind of man is not possible. What's my logic? I suppose it is no ill coplick of argumentation to have the prevalance of contempt, by the cause of the subject. A ram.
ARISTOCRACY. ARISTOCRATIC. ARITHMETIC. ARMS

ARISTOCRACY. n.s. [Aristokrateia, Gr. = the privileged, wealthy, or ruling class.] 1. Relating to aristocracy; including a form of government which places the supreme power in the nobles, without a king, and exclusively of the people. The aristocracy of Venice hath admitted to many abuses through the degeneracy of the nobles, that the period of its duration seems to approach. Swift.

ARISTOCRATIC. adj. [from aristeo-.] Relating to aristocracy, or aristocratic form of government by the nobles. Oxford (essentially involving, the papacy, or ecclesiastical monarchy, may be changed in an extraordinary manner, for some time, into an aristocratical form of government. Johnson.

ARISTOCRATICAL. n.s. [from aristeo-] An aristocratical state. Dict.

ARITHMETIC. n.s. [from arithmetike.] 1. A science of numbers; the art of computing. A man hath need of a good arithmetician, to understand this author's works. Addison.

ARITHMETICIAN. n.s. [from arithmetick.] A master of the art of numbers. He's had a need of a good arithmetician, to understand this author's works. Addison.

ARM. n. 1. To furnish with armour of defence, or weapons of offence. 2. A force equipped for war; generally used of a naval force.

ARMAMENT. n.s. [armamentum, Lat.] An armory; a magazine or arsenal of warlike implements. Dict.

ARMAMENTARY. n.s. [armamentarium, Lat.] An armory; a magazine or arsenal of warlike implements. Dict.

ARMATURE. n.s. [armature, Lat.] 1. Armour; something to defend the body from hurt. Others should be armed with hard shells; others with prickles; the rest, that have no such armature, should be ended with great softness and perspicacity. Ray on the Creation.

ARMATURE, or HARNIICATION. n.s. [barbarus, Lat. a footsayer.] Schoffaying; vaticination. The priests of older time deluded their adherents with arithmetick, schoffaying, and such other frauds. Dryden.

ARRISE, v. n. pret. arose, particip. arisen. [from a and rife.] 1. To mount upward as the sun. He rose, and, locking up, beheld the stars with purple blazing, and the day a dawning. Dryden.

ARRISE, v. n. intr. 1. To get up as from sleep, or from rest. He arose up, and fell unto them; ye have transferred the law. 2. To arise out of the earth. How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep? Prov. vi. 9.

ARRISE, v. n. intr. 1. To stand up, as from an object. There shall arise false Christs and false prophets. Matt. xixv.

TO ARRIVE. v. n. To arrive at, come to, or succeed to; to come into view, as from an object. To arrive at a certain number, to arrive at a certain number, one part of that measure. Aribusin et Coen ARMAMENT. n. f. [armamentum, Lat.] A force equipped for war; generally used of a naval force.

ARMAMENTARY. n. f. [armamentarium, Lat.] An armory; a magazine or arsenal of warlike implements. Dict.

ARMAMENTARY. n. f. [armamentarium, Lat.] An armory; a magazine or arsenal of warlike implements. Dict.

ARMAMENTARY. n. f. [armamentarium, Lat.] An armory; a magazine or arsenal of warlike implements. Dict.

ARMATURE. n. f. [armature, Lat.] 1. Armour; something to defend the body from hurt. Others should be armed with hard shells; others with prickles; the rest, that have no such armature, should be ended with great softness and perspicacity. Ray on the Creation.

APOCALYPSE. n. f. [apocalypsis, Gr.] A revelation; an opening of future events. Dict.
The double armor is a more destructive engine than the tumultuary weapon. \textit{Decay of Prigg.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}}. \textit{adj.} [in heraldry.] Is used in respect of beasts and birds of prey, where their teeth, horns, feet, beaks, talons, or talcs, are of a different colour from the rest; as, he bears a cock or a falcon armed, or.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}er, Chair.} \textit{n. s.} [from armed and chair.] An elbow chair, or a chair with rests for the arms.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}en\textsc{n}e\textsc{i}a\textsc{n} Bole.} \textit{n. f.} A farty medicinal kind of earth, of a pale reddish colour, which takes its name from the country of Armenia.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}en\textsc{i}a\textsc{n} Ston.} \textit{n. f.} A mineral stone of a blue colour, spotted with green, black, and yellow; anciently brought only from Armenia, but now found in Germany, and the Tyrol. It bears a near resemblance to lapis lazuli, from which it seems only to differ in a degree of maturity; it being softer, and speckled with green instead of gold.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}en\textsc{t}a\textsc{l}.} \textit{adj.} [armenital or, armenite.]

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}en\textsc{t}i\textsc{n}e.} \textit{mentionus, Lat.} Belonging to a drowe or herd of cattle. \textit{Dit.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}en\textsc{t}o\textsc{s}e.} \textit{adj.} [armenates, Lat.] A bounding with cattle.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}g\textsc{a}u\textsc{nt.} adj.} [from arm and gaunt.] Slender as the arm.

So he nodded, and soberly did mount an armoured steed. \textit{Shak.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}d\textsc{h}ole.} \textit{n. f.} [from arm and hole]. The cavity under the shoulder.

Ticking is mott in the soles of the feet, and under the arm-holes, and on the sides. The caule is the thinnest of the skin in those parts, joined with the rareness of being touched there. \textit{Bacon. Natural History.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{i}\textsc{g}e\textsc{r}ous.} \textit{adj.} [from armiger, Lat.] an armory-bearing. Bearing arms.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}i\textsc{ll}a\textsc{r}y.} \textit{adj.} [armilla, Lat. a bracelet]. Refembling a bracelet.

When the circles of the mundane sphere are supposed to be drawn on the convex surface of a sphere, which is hollow within, and, after this, you imagine all parts of the sphere's surface to be cut away, except those parts on which such circles are described; then that sphere is called an armilary sphere, because it appears in the form of several circular rings, or bracelets, put together in a due position. \textit{Harris's Description of the Globe.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}i\textsc{l}l\textsc{a}t\textsc{t}ed.} \textit{adj.} [armillatus, Lat.] Having bracelets. \textit{Dit.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{i}ng\textsc{s}, n. f.} [in a slip.] The fame with wallatoes, being clothes hanging about the outside of the slip's upperworks fore and aft, and before the cumbre brigs. Some are also hung round the tops, called top armings. \textit{Chambers.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{it}\textsc{po\textsc{t}en\textsc{c}e.} n. f.} [from arma, arms, and potentia, power, Lat.] Power in war.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{it}\textsc{po\textsc{t}en\textsc{t}\textsc{y}.} adj.} [armitatorius, Lat.] Powerful in arms; mighty in war. The manifold linguit, and the armitatorius folier.

For if our God, the Lord armitatorius,
Those armed angels in our aid send,
That were at Dathan to his prophet sent,
Thou wilt come down with them.

The temple flock of Mars armitatorius. \textit{Dyd.}

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{i}t\textsc{ous}.} \textit{adj.} [armitoris, Lat.] Ruffling with armour.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}\textsc{ti\textsc{c}i}c\textsc{e}\textsc{t}ic.} \textit{n. f.} [armificium, Lat.] A short truce; a cessation of arms for a short time.

\textbf{A\textsc{rm}let.} \textit{n. f.} [from arm.] 1. A little arm; as, an armlet of the sea. 2. A piece of armour for the arm. 3. A bracelet for the arm.

And, when she takes thy hand, and doth seem Doth search what rings and armlets she can find.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{r}\textsc{m}or\textsc{r}e.} \textit{n. s.} [armorier, Fr.] 1. He that makes armours, or weapons. Now thrive the armiers, and honour's thought Rulgs solely in the breast of every man. Shak.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{r}\textsc{m}or\textsc{i}c\textsc{a}c.} \textit{n. f.} [erronously so written for armoricen.] A sort of volatile salt. \textit{See Ammoniac.}

\textbf{Arm\textsc{r}\textsc{m}or\textsc{r}c.} \textit{n. s.} [armorer, Fr.]

1. That makes armours, or weapons.

The whole division that to Mars pertains,
All trades of death that deal in steel for gains,
Were there the butchers, armiers, and smiths,
Who forges sharp'd fascinations, or the fythe. \textit{Dyd.}

When armiers temper in the ford
The keen-edged pole-axe, or the thinning sword,
The red-hot metal hisses in the lake. \textit{Pope.}

2. He that dresilles another in armour. The armiers the accomplishment of knights,
With busy hands closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation. \textit{Shakespeare.}

The morning he was to join battle with Harold,
His armier put on his backpiece before, and his breastplate behind. \textit{Chambers.}

\textbf{Arm\textsc{r}\textsc{m}or\textsc{i}c\textsc{a}l.} \textit{adj.} [armorial, Fr.] Belonging to the arms or effigechon of a family, as ensigns armorial.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{r}\textsc{m}or\textsc{i}st.} \textit{n. s.} [from armory.] A person skilled in heraldry. \textit{Dyd.}

1. The place in which arms are repos'd for use.

The sword
Of Michael, from the armory of God,
Was giv'n him temper'd so, that neither keen.
Nor solid, might refit that edge.

With plain heroic magnitude of mind,
And celest in our arm'd;
Their armours and magazines contemns. \textit{Milton.}

Let a man consider these virtues, with the contrary, and then, as out of a full armory, or magazine, let him furnish his confidence with text of scripture. \textit{South.}

2. Armour; arms of defence.

Nigh at hand
Celestial armory, shield's, helms, and spears,
Hung high, with diamond flamig, and with gold.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{o}r\textsc{i}al.} \textit{n. f.} Or armors, arms, and poten\textsc{i}a, power, Lat.] Power in war.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{o}r\textsc{i}pe\textsc{nt}e.} \textit{adj.} [armipotent, Lat.] Powerful in arms; mighty in war. The manifold linguit, and the armipotent folier.

For if our God, the Lord armipotent,
Those armed angels in our aid send,
That were at Dathan to his prophet sent,
Thou wilt come down with them.

But on the lower brow, and on a bent.

The temple flock of Mars armipotent. \textit{Dyd.}

\textbf{Arm\textsc{p}o\textsc{nous}.} \textit{adj.} [armiponus, Lat.] Ruffling with armour.

\textbf{Arm\textsc{o}r\textsc{e}r\textsc{c}e.} \textit{n. s.} [from arm and eir.] The hollow place under the shoulder.
be arrays, where he is indicted and brought forth to his trial. Cowell. Summon a suff. that we may arrange our most dist. lady; for an act hath been publickly acted, so shall the have
A full & open trial. Shakespeare.
2. To accl. to charge with faults in general, as in controversy, in a fatere.
Reveres of nature shal such copies them
Arrage thos originals of Maro's pen? Ryfmann.
He on the ground, will quickly endeavor to lay them there: for while he depletes him, he arraigns and condemns him in his heart.
Smith.
3. It has for before the fault.
My own enemies I shall no sooner suffer & if your lordship has any, they will not arrange you want of knowledge.
Dryden's Dedication to the Aeries.
ARRAIGNMENT, n. f. [from arraign.]
The act of arranging; an accusation;
a charge.
In the first fate, which seems only an arrangement of the whole, there is a latent admonition to avoid ill women.
Dryden.
To ARRANGE. v. a. [arrange, Fr.]
To put in the proper order for any purpose.
I chance'd this day
To see two knights in travel on my way,
(A forty fight) arraignment in battle new.
Fairly Queen.
How effectually is its multiple fibres arranged, and with what judgment are its columns and furrows disposed?
Cheyne.
ARRANGEMENT, n. f. [from arrange.]
The act of putting in proper order;
the state of being put in order.
There is a proper arrangement of the parts in claftick bodies, which may be facilitated by use.
Cheyne.
ARRANT. adj. [a word of uncertain etymology, but very ancient use.]
Be gone; away; a word of expulsion, or avoiding.
Saint Withold follower third the world.
He met the night-mare, and her name told,
Bliss her right and her tooth plight.
And arsyt thee, with, arsyt thee right.
Shakespeare.
ARQUEBUS, n. f. [Fr. speletalfeal)
A hand gun. It seems to have anciently meant much the same as our carabine, or fusée.
A barquefors, or ordnance, will be farther heard from the mouth of the piece, than backwards or on the piece. &c.
ARQUEBUSIER, n. f. [from arquebuse.]
A fodder armed with an arquebuse.
He compassed them in with fifteen thousand arquebuseies, whom he had brought with him well appointed.
Knels.
ARRACH, ORRACH, OR O' RAGE. n. f.
One of the quickest plants both in coming up and running in; to feed.
Its leaves are very good in pasture.
Monti'mer's Hofbands.
ARRACK, OR ARACK. n. f. The word
Arrack is an Indian name for strong waters of all kinds; for they call our spirits and brandy arrack.
But what we understand by the name arrack, is no other than a spirit procured by distillation from a vegetable juice tapped off, through which flows by incision out of the cocoa-nut tree. Chambers.
I find this to be better known for choice of chins, tea, arrack, and other Indian goods.

To ARRaign. v. a. [arrange, Fr. to set in order.]
1. To set a thing in order, or in its place.
One is said to arrange a writ in a country, that fits it for trial before the justices of the circuit. A prisoner is said to be arraigned, where he is indicted and brought forth to his trial. Cowell.

Arraigned. n. f. [from arraign, Fr.]
Corruptly; shamefully.
General tears are arraigned out as mourning
L'Eprange.
A term in n. f. [from arraign, a town in Artois, where hangings are woven.
Tapistry; hangings woven with images.
Tapesty, to half, which was on every side
With rich array and costly array sight.
Fairly Queen.
He's going to his mother's closet;
Behind the arrai'll convey myself,
To hear the proceeds.
Shakespeare.
As he shall pass the galleries, I'll place
A guard behind the screen.

ARRAIGNMENT, n. f. [a word used by Spenser in the preter tenfe, of which I have not found the present, but suppose he derived arraich from arrache, Fr.] Seized by violence.

His ambitious sons unto them twain
Arraigned the rule, and from their father drew.
Fairly Queen.

ARRAIGN, n. f. [array, Fr. arrai, Sp. arriade, Ital. from age, Teut. arraide.
It was adopted into the middle Latin, milite arraeiaturum, Knighton.]
1. Order, chiefly of war.
The earl slipping them scattered near the army, sent one to command them to the army, Hayter.
Wes't thou fowt to feed
That might require an army, thy evil
Of conduct would be such, that all the world
Could not sustain thy proved.
Miller.
A general fes his army in array
In vain, unless he fight and win the day. Denham.

2. Drefs.
A rich throne, as bright as a sunny day,
On which there sat most bright embellished
With royal robes, and gorgeous array,
A maidens queen.
In this remembrance, Emily, ere day.
Arris, and dress'd herself in rich array. Dryden.

3. In law. Arras, of the Fr. array, i.e.
ords, the ranking or setting forth of a jury or inquest of men inpanneld upon on a cause. Thence is the verb to array a pannel, that is, to set forth one by another the men inpanneld. Cowell.
To ARRAYS. v. a. [array, old Fr.]
1. To put in order.
2. To deck; to dres; to adorn the person:
with the particle with or in.
Deck thyself now with majesty and excellency, and array thyself with glory and beauty. Job, xli. 10.
Now went forth the morrow.
Such as in highest heaven, array'd in gold.
Emptiny.
One wrapp'd array'd the corpse, and one they spred
O'er his clad eyes, and wrap'd around his head.
Dryden.

3. In law. See ARAY in law.
ARARRERS, n. f. [from arrar.]
Officers who anciently had the care of seeing the soldiers duly appointed in their armour.
Cowell.

ARREAR. n. f. [arriere, Fr. behind.]
Behind. This is the primitive signification of the word, which, though not now in use, seems to be retained by Speyer.
See Rear.
To leave with speedy Atlanta fwait arrar.
Through forests wild and unfructed land
To chaft the lion, boar, or rugged bear.
Fairly Queen.

ARRAIR, n. f. That which remains behind unpaid, though due.
See ARRBAGE.

His boon is giving his knight has gain'd the day,
But lost the prize: th' arrairs are yet to pay.
Dryden.
If a tenant run away in arrar of some rent, the land remains; that cannot be carried away, or lost.
Swift.
It will comfort our grand-children, when they see a few rage hung up in Wiltminter-hall, which contain an hundred thousands, whereas of what are paying the arrairs, and boating, as boggars do, that their sons and fathers were open trial.

ARRAINE. n. f. A word now little used.
[from arriers, Fr. behind.]
Arrage is the remainder of an account, or a sum of money remaining in the hands of an account or, more generally, any money unpaid at the due time as arraign of rent.
Cowell.

Paget.
A R T

head.] A water plant, so called from the resemblance of its leaves to the head of an arrow. Did. A R R O W Y. adj. [from arrow.] Confiniting arrows. Did. Arrows were made both of iron and of wood, the forms of battle tangles, how quickly they were fired, and flying, behind them flew. Sharp shafts of arrows flew against the face. Othello. Arsen. n. s. [arsene, Sax.] The butts, or hind part of an animal. To hang an Arse. A vulgar phrase, signifying to be tardy, sluggishly, or dilatory. For Hudibras wore but one spur, as wisely knowing, he would not be or so one foot's horse. The other would not hang as it should. Hudibras. Arse-foot. n. s. A kind of water-fowl, called also a disappoint. Did. Arse-smart. n. s. [periscarios, Lat.] An herb.

A R S E N A L. n. s. [arsenal, It.] A repository of things requisite to war; a magazine of military stores. I would have a room for the old Roman Invenments of war, where you might see the ancient military furniture, as it might have been in an arsenal of old Rome. Addison. Arsenical. adj. [from arsenick.] Containing arsenic; consisting of arsenic. Arsenic is a mineral substance, or one engendered by arsenical fumes under ground, it is incapable of cure. There are arsenals, or other like noxious minerals, laid under earth. Woodward. Arsenick. n. s. [arsivin.] A ponderous mineral substance, volatile and inflammable, which gives a whiteness to metals in fusion, and proves a violent corrosive poison; of which there are three sorts. Natric or yellow arsenick, called also purgimentum or opthalm, is chiefly found in copper-mines. White or crystalline arsenick is extracted from the native kind, by bbling it with a proportion of sea salt; the smallest quantity of crystalline arsenick, being mixed with any metal, absolutely destroys its malleability; and a single grain will turn a pound of copper into a beautiful seeming silver, but without quality. Red arsenick is a preparation of the white, made by adding to it a mineral sulphur.

Chambers. Arsenick is a very deadly poison; held to the fire, it emits fumes, but digests very little. Woodward or Fussell.

A R T. n. s. [arts, Fr. ars, Lat.] 1. The power of doing something taught by nature and instinct; as, to walk is natural, to dance is an art. Art is properly an habitual knowledge of certain rules and maxims, by which a man is governed and directed in his actions. South. With each grace of nature and of art, Page. Even copious Dryden wanted, or forgot; The last and greatest art, the art to blot. Pope. 2. A science; as, the liberal arts. Arts that respected the mind were ever reported nobler than those that serve the body. Jem Jenyns. When did his pen on learning fix a brand? Or taille at arts he did not understand? Dryden. 3. A trade. This observation is afforded as by the art of making sugar. Boyle. 4. Artfulness; skill; dexterity.

A R T H R Y T I C. adj. [from artibus.] 1. Goody; relating to the gout. Frequent changes produce all the articular difcases. Arbuthnot. 2. Relating to joints. Serpents, worms, and leeches, though some want binges, and all external articulations, yet have they the articular analogies; and, by the motion of viscous and mucous parts, are able to make progression. Brown's Vulgar Errors. Arthritic. n. s. [arthritus, from arthros, a joint.] Any dissembler that afflicts the joints, but the gout particularly. Quincy. Arthichoke. n. s. [artichoidus, Fr.]

An artichoke, a thistle, but having large scaly leaves shaped like the crown of the pine-tree; the bottom of each scale, as also at the bottom of the florets, is a thick flaky establisheable substance. Millar. No herbs have curled leaves, but cabbage and cabbage lettuce; none have double leaves, one belong to the thistle, another to the fruit or seed, but the artichoke. Bacon. Arthichokes contain a rich, nutritious, and stimulating juice. Arbuthnot on Alimenta. Arthichoke of Jerusalem. A species of sun-flower. Artick. adj. [it should be written artick, from articulatus.] Northern; under the Bear. See Artick. But they would have wintiers like those beyond the arctic circle; for the sun was to be degrees from them. In the following example it is, contrary to custom, spelt after the French manner, and accented on the last syllable. To you, who live in chill degree, As map informs, of fifty-three, And do not much for cold azure, By bringing thither fifty-one, Methinks all climes should be alike, From tropic e'tn to pole artick. Dryden. Many believe the article of remission of sins, but believe it without the condition of repentance. We believe the article otherwise than God intended it. Holker. Aricle. n. s. [articulus, Lat.] 1. A part of speech, as, the an; the man. 2. A single clause of a connect; a particular part of any complex thing. Laws touching matters of order are changeable by the power of the church; articles concerning doctrine, not so. Heber. As we have the summary of all our griefs, When time shall serve to floor in articles. Shaksp.

Many believe the article of remission of sins, but believe it without the condition of repentance. We believe the article otherwise than God intended it. Holker. All the precepts, promises, and threatenings of the gospel will rise up in judgment against us; and the articles of our faith will be many articles of accussion; and the great weight of our charge will be this. That we did not obey the gospel which we professed to believe; that we made confession of the christian faith, but lived like heathens. Tilloson. You have small reason to complain upon that arti-

A R T I C L E. n. s. [from the noun art.] To flippulate; to make terms. Such Such in love's warfare is my cafe,
I may not artice the grace,
Having put love at last to show this face. Dull.
He had not infring'd the least particle of what was intended, that they should at one mark, and their ends were concentric. Houet's Fable, Perig.
I'th be said, God chose the successor; that is manifestly not so in the story of Jephtha, where artifices, or teles, did not make them: and judges over them. Locke.

To article, q.q.v. To draw up in particular articles.

1. Distinct; divided, as the parts of a body may be divided by joints; not continued in one texture, as articulate founds that are, sounds varied and changed at proper pauseth, in opposition to the voice of animals, which admit no such variety.

2. Branched out into articles. This is a meaning little in use.

3. To form words; to utter distinct syllables; to speak as a man.

4. To draw up in articles. These things, indeed, you have articulated, Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches, To face the garnish of rebellion. Shakespeare.

5. To make terms; to treat. These two latter significations are unusual.

Send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate
For their own good and ours. Shakespeare.

To articulate, v. n. To speak distinctly.

Articularly, adv. [from articulate.]
In an articulate voice.

The secret purpose of our heart, we least articulately spoken to God, who needs not our words to discern our meaning. Dryden.

Articulateness, n. f. [from articulate.]
The quality of being articulate.

Articulation, n. f. [from articulate.]
1. The jointure, or joint of bones.

With relation to the motion of the bones in their articulations, there is a twofold liquid prepared for the infusion and lubrication of their joints; one a lubricant, and a mucilage, supplied by the glandulars seated in the articulation. Ray.

2. The act of forming words.

I conceive that an extreme small, or an extreme great sound, cannot be articulate, but that the articulation requires a mediocrity of sound. Ray.

By articulation I mean a peculiar motion and figure of some parts belonging to the mouth, between the throat and lips. Holden.

3. In body, the union of joints or knots in some plants as the cane. Artusius.

Artificer, n. f. artificium, Lat.

1. An artif; a manufacturer; one by whom any thing is made.

The lights, doors, and flairs, rather directed to the use of the guests, than to the eye of the artificer. Sidney.

The great artifcr would be more than ordinarily exact in drawing his own picture. Smirh.

In the practices of artificers, and the manufactures of several kinds, the end being proposed, we find out ways. Locke.

2. A forger; a contriver.

He, soon swear,
Each perturbation smooth'd with outward calm,
Artificer of fraud; 1 and was the first
That perj'd falsehood under family worm. Sidney.

'Tis artificer of lies
Renews th' alarum, and his last battery tries. Dryden.

3. A dexterous or artifical fellow: not in use.

Let you alone, cunning artificer. Ben Jonson.

Artificial, adj. [artifices, Fr.]

1. Made by art; not natural.

British arts, used the artificial day of torches to lighten the spirits their inventions could contrive. Dryden.

The curtains closely drawn the light to fixen,
As he had contriv'd to lie unseen
Thus cover'd with an artificial night,
Sleep did his slumber, and was the art,
Dryden.

There is no natural motion perpetual; yet it does not hinder but that it is possible to contrive such an artificial revolution. Within.

2. Fiditious; not genuine.

Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile,
And cry, Content, to that which grieves my heart,
And wet my cheeks with artificial teares. Shakespeare.

The restitution which we cannot reconcile to public good, is supported by an obfolute party, and then with usual methods confirmed by an artificial majority. Scifius.

3. Artful; contrived with skill.

These seem to be the more artificial, as those of a single person the more natural governments. Tingle.

Artificial Arguments. In rhetoric.

Are proofs on considerations which arise from the genius, industry, or invention of the orator; which are thus called, to distinguish them from laws, authorities, citations, and the like, which are said to be artificial arguments.

Artificial Lies, on a fitter or scale, are lines so contrived as to represent the logarithmic lines and tangents; which, by the help of the line of numbers, solve with tolerable exactness, questions in trigonometry, navigation, &c.

Artificial Numbers, are the fame with logarithms.

Artificially, adv. [from artificial.]

1. Artfully; with skill; with good contrivance.

How cunningly he made his faultiness left, how artificiously he let out the tummors of his own confciences, and made them fly. Ray.

Should any one be call'd upon a defalbe instant, and find there a palace artificially contriv'd, and curiously adorned. Ray.

2. Artly; not naturally.

It is covered on all sides with earth, crumbled into powder, as if it had been artificially sifted. Addison.

Artificious, adj. [from artificial.]

Artificer, n. f. artificium, Lat.

Artillery, n. f. It has no plural. artillerie, Fr.

1. Weapons of war; always used of military weapons.

And Jonathan gave his artillery unto his lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them unto the city. 1 Samuel.

2. Cannon; great ordnance.

Have I not asked great ordnance in the field?
And he'n artillery thunder in the skies? Shakespeare.

3. To the Tower with all the haste I can, To view th' artillery and ammunition. Shakespeare.

Upon one wing the artillery was drawn, being sixteen pieces, every piece having pioneers to plain the ways. Raymond.

4. The murder of my heart. Guardian.

If he that views a fort to take it, Plants his artillery 'gainst the weakest place. Donkson.

Artisan, n. f. [French.]

1. Artif; professor of an art.

What are the most judicious artifices, but the mischief of nature? Wilton's Architecture.

2. Bent and helpful artifan;* the artificer.

3. Bent of painters, if you can; With your many-coloured art.

2. Manufacturer; low tradesman.

I who had none but generals to oppose me, must have an artifan for my antagonist. Addison.

Artist, n. f. [artifices, Fr.]

1. The professor of an art, generally of an art manual.

How to build ships, and dreadful ordnance canse, Instruct the artifices, and reward their haits. Waller.

Rich with the spoils of many a conquer'd land, All arts and artifices Thescus could command, Who fol'd his hire, or wrought his public service. The master-painters and the carvers came.

Drydens. When I made this, an artifec undertooke to imitate it; but using another way, fell much short. Dryden.

3. A skillful man; not a novice.

If any one thinks himself an artif in this, let him number up the parts of his child's body. Laete.

Artlessly, adv. [from artless.]

1. In an artless manner; without skill.

2. Naturally; sincerely; without craft. Pipe.

And truth, though never to low or vulgar, are yet pleasing, when openly and artlessly represented. Pipe.

Artless, adj. [from art and lies.]

1. Unskilful; wanting art; sometimes with the particle of.
Who then is Paul, and who is Apollo, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man.

Their figure being printed,
As just before, I think, hinted,
Alma inform'd can try the case.

The republick is shut up in the great duke's dominions, who at present is very much incensed against it. The occasion is as follows.

Addison on Italy.

10. As it were; in some fort.

As for the daughters of king Edward IV, they thought king Richard had said enough for them; and took them to be out of the king's party, because they were in his power, and at his disposal.

Bacon's Henry VII.

11. While; at the same time that.

To each other, it whittled as it flew,
And as the brands were green, so dropped the dew;
Infected as it fell with fowt of sanguine hue.

Dryden.

These haughty words Alexio's rage procures,
And frightened Taurus trembled at the looks.

Dryden.

So the pure limpid streams, when foul with stains Of rushing torrents, and descending rains, Works itself clear, and as it runs refines.

Addison's Cato.

12. Because.

He that commanded the injury to be done, is bound; then he did it; and they also are obliged, who did not do it, but without the thing could not have been done.

Taylor.

13. Because it is; because they are.

The kernels draw out of the earth juice fits to nourish the tree, as those that would be trees themselves.

Bacon.

Before the place.
A hundred doors a hundred entries grace;
As many voices issue, and the found
Of Sybil's words as many times rebound.

Dryden.

15. How; in what manner.

Men are generally permitted to publish books, and contradict others, and even themselves, as they please, with as little danger of being confuted, as of being understood.

Boyle.

16. With; answering to like or fame.

Sifters, well met; whither away so fast?
—Upon the like devotion as yourself,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Shakespeare. Richard III.

17. In a reciprocal sense, answering to as.

Every offence committed in the state of nature, may, in a sense, be still punished, and as far forth as it may in a commonwealth. Ease.

As face it is good, that human nature should exist; so certain it is, that the circular revolutions of the earth and planet, rather than other motions which might as possibly have been, do declare God.

Bentley.

18. Going before as, in a comparative sense; the first as being sometimes underfoot.

Sempomundus is as brave a man as Cadoc. Addison.

Bight as the sun, and like the morning fresh.

Graevill.

19. Anwering to such.

It is not every man's interest, that there should be such a governor of the world as defgris our happiness, as would govern us for our advantage.

Tillotson.

20. Having so to answer it; in a conditional sense.

As far as they carry light and conviction to any other man's understanding, so far, I hope, my last but may be of use to him.

Locke.

21. So is sometimes understood.

As in my speculations I have endeavoured to extinguish passion and prejudice, I am still desirous of doing fame good in this particular.

Spedding.
Aries, which rises with the sun or star in a right sphere. Oblique ascension is an arch of the equator intercepted between the first point of Aries, and that point of the equator which rises together with a star in an oblique sphere.

Ascension-day. The day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, commonly called Holy Thursday; the Thursday before Whitsuntide.

Ascriptive. Adj. [from ascriptive.] Beccribing a star, or other object, to a given point. Astar's ascension is its 4.

Ascensive adj. [from ascend.] In a state of ascension: not in use.

The cold augments when the days begin to increase, though the sun be then ascensive, and returning from the winter tropic.

Ascendent. N. f. [ascendent, Lat.]
1. Rife; the act of rising; the act of mounting.
2. By such a vast ascendent, or to such a height.

Ascent. N. f. [ascends, Lat.]
1. To make certain; to fix, to establish.

A wide flat cannot be pleasant in the Elysian fields, unless it be furnished with divided valleys and swelling fields.

Ascertained. N. a. [ascertained, Fr.]
1. To make certain; to fix; to establish.

The divine law both of ascertainment the truth, and suplicity unto the course of other laws.

Ascertainment. N. f. [from ascertained.]
1. The person that proves or establishes.

The Saviour's ascension is an act of admission into the elect.

Asctic. N. f. [from ascetic.] Becriting a star, or other object, to a given point. Astar's ascension is its 4.

Ascription. N. f. [ascryin.] 1. The act of ascendency or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascription. N. f. [ascryin.] 1. The act of ascendency or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascendancy. N. f. [from ascent.] Influence; power.

Watts has some ascendency over understanding, and at what time seemed decent, appears in future years, and, with ascendent brightness, Captivity led captive through the air.

Ascension. N. f. [ascent, Lat.]
1. The act of ascending or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascent, in astronomy, is either right or oblique. Right ascension of the sun, or a star, is that degree of the equinocial, counted from the beginning of Aries, which rises with the sun or star in a right sphere. Oblique ascension is an arch of the equator intercepted between the first point of Aries, and that point of the equator which rises together with a star in an oblique sphere.

Ascension-day. The day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, commonly called Holy Thursday; the Thursday before Whitsuntide.

Ascriptive. Adj. [from ascriptive.] Becriting a star, or other object, to a given point. Astar's ascension is its 4.

Ascensive adj. [from ascend.] In a state of ascension: not in use.

The cold augments when the days begin to increase, though the sun be then ascensive, and returning from the winter tropic.

Ascendent. N. f. [ascendent, Lat.]
1. Rife; the act of rising; the act of mounting.
2. By such a vast ascendent, or to such a height.

Ascent. N. f. [ascends, Lat.]
1. To make certain; to fix, to establish.

The divine law both of ascertainment the truth, and suplicity unto the course of other laws.

Ascertainment. N. f. [from ascertained.]
1. The person that proves or establishes.

The Saviour's ascension is an act of admission into the elect.

Asctic. N. f. [from ascetic.] Becriting a star, or other object, to a given point. Astar's ascension is its 4.

Ascription. N. f. [ascryin.] 1. The act of ascendency or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascription. N. f. [ascryin.] 1. The act of ascendency or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascendancy. N. f. [from ascent.] Influence; power.

Watts has some ascendency over understanding, and at what time seemed decent, appears in future years, and, with ascendent brightness, Captivity led captive through the air.

Ascension. N. f. [ascent, Lat.]
1. The act of ascending or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Ascent, in astronomy, is either right or oblique. Right ascension of the sun, or a star, is that degree of the equinocial, counted from the beginning of Aries, which rises with the sun or star in a right sphere. Oblique ascension is an arch of the equator intercepted between the first point of Aries, and that point of the equator which rises together with a star in an oblique sphere.

ASH

the cause of flame if a noun, and to if a verb.

Præcisely publickly the doctrine of Jesus Christ, not being of them the word of God, or of any practices enjoyned by it. "Taylor's Holy Living.
One would have thought he would have third;
better throned.
With modestly, and was of a staid move. Dryden.
This I have shadowed, that you may not be of them of that hero, whose protection you undertake.
ASH-COLOURED, adj. [from ash and co-lower]. Coloured between brown and grey, like the bark of an ashen branch.
Clay, ash-coloured, was part of a fragment which lay above the strata of stone. Woodward on Paffis.
ASHEN, adj. [from ash]. Made of ash wood.

At once he falls, and threw
His oaken spears, which quivered as it flew. Dryden.
ASHES, n. f. 1. She represents the sanguary. [arca,
Sax. ashe, Dutch.
1. The remains of any thing burnt.

This late division, grown between the piers,
Burns under smirched and long'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame.
Shakspeare, Henry VI.
2. Contains a very fertile soil, and are the best manure for cold lands, if kept dry, that the rain doth not wash away their faint.
Maritioner's HHs.
2. The remains of the body; often used in poetry for the carcase, from the ancient practice of burning the dead.
Poor key-col'd figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster.
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood! Shakspeare.
To great Læres I bequeath
A talk of grief, his ornaments of death;
Let, when the fate his royal ashes claim,
The Grecian marlons mark their spotless names.
Pope.
ASHLAR, n. f. [with masons.] Free stones as they come out of the quarry, of different lengths, breadths, and thicknesses.
ASHLEERING, n. f. [with builders.]
Quartering in garrets, about two foot and a half or three foot high, perpendicularly to the floor, and reaching unto the under side of the rafters.
Builder's Diet.
ASHORE, adv. [from ash and shore.]
1. On shore; on the land.
The poor Englishman riding in the road, having all that he brought thither averse, would have undone.
2. To the shore; to the land.
We may as bootles spend our vain command,
As fend our presents to the levies
To come averse.
Shakspeare, Henry V.
May thy billows rowl averse.
The beryl, and the golden ore.
Milton's Comus.
Moord in a Chian creek, averse I went,
And all the following night in Chion spent.
Ashby's Ode.
ASHWENDAY, n. f. The first day of Lent, so called from the ancient custom of sprinkling ashes on the head.
ASHWEN, n. f. [from ash and wend.] An herb.
ASHY, adj. [from ash.]
Ash-coloured; pale; inclining to a whitish-grey.
Oft have I seen a thinly parted ghost
Of oph's semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless.
Shakspeare.
VOL. I.

ASK

1. To one side; out of the perpendicular direction.
The Himm muf'd in, and Arcite fixed agoast.
The flames were blowed of the, yet thereon bright.
Fanned by the wind, and gave a ruffled light.
Dryden.
2. To another part; out of the true direction.
He had no brother; though it be a comfort-ous thing for kings to have it, yet it draweth
the subiects eyes a little aside.
Bacon.
3. From the company; as, to speak aside.
He took him aside from the multitude.
Mark, vii. 35.
ASKINARY, adj. [专线ius, Lat.] Belonging to an afs.
ASKINE, adj. [from anus, Lat.]
Belonging to an afs.
You shall have more ado to drive our dulled youth, our dracks and flunks from such nurture, than we have now to hale our cheerful and hopeful wits to that afinity feast of low-thrifts and brambletries.
Milton.
To ASK, v. a. [archaic, Saxon.]
1. To petition; to beg: sometimes with an accusative only; sometimes with for.
When thou dost ask me beding, 1'll kneel now,
And ask of them of their prayers.
Shakspeare.
We have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet will ask,
That, if we fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hands.
Shakspeare.
In long journeys, afs your matter have to give as to the horses.
Swift.
2. To demand; to claim; as, to ask a price for goods.
AFS you must give me such and such,
and I will give according as ye shall fay unto me;
and give me the damsel to wife.
Gems, xxix. 12.
He saw his friends, who, whenmen's the agree their funerals solemnly, and dfs their quiet graves.
Dryden's Aëmas.
3. To question.
O inhabitant of Aros, stand by the way and cry, afs he that standeth, and he that eateth,
Thorns, ashes. 12th, 29.
To enquire; with after before the thing.
He said, wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? and he bless'd him there.
Gems, xxxii. 29.
4. To require, as physically necessary.
As it is a great point of art, when our matter requires it, to enlarge and vee out all fail; to be take it in and contract it, is no less praiseworthy when the argument doth ask it.
Ben Jonson.
A lump of one in the bottom of a mine will be thirtied by two men's strength; which, if you bring it to the top of the earth, will afs five men to fir it.
Bacon.
The administration passeth into different hands at the end of two months, which contributes to dispatch; but any exigence of estate afs a much longer time to conclude in any design to its maturity.
Addison.
To ASK, v. n.
1. To petition; to beg: with for before the thing.
My son, haft thou finned? do so no more, but asf pardon for thy former sins.
Excles. xxii. 11.
If he asks for bread, will he give him a stone?
Matt. vii. 9.
2. To make enquiry; with for or of before the thing. To enquire.
Stand ye in the ways, and see, and afs for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find red for your souls.
Jeromes vi. 16.
For afs now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day God created man upon the earth, and afs from the one side of hewen unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it.
Deut. iii. 32.
ASK, v. a., as do all come from the Saxon ace, an afs tree.
Giffen's Camden.
ASKANCE, v. [adv. Sideways; obliquely.
Zealman, keeping a countenance afsane, as the underfoot him nor, told him, it became her evil.
Sidney.
His wanni est upon them bent afsane,
And when he saw their labours well succeed,
He wept for rage, and threaten'd dire mischance.
Taeufs.
Some day, he bid his angels turn afsane
The peatures earth, twice ten degrees, and more,
From the sun's sake; they with labour pub'd
Oblique the centrick globe.
Milton.
ASKAUNT, v. a. Obliquely; on one side.
At this Achilles roll'd his furious eyes,
First'd on the king aphantus; and thus reply'd
O, impudent.
Dryden.
Since the space, that lies on either side
The polar orb, is without limits wide,
Grant that if the fun had had any to prefer
A fast afsane, but one diameter
Lost to the light by that unhappy place.
This globe had lain a frozen from time immemorial.
Blackmore.
ASKER, n. f. [from ask.]
1. Petitioner.
Have you ever denied the other? and now again
On him that did not ask, but mock, below.
Shakspeare.
The greatness of the asf, and the finalness of the thing asked, had been sufficient to enforce his reports.
South.
2. Enquirer.
Every being satisfied, we may conclude, that all their conceptions of being in a place are the same.
Digby of Bodlet.
ASKER, n. f. A water newt.
ASK'ER, v. a. [from a and skew.] Aside;
with contempt.
For when ye mildly look with lovely hue,
Then is my soul with life and love inspir'd:
But when ye lowre, or look on me afsker,
Then do I die.
Shakspeare.
They take it, Sirs, as it was writ,
Nor look afsker at what it faith;
There's no petition in it.
Prior.
To ASKER, v. a. [from a and flake, or flack.] To remit; to mitigate; to flac-ken.
Obilote.
No skill can flint, nor reason can afsker.
Shakspeare.
Shall I forget to afsker thy raging fire,
Thou in me kindled much more great desire.
Shakspeare.
ASLAN'T, adv. [from ash and flant.]
Obliquely; on one side; not perpendicu-arily.
There is a willow grows afsant a brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glasses fire.
Shakspeare's Hamlet.
He fell; the shaft
Drove thro' his neck afsant; he spurns the ground,
And the foul fires through the weason's wound.
Dryden.
ASLEEP, adv. [from ash and sleep.]
1. Sleeping; at rest.
How many thousands of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour afsant? O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurks, how have I frighted thee?
Shakspeare.
The diligence of trade, and noiseful gain,
And luxury more fast afsleep were laid
All was the nights', and in her silent reign,
No found the const of nature did invade.
Dryden.
There is no difference between a person afsant, and in an apoplexy, but that the one can be awak-
ked, and the other cannot.
Arabberon in Dunciad.
Q. 2. To
A SP

2. To sleep.

If a man watch too long, it is odd, but he will fall asleep. Bacon's Essay.

Thus done the tale, to bed they creep,
By whispering winds out half asleep.

Aslo're, adj. [from a and slop]. With declivity; obliquely; not perpendicularly.

Set them not upright, but slope, a reasonable depth under the ground.

The curle slope.

Glance'd on the ground, with labour I must earn
My bread: what harm? Idleness had been worse.
My labour will sustain me. Milton.

The knight did slope,

And face on further side slope. Holinshed.

Ass'natous, adj. [from a, priv., and omen, a body]. Incorporeal, or without a body.

A. n. f. [Aspis]. A kind of Asp'pick. serpents, whose poison kills without a possibility of applying any remedy. It is said to be very small, and peculiar to Egypt and Libya. Those that are bitten by it, die within three hours; and the manner of their dying being by sleep without any pain, Cleopatra chose it. Calmet.

High-minded Cleopatra, that with stroke
Of Asp's ring herself did kill,

Fair Queen, Scorpion, and Asp, and amphiphas dire,

And dislas. Milton.

A s p a l a t h u s. n. f. [Latin.]

1. A plant called the rose of Jerulalem, or our lady's rose.

2. The wood of a prickly tree, heavy, oleaginous, somewhat sharp and bitter to the taste. Aspalathus affords an oil of admirable scent, reputed one of the best perfumes. Chambers.

I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aspalathus, and I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrtles. Euseb. xxiv.

A s p a r a g u s. n. f. [Latin.]

The name of a plant. It has a roaceous flower of six leaves, placed orbicularly, out of whose centre rises the pointal, which turns to a soft globular berry, full of hard seeds. Miller.

A sp a r e x. adj. Asp'rates the wine with a feathar smell, especially if cut when they are white; and therefore have been suspected by some physicians, as not friendly to the kidneys; when they are older, and begin to ramify, they live this quality; but then they are not so agreeable. Avic.; G. Ainsworth. Aliments.

A s p e c t. n. f. [aspectus, Lat. It appears anciently to have been pronounced with the accent on the last syllable, which is now placed on the first.]

1. Look; air; appearance.

I have presented the tongue under a double aspect, such as may justify the definition, that it is the beauty and worst part. Government of the Tongue.

They are, in my judgment, the image or picture of a great ruin, and have the true aspect of a world lying in ruin. Burnet's History.

2. Countenance; look.

Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn fast tears,
Sham'd their aspect with store of childish drops.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

I am fearful: wherefore flows from thee thus?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well. Shakes. Yet had his aspect nothing of terror, but such a face as promis'd him favour. Dryden.

A s p e r a t e. v. a. [asperate, Lat.] To roughen; to make rough or uneven.

These corpuses of colour, insinuating themselves into all the pores of the body to be dyed, may asperse its superficial, according to the big- nesses and the mixture of the colours, Beil.
be by air, and impenetrable by water; suppos'd to be the mortar so much celebrated among the ancients, with which the walls of Babylon were laid. Observe.

ASPHEDEL. n.f. [L. asphodelus, Lat.] Day-lily. Asphodel were by the ancients planted near burying-places, in order to supply the manes of the dead with nourishment.

By thofe happy souls who dwell In yellow meads of asphodel. Pope.

ASPIC. n.f. [See Asp.] The name of a serpent.

Why did I say spiritus amphi adspiri's rage, And all the fiery monsters of the dart, To fite this day? Addison.

To ASPONATE. v. a. [aspirate, Lat.] To pronounce with aspiration, or full breath, as we aspire harp, harrow, and bag. To ASPIRATE. v. n. [aspirate, Lat.] To be pronounced with full breath.

Where a vowel ends a word, the next begins either by the consonant, or what is its equivalent; for our w and b aspire. Dryden.

ASPITATION. n.f. [aspiration, Lat.] Dift.

ASQUIN. adv. [asquinus, a.] Obliquity; not in the straight line of vision. A fiddle guide may direct the way better than five hundred who have contrary views, or look asquint, or shoot their eyes.

Ass. n.f. [asquin, Lat.]

1. An animal of burden, remarkable for sluggishness, patience, hardiness, courage of food, and long life. You have among you many a merchant's dave, Which, like your affins, and your dogs and molees, You use in algebra, and in fluxious parts, Because you bought them. Shakespeare.

2. A stupid, heavy, dull fellow; a mot, 1 do begin to perceive that I am made an ass. Shakespeare.

That such a crafty mother Should yield the world to this ass, a woman That bears all down with her brain; and yet her son Cannot take two from forty, for his heart, And leave eighteen. To ASSAIL. v. n. [assail, Fr.] To attack in a hostile manner, to assault, to fall upon; to invade. So when he saw his flattering arts to fail, With greedy force he 'gan the fort e' assail. Fairy Queen.

2. To attack with argument, countere; or motives applied to the affiff.

ASS. A word used with a preposition.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us affall the family of York. Shakespeare. She will not fly the force of soothing terms, Nor hide th'encounter of affalling eyes. Shakespeare. How have I fear'd your fate? I fear'd it most, When love affall'd you on the lybian coast. Dryd. All books he reads, and all he reads affall, From Dryden's Fables down to Dryad's Tales. Pope. In vain The woman, with reproach affall'd.

For who can move when fair Belinda falls? Pope.

ASSAILER. adj. [from assaill.] That which may be attacked.

Banquo, and his Prince, live. — But in them lies the essence eternal. — There's comfort yet, they are affailable, Shakespeare. Assaillant. n.f. [assaillant, Fr.] — He that attacks; in opposition to defendant. The fame was so well encountered by the defendants, that the ordinary of the affailable did indeed the better. Hammond.

I'll put myself in poor and mean attire. And with a kind of fumer imbrac my face, The like do you to fall as we pass along. And never tire my enemy, affailing. Shakespeare.

ASSAILANT. adj. Attacking; invading. As ev'ning dragon came, Affailing on the porches of fate. Tennyson.

ASSAILER. n.f. [from affail.] One who affails another.

Palladium hearken, so prudently affail our affails, that one of them drew him. Sidney.

ASSA. n.f. [from assart, from assaill, Fr. to clear away wood in a forest.] An off- fence committed in the forest, by plucking up those woods by the roots, that are thickets or covers of the forest, and by making them as plain as arable land. Cowell.

To ASSAERT. v. a. [assart, Fr.] To commit an affart. See Assart.

ASSASIN. n.f. [assaill, Fr. a word brought originally from Arabic where, about the time of the holy war, there were men called affasins, as is suppos'd for Asfaidean, who killed any man, without regard to danger, at the command of their chief.] A murderer; one that kills by treachery, or sudden violence.

In the very moment as the knight withdrew from the duke, this affassin gave him, with a back blow, a deep wound into his left side. Warton.

The Syrian king, who, to surprize One man, affassine like, had lev'd war, Warr unproclaim'd. Milton.

The old king is just murdered, and the perfon that did it is unknown. — Let the solders seize him for one of the affassinates, and let me alone to accuse him afterwards. Dryden.

Here hild affassins for their gain invade, And treach'rous pofturers urge their fatal trade. Cowell.

When the heirs of a murder, the enlarges more on the guilt of the perfiling than, the affassin. Addison.

Gore by hand'sh the revenging sword, Strow the dire pair, and gave to fam'ry flame The English affassin, and audacious dare. Pope. Ufeful, we grant, it serves what life requires. But, dreadful foe, the dark affassin bites. Pope.

ASSASINE. n.f. [from assassin.] The crime of an affassin; murder.

Were not all affassinates and popular insurrections wrongly charged, if the manifestations of the offenders indemnified them from punishment? Pope.

To ASSASINE. v. a. [from assasin.]

1. To murder by violence.

Huy, neighbors, my house is broken open by force, and I am ravished, and like to be affassinat'd. Dryden.

What could provoke this madman?

To affassinato so great, so brave a man? Phillips.

2. The word laying by treachery. This meaning is perhaps peculiar to Milton.

Such usage to your honourable lords Afforded me, affassinat'd and betray'd, Who durst not, with your whole united pow'rs, Affassinat'd theungren and innocent Milton.

ASSAination. n.f. [from affasinat.] The act of affassinating; murder by violence.

It were done quickly, if th' affassination Could tramme up the confegnate. Shakespeare. The duke finish'd his course by a wicked affassinat, and Clarenor.

ASSASSINATOR. n.f. [from affasinat.] Murderer; mankiller; the person that kills another by violence.

ASSAination. n.f. [assaill, roasted, Lat.] Roasting.

The egg expiring left in the exiliation or boiling; when, in the affassin or roasting, it will sometimes shew a death. Brown's Variorum Errata.

ASSAULT. n.f. [assaill, French.]

1. Attack; hostile onfe; opposed to defence.

I her spirit had been invincible against all affails. Shakespeare.

Not to be shok'd thyself, but all affails. Ballasses, like thy hoar cliffs the loud sea wave. Thomson.

2. Storm; a grid to the sea from the coast. Phaeton took at least a thousand men, and suddenly made 70 affails upon the city. 2 Mac. v. 5.

Q.2
ASS

After some days hege, he resolved to the forty an infant; he succeeded therein s far,
that he had taken the principal town and fort.
Bacon.

3. Hostile violence.

Themselves at discrep fell,
And crept into the town in middle space,
With horrible aux and fury fell.
Fairy Queen.

4. Invasion; hostility; attack.

After some unhappy auxs upon the prerogative by the parliament, which produced its dissolution, there followed a compromise.

Theories, built upon narrow foundations, are very hard to be supported against the auxs of opposition.
Locke.

5. In law. A violent kind of injury oftered to an human person, it may be conbuted by offering of a blow, or by a fearful speech.
Cowell.

6. It has upon before the thing assaulted.

To ASSAULT. n. a, [from the noun.] To attack; to invade; to fall upon with violence.
The king granted the Jews to gather themselves together, and to tax for their life, to destroy all the power that would assault them.
Ekh. vili. 11.

ASSAULTER. n. s, [from assault.] One who violently assaults another.

Neither liking their eloquence, nor fearing their might, we esteemed few words, in a just case, able to resist many unjust assaulting.
Sidney.

ASSAY. n. s, [easay, Fr. from which the ancient writers borrowed assay, according to the sound, and the latter essay, according to the writing; but the senses now differing, they may be considered as two words.]

1. Examination; trial.

This cannot be
By no essay of reason. 'Tis a pageant,
'To keep us in false gaze.
Shakespeare.

2. In law. The examination of meaures and powers weighed by the clerk of the market.
Cowell.

3. The first entrance upon any thing; a table for trial.
For well he wereen, that so glorious balt
Would tempt his guet to take thereof essay.
Fairy Queen.

4. Trial by danger or distress; difficulty; hardship.
She heard with patience all unto the end,
And strove to matter sorrowful essay.
Fairy Queen.
The men he preit but late,
To hard essay, or essay of need,
Yet arm'd to point in well attempted plate.
Fair.

Be sure to find
What I foretell thin, many a hard essay
Of dangers, and adversities, and pains.
Ere thou of Israel's creptre get hold fast.
Milton.

To ASSAY. n, a. [esay, Fr.]

1. To make trial of; to make experiment of.
One that to bounty never cas'd his mind,
Ne thought of honour ever did essay
His hard breath.
Steele.

Gray and Bryan obtained leave of the general a little to essay them; and so with some horsemen charged them home.
Hayward.

When unbehaved behaviour hath this drunkard picked out of my conversation, that he dare in this manner assay me?
Shakespeare.

2. To apply to, as the touchstone in essaying metals.

Whom assailed when sad Ere beheld,
Defeatured where he, approaching slight,
Soft words to his fierce passion the assay'd.
Milton.

3. To try; to endeavour.
David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go, for he had not proved it.

Sam. xvii. 39.

ASSAY'ER. n. s, [from assay.] An officer of the mint, for the due trial of silver, appointed between the master of the mint and the merchants that bring silver thither for exchange.
Cowell.
The smelters come up to the assayers within one in two hundred days.

ASSONATION. n. s, [affonatio, Lat.] Compliance with the opinion of another out of flattery or dissimulation.
Dikt.

ASSUMPTION. n. s, [from assume.] Contents.
Their arguments are but prevaricating, and subtle unto the care of our assumptions.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To ASSUME. v. a. [affir, Lat.]
1. To maintain; to defend either by words or action.

Your fosisters have assayed the party which they chose till death, and died for its defence.
Dryden.

2. To affirm; to declare positively.

To claim; to vindicate a title to.

In the dark dungeon of the limbs confin'd,
After the native skies, or its own heav'nly kind.

ASSURANCE. n. s, [from assure.]

1. The act of assuring.

2. Possession advanced.

Or any assurance to earth doth move, and will not believe with us it flanched still, because he hath probable reasons for it, and I no infallible sense or reason against it, I will not quarrel with his assurance.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

ASSURER. n. s, [from assure.] Maintainer;
vindicator; supporter; affirmor.

Among th' assurers of free reason's claim,
Our nation's not the least in worth or fame.
Dryden.

Faithful assurance of thy country's cause,
Britain with tears shall bathe thy glorious wound.
Prior.

It is a usual piece of art to undermine the authority of fundamental truths, by pretending to show how weak the proofs are, which their assurers employ in defence of them.

To ASSURER. v. a. [asserre, Lat.]
To serve, help, or second.
Dikt.

To ASSESS. v. a. [from assailre, Ital.]
To make an equilibrium, or balance.

To charge with any certain sum.

Before the receipt of them in this office, they were assailed by the affair of the time of the inquisition founds.
Bacon.

ASSESSION. n. s, [assessio, Lat.] A sitting down by one, to give assurance or advice.

Assessor. n. s, [esessor, Lat.]

1. The sum levied on certain property.

2. The act of assisting.

What greater immunity and happiness can there be to people than to be liable to laws, but what they make themselves? To be subject to no contribution, assessor, or any pecuniary levy whatsoever, but what they vote, and voluntarily give themselves.
Herrick.

Assessor. n. s, [esessor, Lat.]

1. The person that sits by another; generally used of those who assist the judge.

Minos, the first inquisitor, appears;
And lives and crimes, with his assessor, hears.
Round in his urn the blended balls he rolls,
Abhorred the judicious, and dooms the guilty fools.
Dryden.

2. He that sits by another as next in dignity.

To his Son.

Th' assessor of his throne was then that began.
Milton.
Twice stronger than his fire, who sat above,
Assessor to the tongue of thunder's love.
Dryden.

3. He
ASS

3. He that lays taxes; derived from affis.

ASSETS, n. f. [without the singular. [affix, Fr.] Goods sufficient to discharge that burden, which is cast upon the executor, or heir, in satisfying the debts and claims of an ancestor or others. Whoever pleads affets, saith nothing; but that the person, against whom he pleads, hath enough come to his hands, to discharge what is in demand. Cowell.

To ASSEVER. v. a. [affirvo, Lat.]

To ASSEVERATE. v. a. To affirm with great solemnity, as upon oath.

ASSEVERATION, n. f. [from asserevate.]

Solemn affirmation, as upon oath.

That which you are persuaded of, ye have it no otherwise than by your own only probable collection; and therefore such bold affirmations, as in him were admirable, should, in your mouths, be argu rashness.

Hudibras. And he that is used to the tongue I might add with vehement affirmations upon flight and trivial occasions.

Ray on the Creation.

The repetition gives a greater emphasis to the words, and agrees better with the vehemence of the speaker in making his affirmation.

Brown's Notes on the Odyssey.

ASS'HEAD. n. f. [from asi and head.] One flow of apprehension; a blockhead.

Will you help an asshead, and a coxcomb, and a fool, and a knave? All. Shaks. Ham.

ASSIDUITY, n. f. [assiduit, Fr. assiduitas, Lat.] Diligence; clofeness of application.

I have, with much pains and affi Bene, qualified myself for a nomenclator. Addison.

Can he, who has undertaken this, want the concurrence of the necessity of his own work, and the affiduity to acquaint himself of it? Rogers.

We observe the address and affi Bene they will use to contrive it. Rogers.

ASSIDUOUS, adj. [assidus, Lat.] Consistent in application.

And if by pray'r
Insistent I could hope to change the will
Of him who all things can, I would not cease
Towards his blissful crimes.

Minna.

The most assiduous talkers, and the most frequent talkers, are often half-witted people.

Government of the Tongue.

In summer, you fetch it from the same hands, as from greater freedom, and quitting her care for above two hours together; but in winter, when the room of the feast would chill the principles of life, and destroy the young one, the more assiduous in her attendance, and stays away but half the time.

Addison.

Each fall renew her little labour.
Nor justifies her assiduous neighbour.

Prior.

ASSIDUOUSLY, adv. [from assiduous.] Diligently; continually.

The trade, that obliges artificers to be assiduously conversant with their materials, is that of glassmakers. Stile.

The habitable earth may have been perplexed with the drizers, seeing it is assiduously drained and exhausted by the seas. Bentley.

To ASSIST, v. a. [affiger, Fr.] To befriend. Oboe.

To DIST. One of the assiduous cities was.

Their steadfast arms did mightily maintain. Spens.

ASSIEN'TO. n. f. [in Spanish, a contract or bargain.] A contract or convention between the king of Spain and other powers, for furnishing the Spanish dominions in America with negro slaves.

To ASSIGN, v. a. [affiger, Fr. assigne, Lat.]
ASS. The wife of a husband or other lord.

ASS'EE, n. f. [affaire, a meeting, Fr.]

1. A meeting of knights, or other particular men, with the bailiff or justice, in a certain place, and at a certain time.

2. A jury.

3. An ordinance or statute.

4. The court, place, or time, where and when the writs of process or affeer are taken.

The law was never executed by any justice of assises, but the people left to their own laws.

Denis on Ireland.

At each assise they try a thousand and twenty of us, a day. Dryden, Jew.

Any court of justice.

The judgment, God shall close the book of fate.

And there the last affeer kept.

For those who wake, and those who sleep. Dryden.

Affieux of bread, ale,

&c. Measure of price or rate. Thus it is said, when one has a good price, the bread shall be of such a rate.

Equal measure: for which we now use feet.

On high hills top I saw a tatter frame,

An hundred cubits high by just affeur.

With hundred pillars.

To ass'ee, w. a. [from the noun.]

To give the rate of any thing by an affixe or write.

To affi'ee, or ass'ee, n. f. [from affixe.]

An officer that has the care and oversight of weights and measures. Chamber.

Affi'ciable, adj. [affi'ciable, Lat.]

That which may be joined to another.

To ass'ociate, w. a. [officer, Fr.]

Affci'sion, n. f. [from affixe.]

Reference of one found to another referring it. Remembrance of sound. Dict.

Assoc'iate, adj. [affi'ciable, Fr.]

Standing in a manner referring another found. Dict.

To assoc'iate, w. a. [associate, Fr.]

To range in classes; as one thing suits with another.

Assoc'tment, n. f. [from associata.

1. The act of calling or ranging.

2. A mass or quantity properly selected and ranged.

To assoc't, w. a. [for: associate, Fr.]

To infatiate; to beget a word out of use.

But where they sprang, or how they begot, Unearth is to affeer, unearth to weane

That nonfrust error which doth some affeer.

To assua'ge, w. a. [the derivation of this word is uncertain: Minstrels deduce it from adserfatio, or affisurat; Junius, from pars, sweet; from whence Skinner imagines appendant might have been formed.]

1. To mitigate; to soften; to ally.

Refreshing this the dummer's heats affuage,

And kindly warmth disarms the winter's rage.

Addison.

2. To appaise; to pacify.

Yet is his hate, his rage uner, nor the less,

Since sought to be insert in his throat.

Was a mixture of feeble, sensation, and fierce.

This was necessary for the soothing the people from their fears, capable of being assuaged by no other means. Clarencieu.

Their brutal rage,

The regal stem destroy Dryden's Alkin.

3. To ease; as, the medicine affuages pain.

To ass'uae, w. a. To abate.

God makes a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters affuaged.

Gen. viii. 1.

Assu'a'gment, n. f. [from associate.] Mitigation; abatement of evil.

ASS'U'GMENT, n. f. [of assuage.] One who pacifies or appeases.

Assu'a'sive, adj. [from associate.] Softening; mitigating.

In the hereditary simultaneous arts,

Music, the left affuage voice supplied. Pope's St. Cecilia.

To assu'a'gate, w. a. [associate, Lat.]

To subject to; not in use.

This affaire word.

Mist not to set his chart, nobly acquired;

Nor by my will affuage his merit.

By going to Achilles. Shakespeare.

Assu'a'cation, n. f. [associate, Lat.]

The state of being accomodated to any thing.

Right and left, as parts incident unto the medical faculty, are distinguished by degrees from use and affuage, or according where the one grows stronger. Brown's Vuls. Egregius.

Assu'a'tude, n. f. [associate, Lat.]

Accommodation; custom; habit.

We see that affuages of things hurtful, doth make them the necessary appurtenances of the world. Racine. Non va plus.

To assu'me, w. a. [associate, Lat.]

To take.

This when the various god had urg'd in vain,

He first affume his native form again. Pope.

2. To take upon one's self.

With ravilh'd ear.

The monarch hears,

Affume the god,

Affects to nod,

And seems to fixe the spheres. Dryden.

3. To arrogate; to claim or seize unjutly.

4. To supplicate something granted without proof.

5. To apply to one's own use; to appropricate.

His majesty might well affume the complaint and expression of king David. Clarencieu.

To assu'me, w. a. To be arrogat; to claim more than is due.

Assu'mer, n. f. [from assume.] An arrogat man; a man who claims more than his due.

Can man be wise in any course, in which he is not safe too? But can those high affuagers, and pretenders to reason, prove themselves to? Swift.

Assu'ming, participle. adj. [from assume.] Arrogant; haughty.

His haughty looks, and his assuming air,

This for'ty exalt'd noble with the town.

This makes him ever-forward in busines,

Assuming in conversation, and ceremonious in answers. Coler.

Assu'mpsit, n. f. [assumere, Lat.]

A voluntary promise, or the word, whereby by a man taketh upon him to perform or pay any thing to another; it contains any verbal promise made upon consideration. Cowell.

Assu'mption, n. f. [assumptum, Lat.]

1. The act of taking any thing to one's self.

The personal delight of God himself; and his assumption of our flesh to his divinity, more famously to infatuise his pleasure to us, was an enforcement beyond all methods of wisdom. Hammond's Fundamentals/ac.
2. The supposition, or act of supposing, of any thing without further proof.

Thus by way of assumption, under the two general heads, a) that is naturally and necessarily good or bad. b) Not.

3. The thing supposed; a postulate.

Hold, says the S-I's. your assumption's going. I grant, true, and you have well defined. Dryden.

For to suppose that Christ did raise the dead; and that the natural and supernatural works to confirm what he said, we need only repeat the message sent by him to John the Baptist.

Swib.

4. The taking up any person into heaven, which is supposed by the Romish church of the Blessed Virgin.

Upon this feast of the assumption of the Blessed Virgin, the pope and cardinals keep the vespers.

5. Assurance. n. s. [assurance, Fr.]

Certain expectation.

Though hope be, indeed, a lower and lesser thing than assurance; yet, as in all the purposes of a pious man, may move more and more before it.

What encouragement can be given to good men, beyond the hopes of heaven, and the assurance of an eternal life? Tillemain.

2. Secure confidence; trust.

What is he that boast of fleshly might, and vaunt assurance of mortality, which all lo-s in it doth come to fight?

Against Spiritual foes, yield by and by. Fair Q.

3. Freedom from doubt; certain knowledge.

Proof from the authority of man's judgment, is not able to work that assurance, which doth grow by a stronger proof.

"Th' far off, and rather like a dream, than an assurance.

The obdurate, and the man of practice, shall outgrow all their doubts and ignorances, till persuasion pass into knowledge, and knowledge assurance into assurance. South.

Hath he found, in an evil course, that comfortable assurance of God's favour, and good hopes of his own resurrection, which a religious life can have given him? Tillemain.

4. Firmness; undoubting readiness.

Men whose confidence will relieve our doubts, will be sure of assurance and our confidence in our profession.

Rogers.

5. Confidence; want of modesty; exemption from awe or fear.

My behaviour, ill governed, gave me the first comfort; my affection, ill hid, hath given you this last assurance.

Shaks.

6. Freedom from vitious flame.

Conversation, when they come into the world, will add to their knowledge and assurance. Locke.

7. Ground of confidence; security; sufficient reason for truth or belief.

The nature of dreads itself is no easier to receive belief, than it is hard to ground belief; for as dreads are glad to embrace the first breath of comfort, so is dreads dubious of perfect assurance. Sidney.

As the conscious was but light and superficial, for fear of its being sublimitted, now were right, sickly and sicken assurances. Davies in Ireland.

None of woman born Shall harm Macbeth.

—'Tis liv'd what need I fear of thee? But yet I'll make assurance double sure, and take a bond of fate thou shalt not live.

Shakespear.

I must confess your offer is the best.

And, let your father make her the assurance, She is your own, else you must pardon me.

If you should die before him, where's her joy? Shakespear.

An assurance being passed through for a competent sum, hath come back again by reason of some oversight. Bacon.

They, like wise men, fled in the face of the breach with assurance than the wall itself.

Klokker.

With all the assurance innocence can bring, Exalted would I on your reported course.

Arm'd with my courage, unaccord'd I fee.

This pomp, a flame to you, a pride to me. Dryden.

Sanguineus, readiness to hope.

This is not the grace of hope, but a good natural assurance, which Aristotle observes young men to be full of, and old men not inclined to.

Hammonds.

10. Testimony of credit.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding; and, from some knowledge and assurance of you. Offer this office. Shakespear's King Lear.

We have as great assurance that there is a God, as we could expect to have, supposing that he were.

11. Conviction.

Such an assurance of things as will make men careful to avoid a sinner danger, ought to awaken men to avoid a greater danger.

Tillemain.

2. [That] We do not receive Security with reference to a future state; certainty of acceptance with God.

The same with assurance. See INSURANCE.

To ASSURE. u. a. [assuere, Fr. from assurer, low Latin.]

1. To give confidence by a firm promise.

So when he had assure them with many words that he would redeem them without hurt, according to the agreement, they let him go for the favor of their brethren. 2 Mac. xii.

2. To secure to another; to make firm.

So irresistible an authority cannot be reflected on, but what the most absent men, whatever its virtues, may be urged to by those who have interest in the same. Rogers.

3. To make confident: to exempt from doubt or fear; to confer security.

And hereby we know, that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. 1 John, iii. 19.

At this last sight; affur'd that man shall live.

With all the creatures, and their seed performe.

Milton.

4. Too make secure; with of.

But what on earth can long abide in state? Or who can him assure of happy day? Spenser.

And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of her widowhood, is that it preserves me. In a, from some knowledge and assurance of you.

5. To assure; to betroth.

This diviner laid claim to me, called me Dro-mio, swore I was assure to her. Shakespear.

ASturred. participial adj. [from assure.]

1. Certain; indubitable; not doubted.

It is an assure experience, that first told about the bottom of a tree makes the fruit.

Lucian's Natural History.

2. Certain; not doubting.

Young princes, close your hands; and your lips shut: for, I am well assured.

That I did so, when I first assure'd. Shakespear's King John.

3. Assuredly, adv. [from assure.]

Certainly; indubitably.

They promis'd me eternal happiness, and brought me gallants, Griffith, which I feel I am not worthy yet to wear; I shall assure'd.

Shakespear.
Astronomical. adj. [from astronomy.] "Astronomick. m. [from astrologia.] Applying to astronomy."

"Astrology. m. f. [from astrology.] The science of the heavenly bodies or the knowledge of the stars; an art now generally explained, as irrational and false."

Astronomy. m. f. [from astrologia, Lat.] The science of the heavenly bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order. Pythagoras taught that the earth and planets turn round the sun, which fixes itself in the centre. From the time of Pythagoras, astronomy funk into neglect, till it was revived by the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt; and the Saracens brought it from Africa to Spain, and restored this science to Europe. Chambers."

Astronomy. m. f. [from astrologia, a star, and eon, a law or rule.] A mixed mathematical science, teaching the knowledge of the celestial bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order. Pythagoras taught that the earth and planets turn round the sun, which fixes itself in the centre. From the time of Pythagoras, astronomy funk into neglect, till it was revived by the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt; and the Saracens brought it from Africa to Spain, and restored this science to Europe. Chambers.

Astronomy. m. f. [from astrologia, a star, and eon, a law or rule.] A mixed mathematical science, teaching the knowledge of the celestial bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order. Pythagoras taught that the earth and planets turn round the sun, which fixes itself in the centre. From the time of Pythagoras, astronomy funk into neglect, till it was revived by the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt; and the Saracens brought it from Africa to Spain, and restored this science to Europe. Chambers.

Astronomy. m. f. [from astrologia, a star, and eon, a law or rule.] A mixed mathematical science, teaching the knowledge of the celestial bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order. Pythagoras taught that the earth and planets turn round the sun, which fixes itself in the centre. From the time of Pythagoras, astronomy funk into neglect, till it was revived by the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt; and the Saracens brought it from Africa to Spain, and restored this science to Europe. Chambers.
A

T

ended on the observation of the celestial bodies. That the distant and annual revolutions are the motions of the terraqueous globe, not of the sun, I shew in the preface of my Astra-Theology.

Dover's Physical-Theology.

Asu'under, adv. [Apsuunder, Sax.] Apart; separately; not together. Two linden trees, the farther that they are drawn out, the farther they go stander.

Speyer on Ireland.

Some think the planet, whereas not much asunder; or, not together.

What tells us of their distance is this! Dovers.

Greedy hope to find

His wife, and best advantage, us asunder.

Paradise Lost.

The fall's archangel, envious of our state,

Seeks his advantage to betray us worse;

Which, when asunder, will not prove too hard,

For both together are each other's guard.

Dryden.

Some far asunder by the sides of men,

Like adamant and feel they meet no more.

Dryden's Fables.

All this metallic matter, both that which continued asunder, and in angle corporates, and that which was amassed and concerred into nodules, subdivided.

Woodward's Natural History.

Asylum, m. s. [Lat. Asylum, from a, not; and e, in, to pillage.] A place out of which he that has fled to it may not be taken; a sanctuary; a refuge; a place of retreat and security.

So fared was the church to some, that it had the right of an asylum, or sanctuary, Ahit. of Pagan.

Asymmetry, n. f. [from a, without; and symmetrical, symmetry.]

1. Contrariety to symmetry; disproportion.

The asymmetries of the brain, as well as the deformities of the legs or face, may be rectified in youth.

Greew.

2. This term is sometimes used in mathematics, for what are more usually called incommensurability; between such quantities there is no common measure.

Asymptote, n. f. [from a, priv. sta, with, and e, into, to fall; which never meet; coincident.] Asymptotes are right lines, which approach nearer and nearer to some curve; but which, though they and their curve were infinitely continued, would never meet; and may be conceived as tangents to their curves at an infinite distance.

Chambers.

Asymptote, lines, though they may approach till nearer together, till they are nearer than the least assignable distance, yet, being still produced infinitely, will never meet.

Greew.

Asymptotical, adj. [from asymptote.]

Curves are said to be asymptotical, when they continually approach, without a possibility of meeting.

Asyndeton, n. s. [as = without, of a, priv. and synde, to bind together.] A figure in grammar, when a conjunction copulative is omitted in a Sentence; as, in vest, vest, vest, &c. is left out.

At prep. [see Sax.]

1. At, before a place, notes the nearness of the place; as, an at the house before he is in it.

This custom continued among many, to say their prayers at fountains.

Still resting.

2. At, before a word signifying time, notes the coexistent of the time with the event; the word time is sometimes in cluded in the adjectival; we commonly say, at a minute, at an hour, on a day, in a month.

Vol. I.

We thought it at the very first a sign of cold affection.

How frequent to defer him, and at last

To heap ingratitude on worthifull deeds.

Byron.

At the same time that the storm beats upon the whole species, we are falling foul upon one another.

Adrian.

We made no efforts at all, where we could have most weakened the common enemy, and, at the same time, enriched ourselves.

Adrian.

3. At, before a causal word signifies nearly the same as with, noting that the event accompanies, or immediately succeeds, the action of the cause.

At his touch,

Such insolvency has been given him. They presently amend.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Of it, when he shall bear of your approach.

If that young Arthur be not gone already,

Ev'n at this news he dies.

Shakespeare's King John.

Much at the sight was Adam in his heart.

Dismay'd.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

High or their heads a mouldering rock is placed,

That promised a fall, and shakes all on thy breast.

Dryden.

4. At before a superlative adjective implies in the state; as, at keft, in the state of most perfection, &c.

Consider any man as to his personal powers, they are not great; for, at generality, they must all be limited.

South.

5. At, before a person, is seldom used other than to express that, of, that,

At the same time, to attack him.

6. At before a substance, superlative sometimes signifies the particular condition or circumstances of the person; as, at peace, in a state of peace.

There, for whom no lot is yet decreed,

May run in fortunes, and at pleasure feed.

Defeated, at his utmost need,

By those his former bounty fed.

Dryden's St. Cecilia.

What hinder'd either, in their native soil,

As is to rasp the harvest of their toil.

Dryden.*

Wife men are sometimes overborne, when they are taken at a disadvantage.

Collins of Colley.

These have been the maxims they have been guided by, and the laws of them, and they are perfectly at a loss; their compass and pole-there are gone, and their understanding is perfectly at a nonplus.

Locke.

One man manages four horses at once, and leaps from the back of another at full speed.

Pope. The Essay on Human Battles.

They will not let me be at quire in my bed, but pursue me to my very dreams.

Swift.

7. At before a substantive sometimes marks employment or time, at a certain time.

We found some arrived to that perfection, as to own roundly what they would be at.

South.

How 'd ye find yourself? says the doctor to his patient.

A little while after he is at it again, with a pray, how 'd ye find you have it? *J. Eglinson.

But she who well enough knew what,

Before he spake, he would be at,

Pest. The creature at his dirty work again.

8. At is sometimes the same with furnished with, after the French a.

Insult his breast with malignity.

And make him mock all man at arms.

Shakespeare.

9. At sometimes notes the place where any thing is, or sits.

Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet.

Shakespeare.

He that in tracing the vessels began at the heart, though he thought not at all of a circulation, yet made he the true first step towards the discovery.

Gree.

To all you ladies now at land

We men at sea in dieue.

Burke.

The curious news I heard, of love, of life, of storms at sea, and travels on the thron.

Pop.

10. At sometimes signifies in immediate consequence of:

Improachments at the profession of the house of commons, have received their determinations in the house of lords.

Hal.

11. At marks sometimes the effect proceeding from an act.

Reft in this tomb, rais'd at thy husband's cost.

Dryden.

Tom has been at the charge of a penny upon this occasion.

Arab.

Those may be of use, to confirm by authority what they will not be at the trouble to deduce by reasoning.

Arab.

12. At sometimes is nearly the same as in, noting situation; as, he was at the bottom, or top of the hill.

She has been known to come at the head of these rafails, and beat her lover.

Swift.

13. At sometimes marks the occasion, like on.

Others, with more helpful care,

Cry'd out aloud, Beware, brave youths, beware!

At this he turn'd, and, as the bull drew near, Shann'd, and receiv'd him on his pointed spear.

Dryden.

14. At sometimes seems to signify in the power of, or obedient to.

But thou of all the kings, Jove's care below,

Art least at my command, and most my fate.

Dryden.

15. At sometimes notes the relation of a man to an action.

He who makes pleasure the vehicle of his health is, a doctor at it in good earnest.

Collins of Friendship.

16. At sometimes imports the manner of an action.

One warns you by degrees, the other fets you on fire all at once, and never intermits his heat.

Dryden's Fables.

Not with less rain than the Bajan mole

At once comes tumbling down.

Dryden's Eneid.

17. At, like the French cez, means sometimes application to, or dependence on.

The word authors might endeavour to please at, and in that endeavour defer something at our hands.

Pope.

18. At all.

In any manner; in any degree.

Nothing more true than what you once let fall.

Most women have no characters at all.

Pope.

19. A tabal. n. s. A kind of tablo by use of the Moors.

Children shall beat our tabal and drums; and all the noisy trades of war no more.

Shall wake the peaceful morn.

*Dryden's Schoft.

ATRAPAXIA. n. s. [Ar. Ataraexia.] Exemption.

Ararat. Jection from vexation; tranquillity.

The frights affected an indifferent equilibrated neutrality, as the only means to their ataraexia, and freedom from passionate discharges.

*Glocester's Suffig.

ATE. The preturit of an. See To Eat.

R.
ATHMOSPHERE. n. f. [aether, vapour, and σφαίρα, a sphere.]

The external part of this our habitable world is the air, or atmosphere; a light, thin, fluid, or springy body, that encompases the solid earth on all sides.

Licht.

Atmospheric. adj. [from atmosphere.]

Confining of the incumbrant atmosphere; belonging to the atmosphere.

We did not mention the weight of the incumbrant atmospheric cylinder, as a part of the weight of the body.

Boyle.

ATOM, n. s. [atomos, Lat. atom-.

1. Such a small particle as cannot be physically divided: and these are the first rudiments, or the component parts, of all bodies.

Quincy.

Innumerable minute bodies are called atoms, because, by reason of their perfect solidity, they were really indivisible.

See platick nature working to this end.

The single atoms each to other, Attraed, attracted to, the next in place Form'd and impell'd its neighbour to embrace.

Bope.

2. Any thing extremely small.

It is easy to count atoms, as to resolve the propinquities of a lover.

Skokely. Atyu like it.

Atonical. adj. [from atom.]

1. Consisting of atoms.

Virtuous and pellucid bodies are clearer in their continuities, than in particulars and atomical divisions.

Browne's Vulgar Errours

2. Relating to atoms.

Vacuum is another principal doctrine of the atomical philosophy.

Bentley's German.

Atonischist. n. f. [from atom.]

One that holds the atomical philosophy, or doctrine of atoms.

The atomists, who define motion to be a passage from one place to another, do what they more than put one synonymous word for another.

Locke.

Now can judicious atomists conceive, Chance to the fun could his just impulse give?

Blackmore.

Atomy. n. f.

An obsolete word for atom.

Drawn with a team of little atomes
Athwart men's noses, as they be asleep.

Skokely.

To ATOÎNE. v. n. [from at, as the etymology may remark, to, be, to, as in the fame as to be in accord.

This derivation is much confirmed by the following passage of Shakespeare, and appears to be the sense still retained in Scotland.

1. To agree; to accord.

He and Audfilius can no more atom, Than videntless contrariety. Skokely. Cariolamus.

2. To stand as an equivalent for something; and particularly used of expiatory sacrifices, with the particle for before the thing for which something else is given.

From a mean flock the poor Dafil came; Yet such their virtues, that their lofs alone For Rome and all our legions did atom.

Dryden's Juvenal.

The good intention of a man of weight and worth, or a real friend, seldom atoms for the uns easified produced by his grave representations.

Locke.

Let thy sublime meritorious course
For Mary's setting rays atom;

Our hulfte, with redbound force,
Mull now proceed from thee alone.

Prior.
His vigil feed Ægyptus' veils imbrued;
The murd'rer fell, and blood astred for blood.

To ATO'NE. n. a. 1. To reduce to concord. If any contention arose, he knew none fitter to be their judge, to stone, and take up their quarrels, but himself. 2. To expiate; to answear for. Soon shall ye boasters cease their haughty fate, Or each stone his guilty love with life. Pope.

ATO'NE'MENT. n. f. [from alone.] 1. Agreement; concord. He seeks to make atonement between the duke of Glo'ret and your brother. ShakSpere.

2. Expiation; expiatory equivalent: with for. And the Levites were purified, and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them. Numbers. Surely it is not a sufficient atonement for the writers, that they protest loyalty to the government, and sprinkle some arguments in favour of the dissenters, and, under the shelter of popular politics and religion, undermine the foundations of all charity and virtue. Swift.

ATO'P. adv. [from a and top.] On the top; at the top. Asep whereof, but far more rich, appear'd the work as of a kingly palace-gate. Paradisé Lost.

What is extracted by water from coffee is the oil, which often swins arp of the decoction. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

ATRABILARIAN. adj. [from atra bili, black choler.] Melancholy; replete with black choler. The atraibilis constitution, or a black, vitious, pitchy confidence of the fluids, makes all sweet dispositions difficult and sparing. Arbuthnot on Diet.

ATRABILARIOUS. adj. [from atra bili, black choler.] Melancholic. The blood, deprived of its due proportion of serous, or finer and more volatile parts, is atraibilious; whereby it is rendered gross, black, unequal, and crotchety. From this black adult state of the blood, they are atraibilious. Arbuthnot on Atr.

ATRABILIOUSNESS. n. f. [from atra bili, black choler.] The state of being melancholy; repletion with melancholy.

ATRAME'NTAL. adj. [from atrimentum, ink. Lat.] Ink'y; black. If we enquire in what part of vitriol this atrimental and denigrating condition lodgeth, it will seem especially to lie in the more fixed salt thereof. Brown's Purg. Errors.

ATRAME'NTOUS. adj. [from atrimentum, ink. Lat.] Ink'y; black. I am satisfied, that those black and atrimeninous spots, which seem to represent them, are ocular. Brown.

ATROCIOUSLY. adv. [from atrocious.] In an atrocious manner; with great wickedness.

ATROCIOUSNESS. n. f. [from atrocious.] The quality of being enormously criminal.

ATROCITY. n. f. [atrocitas, Horrible wickedness; excess of wickedness.]

I never recall it to mind, without a deep atrocioulsment of the very honour and authority of the fict in a Christian court. Warton.

They defined justice might be done upon offenders, as the atrocity of their crimes deserved. Clarendon.

A'TROPHY. n. f. [atrophia.] Want of nourishment; a disease in which what is taken at the mouth cannot contribute to the support of the body. Marasmus, and wide-wasting pellence. Milton. The mouths of the lacerates may be shut up by a viscid mucus, in which the chyle is carried by blood, and the person falte'd into an atrophy. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

To AT'TACH. u. a. [attacher, Fr.] 1. To arrest; to take or apprehend by commandment or writ. Conell. Euros allows the guards, which on his flate did wait, Attach'd that traitor fable, and bound him ftrait. Spenser.

The Tower was choos'd, that if Clifford should accuse great ones, they might, without suspicion or noise, be presently attack'd. Bacon's Henry VII.

Doréhis greeves you, Defires you to attest his fole, who has His dignity and duty both call'd off. Shakespeare.

2. Sometimes with the particle of, but attest. You, lord archbishop, and you, lord Mowbray, Of capital defeafting both. Shakespeare.

3. To feize in a judicial manner. France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd Our merchands goods at Bourdeaux. Shakspeare.

4. To lay hold on, as by power. I cannot blame thee, Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To th' duling of my spirits. Shakspeare.

5. To win; to gain over; to ena'mour. Songs; galand's, flow'res, And charming symphonies, and th' heart Of Adam. Milton's Paradisè Lost.

6. To fix to one's interest. The great and rich depend on these whom their power or their wealth attach them to. Rogers.

ATTACHMENT. n. f. [attachment, Fr.] 1. Adherence; fidelity. The Jews are remarkable for an attachment to their own country. Addison.

2. Attention; regard. The Romans burst this last fleet, which is another mark of their small attachment to the sea. Arbuthnot on Classics.

3. An apprehension of a man to bring him to answear an action; and sometimes it extends to his moveables. An apprehension of a man to bring him to answear an action; and sometimes it extends to his moveables.

4. Foreign attachment, is the attachment of a foreigner's goods found within a city, to satisfy creditors within a city. To ATTACK. u. a. [attaque, Fr.] 1. To assail an enemy; opposed to defend. The front; the rear Attack, while ye thunders in the centre. Philip's. Those that attach generally get the victory, though with disadvantage of ground.

2. To impugn in any manner, as with fatifs, contutation, calumny, as, the declamer attacked the reputation of his adversaries. Attack, n. f. [from the verb.] An assault upon an enemy. Hecuba opposes, and continues the attack; in which Sarpédon makes the first breach in the wall. Pope's Iliad.

If, sport'd of the severe attack, The country be flat up. Thomson.

I own 'twas wrong when thousands call'd me Tho'mas. Milton. To make that hopeless, ill-advised attack. Young.

ATTACKER. n. f. [from attack.] The person that attacks.

To ATTAIN. u. a. [atteindre, Fr. attain, Lat.] 1. To gain; to procure; to obtain. Is he who hopes to attain the end without the means, may by means that are quite contrary to it. Tickham.

All the nobility here could not attain the fame favour as Wood did. Swift.

2. To overtake; to come up with: as a felon now little in use. The Earl hoping to have overtaken the Scottish king, he had given him battle, but he made him in time, set down before the castle of Aton. Bacon.

3. To come to; to enter upon. Canan he now attains? I foe his tents Pitch'd above Sichem. Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. To reach; to equal. So the first precedent, if it be good, is seldom attained by imitation. Bacon.

To ATTAIN. u. n. 1. To come to a certain state: with to. Milk still from separate itself into a cream, and a more fervous liquor, which, after twelve days, attains to the highest degree of acidity. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

2. To arrive at. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high I cannot attain to it. Pfal. cxvii. 6. To have knowledge in most objects of contemplation, is what the mind of one man can hardly attain unto. Locke.

ATTAIN. n. f. [from the verb.] The thing attained; attainment: a word not in use.

Crowns and dainties, the most splendid terrene attains, are akin to that which to-day is in the field, and to-morrow is cut down. Glauvill's Sopfii.

ATTAINABLE. adj. [from attain.] That which may be attained; procurable. He willfully neglects the obtaining unspeakable goods, which is perfidious in certain and certain. Tickham.

None was proposed that appeared certainly attainable, or of value enough. Rogers.

ATTAINABILITY. n. f. [from attainable.] The quality of being attainable. The nations become often enamoured of outward beauty, without any particular knowledge of its pellifor, or its attainableness by them. Choyne.

ATTAINER. n. f. [from To attain.] 1. The act of attaining in law; conviction of a crime. See To Attain.

The ends in calling a parliament were chiefly to take the attainer of all of his party retained and, on the other side, to attain by parliament his enemies. Bacon.

2. Taint; fully of character. So soon he should his vice with new of virtue, He liv'd from all attainer of falsehood. Shakspeare.

ATTAINMENT. n. f. [from To attain.] 1. That which is attained; acquisition. We dispute with men that count it a great attainment to be able to talk much, and little to the purpose. Glauvill.

Arts and attainments are mean, compared with the perfection of the universals. Grew.

2. The act or power of attaining. The Scripture must be sufficient to impress in us the character of all things necessary for the attainment of eternal life. Holins.

R. Education.
To ATTEMPE. v. a. [attemper, Lat.]

1. To mingle; to weaken by the mixture of something else; to dilute.
2. Nobility. Attempts sovereignty, and draws the eyes of the people somewhat aside from the royal.

To ATTEMPE. v. a. [attemper, Lat.]

1. To proportion to something. Hope must be proportioned;

2. To attempt; to endeavour. I have not attempted to

3. To attempt; to endeavour. I have never attempted to ATTAIN. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Anything injurious; as, illnesses, wares, etc. This, as is now obsolete.

2. Stain; spot; taint.

3. In horsemanship, A blow or wound on the hinder part of an horse. Far. Ditit.

ATTAIN. n. s. [from attain.]

1. Legal censure; reproach; imputation.

2. To attaine. v. a. [attaine, Lat.]

1. To corrupt; to pollute.

2. To attaine particularly is used for such as are found guilty of some crime or offence, and especially of felony or treason. A man is attainted in two ways, by appearance, or by process. Attainer by appearance is by confession, battle, or verdict. Confession is double; one at the bar before the judges, when the prisoner, upon his indictment to be, is accused guilty or not guilty, hence, Guilty, never putting himself upon the verdict of the jury. The other is before the coroner or factuary, where he, upon his confession, was in former times constrained to be heard by a jury; which kind is called attainer by abjuration. Attainer by battle is, when the party appealed, and choosing by the truth by combat rather than by jury, is vanquished. Attainer by verdict is, when the prisoner at the bar, answering to the indictment, not guilty, hath an injunction of life and death paling upon him, and is by the verdict pronounced guilty. Attainer by process is, where a party flies, and is not found till five times called publicly in the county, and at last outlawed upon his default.

Covell.

Were it not an endless trouble, that no traitor of any title should be attainted, but a parliament must be called?

Shakespere.

I must offend before I be attainted. Shakespeare.

1. To taint; to corrupt.

My tender youth was never yet attainted with any passion of inflaming love.

Shakespere.

2. To attend. v. a. [attain.]

1. The act of waiting upon another; or of serving.
ATT

1. I dance attendance here,

2. I think the duke will not be spoke with. Skott.

3. To wear on solemn occasions, we may add their want of leisure to apply their minds to such a serious and attentive consideration.

South.

ATTENDANCE. n. f. [attende, Lat.] Proceedings in a court of judicature, pending suit, and after an inhibition is decreed and gone out; those things which are done after an extrajudicial appeal, may likewise be called attendances.

Attire. n. f. [from attend.] The act of making any thing thin or slender; lengthening.

Chiming with a hammer upon the outside of a bell, the sound will accord to the inward concave of the bell; whereas the elision or attenuation of the air, can only be between the hammer and the outside of the bell.

Bacon.

ATT. n. f. [from attende, Lat.] Corrupt matter. A word much used in Lincolnshire.

Skinner.

To ATTEST. a. a. [attestar, Lat.]

1. To bear witness of; to witness.

Many particular facts are recorded in holy writ, attested by particular pagan authors. Addison.

2. To call to witness; to invoke as conscientious.

The sacred dreames, which bene's imperial flate
Attire in oaths, and fears to violate. Dryden.

ATT'est. n. f. [from the verb.] Witness; testimony; attestation.

The attell of sides and ears. Shakespeare.

With the voice divine
Nigh thunderdrack, th' exalted man, to whom
Such high attell was giv'n, a while survey'd
With wonder thus. Wordsworth.

ATTESTATION. n. f. [from attest.] Testimony; witness; evidence.

There remains a second kind of peremptoriness, of those who can make no relation without appanting of dates of this kind of memory. Mr. of the Temple.

The next coal-prit, mine, quarry, or wind-prit, will give attestation to what I write; these are so obvious that I need not seek for a computor. Woodward's Natural History.

We may derive a probability from the attestation of wife and honest men by word or writing; or the concurrens writs of multitudes who have seen and known that they were. Watt.

To ATTINGED. a. a. [attinges, Lat.] To touch lightly or gently.

To ATTIRE. v. a. [attire, Fr.] To dress; to habit; to array.

Let it likewise your gentle breast Inspire
With sweet infusion, and put you in mind,
Of that proud maid, whom now they leaves alone,
Proud Daphne.

My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies,
Finely attired in a robe of white.

Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

With the linen mitre shall he be attired.

Lev. xvi. 4.

Now the fappy bought
Attire themselves with blooms. Philips.

AT'TIRE. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Clothes; dress; habit.

It is no more disgrace to Scripture to have left things free to be ordered by the church, than for Nature to have left it to the wit of man to devise his own attire.

Hooker.

After that the Roman attire grew to be in account, and the gown to be in use among them.

Davius in Ireland.

Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,
Hath coit a mains of publick treasure.

Shakespeare's Henry VI. ii. 11.

And in this coarse attire, which I now wear,
With God and with the Muses I confer.

Desire. When lavish nature, with her best attire,
Clothes the gay spiring, the fason of Delhi.

Walter.

I past their form, and ever charming grace,
But their attire, like that of a kind.

Spenser.

All rich and rare, is fift within my mind.

Dryden.

2. [In hunting.] The horns of a buck or flag.

3. [In botany.] The flower of a plant is divided into three parts, the emplument, the foliation, and the attire, which is either florid or semiflorid, Florid.
1. To perform by proxy.

Their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attended with interchanges of gifts.

Shakespeare.

2. To employ as a proxy.

As I was then
Adversing, and holy to your business,
Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorned to your service.

Shakespeare.

AT'OR'NEYSHIP. n. s. [from attorney.]
The office of an attorney; proxy; vicarious agency.

But marriage is a matter of more worth,
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship.

Shakespeare.

A TOR'NY. n. s. [from attorneyship, Fr.]
A yielding of the temporal estate to a new lord, or acknowledgment of him to be his lord; for, otherwise, he buyeth or obtaineth any lands or tenements of another, which are in the occupation of a third, cannot get possession.

Cowell.

To ATTRACT. v. a. [attracte, attralum, Lat.]
1. To draw to something.

A man should scarce persuade the affections of the lovers, or that jest and amorous dispositions.

Brown's Popular Errors.

The single atoms to each other, Tors, attracted to, the next in place
From and impelled its neighbour to emplace.

Pope.

2. To allure; to invite.

Adorn'd
She was indeed, and lovely, to attract
Thy love; not thy subjection.

Milton.

Shew the care of approving all actions so as may most effectually attract all to this profession.

Hillegard.

Design to be lov'd, and every heart subdue!

What nymph could e'er attract such crowds as you?

Pope.

ATTRACTING adj. [from attract.]
Attirable, of the power of attracting; not in use.

Feel do and charms, attracts and flames, And woo and contract in their names.

Hudibras.

ATTRAC'TIVE adj. [from attract.]
Having the power to draw to it.

Some forms are endowed with an electrical or attractive virtue.

Parson's Crustian.

_ATTRACT. n. s. [from To attract.]
Attraction; the power of drawing; not in use.

The drawing of amber and jet, and other electricity bodies, and the attraction in gold of the spirits of quicksilver at distance; and the attraction of heat at distance; and that of fire to naphtha; and that of some herbs to water, though at distance; and divers others, we shall handle.

Bacon.

Locomotives and touched needles, laid long in quicksilver, have not emitted their attraction.

Brown's Popular Errors.

Attraction may be performed by impulsion, or some other means; it is that word, to dignify any force by which bodies tend towards one another.

Newton's Opticks.

2. The power of alluring or enticing.

Setting the attraction of my good parts alight, I have no other charms.

Shakespeare.

ATTRACTIVE adj. [from attract.]
1. Having the power to draw anything.

What if the sun
Be centre to the world; and other stars,
By his attractive virtue, and their own.

Inclined, dance about him various rounds?

Milton.

Some, the round earth's cohesion to secure,
For that hard task employ magnetick power?

Remarks, for they the globe with wonder own
Its nature, like the fam'd attractive stone.

Blackmore.

Bodies act by the attraction of gravity, magnetism, and electricity; and these influences make

It not improbable but there may be more attractive powers than their.

Newton.

2. Inviting; alluring; enticing.

Happy is Hermit, where'er he lies
For the hath bedded and attralive eyes.

Shakespeare.

I placed, and with attractive grace won.
The most averse, thee chiefly.

Milton.

ATTRACTIVE n. s. [from attract.]
That which draws or incites; allurement; except that attractor is of a good or indifferent sense, and allurement generally bad.

The condition of a fervant flaves him off to a distance; but the gospel fleeks nothing but attractives and invitation.

South.
AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.

AVA

4. Reputat.ion; honour.
AUD

Ave, who unfeen,
Yet all had heard, with audible lament
Dread'd from the place of her retire.

Every sense doth not operate upon fancy, with the same force. The conceits of visions are clearer and stronger than those of audibility.

2. Loud enough to be heard.

Milton.

AUDIBILITY. n.s. [from audible.] Capableness of being heard.

AUDIBLY. adv. [from audible.] In such a manner as to be heard.

And all, my Father's voice, Audibly heard from heav'n, pronounced'd me his.

AUDIENCE. n.s. [audience, Fr.]
1. The act of hearing or attending to any thing.

Now I breathe again
Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak of it what it will. Shakespeare.

Thus far his bold discourse, without control, had audience. Milton.

His look
Drew audience, and attention fill'd as night.
Of summer's noon-tide air. Milton.

The liberty of speaking granted; a hearing.

Were it reason to give men audience, pleading for the overthrow of that which their own deed hath ratified. Hooker.

According to the fair play of the world.

Let me have audience I am sent to speak, my holy lord of Milan, from the king. Shakespeare.

An auditory; persons collected to hear.

Or, if the air of evening and the moon
Had to the audience, night with her will bring silence.

Milton.

The hall was filled with an audience of the greatest eminence for quality and politeness. Addison.

It proclaims the triumphs of goodness in a proper audience, even before the whole race of mankind. Atterbury.

4. The reception of any man who delivers a solemn message.

In this high temple, on a chair of state,
The fest of audiences, old Latinus fete. Dryden.

AUDIENCE Court. A court belonging to the archbishop of Canterbury, of equal authority with the arches court, though inferior both in dignity and antiquity. The original of this court was, because the archbishop of Canterbury heard severa causes extradijiicially at home in his own palace; which he usually committed to be dis cous'd by men learned in the civil and canon laws, whom he called his auditors: and so in time it became the power of the man, who is called causarum negotiatorumque audiendae Cantuariensis auditor, seu officialis. Cowell.

AUDIT. n.s. [from audit, he hears, Lat.] A final account.

If they, which are accustomed to weigh all things, shall here sit down to receive our audit, the form, which truth amounteth to, will appear to be but this.

Tock my father's groats, full of bread,
With all his crimi boxed brown, and fluss at Man:
And how his audito friends, who knows have Heav'n's Handels.

I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flow'r of all,
And leave me but the bran. Shakespeare.

To AUDIT. v. a. [from audit.] To take an account finally.

-AVE

Bishops ordain to auditory all accounts, take twelve penmen. Ayliff's Parergon.

I love exact dealing, and let Hocas audit; he knows how the money was disbursed. Arbuthnott.

AUDITION. n.s. [audite, Lat.] Hearing.

A'DITOR. n.s. [auditor, Lat.]
1. A hearer.

Don't confide, you that were last day so high in the pulpit against lawyers, are you now become so mean an auditor? Sidney.

What a play told? I'll be an auditor.

An act too, perhaps. Shakespeare.

This first doctrine, though admitted by many of his auditors, is expressly against the Epicureans. Bentley.

2. A person employed to take an account ultimately.

If you suspect my husbandry,
Call me before this exact'he audite,
And let me on the proof. Shakespeare's Timon.

3. In eclecical law.

The archbishop's office was to commit the discussing of causes to persons learned in the law, filled his auditors. Ayliff's Parergon.

4. In the state.

A king of the word, who, yearly examining the accounts of all under-officers accountable, makes up a general book. Cowell.

AUDITORY. adj. [auditorius, Lat.] That which has the power of hearing.

Is not hearing performed by the vibrations of some sound, excited in the auditory nerves by the tremours of the air, and propagated through the capillaries of those nerves? Newton.

A'DITORIUM. n.s. [auditorium, Lat.]
1. An audience; a collection of persons assembled to hear.

Democritus never troubled his head to bring his auditory to their wits by dry reason. Leibnitz.

Met in the church, I look upon you as an auditory fit to be waited on, as you are, by both univercities.

Several of this auditory were, perhaps, entire strangers to the person whole death we now lament. Atterbury.

2. A place where auditors are to be heard.

AUDITRESS. n.s. [from auditor.] The woman that hears; a female auditor.

Yet went the not, as with such discourse
Delighted, or not capable her ear
Of what was; then fraught the referent, Adam relating, the foe auditories. Milton.

To A'VE, v. a. [avolvere, Lat.] To pull.

The braver in chafe makes some divulsion of parts, yet are not those parts avulsion to be termed A'VE MAY. n.s. [from the first words of the falutation to the Blessed Virgin, Ave Maria.] A form of worship repeated by the Romanists in honour of the Virgin Mary.

All his mind is bent on holiness.

To number Ave Maria on his beads. Shakespeare.

AVERAGE. n.s. [of aven, oats, Lat.] A certain quantity of oats paid to a landlord, instead of some other duties, or as a rent by the tenant.

To AVENGE. v. a. [avenger, Fr.] To revenge.

1. To revenge.

I will avenge me of mine enemies, I will
They fled against their enemies, and were

To avenger, and propagated, against the rate of every man's average of goods carried. Cowell.

A'VE. n.s. [from avenger.] Punishment.

This neglected, fear
Signal avengance, such as overtook

Philip's.

AVE NEMENT. n.s. [from avenger.] Vengeance; revenge.

That he might work the avenger for his shame
On those two captives which had bound him blame.

Spen.

All those great battles which thou boast'st to win
Through strife and bloodshed, and avengement

Not perform'd, hereafter thou shalt repent. Fairy Que.

A'VE R. n.s. [from avenger.]
1. Punisher.

That no man go beyond and defraud his brother, because the Lord is the avenger of all such. I Thes.

Ere this he had returned, with fury driven
By his avengers, since no place like this
Can fit his punishment, or their revenge. Milton.

2. Revenger; taker of vengeance for.

The just avenger of his injured ancestors, the victorious Louis was dashing his thunder. Dryden.

But just disfave to luxury succours,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breed. Pope.

A'VE R'ESS. n.s. [from avenger.] A female avenger, not in use.

There that can quell a wrong, a frownd's
Hesp on her new waves of weary wretchedness. Fairy Que.

A'VE N. n.s. [cerephylata, Lat.] The same with arcb-hennet. Milton.

A'VE N. n.s. [avena, oats, Fr.] A mis-chance, causing a man's death, without felony; as when he is suddenly drowned, or burnt, by any sudden disastre falling into the fire or water. See Adventure. Cowell.

A'VE N. n.s. [avenue, Fr. It is sometimes pronounced with the accent on the second syllable, as Watts observes; but it has generally placed on the firft.]

1. A way by which any place may be entered.

Good guards were set up at all the avenues of the city, to keep all people from going out. Clarendon.

Truth is a strong hold, and diligence is laying siege to it: so that it must obviate all the avenues and passages to it. Swift.

2. An alley, or walk of trees, before a house.

To A'VE'R. v. a. [avener, Fr from averum, truth, Lat.] To declare positively, or peremptorily.

The reason of the thing is clear;
Would Jove the naked truth aver.

Prior.

Then vainly the philosopher avers
That reason guides our deed, and infinuct thes.

How can we justly differ causes frame,
When the effects entirely are the same? Prior.

We may aver, though the power of God be infinite, the capacities of matter are within limits. Bentley.

AVERAGE. n.s. [averramen, Lat.]

1. In law, that duty or thing which the tenant is to pay to the king, or other lord, by his beasts and carriages. Chamb.

2. In navigation, a certain contribution that merchants proportionally make towards the lofes of such as have their goods cast overboard for the safety of the ship in a tempest; and this contribution seems to be, because it is so proportioned, after the rate of every man's average of goods carried. Cowell.

3. A small duty which merchants, who send goods in another man's ship, pay to the matter thereof for his care of them, over and above the freight. Chamberl.

The

4. A medium; a mean proportion. Accent. m. n. [from ace.] 1. Establishment of any thing by evidence. To avoid the oath, for averment of the continuance of some effect, which is eign, the party will for a pardon. Bacon.

2. An offer of the defendant to justify excussion, and the act as well as the offer. Olnet. Aversnat. n. s. A sort of grape. See Vinc.

Aversuncation. n. s. [from averuncate.] The act of rooting up any thing. To Aversuncate. v. a. [averuncate, Lat.] To root up; to tear up by the roots.

3. A sort of mischief which come of it, unless by providential wit, or force, we averuncate it. Hoddras.

Aversation. n. s. [from aversion.] 1. Hatred, abhorrence; turning away with detestation. Vium. The passion of disputation, and there is a kind of averation and hostility included in its essence. South.

2. It is most properly used with from before the object of hate. There was a stiff averation in my lord of Essex from applying himself to the cast of Leicester. Wotton.

3. Sometimes with to; Ies properly. There is such a general averation in human nature to contempt, that there is scarce anything more exasperating. I will not deny, but the excess of the averation may be levelled against pride. Government of the Tongue.

Averse. adj. [aversion, Lat.] 1. Malign; not favourable; having such a hatred as to turn away. Their courage languished as their hopes decay'd, and Pallas, now avers'd, refused her aid. Dryden.

2. Not pleased with; unwilling to. Has thy uncertain bow'rn ever swore With the vent, and closed his glos? Hast thou now dreads, and now blust'sr hawk, By turn averse and joyful to obey? Prior. Averse to liking, or offending. Not free from faults, nor yet too vain to mend. Pope.

3. It has most properly from before the object of averation. Laws politic are never framed as they should be, unless premising the will of man to be rendered stable, rebellious, and averse from all obedience unto the sacred laws of his nature. Hooker.

4. They believed all who objected against their undertaking to be averse from peace. Clarendon. There cases alone her virgin breast employ, Averse from Venus and the nuptial joy. Pope.

5. Very frequently, but improperly, to go. He had, from the beginning of the war, been very averse to any advice of the privy council. Clarendon.

6. Dioecus tells us of one Charondus, who was averse to this innovation, especially when it was projected from particular persons. Swift.

Aversely. adv. [from aversion.] 1. Unwillingly. Aversely. adv. [from aversion.] 2. Backwardly. Not as they want those parts of secession, but it is emitted aversely, or backwardly, by both sexes. Brown's Fuller Errors.

Vol. I.

Averseness. n. s. [from aversion.] Unwillingness; backwardness.

The corruption of man is in nothing more manifest, than in his avereness to entertain any friendship or familiarity with God. Afterbury.

Aversion. n. s. [aversion, Fr. avers, Lat.] 1. Hatred; dislike; detestation; such as turns away from the object. What if with like averence I reject Riches and realms? Milton. 2. It is used most properly with from before the object of hate. They had an inward averence to it, and were resolved to prevent it in all possible means. Clarendon. With men these considerations are usually causes of detestation, disdain, or averence from others; but with God, to so many reasons of our greater tenderness towards others. Spratt. The same abuse to vice, and averence from good deeds, will be a reason for rejecting any proof whatsoever. Afterbury.

4. Sometimes with fer. The Lucequeours would rather throw themselves under the government of the Goocze; than submit to a state for which they have so great an averence. Addison.

This averence of the people for the late proceedings of the commons, might be improved to good effect. Smollett.

5. Sometimes, very improperly, with toward. His averence towards the house of York was so predominant, as it found place not only in his counsels but in his bed. Bacon.

6. The cause of averrence. They took great pleasure in comparing lawfult among their neighbours; for which they were the averreens of the gentlemens of the long robe. Arbuthnot's History of John Bull.

Self-love and reason to one end aspire; Pain their averreens, pleasure their desire. Pope. To AVERKT. v. n. [avers, Lat.]

1. To turn aside; to turn off. To averre your liking a more worthy way. Thon on a wrench. Shakespeare. King Lear.

At this, for the last time, she lifts her hand, averre her eyes, and half unwilling drops the brand. Dryden.

2. To caufe to dislike. When people began to enjoy the falsehood of oracles, whereupon all gentility was built, their hearts were utterly avers'd from it. Hooker. Even cut themselves off from the opportunities of profeting others, by averreing them from their company. Government of the Tongue.

3. To put by, as a calamy. O Lord! I averre whatsoever evil our forefathers may threaten unto his church. Hooker.

4. Vehemently accussing me, which could savor from and itself of the fortune of that war, to become careless and futile. Knolles.

5. The affections earnestly fix our minds on God, and forswear away from us those things which are distasteful to him, and can never to religion. Spratt. They threaten'd lands they wild defraction throw, Till present power averre the public woes. Prior.

AUP. n. s. [of alf, Dutch.] A fool, or silly fellow. Dict. Auteur. n. s. [agger, Dutch.] A carpenter's tool to bore holes with. The auser hath a handle and bit; its office is to make great round holes. When you use it, the flux you work upon is commonly laid low under you, that you may the easier use your strength; for in twisting the bit about by the force of both your hands, on each end of the handle one, it cuts great chips out of the wood. Mose's Med. Eversen.

Averse. adv. [from aversion.] It is sometimes, improperly, written averse. Any thing.

If I can do it, By averse that I can speak in his disfavour. She shall not long continue love to him. Shakesp. They may, for averse I know, obtain such obstinacies as may induce the mediums to entertain other thoughts. Bolin. But go, my son, and if averse be wont, Anthony many father's friends. Addison's Cato.

To AUGMENT, v. a. [augmenter, Fr.] To increase; to make bigger, or more. Some curious weeds her cunning hand did know, That could augment his harm, encrease his pain. Fairly.

Rivers have streams added to them in their passage, which enlarge and augment them. Hall's Common Law of England.

To AUGMENT, v. n. To increase; to grow bigger.

But as his heat with running did augment, Much more his felicity enter'd his heart. Sidney. The winds redouble, and the rains augment. Thales on heaven's nature. Hooker.

AUGMENTATION. n. s. [augmentum, Lat.] 1. Increase; quantity gained. You shall find this augmentation of the tree to be without the diminution of one drachm of the earth. Wm. of Augustine.

2. State of increase. Difficulties are improper in the beginning of inflammatory; but proper, when mixed with repulsive, in the augment. Wm. Jull.

3. Averse. n. s. [from averus, Lat.] The act of increasing or making bigger. Those who would be zealous against regular troops after a peace, will promote an augmentation of those on foot. Addison.

4. The state of being made bigger. When modification of matter can make one element capable of so prodigiously vast augmentation, while another is confined to the minutest of indivisible. Bentley.

5. The thing added, by which another is made bigger.

By being glorified, it does not mean that he doth receive any augmentation of glory at our hands; but his name we glorify, when we testify our acknowledgment of his gifts. Smollett.

AUGMENTATION Court. A court created by King Henry the Eighth, for the increase of the revenues of his crown, by the supplication of monasteries. Dict.

AUGRE. n. s. A carpenter's tool. See Auger.

Your temples burnt in the cement, and Your sanctuaries, whereon you fixed, confu'd Into an auge's bore. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

AUGRE-HOLE. n. s. [from augir and hole.] A hole made by boring with an augre; proverbially a narrow space.

What be spoken here, Where once your fate, hid within an augre-hole, May revi and seize us? Shakesp. Macbeth.

AUGUR. n. s. [auger, Lat.] One who pretends to predict or omens, as by the flight of birds.

What say the augurs— They would not have you fur forth to-day: Pleading the entrails of an offering forth; They could not find a heart within the beast. Auge.- They do not speak, But the augur and augure. Calchas, the sacred seer, who had in view Things present and the past, and things to come foreknew. Supreme of augurs. Dryden's Falla.
At 1 and mine confult thy augur.
Grant the gud omen; let thy fav'rite rite
Prelate, even foaring to the right.
Priar.
To Augur, v. n. [from augur.] To gueful;
To conjecture by signs.
The people love me, and the sea is mine,
My pow'r is a crecent, and my augur'ine hope
Shall fill in common places.
My auguring mind affame the succes fasces.
Dryden.
To Augurate, v. n. [Auguror, Lat.] To judge
by augurage.
Augurage, n. f. [from augur.] The practice of augurage, or of foertelling by Augures and prodigies.
Claudius Fuller underwrote the like success,
When he continued the tripaludary augurations.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
A'ugarer, n. f. [from augur.] The name
With augur.
Thee apparent prodigies,
And the persifion of his augurage,
May hold thee from the capital to day.
Shakespeare.
Aug'rail, adj. [from augur.] Relating to augury.
On this foundation were built the conclusions of foothsayers, in their augural and tripaludary divinations.
Brown.
To Augurize, v. n. [from augur.] To practise divination by augury.
Dry.
A'garous, adj. [from augur.] Predicting;
prefent; foreboding.
So fear'd.
The fair-man'd horfes, that they flew back,
And their chariot turn'd;
Pafsioning in their augurous hearts the labours that
They taught'd Charnam's Hand.
Augury, n. f. [Augurium, Lat.]
1. The act of prognosticating by omens or prodigies.
Thy face and thy behaviour,
Which, if my augury serve me not,
Witless good breeding.
Shakespeare.
The winds are charg'd, your friends from danger,
Or I renounce my skill in augury.
Dryden.
A'gur, v. a. [from augur.] To divine;
Venus would fill in the design.
Swift.
2. An omen or prediction.
What if this death, which is for him defign'd,
Had been your deem, (for be that augur'd)
And you, Avenger, compound to die?
Dryden.
The pow'r we both invoke
To you, and your wives, and mine, prophetic he.
And firm our purpose with an augur.
Dryden.
A'gust, adj. [Augustus, Lat.] Great;
grand; royal; magnificent; awful.
There is nothing fo contemptible, but antiquity
Can render it august and excellent.
Cicero, Sueton.
The Trojan chief appear'd in open light,
August in vigour, and severely bright;
His mother goddess, with her hands divine,
Hail form'd his cunning locks, and made his tem'- plate.
Augustus.
A'viary, n. f. [from avi, Lat. a bird.]
A place inclosed to keep birds in.
In aviaries of wire, to keep birds of all sorts,
The Italians forlajf wait experience; including great scope of ground, variety of bushes, trees of good height, running waters, and sometimes a throve annealed, to confume the air in the winter.
Woman's Architecture.
Look new to your aviary; for now the birds
Grow thick of their feathers.
Lenry's Calends.
A'vity, n. f. [from avi, Lat. a bird.]
1. The act of calling afe.
The battle of battles, the avocations of our friends, and the din of a clamorous world, are impendiments.
Swift.
Aviation, n. f. [from avocat.]
Stir up that remembrance which his many avocations of business have caused him to lay aside.
Dryden.
God doth frequently injec to the soul boundless impulfe to duty, and powerful avocations from sin.
Shad.
2. The business that calls; or the call that removes away.
It is a subject that we may make some progress in its contemplation within the time, that in the ordinary time of life, and with the permission of necessity and avocation, a man may employ in such a contemplation.
Hol's Origin of Mankind.
By the felicous cares and avocations which accompany marriage, the clergy have been furnished with a new subject.
Addison.
To AVOID, v. a. [avclude, Fr.]
1. To hun; to decline.
The wisdom of pleasing God, by doing what
He commands, and avoiding what He forbids.
Tallifon.
2. To escape; as he avoided the blow by turning aside.
3. To endeavour to hun.
The fahion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter.
Shakespeare.
4. To evacuate; to quit.
What have you to do here, fellow? pray you,
and up the house.
Shakespeare.
If any rebel should be required of the prince confederate, the prince confederate should command him to avoid the country.
Barton.
He desired to speak with some few of us:
whereupon six of us only stayed, and the reft avoided the room.
Barton.
5. To emit; to throw out.
A toad contains not those urinary parts which are found in other animals; and we do not emit from the mouth.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
6. To oppose; to hinder effect.
The removing that caused putrefaction,
both present and at a distance.
Barton.
7. To vacate; to annul.
How can these grants of the king's be avoided, without wronging of those lords which had those lands and lordships given them?
Shakespeare.
To Avoid, v. n.
1. To retire.
And Saul cast the jenas; for he said, I will infinite David even to the wall with it; and David avoided out of his presence twice.
Sam.
2. To become void or vacant.
Bishops are not included under benefices so that if a person takes a bishoprick, it does not avoid by force of that law of pluralities, but by the ancient common law.
Ayliffe.
A'vile, adj. [from avoid.] 1. That which may be avoided, shunned, or escaped.
Want of exactness in such nice experiments is scarce avoidable.
Boyce.
To take several things for granted, is hardly avoidable to any one, whose rule it is to throw the falsehood or impossibility of any truth.
Lutten.
2. Liable to be vacated or annulled.
The charters were not avoidable for the king's manage; and if there could have been any such pretences, that alone would not avoid them.
Harr.
A'voidance, n. f. [from avoid.]
1. The act of avoiding.
It is appointed to give us vigour in the pursuit of what is good, or in the avoidance of what is hurtful.
Watts.
2. The cause by which any thing is carried off.
For avoidances and drainings of water, where there is too much, we shall speak of.
Barton.
3. The act or state of becoming vacant.
The act of avoidance.
A'voider, n. f. [from avoid.]
1. The person that avoids, shuns any thing.
2. The person that carries any thing away.

3. The vessel in which things are carried away.

Avoir'dless. adj. [from avoid.] Inevitable; that which cannot be avoided.

That avoid's ruin in which the whole empire would be involved.

Avour. n. f. [avouer, Fr.] A kind of weight, of which a pound contains sixteen ounces, and is in proportion to a pound Troy, as seventeen to fourteen. All the larger and coarser commodities are weighed by avoirdupois weight.

Chamber.

Probably the Romans left their ounce in Britain, which is now our avoirdupois ounce for our Troy ounce we hail elsewhere. Acteuse in Canton.

Avolution. n. f. [from avole, to fly away, Lat.] The act of flying away; flight; escape.

There airy vegetables are made by the relics of glacial accidents, while edition was prevented by the condensed enclosure. Canavesi's Sestri.

Strangers, or the fugous parcels about candidates, only signify a pluvious air, hindering the extending of the full petals. Emma. Ven. 565.

To Avouche. n. [avouer, Fr.: for this word we now generally say avouch.]

1. To affirm; to maintain; to declare peremptorily. They boldly avouched that themselves had only the truth, which they would at all times defend.

Wrested though I seem, I can produce a champion that will prove What is avouched here. Shaksp. King Lear.

2. To produce in favour of another. A stoic antiquity could have been avouched for the Irish. Shaksp. Ireland's Isle.

3. To vindicate; to justify. You will think you made no offence, if the duke avouched the justice of your dealing. Shaksp. King Lear.

Avoir. n. f. [from the verb.] Declaration; avouchment; assertion. I might not this believe, Without the sensible and tryng avouch Of mine own eyes. Shaksp. Hamlet.

Avoucheur. adj. [from avouch.] That may be avouched.

Avoucher. n. f. [from avouch.] He that avouches.

To Avouer. n. a. [avouer, Fr.] To declare with confidence; to justify; not to dissemble.

H's cool stepdame, seeing what was done, Her wicked days with weaponed knife did end; In death avouering, th' innocence of her fat. Dryd. Fairy Queen.

He that delivers himself his doing it upon his own particular know edge, or the relation of some credible person, avouening it upon his own experience. Dryd.

Left to myself, I must avou, I prove

From publick fame to screen my secret love. Dryd.

Such affrights proceed from principles which cannot be avoued by those who are for preferring church and state. Swift.

Then blest his minister's flame, avou'd and bold. Dryd.

Avoirable. adj. [from avouer.] That which may be openly declared; that which may be declared without shame.

Avoiral. n. f. [from avouer.] Judicatory declaration; open declaration.

Avowedly. adv. [from avouer.] In an open maner.

Avoirhter. n. f. [from avouer.] He that avoues or avulges.

Virgil makes Alcestis a bold avouer of his own virtues. Dryd.

Avowry. n. f. [from avouer.] In law, is where one takes a dittres for rent, or other thing, and the other fees reprieve. In which case the taker shall justify, in his plea, for what cause he took it; and, if he took it in his own right, is to show it, and so avow the taking, which is called his avowry. Chambers.

Avousal. n. f. [See Adowry.] A confession.

Avowry. n. f. [See Adowry.] Adultery.

Aurate. n. f. A fort of pear; which fee.

Aurélia. n. f. [Lat.] A term used for the first apparent change of the erud, or maggot of any species of insects.

Chamber.

The military maggot, found in the dry heads of teasel, is sometimes changed into the aurél of a butterfly, sometimes into a fly-cate. Ray on Crazt.

Auricula. n. f. See Bears Ear. A flower.

Aural. adj. [from auricula, Lat.] The ear.

1. Within the senfe or reach of hearing. You shall here confess, and by an aurical assurance have your satisfaction. Shaks. K. Lear.

2. Secret; told in the ear; as, aurical confession.

3. Traditional; known by report. The alchymists call in many varie tyes out of alchymy, aurical traditions, and feigned tophi onely. Bacon.

Aurally. adv. [from aurical.]

In a secret manner. These will from confests, and that not aurically, but in a loud and audible voice. Defy of Pyg.

Auriferous. adj. [aurifer, Lat.] That which produces gold.

Rocks rich in gems, and mountains big with mine. Whence may a burrying storm auriferous play. Tennyson.

Auriga. n. f. [from auriga, Lat.] The act or practice of driving carriages. Dict.

Aurigment. n. f. See Orpiment. AURORA. n. f. [Lat.]

1. A species of crowfoot.

2. The goddess that opens the gates of day; poetically, the morning.

Aver. On Indus' fmiting banks the rosy flower. Thom. AVERÈRE. adj. [from avertir.] Light streaming in the night from the north.

Aveur. n. f. [Avery, Lat.] A preparation made by dissolving gold in aqua regia, and precipitating it with falt of tartar, in which a very small quantity of it becomes capable, by a moderate heat, of giving a report like that of a pilfet. Quincy.

Averum, some aurum fulminans the fabrick shook. Garth.

Auscultation. n. f. [from auscultare, Lat.] A heartening or listening to. Dict.

Auspice. n. f. [aupsicities, Lat.]

1. The omens of any future undertaking drawn from bird.

2. Protection; favour shewn.

3. Influence; good derived to others from the destiny of their patron.

But so may be live long, that town to sawy. Which by his auspice they will nobler make. As he will hatch their sails by his fly. Dryd.

Auspicius. adj. [from auspice.] Relating to prognosticks.

Auspiciously. adv. [from auspice.]

1. Having omens of success.

You are now, with happy and auspicious beginning, forming a model of a Chisilian charity. Supp.

Auspiciously. adv. [from auspices.]

2. Prosperous; fortunate; applied to person, or actions. Fortune play upon thy proph'rous helm. Auspiciously, with the auspicious mirthful. Shakespeare.

Auspiciously. adv. [from auspices.]

4. Lucky; happy; applied to things. I'll deliver all. And promise you calm fees, auspicious gales, And falls expeditious. Shaksp. seated. A party an active, an auspicious fate. And bright as heav'n, from whence the blessing came. Reference.

Two battles your auspicious cause has won. Thy sword can perfect what it has begun. Dryd.

Auspiciously. adv. [from auspices.]

Happily; prosperously; with propitious omens.

Auspiciousness. n. f. [from auspicious.] Prosperity; promise of happiness.

Austerè. adj. [austerus, Lat.]

1. Severe; hard; rigid.

When men reproach the Divine nature as an austerè and rigorous matter, always lifting up his hand to take vengeance, such conceptions must unavoidably raise terror. Riggs.

A jur. austerè, say

From whence this wrath? who controls thy sway? Pope.

2. Sour of taste; harsh.

Th' austerè and pungent juices they imbibe, Make them ascend through the full and climb The orange-tree, the citron, and the lime.

Austerely. adv. [from austeré.] Blackmore.

Averse wines, diluted with water, cool more than water alone, and at the same time do not relax.

Arbuthnot on Aliments.

Austere. adv. [from austeré.] Severely; rigidly.

Ah! Luciana, did he tempt thee so? Might't thou perceive, austerè in his eye, That he did plead in earnest? Shakspere.

Hypocrites austerely talk.
AUSTERENESS. n. s. [from austere.]
1. Severity; fridernity; rigour.
2. Cruelty; harsh discipline.

AUTHENTIC. adj. [from authentic.] 1. Severe; composed; grave.
2. The first beginner or mover of anything; one to whom anything owes its original form. That law, the author and observer whereof is only God, to be believed for ever. Heuer.
3. The author of that which causeth another to be, is author of that thing also which thereby is caused.

AUTHENTICALLY, adv. [from authentic.] After an authentic manner; with all the circumstances requisite to procure authority.

AUTHENTICATE. adj. [authenticate.] That which has every thing requisite to give it authority; as, an authentic register. It is used in opposition to any thing by which authority is destroyed, as authentic, not counterfeit. It is never used of persons. Genuine; not fictitious.

AUTHENTICATE. adv. [authenticate.] To give the name or title of an authority.

AUTHENTICATE. n. s. [from authentick.] The fame with authenticity.

AUTHORITY. n. s. [author.] 1. The first beginner or mover of anything; one to whom anything owes its original form. That law, the author and observer whereof is only God, to be believed for ever. Heuer.
2. The author of that which causeth another to be, is author of that thing also which thereby is caused.

AUTHORITATIVE. adj. [from authority.]
1. Having due authority.
2. Having an air of authority.

AUTHORITY. n. s. [authoritas.]
1. Legal power.
2. With due authority.
3. The power to command or order.

AUTHORITY. n. s. [authentic.]
1. Legal power.
2. With due authority.
3. The power to command or order.

AUTHORITY. n. s. [autograph.]
1. An act or letter signed by an author or editor.
2. A signature or autograph.

AUTHORIZE. n. s. [from authorize.]
1. To give authority to any person.
2. To authorize for trade.

AUTHORITATIVE. adj. [from authority.]
1. Having due authority.
2. Having an air of authority.
3. With due authority.

AUTHORITY. n. s. [authoritas.]
1. Legal power.
2. With due authority.
3. The power to command or order.
4. To justify; to prove a thing to be right.

AUTHORIZE. n. s. [from authorize.] To give authority to any person.

AUTHORESS. n. s. [from auctrix.] A woman who is the author of a work.

AUTHOGRAPHICAL. adj. [from autography.] Of one's own writing.

AUTHOGRAPHY. n. s. [autograph, authography, autograph.] A particular person's own writing; or the original of a treatise, in opposition to a copy.

AUTHORITATIVE. adj. [from authority.] Having due authority.
1. The first beginner or mover of anything; one to whom anything owes its original form. That law, the author and observer whereof is only God, to be believed for ever. Heuer.
2. The author of that which causeth another to be, is author of that thing also which thereby is caused.

AUTHORIZATION. n. s. [from authorize.] Establishment of authority.

AUSTERE. adj. [from austere.] Severe; composed; grave.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.

AUTHENTICITY. n. s. [from authentic.] Authenticity; genuineness; authenticity.
Having from Locke, Dryden. A and a. Hales adj. confesse, Glawjille. present Pike's P'tlipt, Let Pike's have helping; but Locke* like feeing to will go. To assist I

1. A pert of plural, dispute.

Rule By winter, season received The use, giving to the other cloud, summer, resuming.

The This is a thing to the autumnus, auxiliares, and Pyrthonian.

In eyes.

I have known to be.

To await,

To awake.

To force or help.

To accurate or be.

To arm, or to.

To augur, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To augur, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.

To arrive, or to.
Let us go. Arrows, old man: give me thy hand; away; King Lear hath left, he and his daughter ta'n; Give me thy hand. Come on. Speak, King Lear.

Begone. Arrows, and glister like the god of war, When he intendeth to become the field. Shakespeare's King John.

I'll to the woods among the happier brutes: Come, let's away; bath, the shrill hour refined.

Out of one's own hands; into the power of something else. Arrows every man, who will not sife away his soul, and feel himself into irrecoverable misery, to enquire into these matters. Tullis

It is often used with a verb; as, to drink away an estate; to idle away a man, which is, to drink or idle till an estate or manor is gone. Dryden.

He play'd his life away. Pope.

On the way; on the road; perhaps this is the original import of the following phrase. Sir Valentine, whether away to fall? Shakespeare.

Perhaps the phrase, he cannot away, may mean, he cannot travel with; he cannot bear the company of his master. Shakespear.

She never could away with me. Never, never; she would always stay, she could not abide Master Shallow. Shakespeare.

Away with. Throw away; take away. If you dare think of deserting our charms, Away with your sheephears, and take to your arms. Dryden.

AWE. n. f. [egre, oga, Sax.] Reverential fear; reverence.

Thereby all their thoughts are brought up high, without awe of parents, without precepts of masters, and without fear of offence. Spenlor's State of Ireland.

This thought fixed upon him who is only to be feared, God; and yet with a filial fear, which at the same time both fears and loves. It was awe without amazement, and dread without distraction. Swift

What is the proper awe and fear, which is due from man to God? Roger's.

To Awe. v. a. [from the noun.] To strike with reverence, or fear; to keep in subjection.

If you will work on any man, you must either know his nature and gifts, and feed him on his ends, and so persuade him; or his weaknesses and disadvantages, and so awe him; or those that have interest in him, and so govern him.

Why then was this forbid? Why, but to awe? Why, but to keep you low and ignorant, His worhippers? Milton. He says, that hath placed this island to give law; To balance Europe, and its states to awe. Walker.

The rods and axes of princes, and their deputies, may awe many into obedience; but the fame of their goodness, justice, and other virtues, will work on more. Aubrey.

AWE-BAND. n. s. [from awe and band.] A check. Diet.

AWFUL. adj. [from awe and fall.] 1. That which liiketh with awe, or fills with reverence. So awful, with honour thou may'st love. Thyswaggo, who fies, when two are anem been leath wise. Milton's Paradise Lost.

I approach thee thus, and gaze Infatuation, whose finger: now have fear Thy awful bow, now awful thus retir'd, Thy faithless band or by Maker fair! Milton

2. Worthful; in authority; invovled with dignity. This scene is obdurate.

Know, then, that some of us are gentlemen, Such as the fury of anger would from. Thurst from the common of awful men. Shakespeare

3. Stuck with awe; timorous; scrupulous. This sene occurs but rarely. It is not nature and spirit reason, but a weak and awesomely reverence for antiquity, and the vag in of fallible men. Addison.

AWFULLY, adv. [from awful. In a reverential manner.

It will concern a man, to treat this great principle awfully and wisely, by still observing what is consistent, but especially what it forbids. Swift AWEFULNESS. n. f. [from awful.] 1. The quality of linking with awe; solemnity.

These objects naturally raffe seriousness; and night heightens the awfulness of the place, and pours out her supernatural horrors upon every thing. Addison.

2. The state of being struck with awe: little used. An help to prayer, producing In us reverence and awfulness to the divine majesty of God. Locke

To AWAPE. v. a. [This word I have met with only in Spenlor, nor can I discover whence it is derived, but imagine, that the Teutonic language had anciently wagen, to strike, or some such word, from which weepens, or offensive arms, took their denomination.] To strike; to confound; to terrify.

Ah! my dear goffy, aUGHT the time, Deeply do your fool words my words aught. Dryden

Both for because your grief doth great appear, And eke because myself am touched near. Herbert's Tale.

AWHILE, adv. [This word, generally re- spected an adverb, is only a subile, that is, a time, an interval.] Some time; some space of time. Stesy, stay, i say!

And if you love me, as you say you do, Let me persuade you to forbear awhile. Shakespeare.

Into this wild slys the weary friend Stood on the brink of hell, and lo! and o'er it waked, Pursuing his voyage. Milton's Paradise Lost.

A. adj. [Abarbarous contrivance of the word awkward.] Odd; out of order. We have heard as arrogant juggling in the pulps, as the fleeces, and professors singing as awk as the bells to give notice of the confusion. Dryden AWKWARD. adj. [seanb, Sax.] That is, backward, untoward.

1. Inelegant; unpolite; untaught; un genteel.

Proud Italy, Whose manners still our tardy, spili nation Limps and are brought to awkward imitation. Shakespeare.

Their own language is worthy their care; and they are judged of by their handiome or awkward way of expressing themselves in it. Locke.

An awkward frame, or fear of ill usage, has a chance in this conduct. Swift

2. Unready; unhandy; not dexterous; clumsy.

Silv or to resolve, but in performance quick. So true, that awkward is as trick. Dryden

3. Perverse; untoward.

A kind and constant friend To all that regularly offers; But was unplaceable, and awkward, To all that interlocked and hawked. Hoddares AWKWARDLY, adv. [from awkward.] Clumsily; unready; inelegantly; ungainly.

Dameats nodding from the waife upwards, and

I swearing he never knew a man go more awkwardly to work.

When any thing is done awkwardly, the common man laying upon them, that it is suitable to their breeding. Locke.

If pretty measure is void of genius, and would perform her part but awkwardly, I must nevertheless infest upon her working. Addison.

She still renewes the ancient scene; Forgets the forty years he born. Awkwardly, gay, and oddly merry; Her scar pale pink, her head-knot cherry. Prior.

If a man be taught tohold his pen awkwardly, yet is here fully well, it is not enough to teach him the accurate methods of handling that instrument.

Watt's Improvement of the Mind.

AWKWARDNESS. n. f. [from awkward.] Inelegance; want of gentry; oddness; unfutilableness.

One my observe awkwardness in the Italian, which easily diffuses their airs not to be natural. Addison.

All his airs of behaviour have a certain awkwardness in them; but their awkward airs are worn away in company.

Watt's Improvement of the Mind.

A. n. f. [dale, ale, Sax.] A pointed instrument to bore holes.

He which was minded to make himself a perpetual father, should, for a while tokens thence, have also his ear bored through with an aale. Hooker.

You may likewise prick many holes with an awl, about a joint that will live in the earth. Mortimer's Husbandry.

AWLESS. adj. [from awe, and the negative less.]

1. Wanting reverence; void of respectful fear.

Against whose fury, and the unmatched force, The aweful lion could not wage the awful. Shakespeare.

He claims the bull with awful influence. And having fez'd his horns, scolds the prince. Dryden

2. Wanting the power of causing reverence.

Ah! me! I see the ruin of my house; The tyger now hath fez'd the gentle hind; Infilating tyranny begins to just. Upon the innocent and awful thrones. Shakespeare, Rich. III.

A. n. f. A Dutch measure of capacity for liquids, containing eight dekans, or twenty verges or vertcales; anyvering to what in England is called a threc, or one-sixth of a ton of France, or one-seventh of an English ton. Arbuthnot.

A. n. f. [arifca, Lat.] The beug growing out of the corn or grass. Chambers.

A. n. f. A cover spread over a boat or vessel, to keep off the weather.

Of their boards I made a awning over me. Robinson Crusoe.

A. adv. [from e and work.] On work; into a state of labour; into action.

So afe Pythias' paue, Armed vengeance fits him new awrok. Shakespeare.

By prescribing the condition, it lets us awrok to the performances of it, and that by living well. Hammond.

A. adj. [from awrok.] Into the state of working.

Long they thus travelled, yet never met Adventure which might them awrok ing. Hubber's Tale.
AXI

Awry', adv. [from a and awry.] 1. Not in a straight direction; obliquely, but her sad eyes fill falt'ned on the ground, are governed with goody modestly, which may let in a little thought unfound.

Like perspectives, which rightly gaze upon, show nothing but confusions, eyed awry, Distinguish form.

A violent crook wind, from either coast, blow them transverse, ten thousand leagues awry into the devious air.

2. Axil; with oblique vision. You know the king with jealous eyes has look'd awry. On his son's actions, Ere felt such rage.

3. Not in the right or true direction. I hap to stop awry, where I see no path, and can discern but few steps afore me.

4. Not equally between two points; unequally. Not tyrants fierce that unremitting die, not Cynthia when her mauncey pawn'd awry, Ere felt such rage.

5. Not according to right reason; perverely. All awry, and which wired to the most way course of all, wit subdued, rather to feign reason why it should be amiss, than bow it should be amended. Much of the soul they talk, but all awry. And in themselves seek virtue, and to themselves all glory arrogate, to God give none. Milton.

AXE, n. f. [eas, acye, Sax. æcea, Lat.] an instrument confining of a metal head, with a sharp edge, fixed in a handle or halve, to cut with.

—No metal can, no, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness of thy sharp envy. Shakespeare.

There stood a feast on the mountain's brow, which overlook'd the dyed plains below; no founding axe presum'd these trees to hive, Corvol with the world; a venerable sight. Dryden.

AXILLARY, adj. [from axilla, Lat.] Be Axillary.

AXILLARY. n. f. [axilla, Lat.] The cavity under the upper part of the arm, called the arm-pit.

AXIOM, n. f. [axioma, Lat. &c.] 1. A proposition evident at first sight, that cannot be made plainer by demonstration.

Actions, or principles more general, are such as this, that the greater good is to be chosen before the lesser. Hook.

2. An established principle to be granted without new proof. The axioms of that law, whereby natural agents are guided, have their use in the moral. Hooker. Their affirmations are no axioms; we esteem thereof as things unsafe, and account them in life of nothing. Brown.

AXIS. n. f. [axis, Lat.] The line real or imaginary that passes through any thing, on which it may revolve.

It might annually have compassed the sun, and yet never have once turned upon its axis. Bentley.

On their own axis as the planets run, and make at once their circle round the sun; so two conicall motions all the soul, and one regards itself, and one the whole. Pope.

AXLE TREE. n. f. [axis, Lat.] The pin which passes through the midst of the wheel, on which the circumvolutions of the wheel are performed.

Venerable Nemesis should with a bond of awe, flashing as the axe-cutters, on which heaven's rides, knit all the Grecian cars to his experience's tongue. Shakespeare.

The fly fast upon the axe-tree, of the chariot-wheel, and fain, what a dull do I taste? Bacon. And the gilded car of day his glowing axe doth ally In the deep Atlantic stream. Milton.

He saw a greater show appear, than his bright throne or burning axe-tree could bear. Milton's Chaucer's National.

AYE, adv. [perhaps from ais, Lat.] 1. Yes; an adverb of answering affirmatively.

—Ay, madam, with the twelfth wing of speed. Shakespeare.

What say'lt thou? wilt thou be of our comfort? say ay, and be the captain of us all. Shakespeare.

2. It is a word by which the fencer is enforced; even, yes, certainly, and more than that. Remember it, and let it make thee effectual; ay, and allay this thy abusive pride. Shakespeare.

AYE, adv. [aps, Saxon.] Always; to eternity; for ever. It is now rarely used, and only in poetry.

And now in darksome dungeon, wretched thrall, Remedies for ay he doth him hold. Fairy Queen. Either prepare to die, or on Diana's altar to protest.

For ay, authority and single life. Shakespeare.

The foul, though made in time, survives for ay; and, though it be beginning, fees no end. Sir J. Davies.

And bears the mifer, in a ring. Ay, round about the hagard ring. Milton.

Th' ashamed mariners are ply the pumps;

No fray, nor rest, till the wide breach is closed. Philpot.

AYE, n. f. The fame with bowdler; which see.

Did.

A'ZUMUTH. n. f. [Arab.] 1. The azimuth of the sun, or of a star, is an arch between the meridian of the place, and any given vertical line.

2. A'ZUMUTH. n. f. Magnetic A'Zumuth, is an arch of the horizon contained between the sun's azimuth circle and the magnetic meridian; or it is the apparent distance of the sun from the north or south point of the compasses.

A'ZUMUTH COMPASS, is an instrument used at sea for finding the sun's magnetic azimuth.

A'ZUR. adj. [azur, Fr. azurro, Span. lazur, Arab. from laznib, a blue stone.]

Blue; faint blue; like peonies round of marble class. Where azure veins well mix appear. Sidney.

The blue of the first order, though very faint and little, may be the colour of some substance; and the azure colour of the skies seems to be this order.

Thus replies Minerva, graceful with her azure eyes. Pope.

Far through his azure turbulent domain, your empire owns. Thomson.
BA

B, The second letter of the English alphabet, is pronounced as in most other European languages, by pressing the whole length of the lips together, and forcing them open with a strong breath. It has a near affinity with the other labial letters, and is confounded by the Germans with $P$, and by the Gascos with $V$; from which an epigrammatick reflex, that bilere and winter are in Gacson the same. The Spaniards, in most words, use $B$ or $V$ indifferently.

BA. n. f. [See the verb.] The cry of a sheep.

Bab. To am the as original. It Di£.

BACCHUS. n. f. A flower not tall, but very full and broad-leaved. Mortimm. BACCUS. n. f. [from baccus, a berry, and fero, to bear, Lat.] Berry-bearing. Baccus trees are of four kinds.

BACCHUS. n. f. [from baccus, a berry, and were, to devour, Lat.] Devouring berries.

BACCHUS. n. f. [This is a word of very uncertain etymology, it not being well known what was its original sense. Junius derives it from baccharo, foolish; Menage, from bas chevalier, a knight of the lowest rank; Spelman, from bacculus, a staff; Cujus, from bacilla, an allowance of provifion. The most probable derivation seems to be from bacca laureus, the berry of a laurel or bay; bachelors being young, are of good hopes, like laurels in the berry. Dr. Lawrence observed, that Menage’s etymology is much confirmed by the practice in our universities of calling a Bachelor, Sir. In Latin, bacculareus.

1. A man unmarried.

Such separation becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid. Saxo.

The haunting of dissolute places, or return to courtiers, are no more punished in married men than in bachelors. Bacon.

A true painter naturally delights in the liberty which belongs to the bachelor’s estate. Dryden.

Let faithful bachelors their woes deplore, Full well they merit all they feel, and more. Pope.

2. A man who takes his first degrees at the university in any profession.

Being a boy, next bachelors of arts, I seemed to speak against the pope. Acham.

I appear before your honour, in behalf of Martinus Scriblerus, bachelor of physic. Mart. Scriblerus.

2. A knight of the lowest order. This is a name now little used. Bacon.

BACHELORSHIP. n. f. [from bachelor.]

The condition of a bachelor.

Her mother, living yet, can testify, She was the first fruit of my bachelorship. Saxo.

BACK. n. f. [bac, bax, Sax. bach, Germ.]

1. The hinder part of the body, from the neck to the thighs. Part following enter, part remain without, And mount on others back, in hopes to shake. Dryden.

2. The

B
To Bac. v. a. [from the noun back.]

1. To mount on the back of an horse.
   That man shall be my throne.
   Well, I will have turke.
   Shakespeare.
   Bid Butler lead him fast into the park.

2. To break a horse; to train him to bear upon his back.
   Direct me how to back the winged horse.
   Favour his flight, and moderate his course.
   Dryden.

3. To place upon the back.
   As Ifieldset thought.
   Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
   Apprised to me.
   Shakespeare.

4. To maintain; to strengthen; to support; to defend.
   Belike he means,
   Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,
   To zipline unto the crown.
   You are the strength of your肩.
   Not you for your sake: call you that backing of your friends? a plague upon such backing I give me them that will face me.
   Shakespeare.

5. To justify: to support.
   The patron of the ternary number of principles, and those that would have five elements, endeavour to back their experiments with a specious reason.
   Boile.

6. To fiddle.
   Fiddling, and faving this or t'other side,
   These wagers back their widows.
   Dryden.

To Bac. v. n. [from back and bite.]

To cenure or reproch the abient.
Most unshakably and melancholy do those evil tongues backbite and slander the sacred ashes of that perjurer.
Spenser.
I will use him well; a friend 'tis courtier is not so much as a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy.
for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.
Shakespeare.

Backnten. n. f. [from backbite.]
A privy calumniator; a cenurer of the abient.
No body is bound to look upon his backshit, or his undertaker, his betrayer, or his oppressor, as his friend.
South.

Backbon. n. f. [from back and bone.]
The bone of the back.
The backbone should be divided into many vertebrae for commodious bending, and not to be one entire rigid bone.
Reg.

Back carry. Having on the back.

Many wood, in his forefathers, whether it for one of the four circumferences, or cafes, wherein a fort is set to prevent an offender against vert or verification in the forest, viz. the listable, dog-drawn, back-carry, and body 'by.
Crowell.

Back door. n. f. [from back and door.]
The door behind the house; privy passage.
The procession durst not return by the way it came; but, after the devotion of the monks, pulled out at a backdoor of the convent.
Addison.

Paperly, with the men out, as not to re-enter openly, in stealthy in by the backdore of the.
Atterbury.

Backern. adj. [from back.]
Having a back.

To Bac. n. f. [from back.

Back. adj. [from back.

Backfriend. n. f. [from back and friends.]
A friend backwards; that is, in enemy in secret.

Set the reffles intentions of talebearers and backfriends against fair words and professions.

E. Freem.

Far is our church from interposing upon the civil power; as some, who are backfriends to both, would maliciously infringe.
South.

Backammon. n. f. [from back and gammon. Welth, a little battle.]
A play or game at tables, with box and dice.

In what esteem are you with the vicar of the parish? can you play with him at backammon.
Swift.

Backhouse. n. f. [from back and house.]
The buildings behind the chief part of the house.

Their backcloset, more of necessity than cleanly service, as kitchens, stables, are climbed up on by flying.
Carver.

Backpiece. n. f. [from back and piece.]
The piece of armour which covers the back.

The morning that he was to join battle, his armours put on his backside before; and his backplate belted.
Cowper.

Backroom. n. f. [from back and room.]
A room behind; not in the front.

If you have a fair prospect backwards of gardens, it may be convenient to make backrooms the larger.
Max, M. Berr. Esl. eff.

Backside. n. f. [from back and side.]

1. The hinder part of any thing.
   If the quicksilver were rubbed from the backside of the speculum, the glass would sause the same rings of colours, but more faintly; the phenomena depend not upon the quicksilver, unto so far as it encreaseth the reflection of the backside of the glass.
   Newton.

2. The hind part of an animal.
   A poor man carries a grain of corn, climbing up a wall with her head downwards and her backside upwards.
   Addison.

3. The yard or ground behind a house.
   The wash of failures, fields, common roads, from backside, are of great advantage to all sorts of land.
   Mortimer.

To Backside. v. n. [from back and side.]
To fall off; to apostatise: a word only used by divines.

Hath thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? She is gone up upon every high mountain, and under every green tree.
Jeremiah.

Backslider. n. f. [from backside.]
An apostate.

The backslider in heart shall be filled.
Psevadd.

Backstaff. n. f. [from back and staff; because, in taking an observation, the observer's back is turned towards the fun.]

An instrument useful in taking the sun's altitude at sea; invented by Captain Davies.

Backskater. n. f. [from back and skater.]
The private floors in the house.

I condemn the practice which hath lately crept into the court of the backskaters, that some pricked for fish: fit get out of the bill.
Bacon.

Backstays. n. f. [from back and stay.]
Ropes or stays which keep the mast of a ship from pitching or forward or overboard.

Backsword. n. f. [from back and sword.]
A sword with one sharp edge.

Bull dressed not old Lewis as backword.

Addition.

Back.-
Backward. adj. [from back, and backward.] pep. Sax. that it is, towards the back; contrary to forwards.

1. With the back forwards.
2. Towards the back.

In heaping with weights, the arms are first cast backward, and then forwards, with so much the greater force; for the hands go backward before they take their rise. Bacon.

3. On the back.

The burning fire from her malignant eyes,
Singed him backward as she threw it to. Dryden.

4. From the present position to the place beyond the back.

We might have met them dastard, beard to beard, and beat them backward home. Shakespeare.

The monstrous fight
Struck them with horror backward; but for worse
Urg'd them behind. Milton.

5. Regressively.

Are out the rays of light, in passing by the edges and sides of bodies, bent several times backward and forwards with a motion like that of an eel? Newton.

6. Towards something past.

To prove the possibility of a thing, there is no argument to that which looks backward; for what has been done or suffered may certainly be done or suffered again. Swift.

7. Reflex.

No, doubtless, for the mind can backward cast upon itself, her understanding light. Sir J. Davis.

8. From a better to a worse state.

The work went backward, and the more he travailed the more the sinner, the farther from her love. Dryden.

9. Past; in time past.

They have spread one of the worst languages in the world, if we look upon it some reigns backward. Locke.

10. Perversely; from the wrong end.

I never yet saw man
But she would spell him backward; if fair-fac'd,
She'd swear the gentleman should be her father; if black, why, nature, drawing of an antick,
Made a soul lost; if tall, a clumsy ill-headed.

Backwards. adj.

Unwilling. averse.

Our mutability makes the friends of our nation backward to the being with us in alliances. Addison.

We are strongly backward to lay hold of this safe, this only method of cure. Steele.

Cities laid waste, they form'd the dews and caves; for wise wretches are backward to be famous. Pope.

Hectating.

All things are ready, if our minds be so;
Perish the man, whose mind is backward now. Pope.

Slighter; dilatory.

The mind is backward to undergo the fatigue of weighing every argument. Watts.

Dull; not quick or apprehensive.

It often falls out, that the backward learner makes progress, while the other stands still. South.

Late; coming after something else.

as, backward fruits; backward children: fruits long in ripening; children slow of growth.

Backward. n. f. The things of state behind or past; poetical.

What fear thou else
In the dark backward; or abysm of time? Shakespeare.

Unwillingly. averse; with the back forward.

Jake Numid lions by the hunters char'd,
Though do they fly, yet backwards do go
With proud aspect, driving greater haste. Sidney.
BAG

BAFFLER, n. f. [from baffle.] He that puts to confusion, or defeats.

Experience, that great baffler of speculations, affords us the thing which is possible, and brings, in all ages, matter of fact to confuse our suppositions.

Government of the Tongue.

BAG, n. f. [belge, Saxon; whence perhaps droppings, as it is unfair, the man confounded, came bags, bag, bag.]

1. A sack, or pouch, to put any thing in, as money, corn.

Cuffon, away for England; hate before, And, ere our coming, fee thou flake the bags Of boarding abots; their impartial'ed angels See to it, and do't like. Shakespeare

What is it that opens thy mouth in praises? Is it that thy bags and thy barns are full? Stedd. They were included within the earth, as to a bag. Plautus.

Once, we confess, beneath the patriot's close, From the crack'd bag the dropping guineas spoke. Pope.

2. That part of animals in which some particular juices are contained, as the poison of vipers.

The swelling poison of the several feds, Which, wanting vent, the nation's health infects, Shall burst its bag. Sidney.

Sing on, long, for I can never be lost; So may thy cows their burden'd bags distend. Dryd.

3. An ornamental purse of silk tied to men's hair.

We saw a young fellow riding towards as full gallop, with a bob wig and black linen bag over. Addison.

4. A term used to signify different quantities of certain commodities : as, a bag of pepper, a bag of hops.

To BAG. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To put into a bag.

Accordingly he drain'd thofe marshy grounds, And bag'd them in a blue cloud. Dryd.

Hops ought not to be bagged up hot. Mortimer.

2. To load with a bag.

Like a bee, bag'd with his honey'd venom, He brings it to your hive. Dryd. Don Sebastian.

To BAG. v. n. To swell like a full bag.

The skin seemed much contracted, yet it bagged, and had a plumpness, full of matter in it. Wjsman.

Two kids that in the valley stray'd I found by chance, and to my fold conveyed: They drain two bagging udders every day. Dryd.

BAGATELLE, n. f. [bagatelle, Fr.] A trifle; a thing of no importance; a word not naturalised.

Heaps of hair rings and cypher'd seals; Rich trusses, ferior bagatelis. Prior.

BAGGAGE, n. f. [from bag ; bagage, Fr.]

1. The furniture and utensils of any army.

The army was an hundred and four thousand footmen, and twelve thousand horsemen, before the bagage. Johna.

Jdub's are the bagage of virtue; they cannot be spared, or kept behind, but they hinder the march. Bacon.

They were probably always in readiness, and carried among the bagage of the army. Addison on Italy.

2. The goods that are to be carried away, as bag and bagage.

Deshalld defined, when his affairs grew desperate in Egypt, to pack up bag and bagage, and fall back.

3. A worthless woman; in French bagasse; so called, because such women follow camps. A spark of indignation did rise in her, not to suffer such a bagage to win away any thing of hers. Sidney.

When this baggage meets with a man who has vanity to credit relations, the turns him to a crouching. Spect.

BAGNIO, n. f. [bagus, Ital. a bath.] A house for bathing, watering, and otherwise cleaning the body.

I have known two instances of malignant fevers produced by bathing, which were called bagnios. Arth. on the Clr.

BAGPIPE, n. f. [from bag and pipe; the wind being received in a bag.] A musical instrument, consisting of a leathern bag, which blows up like a foot-ball, by means of a port-vent or little tube fixed to it, and stopped by a valve and three pipes or flutes, the first called the great pipe or drone, and the second the little one, which pafs the wind out only at the bottom; the third has a reed, and is played on by compressing the bag under the arm, when full; and opening or stopping the holes, which are eight, with the fingers. The bagpipe takes in the compass of three octaves. Chambers.

No baniers but swasts, with some bad bagpipes instead of drum and file. Sidney.

He play'd the bagpipe, and saw a general animosity, with the found. Addison's Freeholder.

BAGPIPER, n. f. [from bagpipe.] One that plays on a bagpipe.

Some that will ever keep thro' their eyes, And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper. Shaksp.

BAGUETTE, n. f. [Fr. a term of architecture.] A little round moulding, lies than an altralog, sometimes carved and enriched.

To BAGUETTE. v. a. [baguer, Fr.] To drench; to soak: a word out of use.

The women fastow not to bagueto them unless they please, their heels, with a worse perfume than Jughun found in the dungeon. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

BAL'. n. f. [Of this word the etymologists give many derivations; it seems to come from the French bailier, to hold, to hand; to deliver up, as a man delivers himself up in fury.]

Bail is the freeing or setting at liberty one arrested or imprisoned upon action either civil or criminal, under four considerations.

There is both common and special bail: common bail is in actions of small prejudice, or slight proof; called common, because any fortunes in that case are taken; whereas, upon causes of greater weight, or apparent specialty, special bail or fortune must be taken. There is a difference between bail and manslaughter; for he that is manslaughtered is not, until the day of his appearance; but when a man is bail'd, he is always accounted by the law to be in their ward and custody for the time; and they may, if they will, keep him in ward or in priors at their time, or otherwise as their will.

Witty with debts, and put all hopes of bail. Beaum. 'Tis better to thrust one self in jail. Rhodeham.

And brute with presents, or, when presents fail, they tend their prayers, and do for bail. Dryd.

To BAIL. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To give bail for another.

Let me be their bail— They shall be ready at your highest will; To answer the lowest appal Thou shalt not bail them. Shaksp. Titus Andronicus.

2. To admit to bail.

When they had bailed the twelve bishops who were to the Tower, the house of Commons, in great indignation, caused them immediately to be recommissioned to the Tower. Clarendon.

BAL'. n. f. [from bail.] That may be set at liberty by bail or sureties.

BAILIFF. n. f. [a word of doubtful etymology in itself, but borrowed by us from bailiff, Fr.]

1. A subordinate officer.

I have under the canton of Bern, governed by the bailiff every three years from the tenure of Bern. Ad.,

2. An officer whose business it is to execute arrears.

It often happens that, by the under-sheriffs and their bailiffs, the owner hath incurred the forfeiture, before he cometh to the knowledge of the process that runnheth against him. Bacon.

A bailiff, by mistake, seized you for a debtor, and kept you the whole evening in a furnishing-house.

Swift as a bird, the bailiff leaves behind. Pope.

3. An under-steward of a manor.

BAILLON. n. f. [of baille, Fr. and pic, Sax.] The place of the jurisdiction of a bailiff within his hundred, or the lord's franchise. It is that liberty which is exempted from the sheriff of the county, over which the lord of the liberty appointed a bailiff.

Cowell.

A proper officer is to walk up and down his bailoiver. Spec.

These lifted wits to the sheriff, to return the names of the several land-owners in their several bailoivails. Hale.

To BAIL. v. a. [bailan, Sax. baizhen, Germ.]

1. To put meat upon a hook, in some place, to tempt fish, or other animals.

Of cunning enemy, that, to catch a fain, With various baits did bait the hook dangerous. It is that temptation that doth go us on To fan in loving virtue. Shak. Masq. for Masq.

Let's be revenged on him; let's appoint him a meeting, give him a show of comfort in his fall, and lead him on with a sure baited delay, still he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the garter. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

Many sorts of fishes lock upon invalids, as it is well known to anglers, who bait their hooks with them. Ray.

How are these imp's impr'v'd in' sm'rous arts? What new-found strances they baie for human hearts? Gay.

2. To give meat to one's self, or horses, on the road.

What? fo thine, so thine, will all this hold might? The fun, that measures heaven all day long. At night doth baie his steeds the ocean waves among. Spec.

To BAIL. v. a. [from batters, Fr. to beat.]

1. To attack with violence.

Who seeming forely charg'd at his band, As chained heurs, whom cruel dogs do baie. With idle force did fain them to withstand. Spenser.

Fairy Queen.

I will not yield To kifs the ground before young Malcolm's feet; And to be baied with the rable's eare. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. To harass by the help of others; as, we bait a boar with malliffs, but a bull with bull-dogs.

To BAIL. v. n. To flop at any place for refreshment: perhaps this word is more properly bate, to abate speed. Ben.

But our defere tyrannical extortion Doth force us there to set our child delightfulastes, Where but a baing place is all our position. Sidney.

As one who on his journey baits at noon, Thy bent on feed; to here th' archangel pass'd. Tate.
2. To be heated or baked.

Fillets of a fenny skate,
In the coaldrum boil and bake. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Baked Meats. Meats dressed by the oven.

There be some hauers, wherein fastsmalt will retain, and baked meats will mostly mellow, more than others. Bacon.

Bakehouse. n.f. [from bake and hose]. A place for baking bread.

I have marked a willingness in the Italian artisans, to distribute the kitchen, pantry, and bakers under ground. Wotton.

Baken. The participle from To baken.

There was a cakebake on the coals, and a crust of water, at his head. T. Kings.

Baker. n.f. [from To baken.] He whole the kind of meat.

In life and health, every man must proceed upon a'Thing, there being no knowing the intention of the cook or baker. South.

Balance. n.f. [balance, Fr. bilanx, Lat.]

1. One of the six simple powers in mechanics, used principally for determining the difference of weight in heavy bodies. It is of several forms. Chambers.

2. A pair of scales.

A balance of power, either without or within a state, is but conveyed by considering what the nature of the other parts of the same thing; for the part which is held, together with the hand that holds it; and then the two scales, with whatever is weighed therein. Swift.

For when on ground the burden balances, The empty part is lifted up the higher. Sir J. Daven.

3. A metaphorical balance, or the mind employed in comparing one thing with another.

I have an equal balance justly weight'd
What wrong our arms may do; what wrongs we suffer
Grieves heavier than our oaths. Shaksp. Hen. IV.

4. The act of comparing two things, as by the balance.

Comfort affests not from others being miserable, but from this inference upon the balance, that we suffer only the lot of nature. L'Estrange.

Upon a fair balance of the advantages on either side, it will appear, that the rules of the gospel are more powerful means of conviction than such melleage. Atterbury.

5. The overplus of weight; that quantity by which, of two things weighed together, one exceeds the other.

Care being taken, that the exportation exceed in value the importation; and then the balance of trade must of necessity be returned in coin or bullion. Bacon's Advic to Villagers.

6. That which is wanting to make two parts of an account even; as, he flated the account with his correspondent, and paid the balance.

7. Equipoise; as, balance of power. See the second fene.

Love, hope, and joy, fair pleasure's smiling train
Hate, fear, and grief, the family of pain;
Thrice mix'd with art, and twice as bold in mind,
Make and maintain the balance of the mind. Pope.

8. The beating part of a watch.

It is but supposing that all watches, whilst the balance be in motion, is equally tremulous, that my watch thought all night. Locke.

[In astronomy.] One of the twelve figures of the zodiac, commonly called Libra.

Or wilt thou warm ourcommon with thy rays
And steat nearest the balance polesthe days? Dryd.

To Balance. v. a. [balancer, Fr.]

1. To weigh in a balance, either real or figurative; to compare by the balance.

If men would but balance the good and the evil
Of things, they would not venture soul and body
For dirty interests. L'Estrange.

2. To regulate the weight in a balance; to keep in a state of just proportion.

I would that hath pleased this cursed life to give five
To balance Europe, and her states to owe. Waller.

3. To counterpoise; to weigh equal to; to be equivalent; to counteract.

The attraction of the glads is balanced, and rendered ineffectual, by the contrary attraction of the large evils. Locke.

4. To regulate an account, by balancing it on both sides.

Judging is an accounting and determining
On which side the odds lie. Locke.

5. To pay that which is wanting to make the two parts of an account equal.

Give him leave to balance the account of Blechen's day. Prior.

Though I am very well satisfied, that it is not in my power to balance accounts with my Maker, I am resolved, however, to turn all my endeavours that way. Addis. Spottar.

To Balance. v. a. To heftiate; to fluctuate between equal motives, as a balance plays when charged with equal weights.

Were the satisfaction of love, and the joys of heaven, offered to one only person's possession, he would not balance, or err, in the determination of his choice. Locke.

Since there is nothing that can induce us to think that we should balance a moment about printing it. Atterbury in Pope.

Balancr. n.f. [from balance.] The person that weighs any thing.

Balas Ruby. n.f. [from Balas, Fr. suppos'd to be an Indian term.]. A kind of ruby.

Balb's ruby is of a crimson colour, with a cast of purple, and seems better to answer the description of the ancients. Woodward in Bullen.

To Balb'cinante. v. n. [from balbutiate, Lat.] To rammer in speaking. Didd.

Didd. To balbutiate. v. n. The same with balbucinate.

Balco'n'y. n.f. [balance, Fr. balcon, Ital.] A frame of iron, wood, or stone, before the window of a room.

Then pleasure came, who liking not the fashion, Began to make balconies, terraces, and built himself a noble house. Herbert.

When dirty waters from balconies drop,
And drest'ons dainties tweltthe sprinkling moss. Gay.

Bald. adj. [bal. Welch.]

1. Wanting hair; depoied of hair by time or licehood.

Neither shall men make themselves bald for them.
Jer. 25.

1. And it is remarked by Marchetti, that the crude of the lice is within the clefts of the brain, and its shrinking from the skull: he having observed, that in bald persons, under the bald party, there was a vacuity between the skull and the brain. Ray.

2. He should imitate Caritas, why, because his head was bald, covered that defect with laurels. Addis.

3. Without natural covering.

Under an oak, whose boughs were mould'd with
And high top bald with dry antiquity. Shaksp.

4. Without the usuall covering.

He is set at the upper end of that table; but they stand bold before him. Shakespeare.

4. Unadorned; inelegant.

Hobbes, in his discourse to his own bald translation, begins the praise of Homer when he should have ended it.

Dryden's Fables, Preface.

And that, though labour'd, fine must bald appear,
That brings ungrateful musick to the ear, G. Chev.

5. Mean;
BAL

5. Mean; naked; without dignity; without value; bare.
What should the people do with these bold tri-
On whom depending, their obedience fails. To 'th greater breach. Shakespeare.

6. Ball was used by the northern nations, to signify the name of anguish, bold; and is full in use. So Baldwin, and by invention Winkaldus, is bold conqueror. Eildaldus, nobly bold; Eadaldus, happily bold; which are of the fame import as Teregrus, Teregrimus, and Teregulus, &c. Gibbon.

BALDACHIN. n.f. [baladino, Ital.] A piece of architecture, in form of a canopy, supported with columns, and curving as a covering to an altar. It properly signifies a rich silk, Du Cange, and was a canopy carried over the holl.

Baldardash. n.f. [probably of bald, Sax. bold, and dash, to mingle.] Any thing jumbled together without judgment; rude mixture; a confused discourse.

To Baida, v. a. [from the noun.] To mix or adulterate any liquors.

Baldly. adv. [from bald.] Nakedly; meanly; inelegantly.

Baldonny. n.f. The same with Gent. Baldwin. n.f. [from bold.] The want of hair.

2. The loss of hair.

Baldness. n.f. [from bold.] Which happens to the skin to light, and there corrupting to a wound. Spreads leprous and baldness round. Swift.

3. Meanness of writing; inelegance.

Baldrick. n.f. [Of uncertain etymology.] A girdle. By some Dictionariers it is explained a bracelet; but I have not found that that be.

At this his breast a baldrick brave he wore.
That thin'd, like twinkling stars, with flowers most precious rare. Fairy Queen.

A girdle, a baldric, or his shoulders tied, Saffain'd the sword that glitter'd at his side. Pope.

2. The zodiack. That like the twins of love they seem'd in fight, Which deck the baldric of the heavens bright. Shakespeare.

Bale. n.f. [balle, Fr.] A bundle or parcel of goods packed up for carriage.
One hired an ass in the dog-days, to carry certain balls of goods to fuch a town. E. Irons. In part of the balls in which behove to be carried on Holmwood's plains. "Western.

Balle. n.f. [bale, Sax. bale, Dan. bal, bol, Lelandish.] Misyrie; calamity. She look'd about, and tiding one in mail Armed to point, fought back to turn again; For light the hatred as the deadly balle. Fairy Qi.

To Bale. v. a. A word used by the sailors, which made out the water; that is, love it out, by distillation or diffusion from pumping. Skinner. I believe from bailer, Fr. to deliver from hand to hand. To Bale. v. n. [emballer, Fr. imballure, Ital.] To make up into a bale.

Baleful. adj. [from bale.]
1. Full of misfiey; full of grief; sorrowful; sad; woeful.
BAL

If golden scissors hang not on the walls,
To light the costly suppers and the balls. Dryden.

He would make no extraordinary figure at a ball; but I can assure the ladies, for their consolation, that he has writ better verses on the fox than any man.

Swift.

BALLAD, n. s. [ballade, Fr.] A song.

Ballad once signified a solemn and formal song, as well as a trivial, when Solomon's Song was called the ballad of balls; but now it is applied to nothing but trifling verse. Watt.

And I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to stately tunes, may a cup of balm be my poison.

Like the sweet ballads, this amusing lay
Too long detains the lover on his way. Gay.

THE BALLAD, n. s. [from the noun.] To make or sing ballads.

Will catch at us like trumpets, and shall not dim my ballads
Until our note is done. Shakspeare.

BALLAD-SINGER, n. s. [from ballad and singer.] One whole employment is to sing ballads in the streets.

Not ballad-singer, plac'd above the crowd,
Sings with a noise to thrilling, sweet, and loud. Gay.

BAL'LAST, n. s. [ballaste, Dutch.]

1. Something put at the bottom of the ship to keep it steady to the centre of gravity.

There must be middle counsellors to keep things steady for, without that ballast, the ship will roil too much. Bacon.

Now by the scent of a submarine vegetable, they may be easily contrived, if there be some great weight at the bottom of the ship, being part of its ballast; which, by some cord within, may be loosed from it. Wilkins.

As, when empty barrels on bills float,
With handy ballast linters trim the boat;
So bees bear gravel stones, whose polishing weight
Steel thoro' the whirling winds their fiery flight. Dryden.

2. That which is used to make anything steady.

Why should he sink where nothing seem'd to float?
His lasting light, and his ballast less. Swift.

To BAL'LAST, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To put weight at the bottom of a ship, in order to keep her steady.

If this be fo ballasted, as to be of equal weight with the like magnitude of water, it will be moveable. Saury idlers.

Wilkins.

2. To keep any thing steady.

While thus to ballast love I thought,
And so more readily I gave tone,
I saw I had love's pinnace overtaught. Donne.

Now you have given me virtue for my guide,
And with true honour ballasted my pride. Dryden.

BALL'ETTE, n. s. [ballette, Fr.] A dance in which figure description is reprehended.

BALLIARDS, n. s. [from ball, and yard, or flick to push it with.] A play at which a ball is driven by the end of a flick: now corruptly called balliards.

With dice, with cards, with balliards, far unjust.

With short tricks, maiming merely wit. Spenfer.

BALL'ISTER. See BAL'USTRE.

BAL'LYON, n. s. [ballon, Fr.]

1. A large round short-necked vessel used in chymistery.

2. [In architecture.] A ball or globe placed on the top of a pillar.

BAL'LOT, n. s. [ballate, Fr.]

1. A little ball or ticket used in giving voices, being put privately into a box or urn.

2. The act of voting by ballot.

BAL'LOT, n. s. [ballate, Fr.]

To choose by ballot, that is, by putting little balls or tickets, with particular marks, privately in a box; by counting which, it is known what is the result of the poll, without any discovery by whom each vote was given.

No competition arriving to a sufficient number of balls, they fell to ballot some others. Wotton.

Giving their votes by ballots, they lie under no awe.

BALLOTA'TION, n. s. [from ballot.] The act of voting by ballot.

The election is intricate and curious, consisting of ten several ballotings. Wotton.

BALLO, n. s. [balm, Fr. balsamum, Lat.]

1. The sap or juice of a shrub remarkably odoriferous.

Balm trickles through the bleeding veins
Of happy thrums, in Idumean plains. Dryden.

2. Any valuable or fragrant ointment.

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrong from thee;
Thy balm wells off wherewith thou well anointed. Shakspeare.

3. Any thing that soothes or mitigates pain.

You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to your sense. Shakspeare.

You prais'd your argument, balm of your age;
Dispelled and relief. Shakspeare.

A tender flame, our fellow's only balm. Young.

Balm, 1. n. s. [medulla, Lat.] The Balm Mint, Melissa, name of a plant.

The species are, 1. Garden balm. 2. Garden balm, with yellow variegated flowers. 3. Stinking roman balm, with soifer hairy leaves. Stilling.

Balm of Gilead.

The juice drawn from the balmian tree, by making incisions in its bark. Its colour is first white, soon after green; but when dry it comes to be old, it is of the colour of honey. The smell of it is agreeable, and very penetrating; the taste of it bitter, sharp, and astringent. As little issues from the plant by incision, the balm fold by the merchants is made of the wood and green branches of the tree, distilled by fire, which is generally adulterated with turpentine.

Calmet.

It seems to me, that the oil of Gilead, which we render in our Bible by the word balm, was not the same with the balmian of Mecca, but only a better sort of turpentine, then in use for the cure of wounds and other diseases. Praedon's Compendium.

2. A plant remarkable for the strong balsam parts, which leaves contain upon being bruised; whence some have supposed, erroneously, that the balm of Gilead was taken from this plant. Miller.

To Balm, v. a. [from balm.]

1. To anoint with balm, or with any thing medicinal.

Balm his foul head with warm diffused waters,
And burn sweet wood. Shakspeare.

2. To soothe; to mitigate; to allay.

BALSAM.

Oppress nature sleeps!

This reft might yet have balm'd thy senses. Shakspeare.

BALSAM, n. s. [from balm.] Having the qualities of balm.

Wax on the flow'ry herb I found me laid,
In balmey sweet; which with his beams the sun
Soon dry'd. Milton.

2. Producing balm.

Let India boast her groves; nor envy we
The sweet embalm' ment of the balm' y tree. * Pope.*

3. Soothing; soft; mild.

Come, Deidamia, to the foldies* field
To have their balmy numbers wash'd with wine. Shakspeare.

Such vines hourly pass before my sight,
Which from my eyes their balmy flames retract. Dryden.

4. Fragrant; odoriferous.

Those rich perfumes which from the happy shore
The winds upon their balmy wings convey'd,
Grew sweetly sweatsmel a world betray'd. Dryden.

First Euros to the rising morn is sent,
The regions of the balmian continent.

5. Mitigating; assuasive.

Oh balm your breath, that doth almost pervert
Justice to break her bonds! Shakspeare.

BALSAMI'NY. n. s. [balnaarium, Lat.]
A bathing-place, or a place where balm is to be found.

The balnaarium, and bathing-places, he exposeth unto the summer setting. Ervon's Polyg. Errors.

BAINNA'TION, n. s. [from balnaum, Lat. a bath.] The act of bathing.

As the head may be disturbed by the skin, it may the same way be relieved, as is obferrable in balnaeations, and fomentations of that part. Ervon's Polyg. Errors.

BAIN'ATORY. n. s. [balnatariors, Lat.]
Belonging to a bath or flave.

BALT'ADE, n. s. The leap of an horse, so that when his fore-feet are in the air, he shews nothing but the shoes of his hinder-feet, without yerking out. A baltade differs from a capriole; for when a horse works at caprioles, he yerks out his hinder legs with all his force. Farrier's Dict.

BAL'SAM, n. s. [balsamum, Lat.]
Ointment; unguent; in uncuous application thicker than oil, and softer than fave. Desbaras.

Child's blood our balsam; if that cure us here, Him, when our judges, we shall not find severe.

Balsam Apple. tomarilla, Lat. An annual Indian plant.

BAL'SAN Tree.

This is a shrub which scarce grows taller than the pomegranate tree; the blossoms are like small flats, very fragrant; wherefore springing out little pointed pods, including a fruit like an almond, called caperbalnianum; the blood is called yalo-balnianum, and the juice opballnianum. Calmet.

BALSAMICAL, adj. [from balsam.] Have a balsamic or balm of gilead effect: or a thing which mitigates; eases; softens; makes less stinking; lessifies; softens; makes less hard; makes less oily.

If there be a wound in my body, the vital energy of my soul thrusts out the balsamical humour of my blood to heal it. Hab.

The allment of such as have fresh wounds ought to be such as keeps the humours from putrefaction, and renders them oily and balsamic. Arbuthnot.

BALS'TER. n. s. [according to Du Gange, from baldunrism, low Lat. a bathing-place.] A small column or pillar, from an inch and three quarters to four inches square or diameter. Their dimensions nail upon the bows of the fuddle, to hold the bows in the right situation.

Banadge, n. f. [bandage, Fr.] 1. Something bound over another.

Zeal too had a place among the rest, with a bandage over her eyes; though one would not have expected to have seen her represented in snow.

Cords were fastened by hooks to my bandages, which the workmen had tied round my neck.

Swift's Gulliver.

2. It is used, in surgery, for the fillet or roller wrap over a wounded member; and, sometimes, for the aid or practice of applying bandages.

Bandbox, n. f. [from band and box.] A flight box used for bands, and other things of small weight.

My friends are surprised to find two bandboxes among my books, till I let them see that they are lined with deep tradition.

With empty bandbox the delights to range,
And brings a distant errand from the 'Change.

Swift's Tristram Shandy.

Bandlet, n. f. [bandlet, Fr. in architecture.] Any little band, flat moulding, or fillet.

Bandit, n. f. [bandito, It.] A man outlawed.

No savage fierce, bandit, or mountainer.

Will dare to foil her virgin purity.

Milton.

No bandit fierce, on tyrant mad with pride,

No cavern'd hermit, reins self satisfy'd.

Pope.

Banditto, n. f. in the plural banditti.

['bandito, It.] A Roman wondair, and bandits slaver.

Markus's Fantastic Traveler.

Bandog, n. f. [from ban or band, and dog. The original of this word is very doubtful.

Cainis, De Cainibus Britannicuis, derives it from band, that is, a dog chain'd up. Skinner inclines to deduce it from bana, a murderer. May it not come from ban, a curse, as we say a furty cur; or rather from banauden, swelled or large, a Danube word; from whence, in some countries, they call a great nut a ban-nut.] A kind of large dog.

To the time of night when Troy was set on fire,
The time when ferous owls cry, and bandogs howl.

Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Or privy, or pasture, as they call it.

We have great bandogs to teach their skin. Spencer.

BANDOLLERS, n. s. [bandolliers, Fr.] Small wooden covers coated with leather, each of them containing powder that is a sufficient charge for a musket.

Bandrol, n. f. [bandrol, Fr.] A little flag or fireman; the little fringed silk flag that hangs on a trumpet.

Bandvy. n. f. [from bander, Fr.] A club turned round at bottom, for striking a ball at play.

To Bandy, a. a. [probably from bandy, the instrument with which they strike balls at play, which, being crooked, is named from the term bander; as, bender un arc, to firing or bend a bow.] 1. To beat to and fro, or from one to another.

They do carnally, from one hand to another, bender un arc, as usually a tennis ball. Spencer.

And like a ball bender's 'twixt pride and woe,

Rather than yield, both sides the prize will quit.
What from the tropics can the earth repel?
What vigorous arm, what repulsive blow,
Bandits the mighty globe fill to and fill!
Banish.

1. Defructive.
The silver eagle too is bent before,
Which I do hope will prove to them as baneful,
As thou conceiv'st it to the commonwealth.
Bunjon.

The night-yew is baneful to the fold,
Storms to the wheat, to buds the bitter cold.
Dryd.

Banefulness.

2. To agitate; to tos under.
This hath been so baneful among us, that
One can barely make books of this kind.
Lockh.

For ever since men have been united into governments,
The endeavours after universal monarchy have been baneful among them.
Swift.

Let us tremble with a known truth, or some of the most plain and certain prophecies, be baneful about a disputation.
Watts.

To ban'dy, v. n. To contend, as at some game, in which each strives to drive the ball his own way.
This faultful bandying of their favourites,
But that he doth prejudice some ill event.
Shak.

A valiant Ion-in-law thou'lt enjoy:
One fine bandy with the tawdry sons.
Swift.

One to rise in the commonwealth.
Shak.

Could set up grandee against grandee,
To squander time away, and ban'dy.
Mulc.

Made lords and明知 known fortunes lay off
To one another's privileges.
Hudib.

After all the bandying attempts of resolution,
It is as much a question as ever.
Gay.

Bandyed.

3. To court, to tos about.
This hath been so baneful amongst us,
That even bands of this kind.
Lockh.

Having crooked legs,
The Ethipian had an one-eyed bandy-legged prince; such a person would have made but an odd figure.
Coll.

Bane.

4. Poison.
Begone, or else let me. "Thou ban'd to draw
The same air with thee."
Bunjon.

All good to me becomes
Bane, and in heath worsted would be my
Milton.

They say with speed.
Their course through thickest constellations led, Spreading their ban'se.
Milton.

I am doubly arm'd, my death and life, My ban'se and antidote, are both before me; This, in a moment, brings me to an end; But that informs me I shall never die.
Addl.

2. That which destroys; mischief; ruin.
Inforeicy bill must be repir'd, or it will be the bane of the Christian religion.
Milton.

I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Bismarck foretell come to Dunstan.
Shak.

Suffice that to me strength is my bane,
And proves the source of all my miseries.
Milton.

So entertain'd those odious sweetest the wind,
When came their ban'se.
Swift.

We can omit the Greeks, who declare
The Scipio worth, those thunderbolts of war,
The double bane of Carthage?
Dryd.

False religion, in its nature, the greatest ban and destruction to government in the world.
Swift.

To Bane, v. a. [from the noun.] To poifon.
To Bane, or. [from the noun.] To poifon.
What if my house be troubled with a rat?
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats
To save it.
Shak.

Baneful adj. [from bane and fell.]
1. Poisonous.
For voyaging to learn the direful art,
To rain with deadly drugs the barber dart;
Obsequies of the gods, and earthly null,
But need'st to impart the baneful truth.
Pope.

2. Delectable.
The silver eagle too is bent before, Which I do hope will prove to them as baneful, As thou conceiv'st it to the commonwealth.
Bunjon.

The night-yew is baneful to the fold, Storms to the wheat, to buds the bitter cold.
Dryd.

Banefulness.

3. To act of banishing another; as, he secured himself by the banishment of his enemies.
Shak.

2. The state of being banished; exile.
Now go we in content.
To liberty, and not to banishment.
Shak.

Round the wide world in banishment we roam, For'd from our pleasing fields and native home.
Dryd.

Banks.

1. The earth arising on each side of a water.
We saw, properly, the force of the sea, and the banks of a river, brook, or small water.

Have you not made an universal show, That Tyler turned underneath his ban'se,
Shak.

Which Richardson, in December, sent out a boat
Unto the shee, to ask those on the banks,
If they were his subjects.
Shak.

A brook whose stream go'st far, go'st good,
What was once ban'd; he resolves it a dead;
Whore's ban'se the Muses slept upon.
Dryd.

'Tis happy when our streams of knowledge flow
To their banks, but not to overflow.
Dryd.

Of early loth when blows the river flood,
When the said popp along his banks was laid?
Pope.

2. Any heap of earth piled up.
They belied him in Abel of Bethemash, and They made a bank against the city, and Slept in the trench.
Samuel.

Shall ban'd the brink, or fence of rowers.
Pleas'd on their banks, the lofty Trojans swept Neptune's smooth face, and cetas the yielding deep.
Dryd.

Mean time the king with gifts a vessel stores, Supplies the banks with twenty chen own.
Dryd.

The banks of ors were not in the same plan,
But raised above one another, is evident from decriptions of ancient ships.
Arbuth.

4. A place where money is laid up to be called for occasionally.
Let 't be no bane, or common stock, but every man be master of his own money.
Dryd.

That parlours and indulgences, and giving men a share in farts medals, out of the common bank and treasury of the church, which the pope has the sole custody of.
Samp.

5. The company of persons concerned in managing a bank.
To Bank, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To inclute with banks.
Avoid the el'ders.

And burning fands, that bank the flumby vales.
Thom.

2. To lay up money in a bank.
Bank-bill, n. f. [from bank and bill.]
A note for money laid up in a bank, at the fight of which the money is paid.
Shak.

Let three hundred pounds pass her out of my ready money, or bank-bills.
Swift.

Banker, n. f. [from bank.] One that trafficks in money; one that keeps or manages a bank.

Whose droves of tenders crowd the banker's doors,
To call in money.
Dryd.

By powerful charms of cold and silver led,
The Lombard bankers and the 'chings to waste.
Dryd.

Bankruptcy, n. f. [from bankrupt.]
1. The state of a man broken, or bankrupt.
Sir, if you spied where with word with me.
Shak.

I shall make your wit bankrupt.
Shak.

It is said that the money-changers of Italy had benches, probably in the burre or exchange; and that when any break in the exchange rate, his bench was broke. It was once written bankkrauten. Bankerout is a verb.
Dany.
They were banqueted by the way, and the nearer they approached, the more encroached the nobility,

To BANQUET. vi. n. To feast; to feast daintily. The mind shall banquet, tho' the body pine.

BAPTISMAL. adj. [from baptize.] Of pertaining to baptism.

BAPTIZER. n. f. [baptizere, Fr. Baptiseur.] He that administers baptism.

BAPTISTERY. n. f. [baptisterium, Lat.] The place where the sacrament of baptism is administered.

BAPTIST. n. f. [baptize, Fr. Baptiser.] To chrisen; to administer the sacrament of baptism to one.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A flag; a standard; a military ensign.

2. A frame put at the end of a bed, or elsewhere.

BANNEET. n. f. [from banner.] A knight made in the field, with the ceremony of cutting off the point of his standard, and making it a banner. They are next to barons in dignity; and were anciently called by summons to parliament.

BANNEKOL. More properly BANDEKOL. n. f. [from bandeere, Fr.] A little flag or streamer.

BANNEET. n. f. [from bandeere, Fr.] A little flag or streamer.

BANNEET. n. f. [from bandeere, Ital. banconeto, Span.] A feast; an entertainment of meat and drink.

BANQUET. n. f. [banquet, Fr. banquetto, Ital. banquete, Span.] A feast; an entertainment of meat and drink.

BANQUET. n. f. [banquet, Fr. banquete, Ital. banquetto, Span.] A feast; an entertainment of meat and drink.

BANQUET. n. f. [banquet, Fr. banquetto, Ital. banquetto, Span.] A feast; an entertainment of meat and drink.

To Basel. vi. a. [from the noun.]

To treat any one with feasts.

To his great baptismal floood.

With awe, the religious rite, and with them came

From Nazareth the son of Joseph dead, or Unmarked, unknown.

BAPTISM is often taken in Scripture for sufferings.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.

BAR. n. f. [barre, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood, iron, or other matter, laid croz a paffle to hinder entrance.

2. A bolt; a piece of iron or wood fastened to a door, and entering into the post or wall, to hold the door close.

3. Any obstacle which hinders or obstructs; obstruction.
BAR

Some at the bar with subtilety defend,
Or on the bench the knotty law urge.
Dryden.

7. An inclosed place in a tavern or coffee-house, where the housekeeper sits and receives reckonings.

8. In some sort of confection that they would appeal to me; and therefore laid down my penny at the bar, and made the best of my way. Addition.

9. An empty place by which the compages or structure is held together.

10. Any thing which is laid across another, as bars in heraldry.

11. Bar of Gold or Silver, is a lump or wedge from the mines, melted down into a sort of mould, and never wrought.

12. Bar of a Horse. The upper part of the gums between the tusks and grinders, which bears no teeth, and to which the bit is applied, and, by its friction, the hair is gernished.

13. Bars, in Musik, are strokes drawn perpendicularly across the lines of a piece of musick; used to regulate the beating or measure of musical time.

14. Bar, in African traffick, is used for a denomination of price; payment being formerly made to the Negroes almost wholly in iron bars.

BAR SHOT. n.f. Two half bullets joined together by an iron bar; used in fiction engagements for cutting down the masts and rigging.

BAR. vb. a. [from the noun.]

1. To failen or flt any thing with a bolt, or bar.

My duty cannot failer.
To obey in all your daughter's hard commands.
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you.
Shakespeare.

When you bar the window-flutters of your lady's bed-chamber at nights, leave open the farther to let in air.
Shakespeare.

2. To hinder; to obstruct.

When law can do no right,
Let it be lawful, that law bar no wrongs.
Shakespeare.

3. To prevent; to exclude; to make impenetrable.

There is no bar; the bar of the country were all freestud, and yet out so far off as that it barred mutual succour.
Sidney.

Dost it not seem a thing very probable, that God doth purposely bid, Do after my judgment, as giving thereby to understand, that his mean in the former sentence was but to bar fail-tidate in such things as were repugnant to his ordinance, law, and statutes?

4. To detain, by excluding the claimants: with from.

BAR

Has he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother; who shall bar them from me?
Shakespeare.

5. To flout out: with from.

Our hope of Italy not only soft,
But shut from every shore, and bar'd from every coast.
Dryden.

6. To exclude from use, right, or claim: with from before the thing.

God hath the key to open us from some things of themselves insufficient.
Hooker.

Give your voice on Richard's side.
To bar my master's heirs in true defeat!
Shakespeare.

He knows I will not.
Shakespeare.

His civil acts do bind and bar them all;
And as from Adam all corruption, tale,
So, if the father's crime be capital,
In all the blood doth corruption make.
Sir J. Daws.

It was thought sufficient not only to exclude them from that benefit, but to bar them from their money.
Claridon.

If he is qualified, why is he barred the profit,
When he only performs the conditions? Col. on Pride.

7. To prohibit.

For though the law of arms doth bar
The use of venom'd shot in war.
Hooker.

What is a greater pest than a mere man of the town? Bar him the play-bubbles, and you strike him down.
Claridon.

8. To except; to make an exception.

Well, we shall see your bearing
Nay, but I bar to-night you shall not gage me
What we do to-night.
Shakespeare.

9. In law. To hinder the proceeding of a suit.

But buff and belt men never know their cares;
No time, nor trick of law, their action bars:
Their cause they to an elder suit put.
Dryden.

From such delays as conduct to the finding out of truth, a criminal cause ought not to be barred.
Shakespeare.

If a bishop be a party to a suit, and excomnunices his adversary, such excommunication shall not disbar or bar his adversary.
Shakespeare.

10. To bar a vein.

This is an operation performed upon the veins of the legs of a horse; and other parts, with intent to stop the malignant humours. It is done by opening the skin above it, disengaging it, and tying it both above and below, and flirking between the ligatures.

BARB. n.f. [barba, a beard, Lat.]

1. Any thing that grows in the place of a beard.

The barber is called, by reason of the barb or warts at his mouth, or under his chin.

2. The points that stand backward in an arrow, or fishing-hook, to hinder them from being extracted.

Nor let the Spartan feel'd, before he found
The flying hair upon the wound.
 Pope's II.

3. The armour for horses.

This is taken in their naked, without any barbs; for a barbe may bring bards, few regarded to put on them.
Hayward.

BARB. n.f. [contrasted from Barbary.]

A Barbian horse.

Horses brought from Barbary, are commonly of a slender high fir, and very sleek, usually chosen for stallions. Barb is, it is said, may die, but never grow old; the vigour and meette of barbs never ceaseth, but with their life.

Faris's Dict.

Ta BARB. vb. a. [from the noun.]

1. To thave; to dress out the beard.

Shave the head, and tie the beard, and say it was the desire of the person to be so barbar'd before his death.
Shakespeare.

2. To furnish horses with armour. See BARBED.
3. Poverty.

Were it stripped of its privileges, and made as like the primitive church for its bareness as its purity, it could legally want all such privileges. Swift.

BARGAIN. n. [bargen, Welh; barga;

1. A contract or agreement concerning the sale of something.
2. The thing bought or sold; a purchase; the thing purchased.

Give me but my price for the other two, and you shall even have that into the bargain. Locke.

3. Stipulation; interested dealing.

There was a difference between courtesies received from their master and the duke: for that the duke's might have ended of utility and bargain, whereas their master's could not. Bacon.

4. An unexpected reply, tending to obscurity.

As I have not the bargain, whitlitch? Dryden. As I have not the bargain, few of them seem to be excellent, because they all terminate in one single point. Swift.

No maid at court is left aharm'd, How'er for felling bargains 'tis Swift.

5. An event; an uptho: a low fellow. I am sorry for thy misfortune; however we must make the best of a bad bargain.

Arthur's 'Stiffness of John Bull. To Ba'r gain. w. n. [from the noun.] To make a contract for the sale or purchase of any thing: often with for before the thing. He is very like to be ip plenty, they may be bargained for upon the ground. Bacon. The thirsty state will bargain ere they light. Dryden.

It is possible the great duke may bargain for the republick of Luaces, by the help of his great treasures. Addison on Italy.

Baga'ine'. n. f. [from bargain.] He or she that accepts a bargain. See Bargain.

Bargainer. n. f. [from bargain.] The person who proffers, or makes a bargain. See Bargain.

Bargain. n. f. [bargie, Dutch, from barga, low Lat.]

1. A boat for pleasure.

The barge the fat in, like a burnish'd throne, Burnt on the water. Shakespeare. Proud with the burden of so great a charge; With painted ears the youths begin to swoop Neptune's smooth face.

2. A fea commander's boat.

It: was undisturbed, when I had taken my bargain and gone ashes, that my ship should have set sail and left me. Religie.

3. A boat for burden.

Bar'gner. n. f. [from bargain.] The manager of a barge.

Many wafers make themselves plea, by putting the inhabitants in mind of this privilege; who again, like the Campellians in the north, and the London bargers, fortify not to beggars three. Carne's Survey of Cornwall.

Bark. n. f. [barck, Dan.]

1. The rind or covering of a tree.

Trees last according to the strength and quantity of their top and juice; being being mounted by their bark against the injuries of the air. Bacon's Natural History. Wanderings in the dark.

Physicians for the time's sake, barked. Dryd.

2. A small flipp. [from bava, low Lat.]

The duke of Parma must have flown, if he would have came into England; for he could neither get bark nor mariner to put to sea. It was that fatal and pernicious bark, built in th' ellipse, and rige'd with curkes dark, That firm to low that scarce head of things. Milt. Why do you desire bark, to build there? 'tis th' town? Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor. In vain the hardman calls him back again; The tongue stood off after, and bark in vain. Cowley.

2. To clamour at; to pursue with reproaches.

Vie is the vengeance on the saxes cold, And envy bats, to bark at sleeping fame. Fairy Que. You dare patronage. The obvious barks of your fancy tongue Against my lord! Shakespeare.

To Bar'k. w. n. [from the noun.] To strip trees of their bark. The severest penalties ought to be put upon barkers. Shakespeare. Richard III. Why do you desire bark, to build there? 'tis th' town? Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor. In vain the hardman calls him back again; The tongue stood off after, and bark in vain. Cowley.

3. To enquire after; to pursue with reproaches.

The vengeance on the saxes cold, And envy bats, to bark at sleeping fame. Fairy Que. You dare patronage. The obvious barks of your fancy tongue Against my lord! Shakespeare.

3. A boat for burden.

Bar're. or Bar. The privy rich of To bear. See To bear.

Bar'bone. n. f. [from bare and bone.]

Lean, so that the bones appear.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes barebone; where is long it is a toy, Jack, since thou favell thy old niece? Shakespeare; Henry IV.

Bar'refaced. adj. [from barefaced and face.]

1. With the face naked; not masked.

Your French cowsons have no hair at all, and then you will play barefaced. Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

2. Shameless.

are transferred by concealment; undisguised.

The animals entered, and the parties appeared barefaced against each other. Clarandere. It is molt certain, that barefaced bowdery is the poorest pretence to wit imaginar. Dryden.

Bar'face'dly. adv. [from barefaced.

Openly; shamelessly; without disguise.

Though only some profligate wretches own it too barefacedly, yet, perhaps, we should hear more, did we hear the people's tongues. Locke.

Bar'face'dness, n. f. [from barefaced.

Effrontery; assurance; audacity.

Bar'refoot. adj. [from bare and foot.]

Having no shoes.

Going to find a barefoot brother out, One of our order. Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet.

Bar'refoot. adv. Without shoes.

She must have a husband;

I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day. Shak. Ambitious love hath so in me offended, That barefoot glad I the cold ground upon With falved vow. Shakespeare.

Envoys describe this holy man, with his Alcaydes about him, standing barefoot, bowing to the earth. Addison.

Bar'footed. adj. Being without shoes.

He himself, with a rope about his neck, barefooted, came to offer himself to the discretion of Leucan. Sidney.

Bare'maw. n. [adj. [from bare and mane.]

Eaten bare.

Know my name is loft, By treason's teeth bargawes and cankerbit. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Bare'en'ded. adj. [from bar en head.]

Unlike the rest in colour.

He, bareheaded, lower than his proud Deed's neck, Bepoke them thus. Shakespeare's Richard II.

Next, before the chariot, went two men bareheaded of handsome visage. The victor knight had laid his helm aside, Bareheaded, popularly low he bow'd. Dryd. Falst.

Barely. adv. [from bare.]

1. Nakedly.

2. Poorly; industriously.

3. Without decoration.

4. Merely; only; without any thing more.

The external administration of his word, is as well by leading barely the Scripture, as by explaining the same. Hook.

The dale of L March is dead; And living too, for now his sun is duc-—-Barely in title, not in revenue. Shak. Rich. II. He barely man'd the street, promised the wine, But his kind wife gave me the very sign. Donna. Where the balance of trade barely pays for commodities with commodities, there money must be sent, or else the debts cannot be paid. Locke.

Bareness, n. f. [from bare.]

So you serve us

To will you for; but when you have our robes, You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves, And mock us with our bareness. Shakespeare.

2. Less.

For their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, they never learned that of me. Shakespeare.
BAR

The word Barley may be defined as a cereal grain used for food, its husks for fodder, and its straw for fuel.

BARLEY, n. s. [from bar.] A grain of barley; the beginning of our measure of length; the third part of an inch.

BARLEY CORN, n. s. [from barley and corn.] A grain of barley; the beginning of our measure of length; the third part of an inch.

BARLEY MOW, n. s. [from barley and mow.] The place where reaped barley is floated up.

BARLEYWIRE, n. s. [from barley and wire.] A low word sometimes used for strong beer.

BARREL, n. s. [from barrel.] A kind of rural play.

BARON. n. s. [The etymology of this word is very uncertain. Baro, among the Romans, signified a brave warrior, or a brutal man; and, from the first of these significations, Baron derives baron, as a term of military distinction. Others suppose it originally to signify only a man, in which sense baron, or warron, is still used by the Spaniards, and, to confirm this conjecture, our law yet uses baron and femne, husband and wife. Others deduce it from bar, an old Gaulish word, signifying commander; others from the Hebrew, a, of the same import. Some think it a combination of bar, a name, or peer, which seems least probable.]

A degree of nobility next to a viscount. It may be probably thought, that anciently, in England, all these were called barons, that had such significations as we now call count barons: and it is said, that, after the Conquest, all such came to the parliament, and fat as nobles in the upper house. But when, by experience, it appeared that the parliament was too much crowded with such multitude, it became a custom, that none could come but such as the king, for their extraordinary wisdom or quality, thought good to call by write; which write ran bar visce tenuam. After that, men seeing that this state of nobility was but casual, and depending merely on the prince’s pleasure, obtained of the king letters patent of this dignity to them and their heirs male; and these were called barons by letters patent, or by creation, whose posterity are now those barons that are lords of the parliament: which, by a usage, may create more at his pleasure. It is nevertheless thought that there are yet barons by writ, as well as barons by letters patent, and that they may be disdained by their titles; the barons by writ being those that, to the title of lord, have their own fermanes annexed; whereas the barons by letters patent are named by their baronies. These barons, which were first by writ, may now justly also be called barons by prescription; for that they have continued barons, in themselves and their ancestors, beyond the memory of man. There are also barons by tenure, as the bishops of the land, who, by virtue of baronies annexed to their bishoprics, have always had place in the upper house of parliament, and are called lords spiritual.

2. Baron is an officer, as baron of the exchequer to the king: of these the principal is called lord chief baron, and the three others are his assistants, between the king and his subjects, in cause of justice belonging to the exchequer.

3. There are also barons of the cinque ports, each of which has a seat in the exchequer.

4. Baron is used for the husband in relation to his wife.

5. A Baron of the Bench is when two sirlongs are not cut aunder, but joined together by the end of the backbone.

BARLEY BRAKE. n. s. [from barley and brake.] A low word sometimes used for strong beer.

BARLEYHOLE. n. s. [from barley and hole.] A grain of barley; the beginning of our measure of length; the third part of an inch.

BARLEY WIRE, n. s. [from barley and wire.] A low word sometimes used for strong beer.

BARREL, n. s. [from barrel.] A kind of rural play.

BARLEYWIRE, n. s. [from barley and wire.] A low word sometimes used for strong beer.

BARREL, n. s. [from barrel.] A kind of rural play.

BARLEYWIRE, n. s. [from barley and wire.] A low word sometimes used for strong beer.
BAR

which barons were not afterwards lords, but barons, as fummary of them do yet retain the name.

Barony. n.s. [baronnet, Fr. baroney, Sax.] That honour or lordship that gives title to a baron. Such are not only the fees of temporal barons, but of bishops also.

Baroscope. n.s. [from bar, and spect, to see, or to view.] An instrument to shew the weight of the atmosphere. See Barometer.

[This was a calm, the equilibrium could only be changed by the contents; where the winds are not variable, the alterations of the baroscope are very small.]

Baracan. n.s. [baracca, or barraca, Fr.] A strong thick kind of camlet.

Barack. n.s. [Barraca, Span.] 1. Little cabins made by the Spanish fishermen on the sea shore; or little lodges for soldiers in a camp.

2. Is generally taken among us for buildings to lodge soldiers.

Barator. n.s. [from barat, old Fr. from which is still retained barateur, a cheat.] A wrangler, and encourager of law-suits.

Barrel. n.s. [from barrel, or barn, that bears.] Point blank an action against our laws.

Barrel. n.s. [barrel, Welh.] 1. A round wooden vessel to be stopped close. It hath been observed by one of the ancients, that an empty barrel Knocked upon with the finger, gives a disposition to the sound of the like barrel full.

Trembling to approach.

The little barrel which he fears to touch.

2. A particular measure in liquids. A barrel of wine is thirty-one gallons and a half; of ale, thirty-two gallons; of beer, thirty-five gallons; and of beer vinegar, thirty-four gallons.

3. In dry measure. A barrel of Essex butter contains one hundred and six pounds; of Suffolk butter two hundred and fifty-five. A barrel of herrings should contain thirty-two gallons wine measure, holding usually a thousand herring.

4. College colleges, instead of limiting their rents to a certain sum, prevailed with their tenants to pay the price of so many barrels of corn, as the market went.

5. Any thing hollow; as, the barrel of a gun, that part which holds the shot.

6. Takes the barrel of a long gun perfectly bored. Set it upright with the breech upon the ground, and take a bullet exactly fit for it; then, if you suck at the mouth of the barrel ever so gently, the bullet will come up to the breech, that it will hazard the striking out your teeth.

A cylinder; frequently that cylinder about which any thing is wound.

Your string and bow must be accommodated to your quiver; if too weak, it will not carry about it.

Barrel. n.s. [barrel, Welh.] A cylinder; frequently that cylinder about which any thing is wound.

Your string and bow must be accommodated to your quiver; if too weak, it will not carry about it.

Barrel, or Barrele. v.t. To make or form a barrel.

To have their beer beforehand barrelled, which may be used as is needed. Spooner on Irr. Barrel up earth, and put it in the bottom of a pond.

Barrelled. adj. [from barrel and belly.] Having a large belly.

Daintly at empty nofe's, softy-neck'd, Sharp-headed, barrel-belly'd, broadly biek'd! Dryd.

Barren. adj. [bape, Sax. naked; properly applied to trees or ground unfertile.] Without the quality of producing its kind; not prolific; applied to animals.

They had him father to a line of kings. Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown, and put a barren sceptre in my left. Shakespeare.

No fun of mine succeeding. There shall not be male or female barren among you, nor among your cattle.

Deuteronomy.

2. Unfruitful; not fertile; sterile. The fruition of this city is pleasant, but the water is barren. Dryden.

Telemacus is far from exciting the nature of his country; he confounds it to barren. Pope.

3. Not copious; scanty. Some schemes will appear barren of hints and matter, and prove to be fruitful. Swift.

4. Unmeaning; univertive; dull. They be of them that will make themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barрактиeurs to laugh too. Shakespeare.

Barrenly. adv. [from barren.] Unfruitfully.

Barrenness. n.s. [from barren.] 1. Want of offspring; want of the power of procreation.

I pray'd for children, and thought barrenness.

2. A barrenness of fertility; infertility.

Within the self-hate felmet, lands have divers degrees of value, through the diversity of their fertility or barrenness.

3. Want of invention; want of the power of producing any thing new.

The forces of the earth are limited in the

4. Want of matter; scantiness. The imperfection of our adventurers hath contrived us longer to dwell than the barrenness of a poor cafe could have forced either to require or adopt.

5. [In theology.] Aridity; want of emotion or sensibility.

The great faults sometimes are servent, and sometimes feem barrenness of devotion.

Barren Worte. n.s. [piscineum, Lat.] The name of a plant.

Barrenful. adj. [from barren and full.] Full of obstructions.

A barren frie!

Whoe'er I won, myself would be his wife. Shaks.

Barricade. n.s. [from bar, and fall.] A fortification, made in haste, of trees, earth, waggons, or anything else, to keep off an attack.

Any floppy obstruction.

There must be such a barricade, as would greatly annoy, or absolutely stop, the currents of the atmosphere.

Barrow. n.s. [barrow, Fr. A strong, heavy, or large wagon. Any kind of carriage moved by the hand; as, a hand-barrow, a frame of boards, with handles at each end, carried between two men; a wheel-barrow, that which one man pushes forward by raising it upon one wheel.
B A S

Have I lived to be carried in a barge, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and thrown into the Thames? — Shakespeare.

No barrow's wheel
Shall mark thy stocking with a milky trace. — Gay.
Barrow, n. f. [barrow, Sax.]. A hog; whence barrow great, or hog's head.
Barrow, whether in the beginning or end of names of places, signifies a grove; from beauple, which the Saxons used in the same sense. — Gibbon.
Barrow is likewise used in Cornwall for a hillock, under which, in old times; bodies have been buried.

To B A R T E R. v. n. [barter, Fr.] to trick in traffick; from barat, craft, fraud.
To traffick by exchanging one commodity for another, in opposition to pacifying with money.

As if they licend to trade and barter,
By giving or taking quarter. — Hobbes.
A man has not every thing growing upon his foot, and therefore is willing to barter with his neighbour. — Collier.

To B A R T E R. v. a.
1. To give any thing in exchange for something else.

For him was I exchange'd and run'm'd;
But with a wiser man of arms by far.
Once, in contempt, they would have bartered me. — Shakespeare.

Then as thou wilt divide the
Reef, give me a share, at the market rate.
Can barter honor too extreme.
Prior.
I see nothing left us, but to truck and bar
to our goods, like the wild Indians, with each other. — Swift.

2. Sometimes it is used with the particle away before the thing given.
If they will barter away their time, methinks
they should at least have some security in exchange.
He also bartered away most plums, that would have rotted in a week, for nuts that would last good for his eating a whole year. — Locke.

B A R T E R. n. f. [from the verb.]
The art or practice of trafficking by exchange of commodities; sometimes the thing given in
is used with the particle away.

From England they may be furnished with such things as they may want, and, in exchange or barter, send other things with which they may supply. — Bacon.
He who corrupteth English with foreign words,
is as wise as ladies that change plate for china;
for, to the saucad traditio of old clothes is much the fairest. — Prynne.

B A R T E R. n. f. [from barter.] He that trafficks by exchange of commodities.

B A R T E R Y. n. f. [from barter.] Exchange of commodities.

It is a received opinion, that, in most ancient times, there was only barterry or exchange of commodities among most nations. — Camden's Remains.

B A S T R A M. n. f. A plant; the fame with polluny.

B A R T O N. n. f. The dendrine lands of a manour; the manour-house itself; and sometimes the out-houses. — Blount.

B A S T. adj. [bas, Fr. base, Ital. baso,
Spam. basos, low Latin basus].

1. Mean; vile; worthless; of things:
The harvest white plump is a base plump, and
the white d. d. plum are no very good plums. — Barret.

Pyreneus was only famous for counterfeiting all base things, as earthen pitchers, a scullery;
whereas he was famed Renaissance.

2. Of mean spirit; infamous; illiberal;
ugenerous; low; without dignity of sentiment; of perfons.

Since the perceptions are such in the party I love, the high idea of them cannot come up with any

[Barrow, whether in the beginning or end of names of places, signifies a grove; from beauple, which the Saxons used in the same sense. — Gibbon.

Barrow is likewise used in Cornwall for a hillock, under which, in old times; bodies have been buried.

To BARTER. v. n. [barter, Fr.] to trick in traffick; from barat, craft, fraud.
To traffick by exchanging one commodity for another, in opposition to pacifying with money.

As if they licend to trade and barter,
By giving or taking quarter. — Hobbes.
A man has not every thing growing upon his foot, and therefore is willing to barter with his neighbour. — Collier.

To BARTER. v. a.
1. To give any thing in exchange for something else.

For him was I exchange'd and run'm'd;
But with a wiser man of arms by far.
Once, in contempt, they would have bartered me. — Shakespeare.

Then as thou wilt divide the
Reef, give me a share, at the market rate.
Can barter honor too extreme.
Prior.
I see nothing left us, but to truck and bar
to our goods, like the wild Indians, with each other. — Swift.

2. Sometimes it is used with the particle away before the thing given.
If they will barter away their time, methinks
they should at least have some security in exchange.
He also bartered away most plums, that would have rotted in a week, for nuts that would last good for his eating a whole year. — Locke.

BARTER. n. f. [from the verb.]
The art or practice of trafficking by exchange of commodities; sometimes the thing given in
is used with the particle away.

From England they may be furnished with such things as they may want, and, in exchange or barter, send other things with which they may supply. — Bacon.
He who corrupteth English with foreign words,
is as wise as ladies that change plate for china;
for, to the saucad traditio of old clothes is
much the fairest. — Prynne.

BARTER. n. f. [from barter.] He that
trafficks by exchange of commodities.

BARTERY. n. f. [from barter.] Exchange
of commodities.

It is a received opinion, that, in most ancient times, there was only barterry or exchange of commodities among most nations. — Camden's Remains.

BASTRAM. n. f. A plant; the same with polluny.

BARTON. n. f. The dendrine lands of a manour; the manour-house itself; and sometimes the out-houses. — Blount.

BAST. adj. [bas, Fr. base, Ital. baso,
Spam. basos, low Latin basus].

1. Mean; vile; worthless; of things:
The harvest white plump is a base plump, and
the white d. d. plum are no very good plums. — Barret.

Pyreneus was only famous for counterfeiting all
base things, as earthen pitchers, a scullery;
whereas he was famed Renaissance.

2. Of mean spirit; infamous; illiberal;
ugenerous; low; without dignity of sentiment; of persons.

Since the perceptions are such in the party I love, the high idea of them cannot come up
with any
Bashful, adj. [This word, with all those of the same race, are of uncertain etymology. Skinner imagines them derived from bask or bass, or from bassus, Dut. bashouen, from barbouer, Der. to strike with astonishedness: Tutius, from barea, which he finds in Hesychius to signify shame. The conjecture of Minshew seems most probable.]

1. Modest; bashful.
   I never tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his father's blood, Bashful sincerity, and candid love. Shakespeare.

2. Sheepish; viciously modest.
   He looked with an almost bashful kind of modesty, as if he feared the eyes of men. Sidney. And prompt me, plain and holy innocence. Shak. Our author, anxious for his fame to-night, And bashful in his first attempt to write, To show him not himself. Addison.

Bashfully, adv. [from bashful.] Timidly; modestly.

Bashfulness, n.f. [from bashful.]

1. Modesty, asshown in outward appearance.
   Philocles a little muted how to cut the thread even, with equal cheeks, and lips, whereas each sang their part, to make up the harmony of bashfulness. Sidney.
   Such looks, such bashfulness, might well adorn The cheeks of youths that are not too sorry born. Dryden.

2. Vicious or rashful shame.
   For fear had bequeathed his room to his kindred bashfulness, to teach him good manners. Sidney.
   There are others who have not altogether lost of this foolish bashfulness, and who alike every one's opinion. Dryden.

Bash, n.f. [Ectym., Lat.] The name of a plant.

Bash. n.f. The angle to which the edge of a jointer's tool is ground away. See To Bash.

Bashink. n.f. The skin of a sheep tanned.
   This, I believe, more properly written bashin.

To Bash. n. a. To grind the edge of a tool to an angle.
   Those children are not ground to such a bash as the fashions children, on one of the sides, but are bash'd away on both the flat sides so that the edge lies between both the faces in the middle of the tool.

Basilica. n.f. [Ectym., Lat.] The middle vein of the arm, so called by way of pre-eminence. It is likewise attributed to many medicines for the same reason. Quincy.

Basilical. adj. [from basilica. See Basilick.] Basilica. Belonging to the basilick vein.

1. Those antelopes, following always upon bleeding to the basilick veins, much are in the middle of the central artery. Sheep.

Basilick. n.f. [balsique, Fr. bassique.
   A large hall, having two ranges of pillars, and two files of wings, with galleries over them. These basilicks were first made for the palaces of princes, and afterwards converted into courts of justice, and livery into churches; whence a basilick is generally taken for a magnificient church, as the basilick of St. Peter at Rome.

Basilicon. n.f. [balsicon, Lat.] An ointment, called also tetrapharmacon.

1. I made incision into the cavity, and put a pledge of basilicon, over his mouth. Wiseman.

Bassif, n.f. [bassifus, Lat. of. a king.]
1. A kind of serpent, called also a cockatrice, which is said to drive away all others by his hissing, and to kill by looking.
   Make me not fight like the basilisk; I look'd on thousands who have seen the better By my regard, but kill'd none so. Shakespeare.
   The basilisk was a serpent not above three palms long, and differed from other serpents by advancing his head, and some white marks or combs, very footy, with his tail. Pliny, Ed. 1.

2. A species of cannon or ordnance.
   We practic'd to make better motions than any you have, and to make them snarer and more violent than those we are; exceeding your greatest cannon and basils. Bacon.

Basin. n.f. [bassin, Fr. bacile, bacino, Ital.]
   It is often written basins, but not according to etymology.
   1. A small vessel to hold water for washing, or other uses.
      Let one attend him with a silver bassinet, Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers. Shakespeare.
      We have little wells for infusions, where the waters take the virtue quicker, and better, than in vessels and bassinets. Bacon.
      We behold a piece of silver in a bassin, when water is put upon it, which we could not discover before, as under the v egetables there. Dream's Velgar Errors.

2. A small pond.
   On one side of the walk you see this hollow basin, with its several little plantations lying conveniently under the shelter of the hedge. Brown's Travels.
   A part of the sea inclosed in rocks, with a narrow entrance. The Judith land two ample bays divides; The spacious basins arching rocks include, Cut with wide grooves the flat blocks, Pope.

3. Any hollow place capacious of liquids.
   If this rotation does the least affect, The rapid motion rather would eject The fluxes, the low capacious vases contain. Pope.

4. A dock for repairing and building ships.

5. In anatomy, a round cavity situated between the anterior ventricles of the brain.

6. A concave piece of metal, by which glass-grinders form their convex glasses.

7. A round shell or cafe of iron placed over a furnace, in which hammers mould the matter of a hat into form.

8. Bassins of a Balance, the same with the scales, one of the weight; the other thing to be weighed.

Basis. n.f. [bas, Lat.]

1. The foundation of any thing, as of a column or a building.
   It must follow, that Paradise, being raised to this height, must have the compass of the whole canal, or a bassa, Baldock.
   Ascend my chardonnay, guide the rapid wheel.
   That flake heaven's bassin. Milton.

2. The lowest of the three principal parts of a column, which are the basi, jamb and capital.
   Consider how English irrigation upon the bassin, we read it over several times. Addison.

3. That on which any thing is raised.
   Such seems thy gentle height, made only proud To be the bassin of that pompous load,
   Though that a nobler weight no mountain can. Dryden.

4. The pedestal.
   How many times shall Carthage bleed in sport, That now on Pompeii still lies about
   No wonder that the dust is Shakespeare.

5. The ground-work or first principle of any thing.
   Build me thy fortune upon the bassin of valour. The friendships of the world are oft Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleasure; Our's has forever virtue for its bassin. Addison.

To Bass. v. n. [backen, Dut. baken.

To warm by laying out in the heat; used almost of animals by Shakespeare.

To warm in the wind, and to expose to the chilly, cold air, or to the inclement weather; to make it more cold than ever. Dryden.

To Bass. v. a. To lie in the warmth.
   About him, and above, and round the wood, The birds that bound the borders of the flood,
   That bason'd within, or bason'd upon his side,
   To tuneful fongs their narrow throats apply'd. Dryden.

To Bass. v. n. To lie in the broad.
   Some in the fields of poetic aetherplay,
   And bassin and whiten in the blaze of day. Pope.

Basket, n.f. [bassette, Welsh; bassat.
   Basket. A volute made of twigs, rushes, or splinters, or some other slender bodies interwoven.
   Here is a baske't; he may creep in, and throw his linen upon him, as if going to dawter. Shakespeare.
   While thou hast, my son, thy animals, And bending offers into basset wey, Dryden.

Poor Peg was forced to go hawking and peddling; now and then carrying a baske't of ribito and ale. Dryden.

Bassett-Hilt. n.f. [from basset and hilt.]
   A hilt of a weapon so made as to contain the whole hand, and defend it from being wounded.
   His plintent sword into his foes,
   Near his undisparted heart, was this;
   With bassett-hilt, that would hold bold, A fence for fight and dinner both. Hooker.
   Their beef they often in their murrain feed'd, And in their bassett-hilt their byrge brew'd. King.

Basket-Woman. n.f. from basquet and woman.
   A woman that plies at markets with a basket, ready to carry home any thing that is bought.

Bass. n.f. [supposed by Junius to be derived, like bassin, from some British word signifying a rush; but perhaps more properly written bass, from the French basse.] A mat used in churches.
   Having woolen yarn, bass mat, or such like, to bind them withal. Montague's Husbandry.

To Bass. v. a. To sound in deep tone.

The thunder.

The deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd
   The name of proper it di,b my tresetf. Shaks.

Bass.
BASS
Bass. adj. [See Base.] In mush, grave; deep.

Bass relief, n.s. [from bar, and relief, raised work, Fr.] Sculpture, the figures of which do not stand out from the ground in their full proportion. Belsilum distinguishes three kinds of base relief: in the first, the flat figures appear almost with the full relief; in the second, they stand out no more than one half an inch of the third much less, as in coins.

Bass Viol. See Base Viol.

On the sweep of the arm lies one of the Muses, playing on a bass-viol. — Dryden.

Bass. See Bass Viaw.

Basset, n.f. [basey, Fr.] A game at cards, invented at Venice.

Gamesters would not more blaspheme; and lady Dabcheek's basset bank would be broke. — Dennis.

Basso relievo. [Ital.] See Bass Relief.

Basso, n.f. [basey, Fr.] A musical basson.

Basso on. [from the wind kind, blown with a reed, and furnished with eleven holes, which are stopped like other large flutes; its diameter at bottom, nine inches, and it serves for the base in concerts of hautboy, &c.,— Trevoux.

Bassock, n.s. The fame with bass.

BASTARD. n.f. [baftard, Welfh, of low birth; baforde, Fr.] 1. Baforde, according to the civil and canon law, is a person born of a woman out of wedlock, or not married; so that, according to order of law, his father is not known. — Aylliffe.

Him to the Lydian, king Lydium bare.

And further baftard to the war. —Dryden.

2. Any thing spurious or false.

Words that rooted in your tongue; baftards and falsibles Oft appear in your breath's truth. —Shair.

3. A kind of sweet wine.

Score a pint of baftard—Then your brown baftard is your only drink. —Skall.

BASTARD. adj. [from the noun.]

1. Begotten out of wedlock; illegitimate.

Place is a very acquisitely, lecherous, infensible, a picture of more baftard children than war's a de fencer of men. —Shair.

2. Spurious; not genuine; supposititious; false; adulterate. In this sense, any thing which bears some relation or re semblance to another, is called spurious or baftard.

You may partly hope that your father got you not; that you are not the Jew's daughter. That were a kind of baftard hope indeed. — Shair.

Men who, under the disguise of public good, pursue their own ends; of poachers, and such baftards as attend them. —Tiegel.

BASTARD Cedar Trees. [called guazuma in the West Indies.]

To Bastaard. v. t. [from the noun.] To convict of being a baftard; to stigma itize with bafardy. She lived to see her brother beheaded, and her two sons dragged from the crown, bafarded in their blood, and cruelly murdered. —Baron.

Bastaardize. v. a. [from baftard.] 1. To convict of being a baftard. 2. To beget a bafard. —Vol. I.

BATA

I should have what I am, had the maiden-lied star in the firmament twinkled on my bafardizing.

Shakespeare.

Bastardy. adv. [from baftard.] In the manner of a baftard; spuriously.

Good feed degenerates, and oft obeys

The foil's disease, and into cockpit strays.

Let the mind's thoughts but be transplanted to

The body, and bastardy they grow. — Dryden.

Bastardy, n.f. An unlawful state of birth, which denies the baftard, both according to the laws of God and man, from succeeding to an inheritance. — Aylliffe.

Once the flandered me with baftardy;

But whether I be true born, or not.

That fill I lay upon my mother's head, Shakespear.

In respect of the evil consequents, the wise'S adultery is worse, as bringing baftards into a family. —Taylor.

No more of baftards in heirs of crown. —Frye.

To Baste. v.a. participle past. bafted, or basted. [baftoner, Fr. Bateau, in the Armorick dialect, signifies to strike with a stick; from which perhaps bateon, a stick, and all its derivatives, or collateral, may be deduced.]

1. To beat with a stick.

The young and vigorous in their measure set;

To that for once that basted to feel pain;

Because the nags his bones endure

Contribute nothing to the cure. —Hudibras.

The mean heavy, dry, oblate

Of such as are of such make. —Swift.

While a little gentle jerking

Sets the spirits all a-working. —Swift.

2. To drip batter, or any thing else, upon meat as it turns upon the spit.

Sir, I think the meat wants what I have a bastiing. —Shakespeare.

3. To moisten meat on the spit by falling upon it.

The fat of roasted mutton falling on the birds, will serve to baste them, and so spare time and batter. — Swift.

4. To few slightly. [bafter, Fr. to flitch.]

Bastinade. n.f. [baftomade, Fr.]

1. The act of beating with a cudgel; the blow given with a cudgel.

But this courtesy was worse than a baftado to Zelma, so with rageful eyes the babe he def fend himself. —Sidney.

And all those harsh and ragged sounds

Of bastimado, cuss, and wotam. —Hudibras.

2. It is sometimes taken for a Turkish punishment, of beating an offender on the soles of his feet.

To Bastinade. v. a. [from the noun; To Bastinado. v. a. baftoner, Fr. To beat; to treat with the bastinado.

Nick felled the longer end of the cudgel, and with it began to bastinado old Lewis, who had bunked into a corner, waiting the event of a squabble. —Arbutnott.

Bastion. n.f. [baftion, Fr.] A huge mass of earth, usually faced with sods, sometimes with brick, rarely with stone, standing out from a rampart, which is a principal part, and was aciently called a bulwark.

Towards it we say there's the question; Fierce the assault, unarm'd the bastion. — Prior.

Bast. n.f. [bar, Sax.] This word seems to have given rise to a great number of words in many languages; as, batte, Fr. to beat; baton, batas, bat, batty, and others. It probably signified a weapon that did execution by its weight, in opposition to a sharp edge; whence whistles and trickeys. A heavy fick or club.

A handsome bat he held.

Or which he leaned, as one far in age. — Spenser.

They were set in arm chairs, and the bonnet broken with bat. — Hakewell.

Bat. n.f. [sperite, the etymology unknown.] An animal having the body of a mouse and the wings of a bird; not with feathers, but with a sort of skin which is extended. It lays no eggs, but brings forth its young alive, and suckles them. It never grows tame, feeds upon flies, insects, and fatty substances, such as candles, oil, and cheese; and appears only in the summer evenings, when the weather is fine. —Calmet.

When owls do cry, On the bat's back I do fly. — Shakespeare.

But then grew reason dark; that fair no more.

Could the fair forms of good and truth differ; Bats they became who eagles were before; And this they got by their desire to learn. — Dryden.

Some were animals and birds between two kinds, as bats, which have something of birds and beasts. — Locke.

Where swallows in the winter feast upon,

And how the drowsy bat and dormouse thereby lay. — Gay.

Bat-Fowling. n.f. [from bat and fowl.] A particular manner of bird-catching in the night-time, while they are at roost upon perchers, trees, or hedges. They light torches or straw, and then beat the bathe; upon which the birds, flying to the flames, are caught either with nets, or otherwise.

You would lift the moon out of her sphere, if the would continue in five weeks without chang- ing.—We should fo, and then go a bat-fowling. — Shakespeare.

Bodies lighted as night by fue, must have a brighter here by day; as fetching the same, bat-fowling. — Prior.

Bat-Table. adj. [from bat.] Disputable.

Bat-table ground is to be the ground hereto fore in question, whether it belonged to England or Scotland, lying between both kingdoms. — Cony.

B A T

Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as much debaters do, promise you instantly.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

4. To cut off; to take away.
Bare but the leaf, and 'twas what I would have.
Dryden's Spanish Friar.

To B A T E. v. a.
1. To grow less.
Bardolph, am not I fallen away vilely since this last election? Do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why my skin hangs about me like an old lady.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

2. To remit: with of before the thing.
Abate thy speed, and I will bate of mine.
Dryden.

Bate seems to have been once the preterite of bate, as Shaksp. ues bisiting facultuous; unless, in the following lines, it may rather be deduced from bate.

Yet there the fixed still not, but only bate
Deep in his flesh, and ope'd wide a red flood gate.
Spenser.

B A T E F U L. adj. [from bate and fall.] Contentious.
He knew her haunt, and haunted in the same,
And taught his sheep thence to food to their
Which soon as it did bateful question frame,
He might on knees confess his guilty part.
Sidney.

B A T E M E N T. n. f. [from abatement.] Diminution: a term only used among artificers.
To bate, is to waste a piece of stuff; instead of asking how much was cut off, carpenters ask what batement that piece of stuff had.
Mason's Mechanical Exercises.

B A T H. n. f. [bath, Saxon.]
1. A bath is either hot or cold, either of art or nature. Artificial baths have been in great esteem with the ancients, especially in complaints to be relieved by revulsion, as inveeterate headaches, by opening the pores of the feet, and also in cutaneous cases. But the modern practice has greatest recourse to the natural baths: most of which abound with a mineral sulphur, as appears from their turning silver and copper blackish. The cold baths are the most convenient springs, or referratories, of cold water to walk in, which the ancients used in great esteem; and the present age can produce abundance of noble cures performed by them.

Quincy.
Why may not the cold bath, into which they plunged themselves, have had some share in their cure?
Addison's Spectator.

2. A date in which great outward heat is applied to the body, for the mitigation of pain, or any other purpose.
In the height of this bath, when I was more than half sweated in greese like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames.
Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windesor.
Sedge.
The birth of each day's life, so labourous bath,
Dalm of hurt minds.
Shakspere's Martlet.

3. In chymistry, it generally signifies a vessel of water, in which another is placed that requires a fatter heat than the naked fire. Balsam Marix: is a mistake for balsam mitar, a sea or water bath. A sand heat is sometimes called balsam ficcum, or cinnearum.

Quincy.
We see that the water of things distill'd in water, which they call the bath, differeth not much from the water of things distill'd by fire.
Birch's Natural History.

4. A sort of Hebrew measure, containing the tenth part of an homer, or several gallons and four pints, as a measure for things liquid; and three peaks and three pints as a measure for things dry.
Calm.

Ten scores of vineyard stalk shall yield one bath, and the feed of an homer shall yield an ephah.
Exod. v. 10.

To B A T H E. v. a. [bathian, Saxon.]
1. To walk, as in a bath.
Others on silver lakes and rivers bath'd
Their dainty breath.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. To supple or soften by the outward application of warm liquors.
Bath them, and keep their bodies soluble the while by elyders and lenitive bilious.
Wilkomer's Surgery.

I'll bate your wounds in tears for my offence.
Dryden.

3. To wash any thing.
Physician Dido, freed
From her wound, her bosome bath'd in blood.
Dryden

Mans could in mutual blood the centurion Joahs,
And love himself give way to Cynthia's wrath.
Dryden.

To B A T H E, v. n. To be in the water, or in any remembrance of a bath.
Except they meant to bath in reckling wounds,
I cannot tell.
The delighted spirit
To bath in fiery floods, or to refute
In thrilling regions of thick ribbed ice.
Shaksp.

The gillants dancing by the river fflat.
They bathed in summer, and in winter froze, Waller.
Bath and bate, and, in impalpable array'd,
Pay due devotions.
Pope's Odyssey.

Bathing, or B A T H I N G. prep. [from bate, or abate. This word, though a participle in itself, seems often used as a preposition.]
Except they meant to bath in reckling wounds,
I cannot tell.
The delighted spirit
To bath in fiery floods, or to refute
In thrilling regions of thick ribbed ice.
Shaksp.

1. A square piece of wood, with a handle, used in beating linen when taken out of the buck.
I remember the kiffing of her bathet,
And the cow's dugs that her pretty chot had milked.
Shakspere.

B A T H T O N. n. f. [bathen, or batten, Fr. formerly spelt baton.]
1. A staff or club.
We came close to the shore, and offered to land;
but straightway we saw divers of the people with batons in their hands, as it were, forbidding us to land.
Bacon's New Atlantis.
That does not make a man the worse,
Although his shoulders with baton
Be clad and cudgell'd to some tune.
Hudibras.

2. A trochan or marshal's staff; a badge of military honour.

B A T T A I L L E. n. f. [battaille, Fr.]
Having the appearance of a battle; warlike; with a military appearance.
He startet up, and did himself prepare
In sun-bright arms and battallious array.
Fairfax.
The French came from hot, battaille and battall.

B A T T A L I A. n. f. [battaglia, Ital.]
1. The order of battle.
Next morning the king put his army into bataillia.
Clarendon.

2. The main body of an army in array, distinguished from the wings.

B A T T A L I O N. n. f. [battallion, Fr.]
1. A division of an army; a troop; a body of forces. It is now confined to the infantry, and the number is uncertain, but generally from five to eight hundred men. Some regiments consist of one battalion, and others are divided into two, three, or more.

When sometimes come, they come not single files,
But in battalions.
Shakspere's Hamlet.

In this battalion there were two officers, called Thanes and drummers.
Tartar.
The piec'd and distempered farmed
In heaps on heaps: one face o'rewhelm'd them all.
Pepys.

2. An army. This sense it is now not in use.
Six or seven thousand is their strength.
—Why, our battalion troubles that account.
Shaksp.

B A T T E N. v. a. [a word of doubtful etymology.]
1. To fatten, or make fat; to feed plentifully.
We drove yield,
Batt'en out flockes with the fresh fows of night.
Milton.

2. To fertillize.
The meadows here, with batten'd grass enrich'd,
Give spirit to the grases; three cubits high.
The joined brotherhood of Delfia.

B A T T E N. v. a. To grow fat; to live in indulgence.
Follow your function, go and batten on cold bits.
Shakspere.

Burnish'd and batten'd on their food, to show
The diligence of careful beds below.
Dryden

The lazy glutton fat at home will keep,
Injulte his bisten, and batten on his sheep.
Dryden.
As at full length the pamper'd monarch lays,
Bathing in cafe, and flattering life away.
Guth.

Twy mire, full bythe and amiable,
Batten before eric Robert's table.
Prior.
While paddling duckes the flandling lake divine,
Or batten'd bags roll in the linking mire.
Gay's Piffaral.

B A T T E N. n. f. A word used only by workmen.
A batten is a cantling of wood, two, three, or four inches broad, seldom above one thick, and the length unlimited.
Mason.

To B A T T E R. v. a. [batter, to beat, Fr.]
1. To beat; to beat down; to shatter; frequently used of walls thrown down by artillery, or of the violence of engines of war.
To appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a hant, and a child a fort.
Excit.
Thee haughty words of hers
Have batter'd me like roaring cannon flet.
And made me almost yield upon my knees.
Shak.

Britannia there, the fort in vain
Had batter'd been with golden rain.
Thunder itself had fail'd to pass.
Waller.
Be the thene flotes the nation's care,
Now ships to build, and batter'd to repair.
Dryden.

To wear with beating.
Crowds to the castle mounted up the street,
Battering the pavement with their couriers feet.

If you have a silver saucepan for the kitchen,

Dryden.
BAT

So they joined battle, and the heathen being discomfited fled into the plain.

2. A body of forces, or division of an army.

The king divided his army into three battles, whereas the vanguard only, with wings, came to fight.

3. The main body, as distinct from the van and rear.

Angus led the avant-guard, himself followed by the battle a good distance behind, and after came the artillery.

4. We say to join battle; to give battle.

To Battle, v. n. [Battle, &c.] To join battle; to contend in fight.

'Tis ours by craft and by surprise to gain:
'Tis yours to meet in arms, and battle in the plain.

Priam.

We receive accounts of ladies battling it on both sides.

Addison.

I own, he has an action bafe,
His virtues bailing with his places.

Swifts

BAU

'Tis equal to her ladyship or me.

A copper Otho, or a Scotch buckler.

BRANCIG, Man of Taste.

BAVIN. n. f. [of uncertain derivation.]

A flick like those bound up in faggots; a piece of wood.

He rumbled up and down
With shallow jettors and rash bunits,
Soon kindled, and soon burnt.

Shaksp. Henry IV.

For moulded to the life in clouts
Th' have pick'd from dunghills thereabouts,
He's mounted on a hazel bawn;
A crop'd malignant baker gave him.

Hudibras.

The trunchons make billet, bawin, and coals.

Merimor.

To Baulk. See BALK.

BAW. n. f. [Bawdellium, in barbarous Latin, signified a jocelyn, or any thing valuable, but not necessary. Omnia bau- bella sua dedit Othoni. Hoveden. Probably from bau, Fr.] A gewgaw; a trifling piece of finery; a thing of more show than use; a trifle. It is in general, whether applied to persons or things, a term of contempt.

She haunts me in every place. I was on the feast board with fine Venetians, and thither comes the bawb, and falls me thus about my neck.

Shakespeare's Othello.

It is a joculan, a bawb, a fitchick piece. Shaksp.

If, in our count'd, we do not interchange useful notions, we shall traffick toys and bawbles.

Government of the Tongue.

This shall be writ to fright the fry away;
Who draw their little bawbles, when they play.

Dryden.

A lady's watch needs neither figures nor wheels; 'Tis enough that 'tis loaded with bawbles and rings.

Prior.

Our author then, to please you in your way,
Presects you now a bawbile of a play.

Gravinese.

A place, the moment he is crown'd,
Inherits every virtuous round,
As emblems of the sovereign pow'r,
Like other bawbles of the Town.

Swifts.

BAWLING. adj. [from baulk.] Trilling; contemptible; a word not now in use, except in conversation.

A bawling wench was he captain of,
For shallow draft and bulk unprized;
With which faith he did make, and wherewith he did make, he made the most noble bottom of our fleet.

Shak.

BAWCOCK. n. f. [perhaps from beau, or bawd, and cock.] A familiar word, which seems to signify the same as fine fellow.

Why, how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck?

Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

BAWD. n. f. [bawd, old Fr.] A procurer, or procurers; one that introduces men and women to each other, for the promotion of debauchery.

If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Shak.

This bawd, this broker, this ill-digging word, has drawn him from his own determin'd aid.

Shakespeare.

Our author calls colouring these forsets, the bawd of her father's design; she drawer her up, she paints her, she procures for the design, and makes lovers for her.

Dryden.

To BAWD. v. n. [from the noun.] To procure; to provide gallants with bawmtes.

Lesseps is agent for the king's lust, and bawd at the same time for the whole court.

Addison.
BAW.ILY. adv. [from baw'dly.] Obscenely.

BAW'DLYNESS. n. f. [from baw'dly.] Obsceneness.

BA'W DR. n. f. [See Baldric.] A belt.

Fresh garlands to the virgin swords crow'd,
The youth's gilt halos bore at their thongs, with Girvet bawdry's bound, Chapman's Thurl.

BAWDY, n. f. [contracted from bawdry, the practice of a bawd.] 1. A wicked practice of procuring and bringing whores and rogues together.

Cheating and bawdry go together in the world.

L'Estrange.

2. Obcenity; unchaste language.

'Pr'ythee say on; he's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he slyeps.' Shakespeare's Hamlet.

I have no fault; no bawdry doth he do mean.
For as in his language doth offend, Ben Jonson.

It is most certain, that basefaced bawdry is the poorest pretence to wit imaginaire. Dryden.

BAWDY. adj. [from baw'd.] Obscene; unchaste: generally applied to language. The bawdry words that offend all its senses.

It is hurled within the hollow mine of earth, and will not hear 't. Shakespeare's Othello.

Only they, that come to hear a merry bawdy play, will be deceived. Shakespeare.

Not one poor bawdy left his shell dare appear.
For now the bawd's veteran trumpets here. Pretend at base to bring a modeft man. Southorn.

BAY. w. n. [ba'vonet.] A house where traffick is made by wickedness and debauchery.

Has the pope lately flut the bawdry-bows, or does he continue to lay a tax upon sin? Dennis.

To Bawl. w. n. [ba'bow, Lat.] 1. To hoot; to cry with great vehemence, whether for joy or pain. A word always used in contempt.

They bawled for freedom in their fenfible mood.
And all revolv, when truth would set them free.

Milton.

To cry the caufe up heretofore,
And bawl the bibles out of door. Hodgson.

Though the thick drades th' eternal sibilla bawl,
And shakes the fatums on their pedefals. Dryden.

From his bow'd home no lurete can draw; The feast's mad decrees he never faw.
Not heard at bawling bars corrupted law. Dryden.

Loud menaces were heard, and fcel disgrace.
And bawling infancy; in language bale,
Till Canto was built in found, and fincerly fed the place.
Dryden's Fables.

So on the tuneful Margarita's tongue
The fitbling symphs and ravish'd heroes hung;
But cits and covers the hevn-born musick blame.
And bawl, and hisb, and damn her into fame. Smollett.

I have a race of orderly people, who can bawl when I am dead, and treat foully when I am only giddy and would sleep.
Swift.

2. To cry as a froward child.

A little child was bawling, and a woman claid it.
L'Estrange.

If they were never satisfied to have what they cried for, they would weep with bawling and peevishness, contend for mailetry. Locke.

My husband took him in, a dirty boy; it was the buffets of the fervants to attend him, the rogue did bawl and make such a noise.
Arbuthotn's History of John Bull.

To Bawl. w. a. To proclaim as a crier.

A bawdy horse is what inclining to a chromatic colour is various, either a light bay or a dark bay; according as it is more or less brown.
There are also coloured horses, that are called dappled bays. All bay horses are commonly called brown by the common people.

All bay horses with black mottles, which distinguish them from the, that have red or white manes.

There are light bays and gilded bays, which are sometimes called a yellowish, cocoa-nut brown.

A bawdy is that, which comes nearest to the colour of the chestnut.
Farrier's Dict.

My lord, you gave good words the other day of a bay cocker I rode on. 'Tis yours because you liked it.

Poor Tom! proud of heart to ride on a bay trotting horse over four inch'd bridges. Shakespeare.

For beauty dappled, or the brightest bay. Dryden.

BAY. n. f. [bays. Dutch.] 1. An opening into the land, where the water is shut in on all sides, except at the entrance.

A reverend Syracusan merchant, Who put his boat at the mouth of this bay. Shakespeare.

We have also some works in the midst of the sea, and some bays upon the shore for some worlds, wherein is required the air and vapour of the sea.

Hall. faced follique! from this calm bay
I view the world's tempestuous sea. Ryssuman.

Here in a royal bed the waters sleep. When tir'd at sea, within this bay they creep. Dryden.

Some of you have bay.
Dryden.

2. A pond head raised to keep in store of water for driving a mill.

BAY. n. f. [abbi, Fr. signifies the late extremity; as, Innocence of aux abbains. Boileau. Innocence is in the utmost distress. It is taken from abbi, the barking of a dog at home. A colour grey signified the condition of a flag when the hounds were almost upon him.

1. The state of any thing surrounded by enemies, and obliged to face them by an impossibility of escape.

This ship, for fifteen hours, fate like a flag among hounds at the bay, and was fogg'd and fought with, in turn, by fifteen great ships.

Bacon's War with Spain.

Fair liberty, purfued and meant a prey
To bawld's power, here turn'd, and flood at bay.

Dryden.

Nor flight was left, nor hope to force his way
Emboldern'd by despair, he fled at bay;
Rofed on death, he effilicit his fears;
And bound his soul with devils. Dryden.

2. Some writers, perhaps mistaking the meaning, have used bay as referred to the affiant, for distance beyond which no approach could be made.

All, fir'd with noble emulation, thrive;
And with a form of darts to distance drive
The Tumultuaries, who, with the furthest aim
On his Valzian orb swell'd the war. Dryden.

We have now, for ten years together, turned the whole force and expense of the war, where the enemy has left the power to hold us at a bay.
Dryden.

BAY. n. f. In architecture, n term used to signify the magnitute of a building; as, if a barn consists of a floor and two heads, where they lay corn, they call it a barn of two bays. These bays are from fourteen to twenty feet long, and floors from ten to twelve broad, and usually twenty feet long, which is the breadth of the barn. Builder's Dict.

If this law hold in Vienna ten years, I'll put the fairest house in it after threehence a bay. Skilling.

There may be kept one thousand bullocks in each bay, there being fifteen bays, each eighteen feet long; about nineteen wide, or three hundred square feet in each bay.
Meritor.

BAY Tree. [lauris, Lat.] The tree, as is generally thought, which is translated laurel, and of which honorary garlands were anciently made.

I have seen the wicked in great power, and spelt up the path that is green for bay, Psalms.

BAY. n. f. A poetical name for an honorary crown or garland, bestowed as a prize for any kind of victory or excellence.

Beneath his reign shall Eusten wear the bays.
Psalm.

To Bay. w. n. [abbeyer, Fr.]

1. To bark as a dog at a thief, or at the game which he pursues.

And all the white the flood upon the ground.
The wakeful dogs did never cease to bay. Ferry Er.

The hounds at morning distance howl'd bay'd; The hunter clife pursued the visionary maid; She rent the heav'n with loud lamentations, imploiring aid. Dryden's Fables.

2. [from bay, an inclosed place.] To encompass about; to shut in.

We are at the flake, and bay'd about with many enemies. Shakespeare.

To Bay. w. a. To follow with barking; to bark at.

I was with Hercules and Celeus once;
When in the woods of Crete, they bay'd the boar.
With hounds of Sparta. Shakespeare.

If he should do,
He leaves his back unarmed, the French and Welch Baying him at the heels.

BAY Salt. Salt made of sea water, which receives its consistence from the heat of the sun, and is so called from its brown colour. By letting the sea water into square pits or basins, its surface being struck and agitated by the rays of the sun, it thickens at first imperceptibly, and becomes covered over with a flight crust, which hardening by the continuance of the heat, is wholly condensed into a fluid. The water in this distillation is scalding hot, and the crysalization is perfected in eight, ten, or at most fifteen days.

Chambers.

All evanions of air, though small and light, give sound, which we call crackling, puffing, sifting, &c. as in bay'd salt and bay leaves call into fire.

BAY Window. A window jutting outward, and therefore forming a kind of bay or hollow in the room.

It hath bay windows transparent as barricades.

BAY'ARD. n. f. [from bays.] A bay horse.

Blind bayard moves the mill. Philip.

BAY'NET. n. f. [baynette, Fr.] A short sword or dagger fixed at the end of a musket, by which the foot hold off the horse.

One of the black spots is long and slender, and resembles a dagger or bayonet.
Woodward.

BAYE.
Bayes. See BAIRI.

BDELLiUM. n. f. [Pers. & Gr. Aromatic gum brought from the Levant, used as a medicine, and a perfumery. Bdeelium is mentioned both by the ancient naturalists and in Scripture; but it is doubtful whether any of these be the same with the modern kind.

Chambers.

* This bdellium is a tree of the bigness of an olive, whose leaves are greatly plenteous, which yieldeth a certain gum, sweet to smell to, but bitter in taste, called also bdellium. The Hebrews take the leundices of bdellium. Ralph."

To BE, v. n. [This word is so remarkably irregular, that it is necessary to let down many of its terminations.

Present. I am, thou art, he is, we are, &c. come, go, see, &c. came, went, &c.

Preter. I was, thou wast, he was, we were, &c. be, were, &c.

The conjunctive mood.

I be, thou beest, he be, we be, &c.

bec, by, be, beon, Sax.

1. To have some certain state, condition, quality, or accident; as, the man is wife.

2. Seventy years old

By their procreation, Cicero being one. Shakesp. He hath to-night in unusual pleasure. Shaks. Be what thou holp't be, or what thou art, Religion to death, it is not worth enjoying. Shakesp.

3. To say the he is a goodly lady, and

To say the he is not honest, honourable. Shakesp. Let them shew the former things which they be, that we may consider them. 1. Iob.

4. Therefore be sure, Thou, when the bridegroom with his faithful friends

Pistles to blist at the mid hour of night, Hait gain'd thy entrance, virgin wife and pure.

5. It is not easy to discern what flesh men would be at.

Stilling feet.

6. To say a man has a clear idea of quantity, without knowing how great it is, to say, he has the clear idea of the number of the hands, who knows not how many they be.

Loc.

7. It is the auxiliary verb by which the verb passive is formed.

The wise of life is drawn, and the wiser lees Is left this wash to bring out.

8. To exist; to have existence.

The times have been, That when the brains were out the man would

Name.

Her cause, ye powers, and let your vengeance ascend.

9. Troy is no more, and can no more offend. Dryden.

All the impossibilities, which posts Count, and a sentence of loose description,

Shall sooner be.

Rest.

To be, contends his natural desire;

He asks no angel's wing, nor seraph's fire.

10. To have something by appointment or rule.

If all political power be derived only from Adam, and be defined only to his successive heirs, by the ordinance of God, and divine institution, this is a right antecedent and paramount to all government.

11. Let be. Do not meddle with; leave untouched.

Let be, said he, my prey.

Dryden.

BEACH. n. f. The shore, particularly that part that is dashed by the waves; the strand.

The fishermen, that walk upon the beath, appear like mice. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Deep to the rocks of hell the gather'd beath

They fall and are as slow molten wax on

Over the flaming deeps. Milton.

They find the washed amber further out upon the beaches and shores, where it has been longer exposed. Woodburn.

BEACHED. adj. [from beach.]

Exposed to the waves.

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion Upon the break'd verge of the fall flood

Which, once the current left in open fields,

Send forth its flames. Fairy Queen.

Madd'nt doubt is call'd

The bower of the wife. Shakespeare.

The king seemed to account of Perkin as a May-game, and yet had given orders for the watching of beath upon the coasts, and e'er more where they found his ships. Bacon.

No flaming heavens calv their blaze after,

The dreadful flag of invasion war.

Gay.

2. Marks ercolated, or lights made in the night, to direct navigators in their courses, and warn them from rocks, shallows, and sandbanks.

BEAD. n. f. [beac, prayer, Saxon.]

1. Small globes or balls of glass or pearl, or other substance, strung upon a thread, and used by the Romanists to count their prayers; from whence the phrase to tell beads, or to be at one's beads, is to be at prayer.

That aged dame, the lady of the place,

Who all this while was busy at her beads. Fairy Que.

Thy voice hea, or rather, of his hymn to hear,

With ev'ry bead I drop too soft a tear. Pope.

2. Little balls worn about the neck for ornament.

With fears and fans, and double charge of bra'try,

With ambers bracelets, and all such knavy. Shakespeare.

3. Any globular bodies.

They spirit within thee hath been so at war,

That beads of sweat have flowed upon thy brow. Dryden.

Several yellow lamps of amber, almost like beads, with one side flat, had fasten'd themselves to the bottom. Boyle.

BEAD TREE. [acedara-b.] A plant.

BEADLE. n. f. [bele, Sax. a messenger; bedra, Fr. bedel, Sp. bedella, Dutch.] 1. A messenger or servant belonging to a court.

Cowell.

2. A petty officer in parishes, whose business it is to punish petty offenders.

Shakespeare.

Thou receav'st bread, hold thy bloodly hand:

Why dost thou fast that where thou livest? Shakespeare.

They are taught to be taken care of in this condition, either by the bowls or the magnifier. Spinoza.

Their common loves, a lewd abandon'd pack,

The beadles' lost magnifying on their back. Prior.

BEADROLL. n.f. [from bead and roll.] A catalogue of those who are to be mentioned at prayers.

The king, for the better credit of his exploits abroad, used to be adorned by names carved on the beadles of the king's enemies. Bacon's Henry VII.

BEADSMAN. n. f. [from bead and man.] A man employed in praying, generally in praying for another.

An holy hospital, in which seven beadsmen, that had vowed all their life's service to high heaven's king. Fairy Que.

In thy danger,

Commend thy grace to my holy prayer; For I will be thy beadsmen Valentine. Shakesp.

BEAGLE. n. f. [bigle, Fr.] A small hound with which hares are hunted.

The reft were various hunting. The graceful goddes was array'd in green.

About her feet were little biggles seen, That watch'd with upward eyes the motions of their queen. Dryden's Faddler.

To play with small-bred beagles we repair,

And trace the maze of the circling hare. Pope.

BEAK. n. f. [bec, Fr. pig, Welsh.]

1. The bill or horny mouth of a bird.

His royal bird

Prunes the immortal, and plucks his beak, As when his god is please'd. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

He saw the ravens with their horny beak,

Food to Elijah bringing. Milton's Paradise Reg.

The magpie, lighting on the tree, Stood chatting with incontinent din,

And with her beak gave many a knock. Swift.

2. A piece of braes like a beak, fixed at the end of the ancient galleys, with which they pierced their enemies. It cannot be used only for the fore part of a ship.

With rolling pitch another near at hand,

From friendly Sweden brought the beaks intoops.

Which, well laid o'er, the fist Sea waves with triumph,

And shake them from the slcing beak in drops. Dryden.

3. A beak is a little shoe, at the toe about an inch long, turned up and fastened in upon the fore part of the hoof.

Farrier's Dis.

4. Any thing ending in a point like a beak; as, the spout of a cup; a prominence of land.

Cuddledrake, from a well-advanced promontory, which entitles it beak, takes a prospect of the river. Garway's Survey.

BEAKED. adj. [from beak.] Having a beak; having the form of a beak.

Milton.

BEAKER. n. f. [from beak.] A cup with a spout in the form of a bird's beak.

And into pipes and meandering streams stamp'd beakers, cups, and porringers. Hudibras.

With dulce be'vage this the beaker crown'd,

Fair is the mild, with gilled cups around. Pope.

BEAL. n. f. [Sylla, It. J A whelk or simple.

To BE, v. a. [from the noun.] To ripen; to gather matter, or come to a head, as a lore does.

BEAM. n. f. [beam, Sax. a tree.]

1. The main piece of timber that supports the house.

A fare is the largest piece of wood in a building, which always lies cross the building or the walls, walls, serving to support the principal rafters of the roof; and into which the feet of the principal rafters are framed. No building has less than two beams, one at the head. In this sense, the girders of the gable floor are also framed; and, if the building be of timber, the tenon-tenons of the posts are framed. The proportions of beams, in or near London, are by and by act of parliament; beam, fifteen feet long, must be seven inches on one side its square; and so on the other; if it be sixteen feet long, one side must be eight inches; the other six; and so proportionately to their lengths.

The building of living creatures is like the building of a timber house; the walls and other parts of the timber house, and the walls and other parts of the frame. Dryden.

1. Any large and long piece of timber: a beam must have more length than thickness, by which it is distinguished from a balk.

2. Any large piece of timber: a beam must have more length than thickness, by which it is distinguished from a balk.

3. That part of a balance, at the ends of which the scales are suspended.

4. The horn of a stag.

5. The pole of a chariot; that piece of wood which runs between the horses.

6. Among weavers, a cylindrical piece of wood belonging to the loom, on which the web is gradually rolled as it is wove. The cab of his spear was like a weaver's beam. Bion.

7. Beam of an anchor. The straight part or Shank of an anchor, to which the ropes are fastened.

8. Beam Compass. A wooden or brazen instrument, with sliding sockets, to carry several shifting points, in order to draw circles with very long radii; and useful in large projections, for drawing the furniture on wall dius. Harris.

9. [gunnbean, Sax. a ray of the sun.] The ray of light emitted from some luminous body, or received by the eye. The file hills on the Taptaic rocks, that the precipitation might down drift below the beam of light. Shakespear's Coriolanus. Pleasing, yet cold, like Cynthia's silver beam.

As beam's blest beam turns vinegar mountain. Pope.

10. To beam. v. n. [from the noun.] To emit rays or beams.

Every emanation of his fires that beams on earth and the inferiors. Pope.

1. Radiant; shining; emitting beams.

All-seeing sun! Hide, hide in shameful night, thy beamy head. Swift.

2. Having the weight or mainstays of a beam. It is a double-biting axe, and beaney faces; each sinking a gigantic force to bear. Dryd. Fables.

3. Having horns or antlers. Rose from their defect darts the brilliant rage of beans, and beaney tags in tall engage. Dryd.'s Virgil.

The species are, 1. The common garden bean. 2. The house bean. There are several varieties of the garden bean, differing either in colour or size. The principal sorts which are cultivated in England, are the Maragam, the small Libbon, the Spanish, the Turkay, the Sandwich, and Wimford bean. The Maragam bean is brought from a settlement of the Portuguese, on the coast of Africa, of the same name; and is by far the best sort to plant for an early crop.

But alas, Miller, his allowance of oats and beans for his horse was greater than his journey required. Swift.

Bean Caper. [Sabage.] A plant.

Bean Truffel. An herb.

To BEAR, &c. To bear, or bore; part, passage, bore, or born. [beacon, bapen, Sax. boar, Gotthick. It is founded as bears, or boar.] The word bear is used in very different senses.

1. This is a word used with such latitude, that it is not easily explained. We say to bear a burden, to bear sorrow or reproach, to bear a name, to bear a grudge, to bear fruits, or to bear children. The word bear is used in very different senses.

2. To carry a burden. They bear him upon the shoulders; they carry him and let him in his place. Solomon and her therefore and ten thousand that bare burdens. 1 Kings.

As an eagle fluttereth over her young, so fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings. Datursumy. We see some, who we think have borne let us of the burden, rewarded above ourselves. Decay of Plenty.

3. To convey or carry. My message to the ghost of Pram bear; tell him a new Act bei the Gnome. Dryd. Ene. A guest like him, a Trojan guest before, In shew of friendship, sought the Spartan hear, and ravish'd Helen from her husband hear. Dryd.

4. To carry as a mark of authority. I do commit into your hand That unsign'd sword which you have to bear. Shakespeare.

5. To carry as a mark of distinction. He may not bear to fair and to noble an image of the divine glory, as the universe in its full system. His pious brother, fare the bell. Who ever bore that name. Dryd. The flat spectators fliedn'd with their fears She flied, and solenmly every limb the tremors; Then each of savage heads the figure bears. Carlyle. His supreme spirit of mind will bear its belt resemblance, when it represents the supreme infinity. Clisoun.

So we say, to bear arms in a coat.

6. To carry, as in thow. Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye. Your hand, your tongue; like the innocent flower, but the sentient under 't. Shakespear.

7. To carry, as in trul. He was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein. John.

8. To support; to keep from falling: frequently with up.

Under colours of eating out popcery, the most efficacal means to bear up the state of religion may be removed, and a way to be made either for paganism, or for barbarism, to enter. Hucr.

And Samson took hold of the two middle pillars, upon which the house did stand, and on which it was built, and fell with the House. Judges.

A religious hope does not only bear up the mind under her sufferings, but makes her rejoice in the hope of glory. Addie.

Some powers invisible supports our soul, and bears it up in all its wonted greatness. Addie.

9. To keep aloft; to keep from sinking; sometimes with up.

The water increased, and bare up the ark; and it was lifted up upon the earth. Genesis.

10. To support with proportionate strength.

Animals that use a great deal of labour and exercise, have their solid parts more elastic and strong; they can bear, and ought to have, stronger food. Arbuthnot & Almain.

11. To carry in the mind, as love, hate. How eld the open multitude vernal. The word's rood love they bear him under hand! Daniel.

They bare great faith and obedience to the kings. Bacon.

Darsh, the eldest, bears a generous mind, but to impenetrable revenge inclin'd. Dryd. The coward bare the immortal spirts. Dryd. As for this gentleman, who is in fond of the bear, he bore him an insensible hatred. Swift.

That inviolable love I bear to the land of my nativity, prevailed upon me to engage in so bold an attempt. Swift.

12. To endure, as pain, without sinking. It was not an enemy that reproach'd me, then I could have borne it. Psalms.

13. To suffer; to undergo, as punishment or misfortune. I have bare chastisements, I will not offend any more. Job.

That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee, I bare the lots of it; of my hand died thou require it. Genesis.

14. To permit; to suffer without remon-ant. To reject all orders of the church which men have established, is to think worse of the laws of men, in this respect, than either the judgment of those men alloweth, or the law of God in all will bear. Hooker.

Not the god, nor angry Jove, will bear Thy lawless wandering walks in upper air. Dryd.

15. To be capable of; to admit. Being the son of one ear, Pericles, and younger brother to another, who liberally supplied his expense, beyond what his annuity from his father could bear. Clarendon.

Give his thought either the same turn, if our tongue will bear it, or, if not, vary but, then I do bear. Dryd.

Do not charge your coin with more ues than they can bear. It is the method of such as love any science, to discover all others in it. Addie on Models.

Had he not been eager to find mistakes, he would have not strained my works to such a fence as they will not bear. Atterbury.

In all criminal cases, the most favourable interpretation should be put upon words that plainly can bear. Swift.

16. To produce, as fruit.

There be some plants that bear no flower, and yet bear fruit: there be some that bear flowers, and no fruit; there be some that bear neither flowers nor fruit. Bacon.

They wing'd their flight aloft; then, soaring low, Perch'd on the double tree that bears the golden fruit. Dryd.

Say, shepher'd, say, in what glad fill appears A wondrous tree that sacred monarchs bear. Pope.

17. To bring forth, as a child.

The
The queen, that have thee
Often upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she liv’d.
Ye know that my wife have two feet.
Grefs.

What would be the muse herself that Dryden
The muse herself, for her enchanting son? Milton.
The same Alneas, whom fair Venus bire
To fam’d Anchises on Ides before.

To give birth to; to be the native place of.
Here dwelt the man divin whom Samos bire,
But now self-banish’d from his native shore.

To poets, as power or honour.
When vice prevails, and impions men bear away,
The path of honour is a private unction. Addison.

To gain; to win: commonly with away.
As it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it;
For that it stands not in such walkire brace. Shak.

The Greek and Latin have ever borne away the prerogative from all other tongues, they shall serve as touchstones to make our trials by. Camden.

Some think to bear it by speaking a great word, and being peremptory; and go on, and take by admittance that which they cannot make good. Bacon.

To maintain; to keep up.
He finds the pleasure and credit of bearing a part in the conversation, and of hearing his reasons approved.
Locke.

To support any thing good or bad.
I was carried on to observe, how they bear their fortunes, and how they did employ their times. Bacon.

To exhibit.
Ye Trojan flames, your testimony bear,
What I perform’d and what I suffer’d there. Dryden.

To be answerable for.
If I bring him not unto thee, let me bear the blame. Gounf.
O more than madmen: you yourselves shall bear the guilt of blood and pernicious war. Dryden.

To supply.
What have you under your arm? Somewhat that will bear your charges in your pilgrimage? Dry.

To be the object of.
This is unusual.
I’ll be your father and your brother too; Let me but bear your love, I’ll bear your grace. Shakespeare.

To behave; to act in any character.
Some good instruction gives,
How I shall tend to the event of this.
Hath he bear himself prudent in prison? Shak.

To hold; to restrain: with off.
Do you urge the state of this realm be now so fecile, that it cannot bear a greater blow than this? Dryden.

To impel; to urge; to push: with some particle noting the direction of the impulse; as, down, on, back, forward.
The resole were so divided as they could not conveniently fight or fly, and not only faithful and bare down another, but, in their confused tumbling back, brake a part of the avant guard. Sir J. Hayward.

Convection, like a horse.
Full of high feeding, moully hath broke loose.
And bears down all before him. Shakespeare.

Their broken ears, and flowing plaits, with yard
Their palfage, while they labour to the land;
And ebbing tides bear back upon that insubstantial ground. Dryden.

Now with a sailless gentle course it keeps
Within the middle bed;
And bears down all before it with impetuous force.
Dryden.

Truth is borne down, attestations neglected, the testimony of false persons defiled.
The hopes of enjoying the abbey lands would foot bear down all confessions, and be an effectual incitement to their perversion. Swift.

To conduct; to manage.
My hope is
So to bear through, and out, the confus’d fellowship.
As spite shall not or wound you, though it may me.

Ben Jonson.

To pref.
Cedar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus.

Though he bear me hard,
I yet must do him right. Ben Jonson.

These men bear hard upon the suspected party, pursue her through all her windings. Addition.

To incite; to animate.
But confidence then bare thee on; secureEither to meet no danger, or to find
Matter of great occasion.

To bear a body.
A colour is said to bear a body in painting, when it is capable of being ground so fine, and mixing with the oil so entirely, as to seem only a very thick oil of the same colour.

To bear date.
To carry the mark of the time when any thing was written.

To bear a price.
To have a certain value.

To bear in hand.
To amuse with false pretences, to deceive.
Your daughter, whom the bore in bond to love
With such integrity, she did confesse,
Was as a scorpion to her sight. Shakespeare.

His firmness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely bore in bond. Shakespeare.

He repaired to Bruges, defring the state of Bruges to enter peaceably into their town, with a certain fit for his ease and bearing them in hand, that he was to communicate with them of matters of great importance, for their good. Bacon.

It is no wonder, that some would bear the world in hand, that the apothecaries and meaning for prebendary, though his words are for episcopacy. South.

To bear off.
To carry away.
I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bearst my life off hence. Shakespeare.

The fun views half the earth on either way,
And here brings on, and there bears off the day.
Greek.

Give but the world, we’ll snatch this damsel up,
And bear her off. Addington. Cato.

My soul grows desperate
I’ll bear her off. A. Philip.

To bear out. To support; to maintain; to defend.
Hep your warrant will bear out the deed. Shak.
I can once or twice a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man.
Shakespeare.

Changes are never without danger, unless the prince be able to bear out his actions by power. Sir J. Hayward.

Quoth Sidrophel, I do not doubt
To mild friends that will bear me out. Holin.che.
Company only can bear a man out in an ill thing.

I doubted whether that occasion could bear me out in the confidence of giving your lordship any farther trouble.

To bear upon. A. Taken.

To fuffer pain.
Stranger, cease thy care
Wife is the father, but man is born to bear;
Joy weighs affairs of earth in dubious feares.
And the good sufferers while the bad prevail.
Pope.

They bare as heroes, but they felt as men. Pope.

To be patient.
I cannot, cannot bear, ‘tis past, ‘tis done; Perhath this impious, this deterred fate! Dryden.

To be fruitful or prolific.
A fruit tree hath been blown up almost by the roots, and set up again, and the next year bear exceedingly.
Bacon.

Bewray two reasons come’s th’audacious fire,
This age to blooming, and the next to bear. Dryden.
Moles on beds of ice are taught to bear.
And, stranger to the sun, yet riper here. Granville.

To take effect; to succeed.
Having pawned a full suit of clothes for a sum of money, which my operator assured me was the last he should want to bring all our matters to bear.
Guardian.

To act in any character.
Infuse me
How I may formally in person bear
Like a true friar. Shakespeare.

To tend; to be directed to any point;
with a particule to determine the meaning; as, up, away, onward.

There being gay like a driftstretched cord did show,
Till he bore in, and bent them into flight. Dryden.

On this the hero fix’d an oak in flight.
The mark to guide the mariners aright:
To bear with this, the farther their oars,
Then round the rock they steer, and seek the former shores.
Dryden.

To a convex mirror, we view the figures and all common things, which bear with more life and strength than nature itself.
Dryden.

To act as an impellent, opponnent, or as a reciprocal power; generally with the particles upon or against.
We were encountred by a mighty rock,
Which being violently bore upon
Our helpless ship we cast against the wind. Shak.
Upon the tops of mountains, the air which bears against the refluent quicksilver is less prevail.

The sides bearing one against the other, they could not lie so close at the bottoms. Burton.

As a lion, bounding in his way,
With force augmented bears against his prey,
Sideling to bite. Dryden.

Because the operations to be performed by the teeth require a considurable strength in the instrument; which is made more effectual, when nature hath provided this with strong muscles, to make it bear forcibly against the upper jaw.
Ray.

The weight of the body doth bear most upon the knee-joints, in raising itself up; and upon the muscles of the thighs, in coming down.
Wilkins.

The waves of the sea bear violently and rapidly upon some flowers, the waters being pent up by the land. Browne.

To act upon.
Spinnola, with his shot, did bear upon those within, who appeared upon the walls. Hayward.

To be situated with respect to other places; as, this mountain bear well of the promontory.

To bear up. To stand firm without falling; not to sink; not to faint or fail.

So long as nature
Will bear up with this exulting, so long
I daily vow to use it. Shakespeare.

Perfomers in diftresses may speak of themselves with dignity; it is a greatness of soul, that they keep against the fortune of fortune. Brantome.

The consciousness of integrity, the sense of a life spent in doing good, can enable a man to bear up under any change of circumstances.

When our commanders and followers were raw and inexperienced we lost battles and towns; yet we bore up then, as the French do now; nor was there any thing decisive in theirforces. Swift.

To bear with.
To endure an unpleasant thing.

Swifts.
BEARD. n. f. [beamb, Saxon ; barfis, Lat.]

1. A rough savage animal.

Some have falsely reported, that bears bring their young in the winter, and that their dams lick them into form. The dams go no longer than thirty days, and generally produce five young ones. In the winter, they lie hid and asleep; the male feeds the females four months, and is found only for the first fourteen days, that blows will not wake them. In the sleepy season, they are said to have no nourishment but from licking their feet. This animal has naturally an hideous face, but when enraged it is terrible; and, as rough and stupid as it seems to be, it is capable of discipline; it leaps, dances, and plays a thousand little tricks at the sound of a trumpet. They abound in Poland. In the remote northern countries the species is white.

Call hither to the face my two brave bears, Eras Salisbury and Warwick come to me,

And manacle the bearward in their chains.

Thou'dst then a bear!

But if thy flight lay tw'ed the raging sea,

Thou'dst meet the bear' th' mouth. Shakespeare.

2. The name of two constellations, called the greater and lesser bear; in the tail of the lesser bear, is the pole-star.

Even then when Troy was by the Greeks overthrown,

The bear oppos'd to bright Orion shone. Greek.

BEAR-BIND. n. f. A species of bindweed.

BEAR-FLY. n. f. [from bear and fly.] An insect.

There be of flies, caterpillars, canker-flies, and bearflies. Bacon's Natural History.

BEAR-GARDEN. n. f. [from bear and garden.]

1. A place in which bears are kept for sport.

Harrying me from the play-house, and the scenes there, to the bear-garden, to the age, and ages, and tyrers.

2. Any place of tumult or misrule.

I could not forbear going to a place of renown for the gallantry of Britons, namely to the bear-garden.

BEAR-GARDEN. adj. A word used in familiar or low phrase for rude or turbulent; as, a bear-garden fellow; that is, a man rude enough to be a proper frequenter of the bear-garden. Bear garden sport, is used for gros insipid entertainment.

BEAR-BREATH. n. f. [acenabas.] The name of a plant.

The species are. 1. The smooth-leaved garden bear-breath. 2. The prickly bear-breath. 3. The flat-leaved bear-breath, with short spikes. 4. The flat-leaved bear-breath, with short spikes. This is used in medicine, and is supposed to be the mollis acenabas of Virgil. The leaves of this plant are cut upon the capitals of the Cantharidium pillars, and were formerly in great esteem with the Romans.

BEAR-ear, or Auricula. [auricula urbi, Lat.] The name of a plant.

BEAR-foot. n. A species of heliobore.

BEAR-wort. n. f. An herb.

BEARD. n. f. [beamb, Saxon.]

1. The hair that grows on the lips and chin.

Eyes on chins the spearing beard began To form a comely man. Prior.

2. Beard is used for the face; as, to do any thing to a man's beard, is to do it in defiance, or to his face.

Roll'd at their covenant, and jowl'd

Their feet'st go to my beard. Hubberd.

3. Beards with a mark or age or virility; as, he has a long beard, means he is old.

This ancient ruffian, Sir, whose life I have spared at full of his grey beard. Shakespeare.

Some thin remains of chastity appear'd.

'Neath under Juno's bow without a beard. Dryd.

Would it not be insupportable for a professor to have his authority, of forty years standing, confirmed by general tradition and a revered beard, overturned at an instant novelty? Esdras.

4. Sharp prickles growing upon the ears of corn.

The ploughman lost his sweat, and the green corn.

Hath rise to ere its youth attain'd a beard. Shakespeare.

A certain farmer complained, that the beards of his corn cut the reapers and thresher's fingers. L'Estrange.

5. A barb on an arrow.

The beard or chuck of a horse, is that part which bears the curb of the bridie.

To BEARD. v. a. [from beard.]

1. To take or pluck by the beard, in contempt or anger.

No man so potent breathes upon the ground,

But I will beard him. Shakespeare.

2. To oppose to the face; to set at open defiance.

He, whenever he should scarce from duty, may be able to beard him. Spenser.

I have been bearden by boys. More.

The design of utterly exasperating monarchy by epilepsy, the presbyterians alone begun, continued, and would have ended, if they had not been bearden by that new party, with whom they could not agree about dividing the spoil. Swifts.

BEARDED. adj. [from beard.]

1. Having a beard.

Think every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,

My draw with you. Shakespeare.

Old preachers forest'd our fall at hard.

When Harford's first in flaying cattle-land. Dryden.

2. Having sharp prickles, as corn.

As when a field

Of Cores, rips for herself, waving her

Bare beard'd grove of ears, which way the wind

Sways them. Milton.

The fierce virago

Fly over the field, nor hurt the beard'd grain. Dryd.

3. Barbed or jagged.

Then he found I have pull'd the forest from my breath,

Turn'd out the beard'd tree to give me ret. Dryden.

BEARDLESS. adj. [from beard.]

1. Without a beard.

There was a goodly show of Canbells, king of Effex and Middlesex, with a beard'd image, inscribed Canbells. Camden.

2. Youthful.

And, as young striplings whip the top for sport

On the face of pavement of an empty court,

The wooden engine flies and whirs about,

Admire'd with clouns of the beard'd old courts. Dryd.

BEARER. n. f. [from to bear.]

1. A carrier of any thing, who conveys any thing from one place or perfom to another.

He should the beareer put to sudden death,

Not starving time allow'd. Shakespeare.

2. The bearer of unhappy news;

Your self'd father openly pursues

Your ruin. Dryd.

No gentleman sends a servant with a message, without endeavouring to put it into terms brought down to the capacity of the bearer. Swifts.

3. One who wears any thing.

O mercy!

When thou dost pinch thy beareer, thou dost fit

Like a rich armour won in bea' of day.

That deals with safety. Shakespeare.

4. One who carries the body to the grave.

5. A tree that yields its produce.

This way of procuring autumnal fruits, in some that are good bearers, will succeed. Biggs.

Repruse agricola, having the young shoots; but the raw bearers commonly perish.

6. In architecture. A post or brick wall raised up between the ends of a piece of timber, to shorten its bearing; or to prevent its bearing with the whole weight at the ends only.

7. [In heraldry.] A supporter.

BEARER. n. f. [from bear and bearer, as shapery from shapery.] A man that tends bears.

That he is more than a youth is not for me;

And that is less, I am not for him; therefore I will even take flatness in earnest of the bear-bred, and lead his apes into hell. Shakespeare.

BEARING. n. f. [from bear.]

1. The site or place of any thing with respect to something else.

But of this frame, the bearing and the ties,

The strong foundations, wise dependencies,

Gradations just, has thy prevailing soul

Look'd through or can a part contain the whole? Pope.

2. Gefeure; mien; behaviour.

That is Claudio; I know him by his bearing. Shakespeare.

3. [In architecture.] Bearing of a piece of timber, with carpenters, is the space either between the two fixt extremes thereof, or between one extreme and a post or wall, trimmed up between the ends, to shorten its bearing. Build. Dict.

BEARWARD. n. f. [from bear and ward.]

A keeper of bears.

We'll bait the bears to death,

And manacle the beardward in their chains. Shakespeare.

The bear is led after one manner, the multitude after another; the beardward leads but one brute, and the mountebank leads a thousand. L'Estrange.

BEAST. n. f. [beaste, Fr. besti, Lat.]

1. An animal, distinguished from birds, insects, fishes, and man.

The man that once did fell the Lion's skin.

While the beast liv'd, it was kill'd with bating him.

Biggs.

Beasts of chase are the buck, the doe, the fox, the hare, the hare, and the wolf. Biggs of the forest are the hart, the hind, the hare, the bear, and the wolf. Beasts of warren are the hare and cony. Camden.

2. An irrational animal, opposed to man; as, man and beast.

I dare do all that may become a man;

Who dares do more, I know not.

What beast was't then

That made you break this enterprise to me?

Shakespeare's Mother.

With bowls that turn'd exanour'd youths to beasts. Dryden.

3. A
3. A brutal savage man; a man acting in any manner unworthy of a reasonable creature.

F2. BEAST, v. a. A term at cards.

BEATINGS. See BEATINGS.

BEASTLINESS. n. f. [from beastly.] Brutality; practice of any kind contrary to the rules of humanity.

They hold this land, and with their filthy hands polluted this snow clean full long time. That their own mothers lost' th' their beastliness, and 'gan abhor her beast's unkindly crime.

BEASTLY. adj. [from beast.] 1. Brutal; contrary to the nature and dignity of man. It is used commonly as a term of reproach.

Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, or remain a beast with bearspar—Ay-ay! highly ambition.

Shakespeare. Thou beastly know, you know no reverence.

Shakespeare: King Lear.

With head, prophane, and beastly phaire
To reach the world's loose laughter, or vain gaze.

Ben Jonson.

It is charged upon the gentleman of the army, that the beastly vice of drinking to excess hath been freely, from their example, refused amongst men. Swift.

2. Having the nature or form of beasts.

Ridiculously civili'd, and driven of gods. Prior.

To BEAT, a. a. bitter, beat; part. buff' or beaten. [Latter, French.]

1. To strike; to knock; to lay blows upon.

So light, 1 not as one that beasteth the air.

Cervantes.

He rave'd with all the madness of despair;
He roar'd, he beat his breast, he tore his hair.

Dryden.

2. To punish with stripes or blows.

They're chose a consul that will from them
Their likes: make them of so more voice.
Than dogs, that are so often beast for barking. Skel.

There's Ford. good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot fear a white spot about her. Shakespeare.

There is but one fault for which children should be beaten; and that is obstinacy or rebellion. Locke.

3. Torike an instrument of munific.

Hic thy sword and heart.

Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum,
'Till it cry, sleep to death. Shakespeare.

4. To break; to bruise; to spread; to comminate by blows.

This house gathered mans, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it. Numbers.

They did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it.

Exodus.

5. To strike buttes or ground, or make a motion to route game.

It is strange how long some men will lie in wait to speak, and how many other matters they will beat for paper and pulping, mills, with which they beat most of their hemp.

Marston.

Neither furnished the gold, and he beat it into tares, so that he had occasion to use his anvil and hammer.

6. To drive; to do the corn out of the half.

She grieved in the field, and beat out that the hail gleaned.

Ruth, vi. 17.

7. To mix things by long and frequent agitation.

By long beating the white of an egg with a lump of alarm, you may bring it into white curds. Boyle.

8. To batter with engines of war.

And he beat down the tower of Peniel, and saw the men of the city.

Judges, viii. 12.

9. To dash, or bruise as wind.

Beyond this flood a frenzied continent
Lies dark and wild; beat with perpetual storms
Of whirlwind and disc hail.

Milton.

With tempests beat, and to the winds a storm.

Bacchus and SDescrib.

While winds and storms flort his lofty forehead beat,
The common fate of all that's high or great.

Dryden.

As when a lion in the midnight hours,
Beat by rude blasts, and yet with wint'ry snows,\nDefeats terrific from the mountain's brow. Pope.

10. To tread a path.

While I this unexpected task effory,
'Was awful words, and beat my painful way;

Celestial dove! divine afflication bring. Blackmore.

11. To make a path by marking it with trucks.

He that will know the truth of things, must leave the company of the great. Lucretius.

12. To conquer; to subdue; to vanquish.

If Hercules and Lichas play at dice,
Which is the better man? The greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand;
So is Alcibiades by his pique. Shakespeare.

You fouls of gods,
That beat the shapes of men, how have you run
From fixes that apes would beat! Shakespeare.

13. To harass; to over-labour.

It is no point of wisdom for a man to beat his brains, and spend his spirits, about things im calculable.

And as in prions mean rogue beat
Horns, for the forece of the great,
So Whackum beat his dirty brains
To advance his master's fame and gain. Halliwell.

Why any one should waste his time, and bear his head, about the Lat. grammar, who does not in tend to be a critic. Locke.

14. To lay, or pref, as flaming corn by hard weather.

Her own shall flieks her,
Her feet fluke like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow. Shakespeare.

And therefore, lady, let your tongs be heated,
And eat for joy, and destroy your enemies.

15. To deprive; to crush by repeated opposition: usually with the particle down.

Although a deed was proclaimed, touching any speech tending to treason, yet could not the bollards be beaten down with that forsworn, nor with this liberty be abated. Marlowe.

Our warfare propogating the French language, at the same time they are bearing down their power.

Such an unlook'd-for storm of ill falls on him,
It beats down all my strength.

Addison.

16. To drive by violence: with a particle.

Twice have I f'd, and was twice beat back.

Dryden.

He that proceeds upon other principles in his inquiry, does at least poll himself in a party, which he will not quit till he be beaten out. Locke.

He cannot be a character of his own head, but that it was a cardinal who picked his pocket.

Addison.

The younger part of mankind might be beat off from the belief of the most important points even of natural religion, by the impudent jest of a profane wit.

Watts.

17. To move with fluttering agitation.

Thrice have I beat the wings, and sat with night
About the world.

Dryden.

To beat down. To endeavour by treaty to lessen the price demanded.

Surveys rich movables with curious eyes,
Beat down the price, and threatens sell to buy. Dryden.

She persuaded him to trade the commodities with the money he had brought over for their ransom; as not questioning but he would beat down the terms of it.

Addison.

18. To beat down. To sink or lessen the value.

Usury beats down the price of lands. For the employment of money is chiefly either merchandizing or purchasing; and usury wayeth both. Bacon.

19. To beat up. To attack suddenly; to alarm.

Our lay in that quiet place, without making the least impression upon the enemy by beating up his quarters, which might easily have been done. Clarendon.

20. To beat the bay. To walk; to go on foot.

To Beat, en. 1. To move in a pullatory manner.

I would gladly understand the formation of a soul, and see it the first conscious pulsus. Cullen.

2. To dash as a flood or storm.

Public eye scarcely to beat chiefly upon mistresses.

Your brow, which does no fear of thunder know,
Sees rolling tempests vainly beat below. Dryden.

One saw many hollow flats warm in the bottom of the rock, as they are more or less able to resit the impressions of the water that beat against them. Addison.

21. To knock at a door.

The men of the city beat the house round about, and beat at the door, and spoke to the master of the house. Judges.

2. To move with frequent repetitions of the same act or frolic.

No pulse shall keep
His natural progress, but forceth to beat.

Skel.

My temperate pulse does regularly beat.

Dryden.

And he beats his head, and the blood circulates, which is not in his power, by any thought or volition, to stop. Locke.

2. To throb; to be in agitation, as a fore dwelling.

A turn or two I'll walk to fill my beating heart.

Shakespeare.

2. To fluctuate; to be in agitation.

The tempest in my mind
Driveth from my spirits all taking effect,
Saving what beats there. Shakespeare.

2. To try different ways; to search: with about.

I am always beating about in my thoughts for something that may turn to the benefit of my dear countryman.

To find an honest man, I beat about,
And love him, court him, praise him, in or out.

Pope.

2. To await upon with violence.

The fan beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and with his head into the sea.

Jonah.

3. To speak frequently; to repeat; to enforce by repetition: with upon.

We are driven in to a larger speech, by reach of their great earnestness, who lead more and more upon these last alleged words. Hooker.
BEA

How frequently and fervently doth the scripture beautify upon this earth.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautify.] Beautifying a beau; foppith.

BEAUTIFUL. adj. [from beauty.] Fair; elegant in form; pleasing to the fight; beautiful. This word is chiefly poetical.

BEAUTIOUS. adj. [from beauty.]
In a beauteous manner; in a manner pleasing to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being beautuous; beauty.

BEAT. ptv. pafive. [from the verb.]
Like a rich velvet beat by forms to fight,
'Twere madeness should I venture out once more.

BEAT. part. adj. [from the verb.]
What makes you, Sir, so late abroad
Without a guide, and this no bastard read?

BEAT. n.f. [from beat.]
1. An instrument with which any thing is commuted or mingled.

BEATTER. part. adj. [from Beat.]
2. Manner of striking, as, to beat up for soldiers.

Beater.

BEATTER. n.f. [from beat.]
He, with a careless beat,
Struck out the mate creation at a beat.

BEATING. n.f. [from beat.] Correction;
punishment by blows.

BEAUTIFUL. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTIFULNESS. n.f. [from beautify.]
The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTIFY. v.n. [from beautify; Lat.]
1. To make happy; to blees with the completion of celestial enjoyment.

BEAUTIFY. v.a. [beautify; Lat.]
2. To make happy; to blees with the completion of celestial enjoyment.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.]
1. That embellishment of, or proportion of parts, which pleases the eye.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beauty.] Beautiful.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.]
1. That embellishment of, or proportion of parts, which pleases the eye.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.]
The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.]
The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.

BEAUTY. adj. [from beautiful.]
In a beautiful manner; in a manner
leaning to the fight; beautifully.

BEAUTY. n.s. [beau.] The face or quality of being
beautuous; beauty; excellence of form.
Any of to Tairy never, to i Sbakeffeare, circum-

The ancient pieces are beautiful, because they resemble the beauties of nature; and nature will ever be beautiful, which reenbles those beauties of antiquity. Dryden.

With incredible pains have I endeavoured to copy several beauties of the ancient and modern historians. Addison.

A beautiful person. Remember that Pallas conquerous, A youth, how all the beaux of the call

The harlot's cheek, bristled with phalling art, Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it, Than is my deed to your most painted word. Shak.

A beau'ty-spot. n. f. [from beauty and spot.] A spot placed to direct the eye to something else, or to heighten some beauty; a foil; a patch. The illufions of love make them the beauti-

A bird like a nightingale, feeding on frogs and grubs, a fig-apecker. Pindar.

The robin-redbreast, till of late, had left, And children faced held a mitrins nell; Till breefses fold in dev'lish dear.

To BECA'LM. v. a. [from calm.] 1. To fill the clefts.

The moon shone clear on the becalmed flood. Dryden.

To keep a ship from motion. A man becalmed at sea, out of sight of land, in a fair day, may look on the fun, or sea, or ship, a whole hour, and receive no motion. Locke.

To quiet the mind. Soft, whispering airs, and the lark's matin song, Those to mine to becalm the heart than People'sd with life'some thoughts. Philips.

Bash'd his forrows; and becalm his soul

With a cloth. Addison.

Perhaps prosperity becalm'd his breath;

To becalm and to calm differ in this, that so calm is to stop motion, and to beto calm is to with-hold from motion.

without any government of the following words.

Or else, kind boy, I ask no red and white.
To make up my delight,
No odd becoming graces,
Black eyes, or little know not what, in faces.

Their differences are such as belong to their age, their calling, and their breeding; such as are becoming of them, and of them only. Dryden. Yet some becoming boldness I may use, I've will defend, nor will I now refuse. Dryden.

Make their pulpits repeat the assertion, that they may correct what is contained in it, till it be perfected into an habitual and becoming calling. Locke.

BECOMING. n.f. from become.] Ornament. A word not now in use. Shakespeare.

BECOMINGLY, adv. [from becoming.] After a becoming or proper manner.

BECOMINGNESS. n.f. [from becoming.] See To Become.] Decency; elegant congruity; propriety.

Nor is the majesty of the divine government greater in its extent, than the becoming thereof is in its manner and form. Crow.

BED, n. [bob, Sax.] 1. Something made to sleep on.
Lying not erect, but hollow, which is in the making of the bed, or with the legs gathered up, which is in the posture of the body, is the more whatsoever. Bacon.

Rigor now is gone to bed,
And Advice with scrupulous head. Milton.
Those hose then were caves, or horseless beds.
With twinkling eldest fan's, and most thirsty dryden.

2. Lodging; the convenience of a place to sleep in.
On my knees I beg,
That you'vouchsafe me salutation, beds, and food. Shakespeare.

George, the eldest son of this second bed, was, after the death of his father, by the singular counsel and affection of his mother, well brought up. Clarendon.

4. Bank of earth raised in a garden.
Heads will be tenderer and fairer, if you take them out of beds, when they are newly come up, and remove them into pots, with better earth. Bacon.

5. The channel of a river, or any hollow.
So high as be'ta'd the timid hills, so low Down sunk a hollow bottom, broad, and deep,
Capable of beds of waters. Milton.
The great magazine for all kinds of treasure is supposed to be the bed of the Tiber. We may be sure, when the Romans lay under the apprehension of feeling the city, by a hidden enemy, that they would take care to bend such of their riches that way, as could best bear the weight. Addison.

6. The place where any thing is generated, or repose.
See hearty Albus's infected side
'Or the warm bed of smoulding sulphur glides. Addison.

7. A layer; a stratium; a body spread over another.
I see no reason, but the surface of the land should be as regular as that of the water, in the first production of it, and the strata, or beds with which it is covered.

8. To bring to Bed. To deliver of a child.
It is often used with the particle of; as, she was brought to bed of a daughter.

BED. Ten months after Florence happened to wed,
And was troubled in a labour manner took it. Prior.

9. To make the Bed. To put the bed in order after it has been used.
I keep my house, and I wash, wring, brew, baby, feed, dress meat, and make the beds, and do all myself. Shakespeare.

BED of Mortar. [with gunn.] A long solid piece of oak, hollowed in the middle, to receive the breech and half the trunnions. D.II.

BED of a great Gun. That thick plank which lies immediately under the piece, being, as it was, the body of the carriage. D.II.

To Bed. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To go to bed with.
They have married me:
I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her. Shak.

2. To place in bed.
She was publicly contrived, slated as a bride,
And solemnly hied; and, after she was laid,
Maximilian's ambassador put his legs, first naked to the knees, in the bed. Bacon.

3. To make parterker of the bed.
There was a double ripped up, whither Arthur was hied with his lady. Bacon.

4. To sow, or plant in earth.
Cast long handsome, from flimy neck,
The bedded flie in banks outside the door. Donne.
A snake hied himself under the threshold of a country-house. L'Estrange.

5. To lay in a place of rest, or security.
Let erectile hand's, from flimy neck,
The bedded flie in banks outside the door. Donne.

6. To lay in order; to stratify.
And as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Start up, and stand on end. Shakespeare.

To Bed. v. n. To cohabitate.
If he be married, and bed with his wife, and afterwards keep, he may possibly fancy that the infected him.

To Bed a'ble. v. a. [from able.] To wet; to beeprinkle. It is generally applied to persons, in a festive including in convenience.
Never to weigh, never to so in weal,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with bares,
I can no further croll, no further go. Shakespeare.

To Bed a'le. v. a. [from agile.] To bemire; to foil clothes, by letting them reach the dirt in walking.
To Bed'sh. v. a. [from sheep.] To bemire by throwing dirt; to bespatter; to wet with throwing dirt.

When they walketh like a child, a child,
Toled the fad story of my father's death,
That all the strangers had wet these cheeks.
Make trees bedded with rain. Dryden.

To Bed a'wb. v. a. [from daw.] To daw over; to beffermear; to foil, with spreading any vifcous body over it.
A piteous corps, a bloody piteous corps,
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedebend in a blood. Shakespeare.

To Bed d'zze. v. a. [from dazzle.] To make the fight dim by too much light.
My mistaken eyes, That have to bedeem'd by the sun;
That cannot live together on emblem green. Shak.

BED'CHAMBER. n.f. [from bed and chamber.] The chamber appropriated to rest.
They were brought to the king, abiding them in his bedchamber. Heywood.
He was now one of the bedchamber to the prince. Clarendon.

To Bed'den. v. a. [from deck.] To deck; to adorn; to grace.
To shun'd thy shape, thy love, thy wit,
And uncle none in that true order indeed,
Which should besides thy shape, the beauty thy. Shakespeare.

Female it seems,
That to bed, or, unrate, or gay,
Comes this way. Milton.
With ornamental drops beded'st I stood,
And win my vict'ry with my enemy's blood. Marlow.

To Bedfellow. n.f. [from bebe, Sax. a prayer, and bough.] An hospital or almshouse, where the poor people prayed for their founders and benefactors.

To Bed'eter. See Bedder.

To Bed'w. v. a. [from deck.] To molest gently, as with the fall of dew.
Dowce her picture's grace with English blood. Shakespeare.

Let all the tears, that should bedeck my locks,
Be drops of balm to refresh my head. Shak.

The counsellor received a letter from him, whereunto all the while she was writing her answer, she bedewed the paper with her tears. Wotton.

To Bed'wter. (From bed l. And bed.) A bed, with liquid dam, Court's time on roes, in some pleasant cake. L'Estrange.
Balm, from a silver box divell'd round,
Shall all bedow the roots, and scent the face bedded. Dryden.

He died, and falling tear his face bedow'd. Dryd.

To Bed'fellow. n.f. [from bed and fellow.] One that lies in the fame bed.
He loves your people,
But tie him not to be their bedfellows. Shakespeare.
Mystery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. Shakespeare.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his fellows,
Being so troublesome a bed fellow? Shakespeare.
A man would as soon choose them for his bedfellows as his play fellows. L'Estrange.
What charming bedfellows, and companions for life, men chose out of such women? Addison.

To Bed'wter. (From bed l. And bed.) To adorn; to dress; to set off; an old word, now only used in humorous writings.
A maiden fine bright he apt to love;
The maiden fine bright he loves, or calls for the village he fowes the plains. Gay.
To Bed'wter, (From bed l. And bed.) To dress; to make dim; to obscure; to cloud; to darken.
I have bedow'd
The meretricious son, call'd forth the mutinous wife,
And twist the green sea and the azure vault.

To Bed'zen. v. a. [from disco.] To dress out; a low word.
Bitch. n. s. [from bed and fight]. One that fights to the last; a spendthrift; a person of little or no value.

Bitchery. n. f. [from bed and fight]. The act of fighting; a quarrel; a strife.

Bitch-faces, n. s. [from bed and fight]. The faces of a bitch; the face of a bitch.

Bitchfulness, n. f. [from bed and fight]. The quality of being a bitch; the quality of being a spendthrift; the quality of being a person of little or no value.

Bitch-fitter, n. s. [from bed and fight]. A person who is always fighting; a person who is always quarreling.

Bitchy, adj. [from bed and fight]. Quarrelsome; argumentative; contentious.

Bitchy-mongers, n. s. [from bed and fight]. People who are always fighting; people who are always quarreling.

Bid. v. a. [from bed and fight]. To bid; to offer; to demand; to request.

Bidding. n. s. [from bed and fight]. The act of bidding; the act of offering; the act of demanding; the act of requesting.

Bidder. n. s. [from bed and fight]. A person who bids; a person who offers; a person who demands; a person who requests.

Bif. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. n. s. [from bed and fight]. A person who is always fighting; a person who is always quarreling.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.

Bish. See Bes.
BEE

BEE. n. f. This word I have found only in the example, and know nothing of the etymology, unless it be a corruption of BYNDOL, from by and modul, a note; that is, a note out of the regular order.

There be interlacement in the right of eight, in terms, two Pende, or half notes 3, 5, 8, or, if you divide the terminal note sensibly, the eight is but short; the whole and equal notes.

BEE, BEEN. [beon, Saxon.] The participle pretensive of To Be.

Enough that virtue fill'd the space between. Pro'd by the ends of being having beent.

BEEF. n. f. [bir, Welsh.] Liquor made of malt and hops. It is distinguished from ale, either by being older or smaller.

Here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour; drink.

Try clarifying with almonds in new beer. Beer, Wood! bow, like thine inspector, beer! Thou nad, not rise; tho' thin, yet never clear; So sweetly mawkish, and so smooth and dull; Headly, not strong; and foaming, tho' not full.

BEEFINGS. See BEESTINGS.

BEET. n. f. [beta, Lat.] The name of a plant.

The species are,
1. The common white beet.
2. The common green beet.
3. The common red beet.
4. The turnip-colored red beet.
5. The great red beet.
6. The yellow beet.
7. The Swirl or Chard beet.

MILLER.

BEETLE. n. f. [beet, Saxon.]

1. An insect distinguished by having hard cafes or shields, under which he folds his wings.

There was a hard, and he beet his shields. Shakes.

The poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal full'rance finds a pang as great,
As when a giant dies.

Others come sharp of sight, and too provident for that which concerned their own interest; but as blind as beetles in foreseeing this great and common danger.

Knaves' lottery of the darks.

Yet there was a hard, and he beet his shields, The claspings live up the ruins deep,
And there the bat and drowsy beetle sleep. Garth.

The butterflies and beetles are much numerous to one another, in our own native countries alone; the species of each kind may amount to one hundred and fifty, or more.

Rats.

2. A heavy mallet, or wooden hammer, with which wedges are driven, and pavements rammed.

If I do, fill me with a three man beetle. Shakes.

When, by the help of wedges and beetles, an image is cut out of the trunk of some well-grown tree yet, after all the skill of artificers to set forth such a divine block, it cannot one moment secure itself from being eaten by worms, or defiled by birds, or cut in pieces by axes. Stillling.

To BEEFLE, v. n. [from the noun.] To just out; to hang over.

What if it tempts you over the flood, my lord? Or to the dreadful amphib of the earth,
That beetles or his base into the sea. Shakes.

Or where the lice.

High in the sitting cliff his airy buildings. Thomson.

BEEFLEDED, adj. [from beetle and brow.] Having prominent brows.

Enquire for the beetle-brow'd critick, &c. Swift.

BEEFLEDHEADED, adj. [from beetle and head.] Loggerheaded; wooded headed; having a head stupid, like the head of a wooden beetle.

A wrighton, beetledhead, flap-end'd bore. Shakes.

BEEFLESTOCK. n. f. [from beetle and stock.] The handle of a beetle.

BEEFLESTRAVE. n. A plant.

BEEFLETRASH. n. A. Plant.

BEEFLES, n. f. [The plural of beef.] Black cattle; oxen.

One way, a band fle'd from foreigh drives A herd of hovers, fair oxen, and fair kine, From a fat meadow ground whole and equal notes.

Others make good the pacity of their breed with the length and duration of their days; whereof there want not examples and authenticities, Sorts in blond cows, cloven-hoofed, as camels; and know, whereof there is above a million annually slain in England. Brown's Fuller Errours.

BEEFELS, n. f. Black cattle; oxen.

And the huge bear is thunk an unto. Pope. To BEEFALL, v. n. [from full. It bele, it hab. belef.] To happen to: used generally of ill.

Let me know
The word that may belef me in this case. Shaks.

Other doubt posseth me, left harm
Befall thee, sever'd from me. Milton.

This verifiable person, who probably heard our Savoury tale of the destruction of Jerusalem, drew his congregation out of these unparalleled calamities, which asfeth his countrymen. Addison.

This disfaze has belef them, which is not because they deferred it, but because the people love new faces.

To happen to, as good or neutral.

Bion skil'd an envious man, that was very fond, What harm had belef unto him, or what good had belef unto another man? Bacon.

No man can certainly conclude God's love or hatred to any person, from what belefheth him in this world. Tilloine.

3. To happen to: to come to pass.

But since affairs of men are still uncertain, Let's reason with the word that may belef. Shaks.

I have revel'd
This disfaze which belef, and was in heav'n.

A mong th' angelick pow'r's. Milton.

4. It is used sometimes with to before the person to whom any thing happens: this is rare.

Some great mischiefs last belef'n
To that great prince. Paradise Lost.

5. To belef of. To become of; to be the state or condition of; a phrase little used.

Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath belef'n of them, and them, till now.

Shakespeare.

To BEEP, v. a. [from bee and fit.] To fuit; to be suitable to; to become.

Blind is his eye, and bellef the dark. Shaks.

Out of my fight, thou serpentine— that name bellef thee, then, with him league'd; thyself an ill. Paradise Lost.

I will bring you where the flies,
Chaf'd in phleocure, as bellef. Milton.

Her dotage.

Thou, what bellef the new lord major,
Are anxiously to ine know. Dryden.

To BEEPOLL, v. a. [from bee and pool.] To ine; to fool; to deprive of understanding; to lead into error.

Men bellef these are contrary; and, without seeing a few fighs, they will persuade themselves that they have repented.

Swift.

Jenomath thought bilef the bit party, though nothing in the nature of fin being not only to defile, but to ine.

Swift.

BEFORE. prep. [buponan, Sax.]

1. Farther onward in place. Their common preface was to look no further before them, this one instance: and it will follow that they can drive to no certain point.

2. In the front of; not behind.

Who shall go
Before them, in a cloud and pillar of fire,
By day a cloud, by night a pillar of fire,
To guide them in their journey, and remove Behind them, while the obdurate king pursues. Milton.

3. In the presence of: noting authority or conquest.

Great queen of gathering-clouds,
See we fall before them! Dryden.

4. In the presence of: noting regard.

For that kind, and calling down of the eyes, both are more when we come before many. Bacon.

5. At the presence of: noting consideration.

They represent our poet bewitch a farmer and a courtier, when he shift himself in his belt habits, to appear before his patron. Dryden.

Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Let our own princes. Shakespeare.

If a suit be begun before an archdeacon, the ordinary may licent the suit to a higher court. Shakespeare.

8. In the power of: noting the right of choice.

The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide. Milton.

Give us this evening, thou hast more and more,
And all the years, before thee of delight. Dryden.

He hath put us in the hands of our own counsellors.

Life and death, prosperity and destruction,
Are before us. Titus Andronicus.

9. By the impulse of something behind.

Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdened
With lever weight, but not with lever woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind. Shakespeare.

Hurried by fate, he cries, and borne before.

10. A furious wind, we leave the faithful shore. Dryden.

11. Preceding in time.

Particular advantages it has before all the books which have appeared before it in this kind. Dryden.

12. In preference to.

We should not presume to determine which should be the fittest, till we see he hath chosen for us, which is what we are to try to be the fittest, because he hath taken it before the rest. Hester.

We think poverty to be infinitely definable before the terms of covetousnes. Taylor.
See how they beg an arm of flattery.

2. To take any thing for granted, without evidence or proof.

We have not begged any principles or suppositions, for the proof of this; but taken that common ground, which both Moles and all antiquity prefer.

To BEGHT, v. a. beght, or beght: I have beghten, or beght. [beggar, Saxon, to obtain. See To GET.]

1. To generate; to procreate; to become the father of, as children.

But first come the hours, which we begt in love's sweet paradise, of day and night, which do the features of the face alter.

Scriptr. I talk of dreams.

Which are the children of an idle brain.

beght of nothing but vain phantasy. [beggar.]

Twas he the noble Claudian race beght. [beggar.]

Love is begt by fancy, bred By ignorance, by expectation fed. [beggar.]

2. To produce, as effect.

If I have done the thing you gave in charge,

Begt you happiness, be happy then; For it is done. [beggar.]

3. To produce, as accidents.

Is it a time for folly, when each minute

Begts a thing so grave? [beggar.]

4. It is sometimes vowed on, or upon, before the mother.

Begt upon

His mother Martha by his father John. [beggar.]

BEG'TTER, n. f. [from beggar.] He that procreates, or beghts; the father.

For what their provest gain'd, the law declares

Is to them themselves alone, and to their heirs!

And though the beggar's issue goes back to the beggar beggert.

But if the son fights well, and plunder theirs—

Men continue the race of mankind, commonly

Without the intention, and often against the con- tent and will, of the beggert. [beggar.]

Locke.

BEG'GAR, n. f. [beggar.]

It is more properly written beggar; but the common orthography is retained, because the derivatives all prefer the a.

1. One who lives upon alms; one who has nothing but what is given him.

He rakeht up the poor out of the dust and Lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes. [beggar.]

We see the whole equipage of a beggar to Drawn by Homer, as even to retain a nobleness of Dignity. [beggar.]

2. One who supplicates for any thing; a petitioner; for which, beggar is a harsh and contemptuous term.

What subjects will precarious kings regard?

A beggar speaks so loftly to be heard. [beggar.]

Dryden.

3. One who assumes what he does not prove.

These shameless beggars of principles, who give

This precarious account of the original of this, give Assume to themselves to be men of reason. [beggar.]

Titus.

To BEG'T, v. a. [beggeren, Germ.] To live upon alms; to live by asking relief of others.

I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed. [beggar]

To BEG'T, v. a.

1. To ask; to seek by petition.

He went to Pilate, and beggert the body. [beggar.]

Matth. 27.
From Nimrod first the savage chase began;
A mighty hunter, and his game was man. Pope.

5. To take rise; to commence.
Judgment must begin at the house of God.

Psa. 1.

1 Peter.

Begin, v. a.
1. To do the first act of anything; to pass from not doing to doing, by the first act.

2. To flay up; to encircle; to encompass.

Beg'd an' Almighty throne,
Deserving, or deserving. Milton.

Or should the, confident
At fitting queen adorns a beautiful throne.

Devoid, with all her worship's charming legs.

Tamour.

At home surrounded by a servile crowd,
Prompt to abuse, and in distraction loud.

Abounds with men, and coward, and fear.

His very face acknowledging his fear. Prior.

To flux in with a siege; to beleaguer;
To block up.

It was to closely begirt, before the king's march into the well, that the council humbly defies his majesty, that he would relieve it.

Cæsarean.

To Beg'art. v. a. [This is, I think, only a corruption of begirt; perhaps by the printer.] To begird.
See Begin.
And, Lentulus, begirt you Pompey's house.
To cause his sons alive, for they are Mail make our peace with him. Bow.

Tragedie.

BELGERREG. n.f. [Turkish.] The chief governor of a province among the Turks.

To BeG'aw. v. a. [from be and gnaw.]
To bite; to eat away; to corrode; to nibble.

His horse is stark jailed with the flingers, begirists with the bow, wall in the back, and shoulder-flotten.

Shakespeare.

The worm of conditio still begraws thy boul.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

To BECOME. interjed. [Only a coalition of the words be, gen.] Go away; hence; hail away.

Begme! the gredies crie with stern disdain,
Begme! nor dare the hallow'd dream to stain.

She fled, for even bards cried from the train. Addison.

BEGO'T. v. a. [The participial present of the BEGOST.'] Verb beget.

Remember that thou wait beget of them. Ecles.
The first he met, Anticipates the brave,
But base forgotten on a Theban dart.

Dryden.
The base case, v. a. [from be and case.]
To foil or dumb with unitious or fat matter.

To BECRIME. v. a. [from be and grime.]
See Grim and Grime.
To foil with dirt deep impredict; to foil in such a manner that the natural hus cannot easily be recovered.

Her name, that was as freth,
As Dian's village now begrims, and black
At my own face.
Shak.peare.

To BEGUL'TE. v. a. [from be and gentle.]
1. To impose upon; to delude; to cheat.
This I say, let any man, should impose upon you in any way.

Shakespeare.
The fellent beguted, and I did eat! Milton.

Who sees a man, who would have beguted and imposed upon him by making him believe, he would not be true, that is the man who would have ruined me.

Sidney.

To Deceive; to evade.
Is wretchedness deprived of that benefit,
To end itself by death?  To get yet some comfort;
When they flay, and beguted the tyranny, and fristratic his proud will.

Sidney.

3. To deceive pleasingly; to amuse.
Sweet, sweet me here awhile!
My phlegm grows cold, but faint I would expire

The red sunrises with these.

Shakespeare.
With heels sometimes the drier her time begult;
These do by this her phlegm joys. Sir J. Denies.

Beloved.

The participal passiue of begin.
But thou, beginn'd morning day, thou rising sun,
Which thy beams brought to light
Those mysteries, that since the world began
Lay hid in darknes and eternal night. Sir J. Dav.
BEH

Bacsn.

But tardy. Conduct; from but this made no Perhaps as, the Addijor in Knollei. not Ezeiief, and the JVotUn. fhunn'd a hapj-, respect Sidney. fruit _

To vvi.. the that he'ld. Best. Be'hen. 7t of y by changed. feigned he. That high.

and he'd be baken in the face, Elizabeth, or peaks. we approaching them. in my life.

I. dillance he left.

of them. Behold.

for that. Beholden, of men. Behold.

of the. Beho'ld.

of the. Beho'ldn.

of the. Beho'lding.

behemoth, our he's, and behemoth,

after this. Beho'lden.

of the. Beho'ld,

of the. Beho'ld.

of the. Beho'ld.
BEL

Because it was for the benefit of the animal, that, upon any sudden accident, it might be awakened, there were no rats or shrews made for cats.

It would be of no beclwth, for the settling of government, unless there were a way taught to/ how to use poor to whom belonged this power and domination.

To BEHOOVE. v. n. [behogam, Saxon.
it is a duty.] To be fit; to be meet;
other with respect to duty, necessity, or convenience. It is used only imperially with it.

For better examination of their quality, it be-lowers are very fine formation and rose, the highest well-fitting and clothing of them, to be discovered.

Honor.

He did so prudently temper his passions, as that not of them made him want in the offices of life, which it behoved or became him to perform.

Atterbury.

But should you lose the monarch of the brook,
Behove you then to ply your skilled art. Therefore

BEHOVEFUL. adj. [from behove.] Useful; profitable; advantageous. This word is somewhat antiquated.

It is very behoveful in this country of Ireland, where there are wafle defects full of grafts, that the same may be behoved to them.

Laws are many times full of imperfections:
and that which is supposed behovable unto men, prove oftentimes more pernicious.

Honor.

Maddam, we have call'd such necessities
As are behoveful for our late to-morrow. Shaks.

It may be most behoveful for princes, in matters of grace, to transtend the fame publicly, so as it is requisite, in matters of judgment, punishment, and canons, that the same be transmitted privately.

Glorieden.

BEHOVEFULLY. adv. [from behoveful.] Profitably; usefully.

Tell us of more worthy dislikes than these, and that may more behovefully import the reformation.

Spenser.

BEHÔT. [preterite, as it seems, of behoght, to promise.]

With sharp intended thing to rode him from
That wos put to death, with the gift of the Virgin,
Ne living would have him live everlasting.

Shaks.

BEING. particip. [from be.] Those, who have their hope in another life, look upon themselves as being on their passage through life.

Atterbury.

BEING. n. f. [from be.]

1. Existence: opposed to nonentity.

Of him all things have both received their first being, and their continuance to be that which they are.

Hester.

Yet is not God the author of her ill,
The author of her being, and being there. Davies.

There is none but he,
Whose being I do fear and under him
My genius is rebuked. Shaks. Macbeth.

Thus, Father, yet they sing, omnipotently
Immutable, immovable; omnipotent,
Eternal, all things, Authors of all being.

Shaks. Paradise Lost.

Fountain of light! Milton's Paradise Lost.

Merrily and graciously, thou gavest us being,
taking us from nothing to an excellent creation.

Consider every thing as not yet is being; then example, if it must needs have at all, or what other ways it may have been.

Bentley.

2. A place of any condition.

There's happy spirits which, ordained by Fate,
For future being and new bodies wait. Dryd.

Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate;
From out these that men, from men what spirits

Or who could suffer being here below?

Pope.

As now your own, our beings were of old,
And once indeed in woman's beautiful mould.

Pope.

3. The person existing.

Ah, fair, yet false! an being form'd to cheat
By seeming kindness, mixt with deep deceit! Dryd.

If it's folly to seek the approbation of any being,
besides the supreme; because no other being can make a right judgment of us, and because we can procure no confiderable advantage from the application of a right judgment, this is best.

Beins. convenunt. [from be. Since. Dixit.

BE IT SO. A phrase of anticipation, suppose it be so; or of permission, let it be so.

My gracious duke,

Be it the will not here, before your grace,
Confent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens. Shaks.

To BELCH. v. a. [from be and lauv; to burst; to hum a word in low speech.

What several madnesses in men appear!
Oft erstes runs from fancy'd Furies here!
Ajas belloweth there an harmless ox,
And thinks that Agamemnon feels the knocks.

Dryden.

He feels virago Nell belch
With his own staff, his peaceful neighbour. Swift.

To BELCH'Y. v. a. [a fierce term.] To falten,
as, to belace a rope.

Dixit.

BELMAIE. n. f. [bel amis, Fr.] A friend;
an intimate. This word is out of use.

Pound's out his life, and last philosophy.
To the fair Cirtias, his dearer belamie. Dryden.

BELMAUR. n. f. [bel amour, Fr.] Gal-

tant; confort; paramount: obloiete.

Lo, how he brake the decks her bounteous bow'r
With fifteen curtains, and gold coverets,
Therein to throned her famous belamour. Dryden.

BELTAED. adj. [from be and late.] Benighted; out of doors late at night.

Fairy elves,
Whole midnight evens, by a forest side,
Or fountain, some belated peasant fees,
Or dreams he fees.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Or near Fleetstede's oozy brink;
Belated, fears on watch to lie. Swift.

To BELY. v. a. [from be; and lay; as,
to exasperate, to lie in wait, to lay wait for.]

1. To block up; to flop the passage.

The spirits of some of his allies belongeth.
And spurs their保姆ing to cross their way.

Dryden.

2. To place in ambush.

Giant's first strong call'd needeth greater might,
Then those small feats were wont belay.

Spenser.

To BELAY a rope. [a fast term.] To spice; to mend a rope, by laying one end over another.

To BELCH. v. n. [belecan, Saxon.]

1. To eject the wind from the stomac;& to eruct.

The symptoms are, a four small in their face,
belching, and divisions of the bowch.

2. To issue out, as by eructation.

The waters roll, and, belch'd from below,
Black sands as from a forceful engine throw. Dryd.

A triple pile of plumes his crest adorn'd,
On which with belching plumes Chimera wore't.

Dryden.

To BELCH. v. a. To throw out from the stomach; to eject from any hollow place.

It is a word implying confinences, hate-fulnes, or horror.

They are but foolishs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungry and, when they're full,
They belch us.

Shakspeare.

The bitterness of it I low belch from my heart.

Shakspeare.

BELCHF. y. f. [belch, in French, is a tower; which was perhaps the true word, till those, who knew not its original, corrupted it to belch, because bells were in it. The place where the bells are rung.]

Pope.
6. Creed; a form containing the articles of faith.

BELIEVABLE. adj. [from believe.] Credible; that which may be credited or believed.

BELIEVE. v. a. [Kellyan. Saxon.]
1. To credit upon the authority of another, or from some other reason than our personal knowledge.

BELIEVER. n. s. [bel, Sax.; suppos'd, by Skinner, to come from felius; Lat. a bosom. See BELL.]

1. A vejell, or hollow body of cold metal, formed to make a noise by the act of a clapper, hammer, or some other instrument striking against it. Bells are in the towers of churches, to call the congregation together.

Your finger to the respiration of the bell, Encircled you to hear with reverence.

2. To use for any thing in the form of a bell, as the cups of flowers.

3. A small hollow globe of metal perforated, and containing in it a solid ball; which, when it is shaken, by bounding against the sides, gives a sound.

BELL, n. f. [beel, Sax.; fanc'd, by Shakespeare, to come from felius, Lat. a bosom. See BELL.]

1. A vejell, or hollow body of cold metal, formed to make a noise by the act of a clapper, hammer, or some other instrument striking against it. Bells are in the towers of churches, to call the congregation together.

Your finger to the respiration of the bell, Encircled you to hear with reverence.

2. To use for any thing in the form of a bell, as the cups of flowers.

3. A small hollow globe of metal perforated, and containing in it a solid ball; which, when it is shaken, by bounding against the sides, gives a sound.

BELLE. n. f. [beel, Sauk. Fr.] A young lady.

What motive could compel
A well-bred lord t' assail a gentle belle?
Of say, what stranger causest, yet unperceived,
Could make a gentle belle reject a lord?

BELLES. n. p. [bline, blank. Probably; likely; perhaps.

There came out of the fame woods a horrible foul bear, which feiring biles, while the lion was present, came furiously towards the place where I stood.

Believe me, biles, think me remiss in my oft' affections, or roused by this unnoticed putting on.

Josephus affirmeth, that one of them remained in his times; meaning, biles, some ruin or foundation thereof.

BELLES. n. p. [bline, blank. Probably; likely; perhaps.
BEL

BELLES LETTERS, n. s. [Fr.] Polite literature. It has no singular.

The exactness of the other, is to admit of something like discourse, especially in what regards the bells letters.

BELLE-BONE. n. [from bellus, beautiful, and to be good, Lat. belle & bome, Fr.] A woman excelling both in beauty and goodness. A work now out of

e.

Print may beproved that he ever bough another

Such a bellbone,

And Sisyphus rejoice that ever was her lot.

Scriber.

BELLEGERANT. adj. [belliger, Lat.]

BELLEGEROUS. Waging war. Ditto.

BELLI. n. s. A hunting term, spoke of a tar, when the makos a noisy rutting time. Ditto.

BELLI-POTENT. adj. [bellispatum, Lat.]

Bellicant; mighty in war.

To Be'llow. w. s. [bellow, Sax.]

1. To make a noise as a bull.

This summons the bull, and bellowed the green

Neptune a ram, and bleated. Shakespeare,

What bulldores bellow, or what sheep dare bleat,

Within the form's den. Dryden,

But the hand of a herd must be

Thy mate, and bellowing so thy progeny. Dryd.

2. To make any violent outcry.

He fatten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out,

As he hurl'd heav'n.

3. To vociferate; to clamour. In this fence it is a word of contempt.

The dull fat captain, with a hound's deep

Thrust bellow out a laugh in a base note. Dryden.

This gentleman is accustomed to roar and bellow

The loudest, that he frighten'st us. Tull.

4. To roar as the sea in a storm, or as the wind, to make any continued noise, that may cause terror.

Till, at the last, he heard a dread sound,

Which th'o' the wood loud bellowing did rebound.

Shakespeare:

The rising rivers flow the nether ground;

And rocks the bellowing voice of roaring seas rebound. Dryden.

BELLows. n. s. [blyg, Sax, perhaps it is corrupted from beller, the wind being contained in the hollow, or bally. It has no singular; for we usually say, a pair of bellow's; but Dryden has used bellow's

as a singular.]

3. The instrument used to blow the fire.

Since fire, into my inward furnace turn'd,

For bellow's serve to kindle more the fire. Sidney.

One, with great bellow's, gather'd filling air,

And with forc'd wind the fuel did enflame. Fairb.

The smith prepares his hammer for the fireback,

While the lung's bellowing huffing firevroce. Dryd.

The lungs, as bellowing, furnish a force of breath;

and the aorta arium is as the nozzle of bellow's, to collect and convey the breath. Helder.

2. In the following passage it is singular.

Thus neither, like a bellow, swell it thy face,

As if thou wouldst blow the burning masts

Of molten ore. Dryden.

BEL'LUNE. adj. [bellinum, Lat.] Bealel-fully; belonging to a beast; savage; brutal.

If human actions were not to be judged, men would have no advantage over beasts. At this time the animal and bellow's life would be the beast.

BELLY. n. s. [baal, Dutch; bela, bela, Welsh.]

1. That part of the human body which reaches from the breath to the thighs, sustaining the bowels.

The body's members

Rebel'd against the belly, thus accord'd it:

That only as a gull it did remain,

Still exuberating the veins, never hearing

Like labour with the rest. Shakespeare.

2. In beasts, it is used, in general, for, that part of the body next the ground.

And the Lord laid upon the infant. Upon thy belly shall ye go, and dart that thou eat of all the fruit of the field. Genesis.

3. The womb: in this sense, it is commonly used ludicrously or familiarly.

I shall answer better, that you can get the up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you. Shakespeare.

The secret is grown too big for the presence, like Mrs. Primly's big belly. Cowper

4. That part of man which requires food, in opposition to the back, or that which demands clothes.

They were content with a licentious life, where in they might fill their belly with spoil, rather than by labour. Heward.

Whole good is their belly.

He that goes his grain upon mickle, will have many a hungry belly before harvest. Arbinet.

5. The part of anything that swells out into a larger capacity.

Fortune sometimes turneth the handle of the bottle to the other side, and poureth that which after the belly, which is hard to grasp. Bacon.

An Irish harp hath the concave, or belly, not along the fringes, but at the end of the fringes.

6. Any place in which something is closed.

Out of the belly of hell cried I, and thou heardst my voice. Job.

To Be'lly. w. s. [from the noun.]

To swell into a larger capacity; to hang out; to bulge out.

Thus by degrees day waiters, signs cease to file,

For bellying earth, fill rilling up, denies

Their light a package, and confines our eyes.

The pow'r appeas'd, with winds sufficed the fall,

The bellying canvas with the gale. Dryden.

Loud rattling makes the mountains and the plain, Heav'n's bellies downwards, and descends in pain.

Dryden.

Midst these disports, forget they not to drench

Themselves with bellying goblets. Phillips.

BELLY-ACHE. n. s. [from belly and ache.]

The cholic; or pain in the bowels.

BELLYBOWS n. s. [from belly and bow.

Disseased, so as to be conlusive, and frankly in the belly.

BELLY-FRETTING. n. s. [from belly and fret.]

1. [With farriers.] The chafing of a horse's belly with the foregirt.

2. A great pain in a horse's belly, caused by worms.

BELLYFUL. n. s. [from belly and full.]

1. As much food as fills the belly, or satisfies the appetite.

2. It is often used ludicrously for more than enough; thus, King James told his friar that he should have his bellyful of imperial punishments.

BELLYGOOD. n. s. [from belly and god.

A glutton; one who makes a god of his belly.

What infinite waste they made this way, the only story of Apicius, a famous bellygod, may suffice to shew. Hakewill.

BELLY-PINCHED. adj. [from belly and pinch.] Starved.

BELLOWS.

This night, wherein the cubdrown bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-stuck wolf.

Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs. Shaksp.

BELLYROLL. n. s. [from belly and roll.

A roll socalled, as it seems, from entering into the hollows.

They have two small hollows that they clap on each side of them, and so they harrow right up and down, and roll it with a bellyroll, that goes between the ridges when they have down it.

Mariner.

BELLY-TIMBER. n. s. [from belly and timber.] Food; materials to support the belly.

Where belly-timber, above ground

Or under, was not to be found. Hubbard.

The strength of every other member

It founded on your belly-timber. Dryd.

BELLY-WORM. n. s. [from belly and worm.] A worm that breeds in the belly.

BELMAN. n. s. [from bell and man.] He whose bufnesm it is to proclaim any thing in towns, and to gain attention

by ringing his bell.

It was the owl that strick'd, the fatal bollom

Which gives the storm it good night. Shakespeare.

When Titian's gloving paint the sun warm'd,

Now hang the bollom's long, and gaited here.

The colour'd print of Overton appear.

Gay.

The bollom of each parish, as he goes his circuit, cries out every night. Pauf twelve o'clock.

Swift.

BELMETAL. n. s. [from bell and metal.]

The metal of which bells are made, being a mixture of five parts copper with one of pewter.

Belmetal has copper one thousand pounds, tin from three hundred to two hundred pounds, leads one hundred and fifty pounds. Bacon.

Colours which arise on belmetal, when melted and poured on the ground, in open air, like the colours of water bubbles, are changed by viewing them at divers obliquities. Newton.

To Bellock. w. s. [from be and lock.] To fallen as with a lock.

This is the hand, which with a word's contract

Was full bellock'd in thine. Shakespeare.

BELMANCEY. n. s. [from beige and jau-ten.]

Belmance, or divination by arrows, hath been in request with Scythians, Alains, Germans, with the Africans and Turks of Algier.

Brown's Papus Ercurt.

To Bello. w. s. [belengen, Dutch.]

1. To be the property of.

To light on a part of a field belonging to Bess.

2. To be the province of.

There is no need of such rederiet.

Or if there were, it did not belong to you. Shaksp.

The declaration of their intent philosophers hangs to another paper. Byng.

To love the care of heav'n and earth. Dryden.

3. To adhere, or be appendant to.

He went into a desert belonging to Bethsaida.

Lath.

4. To have relation to.

To whom belong'd thou? wherein art thou? Shaksp.

Samuel.

5. To be the quality or attributes of.

The familiar belonging to the supreme spirit, are unlimited and boundless, fitted and designed for infinite objects. Genesis.

6. To be referred to; to relate to.

He carath for things that belong to the Lord.

Gottch.
BEL

Eleventh. participle, [from below, derived of love. It is observable, that though the participle be of very frequent use, the verb is seldom or never admitted as we say, you are much below me, but not, I believe you loved; dear.]

I think it is not meet, Mark Anthony, so well below of Caesar, Should outward Caesar. Shakespeare.

In a crowd of a do.

The Spirit descended, while the Father's voice From heav'n pronounced him his belov'd Son. Mills.

BENVOL, prep. [from be and low.]

1. Under in place; not high. For all below means I would not leap. Shak.

He'll beat Ausonian head below his knees, And tread upon his neck. Shakespeare.

2. Inferior in dignity. The noble Venetans think themselves equal at least to the electors of the empire, and but one degree below kings. Adlton.

3. Inferior in excellence. His styliums of Theocritus are as much below his last Mantilus, as the fields below the flats. Fifpen.

4. Unworthy of; unsatifying. 'Tis much below me on his throne to fe. But when do I, you shall petition it. Dryden.

Be low. and below.

1. In the lower place; in the place nearest the centre.

To men standing below on the ground, those that be on the top of Paul's seem much less than they are, and cannot be known, but, to men above, those below seem nothing to much reflected, and may be known. Bari.

The upper regions of the air perceive the collection of the matter of the tempests and winds before they fall on the earth; and therefore the observing of the smaller storms, is a sign of tempest following. London.

His fully heat infects the sky. The ground below it parch'd, the heav'n above was dry. Dryden.

This fait, he led them up the mountain's brow, And show'd them all the fishing fields beneath and far. Dryden.

2. On earth, in opposition to heavens.

And let no tears from erring pity flow, For one that's belov'd above, immortal'd below. Smit.

The fairest child of Jove, Below for ever sought, and belov'd above. Prior.

3. In hell; in the regions of the dead: opposed to heaven and earth.

The gadgome ghosts in circling troops attend, Delight to hover near, and long to know What bus'nest brought him to the realms below. Dryden.

When suff'ring spirits aloft in beams full glow, And proud'rous traitors gash'd their teeth of fire, Tickell.

To BELOW'T. v. a. [from be, and lower, a word of contempt.] To treat with opprobrious language; to call names. Obispo.

It is said, when he heard a gentleman report, that at a supper they had not only good chese, but also favou'ret epigrams, and fine anagrams, returning home, rated and belittled his company, as he himself desired, that never dreeft, him other epigrams or anagrams. Camden.

BELSWAGGER. n. A cant word for a whoresamman.

You are a charitable belswagger; my wife cried out fire, and you cried out for engines. Dryden.

BEN. n. [from be and low. Sax., belou, Lat.] A girdle; a circinure in which a sword, or some weapon, is commonly hung.
   The exerting the understanding in the several ways of reasoning, teach the mind suppleness; to bring it more to the point of the matter, in all its researches.

10. A stalk of grases, called bent-grases.
   Hit, a bent both stiff and strong; and well near of two inches long; the height, more dextrely to bend and bend again.

   Then the flowers of the vine, it is a little bush, like the bush of a bent, which grows upon the cluster, in the first coming forth. Bacon’s Essay of June is drawn in a mante of dark grases-green, upon his head a garland of bentis, Kingtons, and maidenfields.

   Bequethment. n. f. [from bereath.] A legacy.
   Bequest. n. f. [from bereath.] Something left by will; a legacy.
   He claimed the crown to himself; pretending an highwayman, of the Kingdom unto the Conclitoris.

   To Bereattle. w. a. [from cattle.] To fill with noise; to make a noise in contempt.

   There are now the fashion, and to bereate the common stains, so they call them, that many wearing of their clothes, are said of good-deeds, and rare feats come thither.

   Beerry. n. f. [berry.] Sometimes written barberry, which feem. A berry of a harpe taste, used for pickles.

   Some never ripe to be sweet, as tamarinds, barberries, gooseberries, &c.

   Beuveke. w. a. [from) beeve.] Better; or berrive; part. berive. [bequeath; Sax.]

   1. To brip of; to deprive of. It has generally the particle of before the thing taken away.

   2. To brip of; to deprive of. It has generally the particle of before the thing taken away.

   3. To brip of; to deprive of. It has generally the particle of before the thing taken away.

   Bezem. n. f. A medicinal kind of tree imported from the East Indies, and vulgarly called benjamin. It is procured by making an incision in a tree, whose leaves resemble those of the lemon-tree. The best comes from Siam, and is called amagadoaliva, being interfiled with white spots, resembling broken almonds, such as you see in those oranges, &c.

   Bezoar-tree. See Benjamin tree.

   To Beper. v. a. [from paint.] To cover with paint.

   Thou knowest, the mark of night is on my face, else could not a lovely blush be my cheek. Shakespeare.

   To Bepinch. v. a. [from pinch.] To mark with pinches.

   In their faces, arms, shoulders, all by pinches.

   Ran thick the tears, red with blood, ready to fall down.

   Beprise. w. a. [from prise.] To wet with urine.

   One cauful, at a feast, a bagpipe to be played, which made the knight beale himself, to the great diversion of all then present, as well as conclusion of him.

   Bequeath. w. a. [spose, Sax. will.] To leave by will to another.

   She had never been disinherit of that goodly portion, which nature had liberally bequeathed to her.
I. To entreat; to supplicate; to implore; sometimes before a person.

I believe you, Sir, pardon me, it's only a letter from your brother, that I have not over-read. Shakespeare.

I believe thee for my son Osianus, whom I have begotten in my bonds. Addison.

I, in the anguish of my heart, beseech you to quit the dreadful purpose of your soul. Addison.

2. To beg; to ask; before a thing.

Befeech them, and delights his peace, and thus proceeds in her plaint. Milton.

Before I come to thee, I beseech your patience, whilst I speak something to yourselves here present. Speight.

3. To beseech, v. n. [besinnen, Dutch.] To become; to be fit; to be decent for.

What form of speech, or behaviour, believeth us in our prayers to Almighty God? Hooker.

This altogether

Beseech thee not, in whom such virtues spring. Fair fax.

Veron's ancient citizens

Cant by their brave beseeching arguments. Shakespeare.

Shall what thought he, had beseech me to say? Though some furnicie he went to full and pray. Dryden.

Beseech, part. [from beseech, Skinner.]

This word I have only found in Spencer.

Adapted; adjusted; becoming.

For the birth, this ancient lord and aged queen, Armed in antique robes down to the ground, And bad habits right well before. Fairy Q.

T. "v. n. pret. I beseech; I have beseeched. [Baper. Sax.]

1. To beseech; to hem in; to inclose; as with a siege.

Follow him that's fled.

The thickets is bye, he cannot bear. Shakespeare.

Now, Caesar, let thy troops beset our gates,

And each avenue, card-hall open to himself's passage. Addison.

I know thou look'lt on me as on a wretch

Rifer with lilies, and cover'd with misfortunes. Addison.

2. To waylay; to surround.

Draw forth thy weapons, we're beset with thieves;

Rescue thy mistress. Shakespeare.

Then do we with force, for daring foul is just. Milton.

True fortitude makes to be the quiet possession

Of a man's soul, and万事 whether they will lie, or dangers in his way. Locke.

3. To embarras; to perplex; to entangle without any means of escape.

Now, daughter Sylph, you are hard before. Shakespeare.

Surely or I read her village much and accord.

Of grief be'ts her hard.

Reve.

We be in this world before with sandy uneasiness, disdained with dishonored danger. Locke.

4. To fall upon; to harass. Not used.

But they himylling, both with greedy force

At once upon him ran, and him befit.

With thievish mortal, and in the arrant Queen.

To Beseech. [The original of this word is somewhat obscure; as it evidently implies to with ill, some derive it from bestray, Germ. to enchant. T. Office, in his Book of Animals, deduces it from the foreus mouse, an animal, says he, so poisonous, that its bite is a severe cure. A foreus likewise signifires a scolding woman; but its origin is not known.]

1. To with a curie to.

Nay, though the cock, but I bestray us both,

If I believe a faint upon his oath. Dryden's Fables.

2. To happen ill to.

Bestray then, cousin, which did't lead me forth.

Of that false way I was in despite. Shakespeare.

Now much bestray my manners, and my pride.

If Hermione meant to say Lyndare lied. Shakespeare.

Beside. [prep. [from be and side].]

1. At the side of another, near.

Befide those, from a fresh palatine grows,

Embalmed fence by this great funeral. Fairfax.

He caused me to fall down beside him. Bacon.

At his right hand, Victory

Sit eagle-wing'd above. Milton.

Fare Lavinia died the fire

Before the gods, and stood beside her. Dryden.

Fare is the kingcup that in meadow blows:

Fair is the dogflower. Spenser.

Now under hanging mountains,

Beside the falls of fountains,

Unheard, unknown, He makes the band. Pope.

2. Over and above.

Doublets, in man there is a nature found,

Befide the fables, and above them sat Sir J. Davies.

In brutes, beside the exercise of sensitive perception,

And imagination, there are lodged indulgence antecedent to their imaginative faculty. Locke.

We may be sure there were great numbers of wise and learned men, beside those whose names are in the Christian records, who took care to examine our Saviour's history. Addison on Scripture Religion.

Percepts of morality, beside the natural corruption of our tempers, are abstracted from ideas of fables. Addison.

3. Not, according to, though not contrary as we say, some things are beside nature, some are contrary to nature.

The Stockels did hold a necessary connexion of causers, but they believed, that God doth, set prescripts & counter-reverses, and against nature.

Bramhall.

To say a thing is a chance, as it relates to second causes, signifies no more, than that there are some events beside the knowledge, purpose, expectation, and power of second causes. Sancier.

Prowess often disposes of things by a method

Beside, and abates the discoveries of man's reason. Swift.

It is beside my present business to enlarge upon this speculation. Locke.

4. Out of; in a state of deviating from.

And, since your coming here, have done enough to put him quite beside his patience. Shak.

Of yegge-sounds we say,

That they are never beside their ways. Medicina.

These may be as landmarks, to shew what lies in the direct way of truth, or is quite beside it. Locke.

5. Before a reciprocal pronoun, out of any, beside himself; out of the order of rational beings; out of his wit.

They are called beside themselves, to whom the dignity of publick prayer doth not discover some what more richnes in man of gravity, than in child.

It is beside mine own business to enlarge upon this speculation. Locke.

Only be patient, till we have appeared

The multitude, beside themselves with fear. Shak.

The author's laid with a loud voice, Paul, and arts beside shadows, meaning death doth make thee mad. Add. BESIDE. [adv.]

1. More than that; over and above.

If Caffio do remain,

He hath a daily beauty in his life,

That makes me ugly; and, besides the Moor

May unfold me to him; there Read I in peril. Shakespeare.

Befides, you know not, while you here attend,

The unworthy fate of your unhappy friend. Dryden.

That man that doth not know those things, which are of necessity for him to know, is but an ignorant man, whatever be may know besides. Dryden.

Some wonder, that the Turk never attacks this treaty. But, besides that he has attempted it formerly, with no success, it is certain the Covenants keep too watchful an eye. Addison.

2. Not in this number; out of this class; not included here.

The men said unto Lot, Hold thou here any fere of fire, or some other benefits. Ovid.

Outlaws and robbers, who break with all the world besides, must keep faith among themselves. Locke.

All that we feel of it, begins and ends

In the small circle of our friends or friends; To all besides as much an empty shade.

An English living, as a Caesar dead. Pope.

And dead, as living, 'tis our author's pride.

Still to charm shrew who charm the world besides. Pope.

BESIDERY. n. f. A species of pear.

To Besidegrave. v. a. [from fierce.] To beleaguer; to lay siege to; to beset with armed forces; to endeavour, to win a town or fortress, by surrounding it with an army, and forcing the determinants, either by violence or famine, to give admission.

And he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thou and fenced walls come down. Deuteronomy.

The queen, with all the northern earls and lords, intends here to besiege you in your castles. Shakespeare.

Besiege, n. f. [from besiege.] One employed in a siege.

There is hardly a town taken, in the common forms, where the besieger have not the worse of the siege.

To Beslurber, v. a. [from slumber.]

To daw; to snear.

He perfusaded us to tickle our noses with fear-garps, and make them bleed; and then beslur ber our garments with it, and snear it was the blood of true men. Shakespeare.

To Besmear, v. a. [from smear.]

To bedaw; to smear.

He perfusaded us to tickle our noses with fear-garps, and make them bleed; and then besmear our garments with it, and snear it was the blood of true men. Shakespeare.

To Besmear, v. a. [from smear.]

To bedaw; to smear.

He perfusaded us to tickle our noses with fear-garps, and make them bleed; and then besmear our garments with it, and snear it was the blood of true men. Shakespeare.
To BESOM. v. a. [from snow.] To blacken with smoke or foot.

BESOM. n. f. [beem, beyma, Sax.] An instrument to sweep with.

Bacon commended an old man that told bosem: so a prime minister came to him for a bosem upon truth; the old man said, Burrow of thy back and belly, they shall never ask thee again; I shall dun thee every day.

Bacon then drew the bosem of destruction, faith the Lord of hosts.

To BESOM'T. v. a. [from snow.] To fuit; to become.

Such men as may beft your age, And know themselves and you.

Beso't. n. f. [from the verb.] Company; attendance; train.

I crave fit disposition for my wife, With such accommodation and beseom, As levels with her breeding.

To BESOM'T. v. a. [from snow.] To infalutate; to duff; to take away the bosem.

Swinish glutony Ne'er looks to heav'n amidst his gorgeous seat, But, with beseom base ingratitude, Ornaments and blasphemes his temples. Milton.

Or fools beseom'd with their crimes, That know not how to shift betimes. Holidreas.

He is beseom'd, and has lost his reason; and what the hell can there be for religion to take hold of him by?

Swift.

To BESOM'T. v. a. [from snow.] To bosem; to bundle.

While you are bosem'd, I'll board.

Swift.

To BESOM'T. v. a. [from snow.] To adown with spangles; to beseom with something shining.

Not Benemine's locks first roe so bright, The hear's beseom'd with diadem'd light. Pope.

To BESPATTER. v. a. [from spatter.] 1. To boil by throwing flih; to spot or sprinkle with dirt or water.

Those who will not pace into their bosem, Shall yet have it beseom their faces.

Government of the people.

His weapons are the fame which women and children use; a pin to fasten, and a spatter to be beseom.

Swift.

2. To asperse with reproach.

Fair Britain, in the monarch blest
Wherever action could beseom.

Swift.

To BESPILL. v. a. [from spout.] To beseom with flih.

To BESPOKE. v. a. or befoke; or beseom; to have beseom, or beseom'd. [from spek.] 1. To order, or entreat any thing be forehand, or against a future time.

If you will marry, make your loves to me; My lady is beseom'd, of beseom'd.
To be spent. [from betwixt.] SILTER. 2

Bet. The old preterite of be.

He said for a better hour, till the hammer had wrought, and the party more plant.

Bet. To BETH. v. a. beteck; part.

part. past. betaken. [from take.]

1. To take; to seize: an oblolete senfe.

2. To have recourse to: with the reciprocal prognoun.

The adv'ry party betaking itself to such practices as men embrace, when they behold things brought to desperate extremities.

Thou must not do so.

Do not repent these things; for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can flir and therefore betake thy.
To nothing but Despair.

Shakespeare.

The reft, in imitation, to like arms.

Betroth them, and the neighbouring hills up to

Bet. To BET. v. a. [from teen.] To bring forth; to below; to give.

So would I, said then, enchanter, glad and Betheun to thy sword, you do have.

But that this weapon's will have ken, to

Be contrary to that project that you.

Fairly, Rain, which I could well

Betroth them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Shak. To BETHINK. v. a. I bebought; I have betaken. [from think.] To recall to reflection; to bring back to consideration, or recollection. It is generally used with the reciprocal pronoun, and of before the subject of thought.

They were sooner in danger than they could almost betheun trempless of change.

Sidney.

I have behought to form another fruit.

Shak.

I, better behinking myself, and misliking his determination, gave him this order.

Raleigh.

He himself,

Infatulately of gloire, I lost all:

Yet of another pleas behought him soon.

Milton.

The acts were laid, yet the birds could never betheun themselves, till harpered, and past recovery.

Dryden.

Cheriphus, then in time yourself betake,

And what your rage will yield by auction fink.

Dryd. A little consideration may allay his heat, and make him better behinking; whether this attempt:

be worth the venture.

Locke.

BELTHEHEM, n. f. [See BEDLAM.]

An hospital for lunatics.

BELTHEMITE. n. f. [See BEDLAM-

ITE.] A lunatick; an inhabitant of a madhouse.

BETHought. particip. [from bethink.

Which senfe.

To Beth. v. a. [from thrall.] To enlarge; to conquer; to bring into subjection.

No let that wicked woman 'scape away.

For he is that did my lord betheun.

Shakespeare.

To BETHUFP. v. a. [from thump.] To beat; to lay blows upon: a ludicrous word.

A 2 I was
To BET. s. v. [from token.] To disturb; to agitate; to put into violent motion.

What had my man, when my troubled soul
Did not attend us as we rode? Shakespeare.

To BETRAY. s. a. [trahir, Fr.] To enfract; to put into the power of another, in confidence of fidelity.

Betrifh him with all the good which our own capacity will allow us, or his sufficiency encourage us, to hope for, either in this life, or that to come. Green.

Whatever you would betray to your memory, let it be disposed in a proper method. Wats.

Better, adj. The comparative of good. [bet, good, betten, better, Sax.] Having good qualities in a greater degree than something else. See Good.

He has a better hand than the Neapolitan's; a better had habit of crowning than the count Pata- lane. Shaksp. March of Venice.

I have been better faces in my days, than find on any shoulders that I see Before me at this instant. Shaksp.

Having a desire to depart, and be with Christ which is far better. Philippian.

The Better.

1. The superiority; the advantage: with the particle of before or of him, or that, over which the advantage is gained.

The Corinthians, that morning, as the days before, had the better. Sidney.

The voyage of Drake and Hawkins was un- fortunate; yet in such fort, as doth not break our prescription, to have had the better of the Spaniards. Baiard.

Omnibus, his countryman, in an epistle to Pomponius, after an entertainment, affords him the better of Thucydides. Brown's Pulpit. Errors.

You think fit To get the better of me, and you shall; Since you will have it foolishly will you. Southwark.

The gentleman had always so much the better of the sartrify, that the perfons touched did not know where to fix their resentment. Prior.

2. Improvement; as, for the better, so as to improve it.

If I have altered him any where for the better, I must at the same time acknowledge, that I have done nothing but for the worse. Dryden.

Better, adv. [comparative of well.]

Well, in a greater degree.

Then it was better with me than now. Hesia. Better a mechanic rule were stretched or bro- ken, than a great beauty were omitted. Dryden.

The better to understand the extent of our knowledge, one thing is to be observed. Locke.

He that would know the idea of infinity, cannot do better, than by considering what in infinitude is attributed. Locke.

To BETRIUM. s. a. [from stem.] To deck; to dres; to grace; to adorn; to embelliue; to beautifie; to decorate.

Thy banks with spoiled and twisted brims, Which sprung April at thy heft berinum, To make cold nymphs charms crown. Shaksp.

To BETROTH. s. a. [from truth; betrouthe, Dutch.] To contract any one, in order to marriage; to affiance: ufed either of men or women.

He, in the first flower of my freth age, Betrouthe me unto the holy
Of a most mighty king, most rich and fame. Spenser.

To her, my lord, Was I betrught, ere' I Hermia saw. Shaksp.

By foul's publick promiss the Was told the time, and where my betroth'd
To Victory, Cowley.

The church of England, the purest and best reformed church in the world; so well reformed, that it cannot be found easier to alter than better its constitution. South.

The Romans took pains to hew out a paffage for these laces to discharge themselves, for bet- tering of the air. Addison.

2. To

To BETON. m. f. [botanica, Lat.] A plant, greatly esteemed as a vulnerary herb. Miller.

Betony. m. f. [botanica, Lat.] A plant, greatly esteemed as a vulnerary herb. Miller.
2. To surpass; to exceed.

The works of nature do always aim at which cannot be bettered.

Homer.

That is the home. Himself beyond the possibility of his age: he hath, indeed, bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you.

Shakespeare.

What do you do

Still better: what is done; when you speak sweet,
I have it do ever.

Shakespeare.

3. To advance; to support.

The king thought his honour would suffer, due respect to the party.
— Bacon.

Better. n. f. [from the adjective. ] Su-premier, to one whom precedence is to be given.

Their better would be hardly found, if they did not live among men, but in a wilderness by them-

The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born.

Hirter.

That ye thus hospitably live,
Is mighty grateful to your better,
And makes men good themselves your debtors.

Prior.

I have some gold and silver by me, and shall be able to make a shift, when many of my better is flaming.

Swift.

Better. n. f. [from To bet. ] One that lays bets or wagers.

I observed a stranger among them of a gentler behaviour than ordinary: but, notwithstanding he was a very fair better, nobody would take him up.

Adjan.

Betty. n. f. [probably a cant word, signifying an instrument which does what is too often done by a maid within. ] An instrument to break open doors.

Record the stigmata, the revolting expulsions,
and the nofulward failures of lewd heroics,
deifying the powerful better, or the arful picklock.

Analyse.

Between. prep. [between, bezan, bezan,
Saxon; from the original word eps, eps. ]

1. In the intermediate space.

What makes

Of smell the headlong hoses between,
And hon'dd fascinating on the tainted green.
— Pope.

2. From one to another; noting intercourse.

He should think himself unhappy, if things should go betwixt them, as he should not be able to acquit himself of ingeniadness towards them both.

Bayle.

3. Belonging to two in partnership.

I ask, whether Carter and Pollus, with only one soul between them, which thinks and perceives in one what the other is never conscious of, are not two distinct persons?

Locke.

4. Bearing relation to two.

If there be any discord or splits between them and any of the family, they are compounded and applied.

Beau.

Friendship requires, that it be between two at least; and there can be no friendship where there are not two friends.

Swift.

5. Noting difference, or distinction of one from the other.

That the natural constitutions put to wide a difference between some men, that act never resemble.

Locke.

Children quickly distinguish between what is required of them, and what not.

6. Between is properly used of two, and among of more; but perhaps this accuracy is not always preserved.

Between. n. It has the same signification with betwixt, and is indifferently used for it.
BEY

Bewitchment, n. f. [from bewitch.] Fascination; power of charming. I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the deliver's. Shakespeare.

Bewray, v. w. [meghan, beapegan, Saxon.]
1. To betray; to discover perfidious.
2. To let out by feeling words; to betray.
And, for her handsome fitting purpose, fein.
To tempt the cause itself for to bewray, Fairy Q.

To show; to make visible; this word is now little in use.
The few in poetry is in Phidias's cheeks bewray a model discontent. Sidney.

Men do sometimes betray that by deeds, which to confed they are hardly drawn. Hooker.

This look on him that feems for counsel. Whose silver locks & bewray his score of days. Fairman.

BEWRA'YER, n. f. [from bewray.] Betrayer; discoverer; divulger.
When a friend is turned into an enemy, and a bewrayer of secrets, the world is just enough to see the perfidiousness of the friend. Addison.

Beyond, prep. [beyond, beyonder, Saxon.]
1. Before; at a distance not yet reached.
What's fame? A fancy'd life in others breath, A thing beyond us, ev'n before our death: Just what you hear, you have. Pope.

2. To the farthermost.
- Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us? Deut. xxx. 13.
Now we are on land, we are but between death and life; for we are beyond the old world and the new. Bacon.

We cannot think men beyond fea will part with their money for nothing; yet the sees.

Locke.

3. Farther onward than.
He that fees a dark and shady grove, Stays not, but looks beyond it on the sky. Herbert.

Pafl; out of the reach of.
Beyond the infinite and boundless reach Of mercy, if the thistled died of death, Art thou damn'd, Hubert. Shakespeare.

Yet here declare
Thy goodness beyond thought, and pow'n divine.
Milton.

The just, wife, and good God neither does nor can require of man any thing that is impossible, or naturally beyond his power to do. Bp. Tillotson.

Consider the situation of our earth; it is placed so conveniently, that plants flourish, and animals live; this is matter of fact, and beyond all dispute.

Stilly.

5. Above; proceeding to a greater degree than.
Timotbeus was a man both in power, riches, parentage, goodness, and love of his people, beyond any of the great men of my country. Sidney.

One thing, in this enormous accident, is, I must confess, to me beyond all wonder. Warton.

To his expenses, beyond his income, add des- baotheity, idleness, and quarrels amongst his fer vants, whereby his manufactures are disfigured, and his business neglected. Locke.

As far as they carry conviction to any man's understanding, my labour may be of use: beyond these is carried with it, I advice him not to follow any man's interpretation. Locke.

6. Above in excellence.
His father is incomparably beyond Juvener's, if to laugh and rally, is to be preferred to toil and suffering. Dryden.

7. Remote from; not within the sphere of.
With equal mind, what happens, let us hear; Nor joy, nor grief, too much for things beyond our care. Dryden's Fables.

8. To go beyond; to desire to; to circum- vention.
She made earnest benefit of his jest, forcing him to do her such services, as were both cumber some and costly; while he still thought he was beyond her, because his heart did not come to it at first. Sidney.

That no man go beyond, and defraud his brother in any matter. 1 Thess. iv. 6.

Bézel, n. f. That part of a ring in Bézel, which the flone is fixed.

BEZOAR, n. f. Also, Bezeard, and Bazar, L. Purr. A flone, formerly in high esteem as an antidote, and brought from the East Indies, where it is said to be found in the dung of a animal called panem; the stone being formed in its belly, and growing to the size of an acorn, and sometimes to that of a pigeon's egg. Its formation is now supposed to be fabulous. The name is applied to several chemical compositions, designed for antidotes; as mineral, silar, and jovial bezeards.

Savory. Chambers.

BEO'ARDICK, adj. [from beero.] Medicines compounded with beero.

The beeroardicks are necessary to promote sweat, and drive forth the putrid particles. Fothergill.

Bia'gulated, adj. [from binus and bia'gulosis. f angulus, L.]
Having two angles.

Bia's, n. f. [biats, Fr. fait to come from binty, an old Gaulish word, signifying crook or thwart.]

1. The weight lodged on one side of a bowl, which turns it from the straight line.
Malam, we'll play at bowls.
- Twill make me think the world is full of rubs, And that my fortune runs against the bias, Shak.

2. Any thing which turns a man to a particular course, or gives the direction to his measures.
You have been mihtook! But nature to her bias drew in that, Shakespeare.
This is the bias of thy mind. By which one way to dulness 'tis inclin'd, Dryden.
Morality influences men's lives, and gives a bias to all their actions. Locke.

With a humour, that expose vice and folly, furnish useful discoveries. Rissery, under such regulations, unbends the mind from fewer contemplations, without throwing it off from its proper conformation in its Freckled.

Thus nature gives us, let it check our pride, The virtue nearest to our vice ally'd; Reason the bias turns to good or ill. Pope.

3. Propension; inclination.
As for the religion of our poet, he seems to have some little bias toward the opinions of Wicklif, Dryden.

To Bi'as, v. a. [from the noun.] To incline to; to balance; one way to prejudice.
Were I in no more danger to be misled by ignorance, than I am to be biased by interest, I might give a very perfect account. Locke.
A define leaning to either side, frigate the judgment strangely; by indifferency for every thing but truth, you will be excused to examine. Watt.

Bias, adv. It seems to be used adverbially in the following passage, conformably to the French manner une chope de bias, to give any thing a wrong interpretation.
Every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thawt, not answering the aim. Shakespeare's Trilbus and Crisillas.

BIA

In the following passage it seems to be an adjective. Swelled, as the bowl on the binified side. This is not used. Blow till thy bias cheek Bisou.

OUTWELL the chollic of put Aquillon.

Bia's, adj. and n. [bibi, Lat.]
Adjectives.
Bia'city, n. f. [bicitates, Lat.] The quality of drinking much.
Bia'ber, n. f. [from To bia.] A tippler; a man that drinks often.
Bia'ble, n. f. [from bibus, a book; called, by way of excellence, The Book.] The sacred volume in which are contained the revelations of God.

If we pass from the apostolick to the next ages of the church, the primitive christians looked on their bibles as their most important treasure.

Government of the Tongue.

We must take heed how we accustome ourselves to a flight and irreverent use of the name of God, and of the phrases and expressions of the holy bibbe, which ought not to be applied upon every slight occasion. Tillotson.

To the quotions of natural religion, we should conform and improve, or connect our reasonings by the divine assistance of the soul.

Watts.

BIBLIOGRAPHIER, n. f. [from biblia, and grapho, to write.] A man skilled in literary history, and in the knowledge of books; a transcriber.

BiblO'THICAL, adj. [from bibliotheca, Lat.] Belonging to a library.

Bri'BULOUS, adj. [bibulus, Lat.] That which has the quality of drinking moisture; spungy.

Straw'd bibulus above, I see the sands,
The pebbly gravel next, and gutter'd rocks. Thomson.

Bica'sular, adj. [bicephalæus, Lat.] Having the head veikey divided into two parts.

Bice, n. f. The name of a colour used in painting. It is either green or blue.

- Take green bire, and order it as you do your blue bire; you may drink it with the water of deep green. Parthenon.

Bici'pital, adj. [biceps, bicippis, Bic'pitorous, n. f. [biceps, bicippis, Bic'pitorous, Lat.]
1. Having two heads.

While men believe bipicous conformation in any species, they admit a domination of principal parts.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. It is applied to one of the muscles of the arm.
A piece of bone is detached from the bicipital muscle of either party's arm. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

5. Bicker, v. w. [bier, Welsh, a contest.]
1. To skirmish; to fight without a net battle; to fight off and on.
They fell to such a bickering, that he got a halting, and lost his picture. Sidney.
In thy face
I see thy face; if thou be mad,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings. Shakespeare.

1. To quiver; to play backward and forward.
And from about him fierce effusion round
Of smoke, and bickering flames, and sparkles dire.
Milton.

Bick'er, n. f. [from the verb.] A skirmisher.

Bick'ern, n. f. [apparently corrupted from bexkerion.] An iron ending in a point.

Backsmith's anvil is sometimes made with a spike, or bickern, or becker, at one end. Mason.

Bic'orne, adj. [bicorini, Lat.] Having two horns.

We should be too critical, to question the letter Y, or bicornus element of Pythagoras; that is, the making of horns or feathers, as in Dr. Burn's 'Pilgr. Erri.'

Bic'or'nal, adj. [bicorne, Lat.] Having two bodies.

To Bic, n. w. a. pret. I bid, bad, bade, I have bid, or bidden. [baban, Saxon.]

1. To deprecate; to ask; to call; to invite.
I am bid forth to garner, Jellicoe.

Two men, boys, Mornent of Venier.
Go ye into the highways, and, as many as you shall find, bid to the marriage. Matt. xxii. 9.
We ought, when we are bidden to great feasts and meetings, to be prepared beforehand, Huetwitz.

2. To command; to order: before things or persons.
Saint Withold footed thistle the world,
He met the nightmare, and her nine fold,
Bid her alight, and her teeth plith. Shakespeare.

He bid the others, when first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him. Shakespeare.

Haste to the house of sleep, and bid the god,
Who rules the nightly visions with a nod.
Prepare a dream. Dryden's Fable.

Cerse on the tongue that bids this general joy,
Among the stars of Gomorrah, he revels. When Antony's in danger? Dryden All for Love.

Thames heard the numbers, as he flo'd along,
And bade his willows learn the moving song. Pope.

Proclaim a government over your ideas, that they may come when they are called, and depart when they are bidden. Watts.

3. To offer; to propose; as, to bid a price.
Come, and be true.

—Then bade me to my kids; for time to thee.
Were to prove false. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

When a man is refolute to keep his fins while he lives, and yet unwilling to relinquish all hope, he will embrace that proposition which bids least to the reconciling those so distant interests.

Delay of Pay.

At the goddesses come down of old,
With gifts their kind, Dardanian judge they try'd,
And each bade hie to him to find his fate.

Granville.

To give interest a share in friendship, is to feel it by inch of candle; he that bids most shall have it; and when it is mercenary, there is no depending on it.

Collin on Friendship.

4. To proclaim; to offer; or to make known by some public voice.
One sent three for our wedding day.
My kinsman bought I then prest there, then fore'd away.

5. To pronounce; to declare.
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting; pray you bid
Their unknown friends to 's well.'
Shakespeare.

Divers, as we passed by them, put their arms
A little abroad; which is their gesture, when they bid any word.
How, Didius, shall I a Roman, free repaid,
Greet your arrival to this distant isle?
How bid you welcome to these distant reigns? A. Phillips.

6. To denote.
Thyself and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle. Shakespeare's Henry VI.
She bid him to all that do participate
The place of thole; her cruelty made it. Walkes.
The captive cannibals, opprest with chains,
Yet braces his feet, reviews, provokes, disfains;
Of nature fierce, untameable, and proud.
He bids defiance to the gaping crowd,
And, spent at last and speechless as he lies,
With fiery glances, mocks their rage, and dies.
Granville.

7. To pray. See Bade.
If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed. Jude.

Bid'der, n. f. [from bid and ale.] An invitation of friends to drink at a poor man's house, and there to contribute charity.

Bidden, part. pass. [from To bid.]

1. Invited.
There were two of our company bidden to a feast of the family. Bacon.

2. Commanded.
'Tis thief that easily taint the female soul,
Infrauct the eyes of young coquettes to roll,
Teach infants cheeks a bidden blush to know,
And little hearts to flutter at a clown. Pope's Rape of the Lock.

Bid'der, n. f. [from To bid.] One who offers or proposes a price.
He looked upon several drappes which hung there, expos'd to the purchase of the bidden bidder. Addison.

Bidding, n. s. [from bid.] Command; order.

How, say'st thou that Maccabus denies his peril
At our great bidding? Shakespeare's Maccab. At his second bidding, darkness fled;
Light shone, and order from disorder sprung. Milton.

To Bide. n. a. [biban, Saxon.]

To endure; to suffer; commonly to abide.
Poor naked wretches, whereby're you are,
That bid the pelting of this pitiful storm. Shak.
The wary Dutch this gathering foresaw,
And durst not bide it on the English coast. Dryden.

To Bide. n. n.
1. To dwell; to live; to inhabit.
All kneels to that biddor bow, of that bide
In heavn in earth, or under earth in hell. Milton.

2. To remain in a place.
Safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gramels on his head,
The leaf a death to nature. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

3. To continue in a state.
And they also, if they bide not ill in anhelion,
Shall be graff'd in.

Romant. xl. 1.

4. It has probably all the significations of the word abide; which see; but it being grown somewhat obsolete, the examples of its various meanings are not easily found.

Bide'ntal. adj. [biditar, Lat.] Having two teeth.

Ill management of forks is not to be helped when they are not bidinal.

Biding. n. f. [from bid.] Residence; habitation.

At Antipay has his constant bidding been. Rowe.

Bi'dinal. adj. [bimnis, Lat.] Of the continuation of two years.

Then why should one be very long lived, others
Only a few years, or a very few? Liv. in Ceintern.

Bier. n. f. [from To bear, as servorum, in Latin, from sera.] A carriage, or frame of wood, on which the dead are carried to the grave.

And now the prey of fowls he lies,
Nor wall'd of friends, nor laid on gowing bier.
Shakespeare.

They bore him barefaced on the bier,
And on his grave rained many a tear. Shakespeare.

He mak not float upon his wat'ry bier.

Milton.

Griefs always green, a household still in tears;
Sad poms, a threepold throng'd with daily biers,
And livers of black.
Dryden's Japan.

Bip'ar'ious. adj. [biparius, Lat.] Two-fold; what may be understood two ways.

Did.

Bip'era'ous. adj. [bifereus, Lat.] Bearing fruit twice a year.

Bip.'io. adj. [bifidus, Lat. a bota-

Bip'idated. s. n. (nical term,) Divided in to two; split in two; opening with a cleft.

Bip'o'd., adj. [from binus, Lat. and fold.]

Twofold; double.

If beauty have a soul, this is not the
If soal guide vows, if vows are sanctimony.

If sanctimony be the god delight,
If the gods be if, and not if, this is not the.
Of one of difcorfit;
That cause sets up with and against thyself!

Bipolar authority. Shakes. Troilus and Cressida.

Bif'orm'd. adj. [biformitis, Lat.] Composed of two forms, or bodies.

Bip'oc'ated. adj. [from binus, two, and fulcrum, a fork. Latin, to put out, by a division, into two heads.

A small white piece, bifocated, or branching into two, and finely reticulated all over. Woodward.

Bip'urca'tion. n. f. [from binus and force, Lat.] Division into two; opening into two parts.

The first caesaretical and far derived similitude, it holds without must have, in a bifurcation, or division of the root into two parts.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

BIG. adj. [This word is of uncertain or unknown etymology. Taninus derives it from Biauea; Skinner from eingh, which, in Dainis, signifies the belly.]

1. Having comparative bulk, greater or less.

A troubled ocean, to a man who falls in its, is, I think, the biggest object that he can see in motion.
Speckter.

2. Great in bulk; large.

Both in addition and diminuunt, either of space or duration, when the idea under consideration becomes very big, or very small, its precise bulk becomes obscure and confused.

Lutte.

3. Temming s.
3. Tecting; pregnant; great with young; with the particle with.
A bear big with young hath seldom been seen.
Baron.

4. Sometimes with of; but rarely.
His gentle lady.
Big of this gentleman, our Citizen, deceased,
As he was born.
Shakespeare; Gymbrelles.

5. Full of something; and desirous, or about, to give it vent.

The greek, th' important day.
Big with the strength of Rome, Adonis.
Now big with knowledge of approaching woe,
The prince of augurs, Halifirens, rol'd.
Pope.

6. Diverted; frown; ready to burst.
Ut used often of the effects of passion, as grief, rage.
Thy heart is big; get thee apart, and weep.
Shakespeare; Julias Caesar.

7. Great in air and mien; proud; swelling; timid; haughty; furious.
How else, said he, but with a good bold face,
And with big words, and with a stately pace.
Spenier.

To the nearer man, or unknown in the court,
Seem somewhat sullen, coy, big, and dangerous of looks, talk, and action.
If I had looked big, and spelt at him, he'd have run.
Shakespeare; Winter's Tale.

In his prosperous season, he fell under the reach of being a man of big looks, and of a mean and abject spirit.
Garrick.

Or does the man th' moon look big,
Or wear a huger periwig?

Than our own native luxuriously.
Of governments that once made such a noise,
And looked to big in the eyes of mankind as being founded upon the deeps of counsels; and the strongest forces, nothing but a strong name.
South.

Thou thouart, th' flats that thou art in place.
Art but perhaps some country magistrate.
Whole power extends no farther than to peep
Big on the bench, and ranty weights to break.
Dryden.

To grant big Thruso valour, Phoinis fenee,
Should indignation give, at least offence.
Garrick.

3. Great in spirit; lofty; brave.
Wae have not love.

An arm as big as thine, a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger:
For I wear not
My dagger in my mouth.
Shakespeare; Gymbrelles.

Gymn, n. s. [gymnus; low Lat.]
One that has committed bigamy.
See Bigamy.

By the gale canbo, a clergyman, that has a wife, cannot have an ecclesiastical benefit; much less sort a bigamy; have such a benefit according to that law.
Steele.

Bigamy, n. s. [gymnus; low Latin.]
1. The crime of having two wives at once.
A great many of our times.
Sedec'I the pitch and height of all his thoughts
To base declension, and loath'd bigamy.
Shakspe.

Randal determined, to commence a foil against Marlowe, for bigamy and incest. Arbuthnot and Pope.

2. [In the canon law.]
The marriage of a second wife, or of a widow, or a woman already debauched, which, in the church of Rome, were considered as bringing a man under some incapacities for ecclesiastical offices.

Bigelled. adj. [from big and Kelly.]
Pregnant; with child; great with young.
When we have laugh'd to see the falls conceived
And grow bigelled with the winter wind.
Shaks.

Oh, how bigelled women seem, so plumply!
Somewhat more grateful to the palate.
Warde.

So many well-shaped innocent virgins are block'd up, and waddle up and down like bigelled women. Adonis.

We pursued our match, to the terror of the market people, and the miscarriage of half a dozen bigelled women.
Adonis.

Biggin, n. s. [beggin, Fr.] A child's cap.
Yet not too round, and half so deeply sweet,
As he, whose brow with homely biggin bound,
Snore out the watch of night.
Shakspe.

Bigot, n. s. Is it explained by Skinner, the circumference of a coil of rope.
Bigot, adj. [from Bigot; Timidly; haughtily; with a blustering manner.
Would'nt thou rather choose a small remnant,
To be the man's of some poor paltry town;
Bigly to look, and barnably to speak;
To pound tale weights, and feamy measures break?
Dryden.

Bigness, n. s. [from big.]
1. Bulk; greatness of quantity.
If panick be laid below, and about the bottom of a root, it will cause the root to grow to an exceding big.

Biscuits.

People were perplex'd at the bigs and uncorrect deformity of the camel.
L'Efigroet's Fables.

The brain of man in respect of his body, it much larger than any other animal; exceeding in bigs three oxen's brains.
Roy on the Creation.

2. Size; whether greater or smaller; comparative bulk.

Several sorts of rays make Vibrations of several bigs, which, according to their bigs, excite sensations of several colours, and the air, according to their bigs, excite sensations of several sounds.
Newton's Opticks.

BIGOTED, adj. [from bigot.]
Blindly predisposed in favour of something; irrationally zealous; with to.

Bipartis, to this idea, we difmiss.

'Ref, healthy, and easy for nothing but a name.
Garrick.

Prebyterian merit, during the reign of that line,
Bipartis, and ill-advised princes, will easily be computed.
Swift.

Bigotry, n. s. [from bigot.]
1. Blind zeal; prejudice; unreasonable warmth in favour of party or opinions with the particle re.

Were it not for a bigotry of our own tenets, we could hardly imagine how many khan, wicked, and bloody principles, should pretend to support themselves by the gospel.
Watts.

2. The practice or tenet of a bigot.
Our silence makes our adversaries think we are Set in those bigots, which, till good and sensible Men despise.
Pope.

Bisewing, adj. [from big and sewing.]
Turgid, ready to burst.

Nothing but my bigos heart
Vent all its griefs, and give a voice to sorrow.
Adonis.

Big-uddered, adj. [from big and udder.]
Having large udders; having udders filled with milk.

Big-bellied, adj. [from big and belly.]

Now, drive him before them through the arching rock.
Came tumbling heaps on heaps 'th' unnumber'd dead.
Big-bellied o'ers, and goats of female kind.
Pope.

Bilander, n. s. [bilander, Fr.] A small vesell of about eighty tons burden, used for the carriage of goods. It is a kind of hoy, manageable by four or five men, and has masts and sails after the manner of a hoy. They are used chiefly in Holland, as being particularly fit for the canals.

Like bilander, they come.
Along the coasts, and land in view to keep.
Dryd.

Bilberry, n. s. [from bilix, Sax. a bladder, and berry, according to Skinner; wit's idea.]
A small-furb; and a sweet berry of that shrub; wortleberry.

Cricket, to Windsor's chimney that thou lea
These pinch the malls as blue and bilberry.
Pope.

Bilbo. n. s. [corrupted from Bilbos, where the best weapons are made.]
A rapier; a sword.

To be compar'd like a good bilbo, in the circumstance of a peck, hill to point, best to head.
Shakspe.

Bilboes. n. s. A fort of flocks, or wooden shackles for the feet, used for punishing offenders at sea.
Methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilbous.
Shakspe.

Bile. n. s. [bilis, Lat.]
A thick, yellow, bitter liquor, separated in the liver, collected in the gall-bladder, and discharged into the lower end of the duodenum, or beginning of the jejunum, by the common duct. Its use is to the body.

Blunt the acids of the chyle, because they being entangled with its pulps, thicken it, so that it cannot be sufficiently diluted by the succus pancreaticus, to enter the lacteal vesicles.
Quincey.

In its progress, from the labour'd chyle.
Receives the confluent rills of bitter bile;
Which, by the liver fever'd from the blood,
And driven through the gall-pipe, hier unfold
Their yellow stream.
Blackmore.

Bile, n. s. [bile, Sax. perhaps from bilis, Lat. This is generally spelt bile; but, I think, lefs properly.]
A sore ague.

Swelling.

Or rather, a disease that's in my head.
Thou art a bile in my corrupted body.
Shakspe.

Thou bilis old run-away; did not the general run with that beshy dog? Shakespeare.

A furuncule is a painful tubercle, with a broad basis, arising in a cone. It is generally called a bolin, and is accompanied with inflammation, pulsation, and tension.
Winnem.

Bilge, n. s. The compass or breadth of a ship's bottom.
Skinner.

To Bilge, v. t. [from the noun.]
To spring a leak, to let in water, by striking upon a rock; a sea term; now obsolete.
Skinner.

Bilbarry, adj. [from bilis, Lat.]
Belonging to the bile.

Veracious animals, and such as do not chew,
Have a great quantity of gall; and some of them have the bile they injure infected with the arrow.
Archb.}

Bilingsgate.
4th. "Theke, let them, but under your superiors, kill. When doctors first have signed the bloody bill.
Dryden.

5. An advertisement.
And in Dr. King, their empty pit to fill,
Set up some foreign monster in a bill.
Dryden.

6. In law]
1. An obligation, but without condition or forfeiture for non-payment. 2. A declaration in writing, either the gift and the wrong that the complainant hath suffered by the party complain of; or else some fault that the party complain of hath committed against some law. This bill is sometimes offered to justify the errors in the general affairs; but most to the lord chancellor. It contains both the complaint of the damma, the damages thereby suffered, and the pretense of process against the defendant for redress.

Cowell.

7. A bill of mortality. An account of the numbers that have died in any district. Most who took in the weekly bills of mortality, made little other use of them, than to look at the foot, how the burialists exceeded or decreased.
Grantham.

8. So lived our fires, ere doctors learn'd to kill,
And multiply'd with them the weekly bill. Dryden.

9. A bill of fare. An account of the feast of provisions, or of the dishes as set by. It may seem somewhat difficult to make out the bills of fare for some of the forementioned suppers.

Arbuthnot.

10. A bill of exchange. A note ordering the payment of a sum of money in one place, to some person assigned by the drawer or remitter, in consideration of the value paid to him in another place. The comfortable sentences are bills of exchange, upon the credit of which we lay our cares down, and receive our comforts. They bear, all that a bill of exchange can do, is to direct to whom money due, or taken upon credit, in a foreign country, shall be paid.

Locke.

To BILLS, n. a. [from bill, a beak.] To care, as doves by joining bills; to be fond. Doves, they say, will bill, after their pecking, and their murmuring. Bensamor, and fond, and billing.

Like Philip and Mary on a billing. Hudibras.

They bill from Grumpan's pond.

Seven days fits brooding on her floating nest. Dryden.

He that bears the artillery of love,
The strong bound'd eagle, at the billings dove.

Dryden.

To BILLS, n. a. [from bill, a writing.] To publish by an advertisement: a cant word.

His masterpiece was a composition that he billed about under the name of a sovereign antidote.

L'Estrange.

BILLET. n. f. [bill, French.] 1. A small paper; a note.
When he found this little billet, in which was only written, Remember Caesar, he was exceedingly confounded.

Claudens.

2. A ticket directing soldiers at what house to lodge.

Billet-doux, or a love letter.

Twas then, Belinda! if report take true.
They eyes alone follow on a billet-doux.

Pope.

[Bill, Fr.] A small log of wood for the chimney.

Let them then calculate, when the bulk of a fog or bill is diluted and rarified to the degree of fire, how vast a place it must take up. Digby on Bill.

Their bill at the fire was found. Prior.

To BILLS, a. pret. I bound; particip. billed, bounted. [b昆虫, Sax.]
1. To confine with bonds; to enchain.

Wilt thou play with him as a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy pleasure?

Job.

2. To
Birding-piece, n. f. [from bird and piece.] A fowling-piece; a gun to shoot birds with.

I'll creep up to the chimney. — There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces; creep into the hill hole.

Birdlime, n. f. [from bird and lime.] A glutinous substance, which is spread upon twigs, by which the birds that light upon them are entangled.

Birdlime is made of the bark of holly; they pound it into a tough paste, that no flies of the wood be left; then it is washed in a running stream, so that moths appear, and put them to ferment, andisson, and then laid up for use; at which time they incorporate with it a third part of nut oil, over the fire. But the bark of our lantans, or wayfarer shrub, will make very good birdlime.

Clerk.

Holly is so very viscous a juice, as they make birdlime of the bark of it. Bacon's Natural History.

With flowers of gathered glue conserve.

To stop the vents and crannies of their holes;

Not birdlime, or leaden pitch, produce

A more tenacious mass of clammy juice. Dryden.

I'm ever an observer.

Heaven's birdlime wraps me round, and gloses my wings.

Dryden.

The bees, peckes, and other birds of this kind,

Because the prey upon which they catch with their tongue, have a couple of bags filled with a viscous humour, as if it were a natural birdlime, liquid glass.

Greene.

Birdman, n. f. [from bird and man.] A birdcatcher; a fowler.

As a fowler was biding his net, a blackbird asked him what he was doing there; why he, I am laying the foundations of a city; and so the birdman drew out of fight. "L'Estrange.

Birdseye, n. f. [adonis, Lat.] The name of a plant.

Bird'sfoot, n. f. [cornithopodium, Lat.] The name of a plant.

Birdstares, n. f. [aracus.] A plant.

Birdscander, n. f. [chelenalapex.] A fowl of the goode kind. Diaz.

Bird, n. f. A fift, the same with the turd, from which fets, which fences, are named.

Rich. [besop, Sax.]

In Spain, our springs like old men's children be, Decay'd and wither'd from their infancy; No kindly showers fall on our barren earth, To hatch the seed or in a timely birth. Dryden.

2. Extraction; lineage. Mod. manusign, man of heavenly birth. Spang. All truth I shall relate: nor first can I myself to be of Crecian birth deny. Donham.

3. Rank which is inherited by descent. In both objects, I am too great of birth. Shak. Be just in all the acts of love; whatever be your birth, you're sure to be a peer of the first magnitude to me. Dryden.

4. The condition or circumstances in which any man is born. High in his character then Halesius came, A foe by birth to Triton's unhappy name. Dryden.

5. Thing born; production; used of vegetables, as well as animals. The people fear me: for they do observe Unshak'd heir's, and loathly births of nature. Shakespeare.

6. That poete are far rarer births than kings;

Your noblest father's heir. — Be Jofan.

Who of themselves

Abhor to join; and, by imprudence mix'd,

Produce prodigious births of body or mind. Mil. Thee, for the birds of heaven, and earth,

Seems to have prael'd with much care

To frame the race of woman fair;

Yet never could a perfect birth

Produce before the end of the earth. Waller.

His eldest bird

Flies, mark'd by heaven, a fugitive over earth. Prior.

The valiant, and with their flow'ry face,

And wealthy births, confede the flood's eminence. Blackmore.

Others hatch their eggs, and tend the birth's till it is able to shift for itself. Addison.

5. The act of bringing forth. That fair Syrian shepherd,

Who, after years of barrenness,

The highly favour'd Joseph bore

To him that ferv'd for her before;

And at her next birth, much like thee,

Through pangs fled to felicity. Milton.

6. The feamen call a due or proper distance between ships lying at an anchor, or under sail, a birth. Also the proper place on board for the men to put their chests, &c. called the birth of the ship. Also a convenient place to moor a ship in, is called a birth. Harris.

Birthday, n. f. [from birth and day.] 1. The day on which any one is born. Orient light,

Exalting first from darknefs, they beheld

Birth-day born, whom nature crowns.

Christmas. — Milton.

2. The day of the year in which any one was born, annually observed. This is my birthday! as this very day was Caflinus born. Shakespeare.

They tell me 'Tis my birthday, and I'll keep it

With double pomp of kindred. — Tis what the day doth deferve, which gave me birth. Dryden.

Your country dames,

Wholes clothos returning birthday claims. — Prior.

Birth-day, n. f. [This is erroneously, I think, printed in Shakespeare, birthday. It is derived from birth and dom (see Dom) as kingdom, dukedom.] Prerogative of birth.

Let us rather

Hold fast the moral sword; and, like good men,

Beltride our downland birthday. Shakespeare.

Birthnight, n. f. [from birth and night.] 1. The night on which any one is born. 'Tis angelick song in Bethlem field, On thy birthnight, that sung the Saviour born. Paradise Regained. 2. The night annually kept in memory of any one's birth. A youth more delighting than a birthnight beauteous. Dryden.

Birth-place, n. f. [from birth and place.] Place where any one is born. My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon

This enemy's town. Shakespeare.

A degree of Splendour beyond what we have been charg'd with, upon the score of our birthplace and climate. Swift.

Birthright, n. f. [from birth and right.] The rights and privileges to which a man is born; the right of the first-born.

Thy blood and virtue

Content for empire in thee, and thy goodness Shares with thy birthright. Shakespeare.

Thou hast been found.

By merit, more than birthright, son of God. Mil.
which the jurisdiction of a bishop extends.

It will be fit, that, by the king's supreme power in cases ecclesiastical, they be subjugated under some bishop, and by bishop's, or his real living. Bacon's to Vilem. A virtuous woman should reject marriage, as a good man does a bribe; but it would advise another to prefer in ridicule. Addit's Speculum. Thores profess had episcopal ordination, performed prefaces in the church, and were sometimes promoted to bishopric themselves.

Swift's Sentiments of a Churchman England Man.

BISHOPSWEED. n. f. [ammi, Lat.] The name of a plant.

BISK. n. f. [bigue, Fr.] Soup; broth made by boiling several sorts of flesh.

A prince, who in a forest rides a stry, And, weary, to some cottage finds the way, Talks of a pyramid, or floors, or bits at fish, But hungry sups his cream from up in earthen dish. King.

BISKET. See Biscuit.

BISMUTH. n. f. The fame as mercurius; a hard, white, brittle, mineral substance, of a metallic nature, found at Mifnia; supposed to be a recombinant thrown off in the formation of tin. Some esteem it a metal malleous; though it usually contains some silver. There is an artificial bismuth made, for the shops, of tin. Quincy.

BISSEXTILE. n. f. [from bis and sextile, Lat.] Leap year; the year in which the day, arising from fïx odd hours in each year, is intercalated. The year of the fun consisteth of three hundred and sixty-five days and six hours, wanting eleven minutes; which for hours omitted, will, in time, deprave the compute; and this was the occasion of bissextile, or leap year. Brown.

Towards the latter end of February is the bissextile or intercalary day; called bissextile, because the sixth of the calends of March is twice repeated. Holder on Time.

BISON. adj. [derived by Skinner from by and for.] Blind.

But who, oh! who hath feen the mobbed queen Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames With bison rhum? Shakespeare's Hamlet. What harm can your bison comparatibus glean out of this character? Addit's Speculum. BISTRE. n. f. [French.] A colour made of chimney foot boiled, and then dyed with water; used by painters in washing their design. Trevox.

BISTORT. n. f. [biforta, Lat.] The name of a plant, called also sawtoothed; which bee.

BISTORTY. n. f. [biforti, Fr.] Aurgeon's instrument, used in making incisions, of which there are three forks; the blade of the first turns like that of a lance; but the straight bistorty has the blade fixed in the handle; the crooked bistorty is shaped like a half moon, having the edge on the inside. Jackson.

BISULCIOUS. adj. [bisculus, Lat.] Clover-footed.

For the swine, although multiporous, yet being biforms, and only cloverfooted, are carrioned with open eyes, as other bistorty animals. Brown's Faqio Ferrara.

BIT. n. f. [broil, Saxon.] Signifies the whole machine of all the iron apparatuses of a bridge, as the bit-mouth, the branchies, the curb, the fevil holes, the tranches, and the crofs chains; but sometimes it is used to signify only the bit-mouth in particular Farrier's Difli.

Thy light from their horses, pulling off their bits, that they might something refresh their mutton upon the ground.

We have white râles, and most biting faws.

The needful bits and curbs of headstrong steeds. Shakespeare.

He hath the bit between his teeth, and away he goes. Stillingfleet.

Unius's to the restraint
Of curved bits, and beeter than the winds. Addit.

BITE. n. f. [from bite.]

1. As much meat as is put into the mouth at once.

How many prodigal bits have thieves and provincials This night engulphed! Shakespeare.

Follow your function, go and baton on cold bits. Shakespeare.

The mice found it troublesome to be still clinging the oak for every bit they put in their bellies. Espagor.

John was the darling; he had all the good bits, was crammed with good politte, chicken, and can.

2. A piece of any thing.

By this time the hoss had prepared, And to the table feast the smoking lad; A favy bit, that serv'd to relish wine. Dryden.

Then clap four flicles of pilfer on't; That laid with bits of ruffick, makes a front. Pope.

He bought at thousands, what with better wit You purchase as you want, and bit by bit. Pope; His majesty now intends to grant a patent, for flamping round bits of copper, to every subject he hath. Swift.

3. A Spanioh West Indian silver coin, valued at levencepanell halfpenny.

4. A bit the better or worse. In the smallest degree.

There are few who know all the tricks of these lawyers; for aught I can see, your cafe is not a bit clearer than it was seven years ago. Archby.

To BITE. v. a. [from the noun.] To put the bridle upon a horse.

BITICH. n. f. [bryce, Saxon.]

1. The female of the canine kind; as the wolf, the dog, the fox, the otter.

And at his feet a bick wolf fack did yield To two young vabes. Spenser.

I have been credibly informed, that a bitch will sure, play with a child of young trees, as much as, and in place of, her puppies. Locke. bits.

2. A name of reproach for a woman.

Him you'll call a dog, and her a bitch. Pope.

John had not run a maddning long, had it not been for an extravagant bitch of a wife. Arbuthnot.

To BITE. v. a. pret. 1 bit; part. pass. I have bit, or bitten. [bryan, Saxon.]

1. To cruch, or pierce with the teeth.

Though he had bit me, should have flood that night Against my fire. Shakespeare.

Such filings rogues as these, Like rats, off the bick the holy cords in twain; Too intricate t' unloose. Shakespeare.

These are the youths that thunder at the playhouses, and fight for bitten apples. Shakespeare.

He falls; his arms upon the body found, And with his bloody teeth he bites the ground. Dryden.

There was lately a young gentleman bit to the bone, who his bick the holy cords in twain

Their foul months have not opened their lips without a fally; though they have showed their teeth as if they would bite off my nose. Arbuthnot and Pigo's Mutt, Scrib.

To give pain by cold.

There feel we the icy phlegm, And churlish chiding, of the winter's wind; Which when it bites and blows upon my body, Even if a brick with cold, I smile. Shakespeare.

Full fifty years, harried in rugged feet. I have endured the biting winter's blast, And the severer heats of parching summer. Shakespeare.

3. To hurt or pain with reproach.

Each poet with a different taste writes. One pristles, one infirricts, another bites. Boyclock.

4. To cut; to wound.

To cut the wood, by day with his good biting scythe; I would have made them feel. Shakespeare.

To make the mouth smart with an acrid taffe.

It may be the first water will have more of the former, as more fine and the second more of the taste, as more bitter, or biting. Bacon.

5. To cheat; to trick; to defraud: a low phrage.

Asleep and waked as an Indian lay. As honest factor lie a gem away; He spread it to the highest, might he was, So kept the diamond, and the rogue was bit. Pope.

If you had allowed half the fine gentlemen to have converted you, they would have been firmer into that, while they thought only to live in a far better way. Pope.

BIT. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. The seizing of any thing by the teeth.

Does he think he can endure the everlasting burlner, or arm himself against the biss of the never-dying worm? Swift.

Nor dogdays parching heat, that spits the rocks, Is half so harassing, as the greedy flocks; Their venomous bites, As Dryden's Virg's Georgics.

2. The act of a fitch that takes the bait.

I have known a very good fisher angle diligently four or fix hours for a river cap, and not have a bite. Walton.

3. A cheat; a trick; a fraud; in low and vulgar language.

Let a man be for wife, He may be caught with fober lies; For, to take it in his proper light, 'Tis just what coxcombs call a bit. Swift.

4. A sharper; one who commits frauds.

BITER. n. f. [from bite.]

1. He that bites.

Great bakers are no biters. Cudbun.

2. A fish apt to take the bait.

He is bold, that will invade one of his own kind; you may therefore easily believe him to be a bold biter. Walton.

3. A trickker; a deceiver.

A biter is one who tells you a thing you have no reason to doubt its truth, and perhaps has given you, before he bit you, no reason to disbelieve it for his faying it; and, if you give him credit, laughs in your face, and triumphs that he has deceived you. He is one who thinks you a fool, because you do not think him a knave. Warning.

BITTE. n. f. [from Te bite.]

1. Having a hot, acid, biting taste, like wormwood.

Bitter things are apt rather to kill than engender patience. Bacon's Natural History. Though a man in a fever should, from fars, be bitten with the wheals, and fears indented, produces a sweet one, yet the idea of biter, like that man's mind, would be as difficult from the idea of sweet, as if he had taken only salt. Locke.

2. Sharp; cruel; severe.
1. With a bitter tale.

2. In a bitter manner; sorrowfully; calamitiously.

I too lightly acted with my heart,
That my poor mind's moved therewithal.
Wept bitterly.

Bitterly hast thou paid, and still art paying.

That right done.

3. Sharply; severely.

His behaviour is not to confuse bitterly the errors of their real.

Bitter.

4. A bitter liquor, which drains off in making of common salt, and used in the preparation of Epsom salt.

Bitterness.

1. A bitter tale.

2. The idea of whiteners, or bitters, is in the minds, exactly answering that power which is in every body to produce it there.

3. Malice; grudge; hatred; implacability.

The bitters and amity between the commanders was such, that a great part of the army was made bitters.

Clarendon.

4. Sharpness; severity of temper.

He knows we have overthrown his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wake?

Steele.

5. Bitterness.

Bitterly.

Bittersweet.

1. The name of an apple, which has a compound taste of sweet and bitter.

It is but a bitter-sweet at best, and the fine colours of the desert do not so much make amends for the smart of it.

Watts.

2. Bitterwort.

Genius.

An herb.

Bittour.

Bitterness.

1. Bittermen.

2. Bitumen.

Mix with these.

I made pitch, quick foal, cow, silver's pumice, sea oncinn, belladone, and black bitumen.

May.

Adj.

Bitumen.

Bitumen.

4. Bittermen.

Adj.

1. Having two valves or flutters; a term used of those fish that have two shells.

2. Making of some sort of bitumen larger than could be introduced in at those holes.

Bacon.

Bitterman.

Adj.

Having two valves.

Bitumen.

An herb.

Bitterman.

4. Bitterness.

1. Unbearable.

Bitterness.

Slow.

2. To tell in a good: see not used.

That delightful engine of her thoughts,
That black's them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage.

Shak.

To Bla. w. u. n. To tattle; to tell tales.

Your mine I'll be;

When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Shakespeare.

Bla. w. f. [from the verb.] A telltale; a thoughtless babble; a treacherous betrayer of secrets.

The secret man heareth many confessions; for who will open himself to a black, or babber? Beton.

To have revealed

Secrets of man, the fears of friends, contempt and scorn of all, to be excluded.

All friendship, and avoided as a black.

Whenever draws me a very inquisitive body, I'll throw off a black, and the shall make my public as public as a proclamation.

L'Estrange.

I should have gone about thawing my letters, under the charge of secrecy, to every blob of my

Bla. w. n. [from blab.] A telltale; a tale.

To Bla. w. n. To whistle to a horse.

Skinner.

Black.

Adj.

[black, Saxon.]

1. Of the colour of night.

In the twilight in the evening, in the black and dark night.

Proverbs.

Aristotle has problems which enquire why the man makes man black, and not the reverse? why it whites was, yet blacks the skin?

Brow.

2. The heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain.

L'Estrange.

3. Cloudy of countenance; fullen.

She had abated most of half my train;

L'Estrange.

4. Horrible; wicked; atrocious.

Either any country never must be freed.

Or I'm so thinking to be thus black.

Dryden.

5. Diurnal; mournful.

A dire
To BLACK, v. a. [from the noun.] To make black; to blacken.
Blackening the manuscript with ink, not the ink would be quickly dried up, but the paper, that it could not burn before, we quickly set it on fire.

Boyle.

Then in his fury black'd the raven o'er,
And bid him place in his white plumes no more.

Addison.

BLACKAMOOR, n. s. [from black and Moor.] A man by nature of a black complexion; a negro.

They are no more afraid of blackamores, or a lion, than a nurse or a cat.

Locke.

BLACKBERRY Heart. [from the plant.] A species of bramble.

The blackberry is the bramble.

The policy of the crafty tearinc rashals, that stale old mice-eaten cheese Nehor, and that same dog-fox Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry.

Shakespeare.

Then saw he the Children in the Wood; How blackberries they pluck'd in deserts wild, And fear not the glittering faun's gilt'd. Gay.

BLACKBIRD, n. s. [from black and bird.] The name of a bird.

Of songing birds, they have linnets, goldfinches, blackbirds, thrushes, and divers others.

Corey.

A schoolboy ran unto't, and thought
The erb was down, the blackbird caught. Swift.

To BLACKEN. v. a. [from black.] To make black.

1. To make a black colour.

Bill's'd by aspiring winds, he finds the brand Black'd by crowds. Prior.

While the long run'ds blackens all the way. Pope.

2. To darken; to cloud.

That little cloud that appeared at first to Elijah's servant no bigger than a man's hand, but presently after grew, and spread, and blackened the face of the whole heaven. South.

3. To defame, or make infamous.

Let us bring him on what we can, said that miscreant Harrison of the blei'd king upon the wording and drawing up his charges against his approaching trial. South.

The morals black'den, when the writings cease, The libell'd person, and the pic'tur'd shade. Pope.

To BLACKEN. v. n. To grow black, or dark.

The hollow found
Song in the leaves, the forest shook around,
Air blacken'd roll'd the thunder, graced 'round the ground.

Dryden.

BLACKISH. adj. [from black.] Somewhat black.

Part of it the year continues in the form of a blackish oil. Boyle.

BLACKMOOR, n. s. [from black and Moor.] A negro.

The land of Chus makes no part of Africa; nor is it the habitation of blackamores; but the country of Arabia, especially the Happy and Stony.

The realm of Bacchus to the bluish scon. Milan.

BLACKNESS. n. s. [from black.] Black colour.

Blackness is only a disposition to absorb, or reflect, without distinction, the rays of the ever so many that fall on the bodies. Locke.

There would emerge one or more very black spots, and, within those, other spots of an intense blackness. Newton.

His tongue, his prating tongue, had chang'd him quite
To foxy blackness from the purest white. Addison.

2. Darkness.

His faults in him seem at the spots of hear'n.
More key by night's blackness. Shakespeare.

3. Acrouncioun; horror benees; wicked-ness.

BLACKSMITH. n. s. [from black and smith.] A smith that works in iron; so called from being very cunningly.

The blacksmith may forge what he pleases. Hwvel.

Shut up thy doors with bars and bolts; it will be impossible for the blacksmith to make them to fall, but a cat and a whormsitter will find a way through them. Spenser.

BLACKTAIL, n. s. [from black and tail.] A fish; a kind of perch, by some called ruffs, or paper. See Pope.

Diat.

BLACKTHORN. n. s. [from black and thorn.] The same with the bine. See Plum, of which it is a species.

BLADDERNUT. n. s. [baphyladrenon, Lat.] A plant.

The name of a plant.

BLADDER. n.s. [bladder, Saxon; blader, Dutch.] 1. That vessel in the body which contains the urine.

The bladder should be made of a membranous substance, and extremely dilatable, for receiving and containing the urine till an opportunity of discharging it. Ray.

2. It is often filled with wind, to which allusions are frequently made.

That huge great body which the giant bore Was vanquish'd quite; and of that monstrous ma's Was nothing left, but like an empty bladder. Spenser.

A bladder but moderately filled with air, and strongly tied, being held near the fire, grew exceeding turgid and hard; but being brought nearer to the fire, it suddenly broke, with so loud a noise as made us for a while after almost deaf. Boyle.

3. It is usual for those, that learn to swim, to support themselves with blowed bladders.

I have vent'd.

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders, These many tummurs in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth; my highblown pride
Was worth a break under me.

Swift.

B. A. 3. A blatter; a pustule.

BLADDERSNAKE. n. s. [Stropheladron, Lat.] A plant.

The name of a plant.

BLADE. n. s. [blad, blad, Sax. blad, Fr.] The spire of grass before it grows to seed; the green fillets of corn which rise from the seed. This seems to me the primitive signification of the word blade; from which, I believe, the blade of a sword was first named, because of its similitude in shape; and, from the blade of a sword, that of other weapons or tools.

There is hardly a plant that yieldeth a red juice in the blade or ear, except it be the tree thatareth fagifiae. The common посков. Bovarc.

Send in the feeding stocks becomes, to invade The rising bulk of the luxuriat blade. Dryden.

If we were able to dive into their secrets, we could find that the smallest blade of grass, or most contemptible weed, has its particular use.

Hanging on every spray, on every blade
Of grass, the myriad dewdrops twinkle round. Thomson.

BLADESMITH. n. s. [blatte, Germ. blei, Dutch.] 1. The sharp or trifling part of a weapon or instrument, distinct from the handle. It is usually taken for a weapon, and so called probably from the likeness of a sword sword blade to a blade of grass. It is commonly applied to the knife.
BLA

He fought all round about, his thirty blade
To bathe in blood of faithless enemy. Fairy Queen.

She knew the virtue of her blade, nor would Follow her face with bloody blade. Dryden.

He be this froward, with blade of briers
A rusty gleam, whose hit a sliver blade. Pope.

3. A brisk man, either fierce or gay, called so in contempt. So we say mattle for You'll find yourself mistaken, Sir, if you'll take upon you to judge of these blades by their Baldemor. Busted.

called by anatomists the scalpula, or scapular bone.

He fell most furiously on the broiled relics of a handful of mutons, commonly called a baldemor.

BLADE. v. a. [from the noun.] To furnish or fit with a blade.

BLADED. adj. [from blade.] Having blades or spires.

Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Declined with liquid peel the larded grass. Shak.

As where the lightning runs along the ground,
Not bladeed grass, nor bearded corn succeeds,
But forms and sculls of purebreadness. Dryden.

BLAME. n. s. [blandse, Sax. blandse. Dutch.] A puflle; a botch; a blifer.

Sow all th' Athenian booms, and the crops
Be general ephory. Shakespeare.

Rottenness, and bland! mult all his flesh imbos,
And all his people Milton.

Where'er I bear a rival name,
I feel my body all inflamm'd;
Which breaking out in boils and blains,
With yellow film on my linen pains. Swift.

BLAMEABLE. adj. [from blame.] Culpable; faulty.

Virtue is placed between two extremes, which are on both sides equally blamable. Dryden.

BLAMELESSLY. adv. [from blameless.] Innocently; without crime.

It is the wilful opposing explicit articles, and not the showing them when not revealed, or not with that confidence, against which he cannot blamelessly, without pertinacity, hold out, the being danger of ruin on any. Hammond.

BLAMELESSLY. adv. [from blamelessly.] Innocence; exemption from blame.

Having received, with him in Homer, that all is chargeable on Jupiter and fate, they inform, with him, the blameless of the infernal agens. Dryden.

BLAMELESS. n. s. [from blameless.] One that blames or finds fault; a cenfuror.

In your hallowed a pagan muse,
And denison'd a brazen muse imbroider'd
By blamers of the times they más; hath fought Virtues in corners. Donne.

BLAMEWORTHY. adj. [from blame and worthly.] Culpable; blamable; worthy of blame or cenfur.

Although the gen'rous should be blameworthly, yet this age hath forbear to inter the anger of any such blame. Hooker.
2. Without writing; unwritten; empty or all marks.

Our substantives at home shall have blank charters, Wherein, when they know that men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large future of gold. Shakespeare.

Upon the debtor side, I find innumerable articles; but, upon the creditor side, little more than blanks. Addison.

3. Pale; confused; crushed; dispirited; subdued; depressed.

There was no face divine contentment wear;
’Tis all blank sadness, or continual fire. Pope.

4. Without rhyme; where the rhyme is blanked, or milled.

The lady shall lay her mind freely, or the blank verse shall fail for it. Shakspeare.

Let no rhyme be made to support the expression, it extremely difficult to such as are not masters in the tongue. Addison.

5. A paper from which the writing is effaced.

She has left him
The blank of what he was,
I tell thee, uncom, the hat quite unmanned him. Dryden.

6. A paper unwritten; any thing without marks or characters.

For him, I think not on him; for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks; rather than thus written with me. Shakespeare.

 Omnion to do what is necessary,
Seeks a commission to a blank of danger. Shakspeare.

7. Object to which any thing is directed.

See better, Lear, and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye. Shakespeare.

To BLANK, v. a. [from blank; blankish, Fr.]
1. To damp; to confuse; to dispirits.

Each opposite that blank the face of joy.
Meet what I would have well, and it destroys. Shak.

2. To efface; to annul.

All former purposes were blanked, the government
At a bay, and all that charge lost and cancelled. Spenser.

To BLANKET, n. s. [blanket, Fr.]
1. A woolen cover, soft, and loosely woven,
Spread commonly upon a bed, over the linen sheet, for the procurement of warmth.

Nor here’s a heap through the blanket of the dark.
To cry, hold I hold. Shak.

2. A kind of pear, sometimes written blaugetz.

When life’s a blank, who puits me for a prize. Dryden.

To BLANKET, v. a. [from blanket; blanckish, Dutsch, To bel-]
1. To cover with a blanket.

My face I’d grime with sighs;
Bluster my head, tir all my hair in knots. Shak.

2. To tos in a blanket, by way of penalty or contempt.

Ah, oh! he cry’d, what strait, what lane, but knows
Our porgings, pipings, blunderings, and blaw! Pope.

To BLANKETLY, adv. [from blanket.] In a blank manner:
with whiteness; with paleness; with confusion.

To BLAJSHEMIE, n. e. v. [blasphemous, low Lat.]
1. To speak in terms of impious irreverence of God.

To speak evil of.

The truest ill of thy throne
By his own inadvertence stands accused.
And dare blaspheme his name. Shak.

Who from our labours bear their load,
Blaspheme their toils, and forget their lord. Pope.

To BLASPHEMIA, v. e. [from blaspheme.] To speak blasphemy.

Lived of blasphoming Jew. - Shakespeare.

I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme. Add.

To BLASPHEMEUS, adj. [from blaspheme.] A wretch that speaks of God in impious and irreverent terms.

Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious. 1 Tim.

Even that blasphemer himself would inwardly
Reverence his reprover, as he in his heart really defames him, in the meanest base offence. South.

Deny the cursed blasphemer’s tongue to rage,
And turn God’s fury from an impious age. Dry. Should each blaspheme quite escape the rod.

Because the wicked man hath broken God’s law. Ps. 58.

BLASPHEMOUS, adj. [from blaspheme.] It is usuall spoken with the accent on the first syllable, but used by Milton with it.

See better, Lear, and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye. Shakespeare.

To BLANK, v. a. [from blank; blankish, Fr.]
1. To damp; to confuse; to dispirits.

Each opposite that blank the face of joy.
Meet what I would have well, and it destroys. Shak.

Dagon must stand, and shall ere long receive
Such a discomfit, as shall quite dispossess him
Of all his being, and all that he has done on me.
And with execusion blank his worshippers. Milton.

If the atheist, when he dies, should find that his soul remains, how will this man be snared and Consumed? Tholuck.

2. To efface; to annul.

All former purposes were blanked, the government
At a bay, and all that charge lost and cancelled. Spenser.

2. To found; to form.

Where is the rubbish of his reason, while he would blasphemy to set up to confound the commands of the Almighty? Swift.

BLASPHEMOUSLY, adv. [from blaspheme.]
1. Impiously; with wicked irreverence.

BLASPHEMY, n. s. [blaspheme.]
Blasphemy, filthiness and profaneness, is an offence of some indiglence, or injury, unto God himself, either by words or writing.

That my heart’s on former mischief lest,
And she, and she, and she, blasphemy, be hit yet a day.
But fly you must. Shakespeare.

Intruding good man’s confound in accordance, and
In contradistinction, to the secret will of God; or else God’s court could not have chosen his thoughts and secrets, but only superciliously good, as far as he is pleased to reveal himself, which is perfect blasphemy to imagine. Hammond.

BLAST, n. s. [from blast, Sax. hlasen, Germ. to blow.]

1. A gust or puff of wind.

That they stand high, have many blasts to make them
And, if they fall, they wish themselves to pieces. Shakespeare.

Welcome, then,
This unsubstantial air, that I embrace;
The wind that thou hast blown upon the word
Owneth nothing to thy blasts. Shak.

Perhaps thy fortune doth controul the winds,
Both looke or bend their blasts in secret cave. Fairf.

Three ships were busy'd by the southern blast,
And the secret under blast with fury cast. Dryden.

2. The found made by blowing any instrument of wind musick.

In peace there’s nothing to become a man
As modest filthiness and humbleness;
When the blast, that nature is, doth come,
Then instant the action of the roper. Shakespeare.

He blew his trumpet—the angel’s trump.
 Fill’d all the regions.

The valiant musick, and triumphous sound,
Shake at the blasted blast, the signal of the war. Dryden.

Whether there be two different gods deified
Fame, or our gods of old deified those two different trumpeters, it is certain villiains have as good a title to a blast from the proper trumpet, as virtue has from them that can boast. Swift.

The stroke of a malignant place; the infection of any thing pestilential; [from the verb To blast.]

By the blast of God they perish. Job.

To BLAST, v. a. [from blast, n.]
1. To strike with some sudden plague or calamity.

You miserable being, dare you blaspheming flames,
In your tormenting eye mock beauty.
You fraternal dogs, drawn by the powerful fun,
To fall and blast her pious. Seach.

So far is there not some chosen clan,
Some hidden thunders in the face of heaven.
Red with uncomman breath, to blast the man
Who owes his greatness to his country’s ruin? Addison.

2. To make to wither.

Upon that blasted earth you lay our way. Shak.
2. To dim the eyes. This may stand for a pretty superficial argument, to blur our eyes, and dull our sense in security.

BLEAKNESS. n. f. [from bleak]. The state of being bleak, or dimmed with rheum. The defluxion falling upon the edges of the eyelids, makes a bleared eye.

BLEAT. v. n. [bleat, Saxon.] To cry as a sheep.

BLEAT. n. f. [from the verb.] The cry of a sheep or lamb.

Set in my ship, mine ear reach'd, where we rode, the bellowing of oxen, and the bleat of the flock. Chapman.

BLEND. v. n. pret. I blend; I have bleat. [blenan, Saxon.]

1. To lose blood; to run with blood. I blend inwardly for my lord. Shakespeare. Bleed, bleed, poor country! Bleed, bleed; live in a meane state.

2. To die a violent death. The lamb thy riot dooms to bleed-today.

3. To lose blood medicaUy; as, be bleed for a fever.

4. To drop, as blood. It is applied to anything that drops from some body on incision, as blood from an animal. For me the balm shall blend, and amber flow.

To BLEED. v. a. To let blood; to take blood from.

To BLEED. v. a. From a patient of distilithe's note, have bled and pur'd me to a simple vote. Pope.

BLEET. adj. Baffhul. It is used in BLEAT. Scotland, and the bordering counties.

BLEEDISH. n. a. [from blame, Jnnius; from blest, white, Fr. Skinner.]

1. To mark with any deformity. Blemish that my outward face might have been disfigured. Bleed, as if the face of our excellence could have been thus bleinfed.

2. To defame; to tarnish, with respect to reputation. Not that my verse would bleish all the fair Blest by some bad, 'twas well to draw. Dryden.

Blemish, blest by hypocritical deformations, endeavours bleish, his character, incur the complicated guilt of slander and perjury. Addison.

BLEDISH. n. f. [from the verb.]

A mark of deformity; a fear; a diminution of beauty. As he hath cauled a bloomed in a man, to call it bleasted to day, against that day it openeth again. Open it to the eye-lid, that you divide not that; for, in fe doing, you will leave a remetich blemish.

BLEEN. n. f. [from To blend.] The person that mingles. BLEND. The obiolute participle of blend. See BLEND.

BLEED. v. a. pret. and participle, bled, or blest. [bleepran, Saxon.]

1. To make happy; to prosper; to make successful.

The quality of mercy is not strained.

It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath. It is twice bledd'd

Bleed he that gives, and him that takes.

Shakespeare.

Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had bid a blest time; for, from this instant, There is nothing farther in my power but to die. Shakespeare.

This kingdom enjoyed the greatest calm, and the fullest measure of felicity, that any people, in any age, for a long time together, have been blest with.

Happy this life, with such a hero blest!

What virtue dwells not in his loyal breath? Waller.

In vain with folding arms the youth assay'd

To stop her flight, and drain the flying shade,

But the return'd no more, to blest his lingering eyes.

Dryden.

Of hopitable Jove! we thus invoke, Blest be both nation, and this reign of peace.

To BLEED. v. n. To make happy; to prosper; to make successful. Bled, blest, admist, admist, admist.

2. To wish happiness to another; to pronounce a blessing upon him.

And this is the blessing wherein Mofes the man of God blest the children of Israel before his death. Deuteronomy.

3. To consecrate by a prayer.

He blest, and brake, and gave the leaues.

Matthew.

4. To praise; to glorify for benefits received; to celebrate.

Unto us there is one only guide of all agents, natural, and he both the counsellor and worker of all in all, alone to be blest, adored, and honoured by all for ever.

But blest be that great power, that hath as

With longer life than earth and heav'n can have.

Davies.

5. It seems, in one place of Spenier, to signify the same as to occur; to bring; to bring.

This signification is taken from an old rite of our Romanish

ceastors, who, bleeding a field, directed their hands in quick succession to all parts of

When whom the prince to battle new addrest, And threatening high his dreadful stroke did for, His sparkling blade about his head he load, And mount all quite his right leg by the knee. Fairy Queen.

BLEED. v. a. pret. and participle, bled, or blest. [bleeplean, Saxon.]

BLEED. v. a. pret. and participle, bled, or blest. [bleeplean, Saxon.]

1. To make happy; to prosper; to make successful.

The quality of mercy is not strained.

It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath. It is twice bledd'd

Bleed he that gives, and him that takes.

Shakespeare.

Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had bid a blest time; for, from this instant, There is nothing farther in my power but to die. Shakespeare.

This kingdom enjoyed the greatest calm, and the fullest measure of felicity, that any people, in any age, for a long time together, have been blest with.

Happy this life, with such a hero blest!

What virtue dwells not in his loyal breath? Waller.

In vain with folding arms the youth assay'd

To stop her flight, and drain the flying shade,

But the return'd no more, to blest his lingering eyes.

Dryden.

Of hopitable Jove! we thus invoke, Blest be both nation, and this reign of peace.

To BLEED. v. n. To make happy; to prosper; to make successful. Bled, blest, admist, admist, admist.

2. To wish happiness to another; to pronounce a blessing upon him.

And this is the blessing wherein Mofes the man of God blest the children of Israel before his death. Deuteronomy.

3. To consecrate by a prayer.

He blest, and brake, and gave the leaues.

Matthew.

4. To praise; to glorify for benefits received; to celebrate.

Unto us there is one only guide of all agents, natural, and he both the counsellor and worker of all in all, alone to be blest, adored, and honoured by all for ever.

But blest be that great power, that hath as

With longer life than earth and heav'n can have.

Davies.

5. It seems, in one place of Spenier, to signify the same as to occur; to bring; to bring.

This signification is taken from an old rite of our Romanish

ceastors, who, bleeding a field, directed their hands in quick succession to all parts of

When whom the prince to battle new addrest, And threatening high his dreadful stroke did for, His sparkling blade about his head he load, And mount all quite his right leg by the knee. Fairy Queen.

BLEED. v. a. pret. and participle, bled, or blest. [bleeplean, Saxon.]

BLEED. v. a. pret. and participle, bled, or blest. [bleeplean, Saxon.]

1. To make happy; to prosper; to make successful.

The quality of mercy is not strained.

It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath. It is twice bledd'd

Bleed he that gives, and him that takes.

Shakespeare.

Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had bid a blest time; for, from this instant, There is nothing farther in my power but to die. Shakespeare.

This kingdom enjoyed the greatest calm, and the fullest measure of felicity, that any people, in any age, for a long time together, have been blest with.

Happy this life, with such a hero blest!

What virtue dwells not in his loyal breath? Waller.

In vain with folding arms the youth assay'd

To stop her flight, and drain the flying shade,

But the return'd no more, to blest his lingering eyes.

Dryden.
3. Heavenly felicity.

It is such an one, as, being begun in grace, passes into glory, blissful, and immortality. Stan. 1662.

4. Divine favour.

BLESSER, n. f. [from bliss.] He that blinks, or gives a blip; he that makes carping or improper complaints.

When thou receivest praise, take it insincerely, and return it to God, the giver of the gift, or blipper of the action. Taylor.

BLESSING, n. f. [from bliss.]

1. Benediction; a prayer by which happiness is signified to any one.

2. A declaration by which happiness is promised to a prophet and authoritative manner.

The person that is called, kneels down before the chair, and the father lays his hand upon his head, or her head, and gives the blessing. Bacon.

3. Any of the means of happiness; a gift; an advantage; a benefit.

Nor are his blessings to his banks confined, but free, and common, as the sea and wind. Dibdin.

Political jealousy is very reasonable in persons perverted of the excellency of their conditions, who believe that they derive it from the mostailable blessings of society. Add. 1696.

The little magistrates in a blessing, as extensive as the court, are always a blessing; a blessing which includes all other blessings whatever: that relate to this life. Ast. 1696.

4. Divine favour.

Blipping upon you! Mrs. Shakespeare.

I had need of blessing, and Amen. Spenser.

Blessed is my mother, and all in word and deed, that a blessing may come upon them from them. Eccl. 11.

Be still the blessing from the Lord. Ps. 43.

5. The Hebrews, under this name, often understood the prelits which friends make to one another; in all probability, because they are generally attended with blessings; and compliments both from those who give, and those who receive.

Cabinet.

And Jacob said, receive my presage at my hand; take, I pray thee, my blessing that is brought from Jord. 31.

BLEST, pret. and participle. [from bliss.] Peace to thy gentle heart, and end of all thy blip! Pipp. 1580.

BLEW, The pret. tense from blow.

The ruff fled into a strong tower, where, seeing no remedy, they desperately blaw up themselves, with a great part of the castle, with gunpowder. Knt. 1574.

BLEVME, n. f. An inflammation in the foot of a horse, between the sole and the bone. Farrar's Dict.

BLIGHT, n. f. [The etymology unknown.]

1. Malignity; according to Skinner: but it seems taken from old writers, in a general sense, for any cause of the failure of fruits.

I complained to the old and best gardeners, who often fell into the same mistake, and informed it some blight of the spring. Temp. 1657.

2. Anything nipping, or blighting.

When you come to the proof once, the first blight of foot shall most infallibly drain off all your glory. L'Estrange.

To BLIGHT, w. a. [from the noun.]

1. To corrupt with mildew.

It avert beams along with it any poisonous mineral brands; it then bids vegetables, flowers... and fruit; and is sometimes injurious even to men.

2. In general, to blast; to hinder from fertility.

My country neighbors do not find it impossible to breed a tame horse they have, or bring back a corn, till they have run over in their minds all their beings.

But left births care the lover's peace dearly, and roughly blights the tender buds of joy. Lytton.

BLIND, adj. [blump, Saxon.]

1. Deprived of sight; wanting the sense of seeing; dark.

The blind man that governs his steps by feeling, in defect of eye, receives advertisement of things through the sense of touch. Dryd.

Those other two, elfcall'd with me in fate, So were I call'd with them in renown! Blind Thamyris, and blind Mandisides; And Themis, and Phineas, prophets old, Mint.

2. Intellectually dark; unable to judge; ignorant; with to before that which is unseen.

All authors to their own defects are blind; Hadst thou but, Jesus, like a face, behind To few persons, what filthy mouths they make; To mask their fingers painted at thy back. Dryd.

Sometimes of,

Blind of the future, and by rage misled, Putin his crimes upon his people's head. Dryd.

4. Unseen; out of the public view; private; especially with some tendency to some contempt or censure.

To disregard and shun; that misconceives they make subjects subjects, with whom any blind or beaten corner is judged a fit house of common prayers. Hoke.

5. Not easily discernible; hard to find; dark; obscure; unseen.

There be also blind birds under stone, which flame not out; but oil being poured upon them, they flame out. Bacon

Where else Shall I inform my unacquainted feet
In the blind maze of this tangled wood? Milten.

How have we wonder'd a long dismal night,
Led through blind paths by each detaining light! R. B. 1593

Part creeping underground, their jovious blind,
And climbing from below, their fellows meet. Dryd.

So mariners mistake the promis'd goal,
And, with full sails, on the blind rocks are lost. Dryd.

A pattern door, yet unhonour'd and free,
Join'd by the length of a blind gallery,
To the king's closet bed. Dryd.

6. Blind Visions. [with chymists.] Such as have no opening but on one side.

To BLIND, w. a. [from the noun.]

1. To make blind; to deprive of sight.

You nibble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her eye, her head, and every part. Shakespeare.

Of whom's hand have I received any blow,
Of whose blind me eyes touch? and will I redress it? 1. Summt.

A blind guide is certainly a great mischief; but a guide that blanks those whom he should lead is infinitely a much greater. Sarn. 1696.

2. To darken; to obscure the eye.

Lo, whilst the feast, such darkness blindly the fly,
That the cock does receive a deeper dye. Dryd.

3. To darken the understanding.

This my bog-suffering, and my day of woe,
They who neglect and form shall never taste
That hard bit, blind, blind sore in error. Mint.

4. To drive to the understanding.

The state of the cutteth every borrower as be enamoured, with all his air, to blind and confound. Stillingfleet.

BLINDNESS, n. f. [from blind.]

1. Want of sight.

I will smite every house of the people with blindness, Zech. 14.

2. Ignorance; intellectual darkness.

All the rest as born of false brood,
But the blackthorns are, into blindness led,
And kept from light on the lightest day. 1. Summt.

Nor can we call it choice, when what we choose,
Folly and unprofitably could refuse. 1. Summt.

Wherefore we would proceed beyond those.

3. Without judgment or direction.

How fears, and earth, and air, and active flame,
Fell through the mighty void; and, in their fall,
Were blindly gather'd in this goodly ball. Dryd.

BLINDMAN'S BUFF. n. A play in which one is to have his eyes covered, and hunt out the rest of the company.

Dilig'd in all the mas of night,
We left our champion on his flight;
At blindman's buff to grope his way,
In equal law of sight and day. 1. Maddison.

He imagines I shut my eyes again; but lovely he fancies I play at blindman's buff with him; for he thinks I never have my eyes open. Stillingfleet.

BLINDNESS, n. f. [from blind.]

1. Want of sight.

I will smite every house of the people with blindness, Zech. 14.

2. Ignorance; intellectual darkness.

All the rest as born of false brood,
But the blackthorns are, into blindness led,
And kept from light on the lightest day. 1. Summt.

Nor can we call it choice, when what we choose,
Folly and unprofitably could refuse. 1. Summt.

Wherefore we would proceed beyond those.

3. Without judgment or direction.

How fears, and earth, and air, and active flame,
Fell through the mighty void; and, in their fall,
Were blindly gather'd in this goodly ball. Dryd.

BLINDSIDE, n. f. [from blind and side.]

Weakness; foible; weak part.

He is too great a lover of himself; this is one of his blindfolds; the best of men, I say, are not without them. Swift.

BLINDWORM. n. f. [ceiilia, from blind.]
BLYSSFULL, a. [from blyssful] Happily.

BLYSSFULNESS. n.f. [from blyssful] Happiness, fulness of joy.

To BLYSSOM. v.n. To caterwaul, to be lufiful.

BLYSSTER, n.f. [blyster, Dutch.]

1. A putule formed by raising the cuticle from the cutis, and filled with ferous blood.

In this stage the galls, night by night, O'zer ladies lips, who strait on kites dream, Which oft the angry Mab with blysters plagueth. Because their breaths with sweatmending tainted were. Shakespeare.

I found a great blyster drawn by the gallick, but had it cut, which run a good deal of watrr, but died again by next night. Temple.

2. Any swelling made by the separation of a film or skin from the corne. Upon the leaves there rish a tumour like a Higher, Grown.

To BLUSTER. v.n. [from the noun.] To rise in blisters.

If I prove behemoth, let my tongue blistere, And never to my red-look'd anger be The trumpet any more. Shakespeare.

Embrace thy knees with bowing thounds, Which blister when they touch thee. Dryden.

To BLUSTER. v. a.

1. To raise blisters by some hurt, as by a burn, or rubbing.

Look, here comes one, a gentlewoman of mine, Who falling in the flats of her own youth, Her high blyster's her report. Dryden.

2. To raise blisters with a medical intention.

His body, the legs and thighs; but was too late; he died howling. Wistarman.

BLITHE, adj. [blise, Sax.] Gay; airy; merry; joyous; sprightly; mirthful.

We have always one eye fixed upon the countenance of our enemies; and, according to the blithe or heavy aspect thereof, our other eye either that of a bashful look or of a most fierce expression. Hooker.

Then high not so, but let them go, And be you blithe and mirthful. Shakespeare.

Forti, that at normal troops thou saw'st, 2. Of good, Bears, be blithe, so smooth, so gay; Yet empty of all good. Milton.

To whom the wild adders, birks and glades, - Empow'rs, with long and leggy, and not long, Milton.

And the milkmaid gentles blitie, And the mower wheres his fytie. Milton.

Should he return, that troop to blithe and bold, Precipitate in fear, would wing their flight. Pope.

BLITHLY, adv. [from blithe.] In a blithe manner.

BLITHNESS, n.f. [from blithe.] The quality of being blithe.

BLITHTROMES, n.f. [from blithe.] Gay; cheerful.

Fendly blades deface The blitheflour year's hoores of their shrivel'd fruits Are women'd. Philip.

To BLOT, v. a. [probably from blaw.] To swell, or make turgid with wind; it has up, an intensive particle.

His rude effays, Encourage him, and add to what was praise. That he may get more bulk before he dies. Dryd.

The flattering petticoat smooths all disfinitions, levels the mother with the daughter. I cannot but be troubled to see so many well-shaped innocent virgins bloated up, and waddling up and down like big bell-ied women. Addison.

To BLOT, v. n. To grow turgid.

If a person of a firm constitution begins to bloat, from being warm grow cold, his flesh grow weak.

The blot king. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

BLIGHT. n.f. [from blit.] Turdige, swelling; tumour.

Limbod, limbis, limbites, and sparcobital spots, are symptoms of weak fibres. Arbuthnot.

BLONDER, n.f. [from blob.] A word used in some counties for a bubble.

There swimmeth also in the sea a round filthy substance, called a bloater, repugnate to the fish. Carew.

BLONDER, n.f. [from blob, or blabber, and lip.] A thick lip.

They make a wit of their infipid friend, His bloater lips, and boisterous command. Dryden.

BLONDER, n.f. [from blob, or blabber, and lip.] A thick lip.

A bloaterlipick fluell, somwhat to be a kind of musher, and a good hill, and a green hill.

His person deform'd to the highest degree; flat-nosed, and bloaterlipick. L'Estrange.

BLOCK. n.f. [black, Dutch; bloe, Fr.]

1. A heavy piece of timber, rather thick than long.

2. A mass of matter.

Her's appointment consists of a group of figures, cut in the same block of marble, and rising one above another. Addison.

3. A massy body.

Small caues are sufficient to make a man unedge, when great ones are not in the way: for want of a block, he willumble at a straw. Swift.

When, by the help of wedges and beetle, an image is cleat out of the trunk of ynone tree, yet, after the full of artificers to let but such a divine block, it cannot one moment secure itself from being eaten by worms. Stillingfleet.

5. The piece of wood on which hats are formed. Some old writers use block for the hat itself.

He wear's his hat but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block. Shakespeare.

6. The wood an which criminals are beheaded.

Some guard these traitors to the block of death, Treason's true bed, and yielder-up of breath. Shak.

At the instant of his death, having a long beard, after his head was upon the block, he gently drew his beard aside, and said, this hath not offended the king. Baw.

I'll drop him thence; Even from the holy altar to the block. Dryden.

An obstruction; a flop.

Can he ever dream, that the suffering for roughtrouible, fixe is our felicity, when he sees us run to in, that no one is block enough in our way to stop our flight? Drayx of Pliny.

8. A sea term for a pully.

9. A blockhead; a fellow remarkable for stupidity.

The country is a defert, where the good Gain'd inhabits not; born's not understood; These men become beasts, and prone to all evils; They like blocks. Black.

What tongueless blocks were they, would not they speak? Shakespeare's Richard III.

To BLOCK. v.a. [blocker, Fr.]

1. To shut up; to enclose, so as to hinder entry, or obtrude.

The sites about them should neither by entrance of dominion, nor by blocking of trade, have it in their power to hurt or annoy. Clarendon.

They block the castle kept by Bertram; But now they close, down with the palace, fire it. Dryden.

2. It has often up, to note claustration.

Recommend it to the governor of Abingdon, to find some troops to block it up, from infesting the country. Carew.

The abbot raises an army, and blocks up the town on the side that faces his dominion. Addison.

BLOCK-HOUSE, n.f. [from block and house.]

A fortress built to obstruct or block up a pass, commonly to defend a harbour.

His entrance is guarded with block-houses, and that on the town's side fortified with ordnance. Carew.

Rochefort water reacheth far within the land, and is under the protection of some block-houses. Religh.

BLOCK TIN, n.f. [from block and tin.]

So the tradesmen call that which is pure or unmixed, and yet unwrought. Boyle. Block'de.
9. For blood. Though his blood or life was at stake: a low phrase.
A crow lays upon a mule, and could not, for his blood, break the shell to come at the fish.
10. The carnal part of man.
Fish and blood hath not revealed it unto thee,
but my Father which is in heaven. Mark xvi. 17.
11. Temper of mind; flate of the passions.
Will you, great fire that glor Blot.
In cold blood, which you gain'd in hot? Hudibras.
12. Hot spark; man of fire.
The news put divers young bloods into such a fire, as the ambidescors were, not without peril,
to be outrun. Bacon.
13. The juice of any thing.
He wash'd his garments in wine, and his clothes
in the blood of grapes. Gen. xlix. 17.

To BLO. BLO. BLO.
9. For blood. Though his blood or life
was at stake: a low phrase.
A crow lays upon a mule, and could not, for his blood, break the shell to come at the fish.
10. The carnal part of man.
Fish and blood hath not revealed it unto thee,
but my Father which is in heaven. Mark xvi. 17.
11. Temper of mind; flate of the passions.
Will you, great fire that glor Blot.
In cold blood, which you gain'd in hot? Hudibras.
12. Hot spark; man of fire.
The news put divers young bloods into such a
fire, as the ambidescors were, not without peril,
to be outrun. Bacon.
13. The juice of any thing.
He wash'd his garments in wine, and his clothes
in the blood of grapes. Gen. xlix. 17.
BLOOD-SUCKER. n. f. [from blood and fish.] 1. A leech; a fly; any thing that sucks blood.
2. A cruel man; a murderer.

God keep the prince from all the pack of you.

A trait you are of damned bloodsuckers.

Shaksp. Richard III.

The nobility cried out upon him, that he was a dead bloodsucker, a murderer, and a parasite.

Hayward.

BLOOODWORT, n. f. A plant. BLOODY adj. [from blood.]

1. Stained with blood.
2. Cruel; murderous: applied either to men or fish.

By continual martial exercises, without blood,

It made them perfect in that bloody art. Sidory.

Fals of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand.

Shaksp. King Lear.

I grant him bloody.

Lurorous, avaricious, false, deceitful.

Shaksp. Macbeth.

Thou bloody villain.

Thou bloody villain.

Let terms gain no time.

Shaksp. Macbeth.

Abus! why burn you so thy mother lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame.

These are parents: but yet I hope, I hope.

They do not point on me.

Shaksp. Othello.

The bloody swift.

Will be aveng'd: and 'tho' other's faith appear'd

False to no reward: though he then fee him die,

Ringing in dust and gore.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

The bloody vengeance which she could purpose,

Would be a trifle to my loss of you.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.

Proud Nimrod flung the bloody chace began,

As mighty hunter, and his prey was man.

Pipe's Windstraw Ferry.

BLOODY-FUX. n. f. The dyer's dye. BLOODY adj. [from bloody and mind.] Cruel; inclined to bloody.

You'Il make me mad: truth has been at my tongue's end of this loft hour, and I have not the power to bring it out, for fear of this bloody minded cackle.

Dryden's Spanish Frier.

BLOOM. n. f. [blum, Germ. bloom, Dutch.] 1. A bloom; the flower which precedes the fruit.

How nature paints it's colours, how the bee

Sits on her blooming, extra'ding a golden sweet.

Milton.

A medlar tree was planted by:

The spreading branches made a grove blown,

And fell of opening blower was very bough.

Dry'd haistic to yonder wonderful bower:

The turf with rufh urchins shall be crown'd,

While opening blooms diffuse their sweet rounds.

2. The state of immaturity; the state of any thing improving, and ripening to higher perfection.

Were I no queen, did you my beauty weigh,

My youth in bloom, your age in its decay.

Dryden's All for Love.

3. The blue colour upon plans and grapes newly gathered.

4. [In the iron works.] A piece of iron wrought into a mafs, two feet square.

BLOOM. v. n. [from the noun.] 1. To bring or yield blooms.

The end of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds, and blossomed bro-foms, and yielded almonds.

Number, xviii. 8.

It is a common experience, that if you do not pull off some blooms the first time a tree blooms, it will bloom much the better.

2. To produce, as blooms.

Rites and customs, now superfluous, when the strength of virtuous, devout, or charitable affection bloom'd them, no man could justly have condemned.

Haberd.

3. To be in a state of youth and improvement.

Beauty, frail flower, that every season fadens,

Bloom in thy colour's for a thousand years.

Pope's Odyssy.

O greatly blest with every blooming grace!

With equal flames the paths of glory shine.

Pope's Odyssy.

BLOOMY adj. [from bloom.] Full of blooms.

Greening stalks, that on your blymny grass

Wbartl all eye, when all the woods are still.

Milton.

Departing spring could only stay to fed

Her blymny beauties, on the genial bed.

But left the many fruits, and heady scents.

Dryden.

Hear how the birds, on e'ry blymny spray, with Joyous mufic wake the dawning day.

Pope.

BLORE. n. f. [from bloom.]

Action of blooming; blast: an expressive word, but not used.

Air raft, with an unmeasurable roar,

That two winds, tumbling clouds in heaps:

Turns to either's blose.

Chapman's Hind.

BLOSSOM. n. f. [blomme, Sax.]

The flower that grows on any plant, previous to the seed or fruit.

We generally call those flowers Blossoms, which are not much regarded in themselves, but as a token of some following production.

Cold news for me:

Thus are my blommes blasted in the bud,

And eaters eat my leaves away.

Shak. Hen. IV.

Mercy, mercy, shall I live now.

Under the blosom that hangs on the bough.

Shaksp. Timon.

The pulling off many of the blosoms of a fruit tree, will make the fruit fairest.

Huet's Nat. History.

To his green years your censure you would fail.

Not blose the blomme, but expect the fruit.

Dryden.

BLO'SSOM. v. n. [from the noun.]

To put forth blosoms.

This is the means of man: to-day he puts forth

The tender leaves of hope: to-morrow blosoms,

And bears his blooming honour thick upon him.

Shaksp. Henry VIII.

Although the fig-tree shall not bear blosoms,

Neither shall fruit be in the vines, yet will I refuse in the Lord.

Hab. II. 17.

The want of rain, at blooming time, often occasions the dropping off of the blosoms, for want of fay.

Mariner.

To BLO'T, v. a. [from bladder, Fr. to hide.]

1. To obliterate; to make writing invisible by covering it with ink.

You that are king.

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,

To blot out me, and put his own in.

Shaksp. Henry VI.

Ev'n coquous: Dryden wanted, or forgot

The leaf and greenest art, the art to blose.

Painting is nothing: other winging will find it impossible to make the bed use of it, while he writes in constrant, perpetually correcting, blotting out expressions.

Swift's.

2. To efface; to eras.

Of Extremity, oh no more any far, but brother!

One at like this blos the world out thousand crimes. Dryden.

These simple ideas, offered to the mind, the understanding can no more see, nor alter, nor understanding wing. Follow the wing out impossible to make the bed use of it, while he writes in constrant, perpetually correcting, blotting out expressions.

Swift's.

To efface; to erase.

A man's name, no more any far, but brother!

3. To make black spots on a paper; to blur.

Heads overfull of matter, be like pens overfull of ink, which will sober-blur, than make any fair letter.

O sweet Portia!

Here are a few of the unpleasant words.

That ever blotted paper. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

4. To disgrace; to disfigure.

Unknown that threat'ning knock braw.

It bles' his beauty, as froth bles' the needs.

Confounds thy fame. Shaksp. Taming of the Shrew.

My guilt thou growing virtues did detach.

My blacken'd belsh belsh unblindeth'd name.

Dryden's All for Love.

For mercy's fake refrain thy hand,

Blot not thy innocence with guiltless blood.

Romeo.

5. To darken.

He hung how earth bles' the moon's gilded wane.

While foolish men bear foundling brains in vain.

Coeley.

BLOT n. f. [from the verb.] 1. An obliteration of something written.

Let frames on your unlucky papers prey.

Yet venoms, your beauty's due forbid,

And make of all an universal blos.

Dryden. Juvenal.

2. A blos; a spot upon paper.

3. A spot in reputation; a flaw; a disgrace; a reproach.

Make known.

It is no violets blos, nor any foule stars

That hath depth'd me.

Shaksp. King Lear.

A lie is a foul blos in a man; yet it is continually in the mouth of the unskilful.

Art. xx. 24.

A disappoin'ted hope, a blos of honour, a blos.

Emperor, of confidence, an unfortunate love, will ferue the turn.

Temple.

4. [At backgammon.] When a single man lies open to be taken up; whence, to hit a blos.

He is too great a master of his art, to make a blos which may so easily be hit.

Dryden's Dedication to All for Love.

BLOTCH. m. f. [from blos.] A spot or puftule upon the skin.

Spots and blotches, of several colours and figures,

Aggregating over the body; some are red, other yellow or, black or.

Hervey.

To BLOT, v. a. To smoke, or dry by the smoke; as blosed harrings, or red herrings.

BLOW. n. f. [blosse, Dutch.] 1. The act of striking.

A modd poor man, made tame to fortune's blow.

Who, by the art of knowing and feeling foresays.

Am pregnant to good pity.

Shaksp. King Lear.

A woman's tongue,

That gives not half to great a blow to th' ear,

As will a cleftthumb.

Shaksp. Taming of the Shrew.

Words of great contempt commonly finding a return of equal scorn, blows were showered upon the man personally, or the crew pretends to it.

Swift's.

3. The fatal blos; the stroke of death.

Alitige your thirst of blood, and strike the blos.

Dryden.

4. An act of cruelty; blows are used for combat or war.

Be most shar'd captives to some nation

That won you without blos.

Shaksp. All's Well.

May'st I should go,

What p'r of mercy from this dreadful foe,

But woman-like to rail, and fall without a blos? Pope.

5. A sudden calamity; an unexpected evil.

People is broken with a grievous blos.

Fren.'en.

To all but thee in his blos'd to fly,

And 'twas my misfortune to deale the blos.

Parrot.

6. A single action; a sudden event.

Every year they gain a victory, and a town but BLO

We lose the prime, to mask how spring
Our tending plants, how blow the citron grove,
What drops the myrt., and what the balmy reed.
Milton.

This royal fair
Shall, when the blossom of her beauty's blow,
See her great brother on the British throne.
Wallace.

Fair is the kingcup that in meadow blowes,
Fair is the daisy that beside her grows.
Gay.

For thee Jumby's spicy forests blowes,
And sweet gold in Goliath's mountains grow.
Pope.

Blower. n. s. [from blow.] A meller of tin.

Add his care and cost in buying wood, and in fetching the same to the blowing-houses, together with the blowers two or three months extreme and increasing labour.
Carlyle.

Blown. The participle past tense of blow.
All the sparks of virtue, which nature had kindled in them, were to blow to give forth their innerseent heat, that justly it may be affirmed, they inflamed the affections of all that know them.
Sidney.

The trumpets, while cheerful hounds are blow.
And arms employ'd on birds and beasts along.
Pope

Blow-point. n. s. A child's play, perhaps like pulpfin.

Shortly boys shall not play
At funecomont or blowpoint, but shall play
Toll to some comical old Donkey.

Blowit. n. s. [from blow.] Bloom, or blossom.

As in renovation and confusion being but green, and newly grown, the seeds and effects were as yet not potential, and in full bloom and bud.
Ralph.

Blowze. n.s. A ruddy fat-faced wench.
Blowzy. adj. [from blowze.] Sun burnt;
high-coloured.

Blubber. n. s. [See Blob.] The part of a whale that contains the oil.

To Blubber. v. a. [from the noun.] To weep in such a manner as to swell the cheeks.

Even foe lies
The blowking and weeping, and blubbering,
Shakespeare. Rome and Julieta.

A thief came to a boy that was blowking by the side of a wall, and asked what he did care for.
L'Esperance.

Soon as Giudalalitch mistid her pleasing voice,
She wept, the blubberd, & the tore her hair.
Swift.

Blow as. v. a. To swell the cheeks with weeping.

Fair dreams represent unto me my blubbered face; let tears persue your way.
Sidney.

The wild wood gods, arrived in the place,
There find the virgin deflowered, inflamed;
With ruffled raiment, and fair blubber'd face,
As her outrageous for lie left her late.
Roya.

Tire'd with the search, not finding what the tears,
With cruel blow blowes the pounds her blubber'd cheeks.
Dryden.

Blubber. particip. adj. [from To blubber.]
Swelled; big; applied commonly to the lip.

Though you gave him, thou book'd I never gave
Was so profound to touch that blubber'd lip.
Dryd.

Bloud'gon. n.s. A short flick, with one end loaded, used as an offensive weapon.
BLUE. adj. [blasp, Sax. blue, Fr.] One of the seven original colours.

There's gold, and here
Blow's valiant to kee least, and his legs
Have lipt and trampled killing.
Shakespeare.

Where first thou found'st unmarkt, and his legs
Unwept,
There pitch the marks as blue as bilberry. Swift.

O come,
He seems to understand no difference between titles of respect and acts of worship: between expressions of esteem and devotion: between religious and civil worship. For he blunders and confounds all these alike; and whatever proves one, he thinks, proves all the rest. Sifting facts.

Blander, n. [from the verb.] A grog or shameful mistake.

It was the universal custom among the Jesuits, that he should avoid being particular in the drawing up of an army, and other circumstances in the day of battle; for that he had observed numerous blunders and absurdities committed by war-drums not conversant in the art of war.

Addition.

It is our own ignorance that makes us charge the works of the Almighty as defects or blunders.

Doré on Art.

BLUNDERER, n. [from blunder.] A man apt to commit blunders; a blockhead.

Another sort of judges will decide in favour of an author, or will pronounce him a more blunderer, according to the company they have so toils.

Doré on Art.

BLUNDERHEAD, n. [from blunder and head.] A stupid fellow.

At the rate of this thick-skulled blunderhead, every jobber shall take upon him to read upon divine.

Doré on Art.

BLUNT, adj. [etymology uncertain.]

1. Dull on the edge or point; not sharp.

Thanks to that beauty, which can give an edge to the blunders of fools.

Doré on Art.

2. Dull in understanding; not quick.

Valentine being gone, I'll quickly crost.

By some fly trick, blunt Thoro's dull proceeding.

Doré on Art.

3. Rough; not delicate; not civil.

Whitehead, a grave divinity, was of a blunt flexible nature. One day the queen happened to say, I like the better, because thou liv'st unmarried.

Doré on Art.

'Tis not enough your counsellor! All true:

Blunt truths more mischife than wise falsehoods do.

Doré on Art.

4. Abrupt; not elegant.

To the too many circumstances, ere one come to the matter, is wearisome; to use none at all, is blunt.

Doré on Art.

5. Hard to penetrate. This life is improper.

I saw my heart hardened and blunt to new impositions, and it will scarce receive or retain affections of yesterday.

Doré on Art.

TO BLUNT, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To dull the edge or point.

So ficken vaining moons too near the sun, and blunt their contents on the edge of day.

Doré on Art.

2. To repress or weaken any appetite, desire, or power of the mind.

Blunt not his love;

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace.

Doré on Art.

BLUNTLY, adv. [from blunt.]

1. In a blunt manner; without sharpness.

2. Coarsely; plainly; roughly.

I can keep honest counsellors, mark a serious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly.

Doré on Art.

A man of honest blood,

Who to his wife, before the time alluded.

For childbirth came, thus bluntly spoke his mind.

Doré on Art.

BLUNTNESS, n. f. [from blunt.]

1. Want of edge or point; dulness; obtuseness; want of sharpness.

The crafty boy, that had felt off eff'd

To pierce my stubborn and resisting breast,

And kill the bluntbrow'd ass himself.

Doré on Art.

Coarsefaced; roughness of manners; rude finnicrity.

His silence grew wit, his bluntness's integrity, his belief ignorance virtuous simplicity.

Doré on Art.

Manage difficulties with ease; whence some readers will be affiUed to discern a difference between bluntness of speech and strength of reason.

Doré on Art.

False friends, his deadlight foes, could find no way and way, but bow of honest blunt's affiUate to betray.

Doré on Art.

BLUNT-WITTLED, adj. [from blunt and wit.] Dull; stupid.

Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour.

Shak.

BLUR, n. f. [from burr, Span. a bolt, Skinner.] A bolt; a flour; a spot.

Bar, one close nothing but a great blur; a total universal pollution.

Shak.

TO BLUR, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To blot; to obscur; without quite effacing.

Such an act,

That blurs the grace and bluffs of melody.

Shak.

Calls virtue hypocrisy.

Shak.

Long is since I saw him.

But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favour

Which then he wore.

Shak.

Controlling innate principles, I defer those men to say, whether they can, or cannot, by education and fashion, be blured and blotted out.

Shak.

2. To blot; to stain; to fully.

Saccharists may eclipse their own.

But cannot blur my foul renown.

Hedr.

TO BLUR, v. a. [without etymology.] To speak inadvertently; to let fly without thinking; commonly with out intensive.

Others cast our blood; and deadly speeches at random, and cannot hold, but blurt out their words, which afterwards they are forced to eat.

Heb.

They had some trouble of a Decree, which they, upon surpullous, thrust'd out. Generals of the army,

They blurt if they blurt not, ever well aware.

Shak.

A swan is white, or Queenbury is fair.

Young.

TO BLUSH, v. n. [blosen, Dutch.]

1. To betray shame, or confusion, by a red colour on the cheek or forehead.

I had not.

A thousand blushing apparitions

To start into her face; a thousand innocent chants.

In angel whiteness, bear away these blushes.

Shak.

I will not.

And, when my face is fair, you shall perceive

Whether I blush or no.

Shak.

All these things are graceful in a friend's mouth, which are blushing in a man's own.

Shak.

Shame causeth blushing; blushing is the rust of the blood to the face; although blushing will be seen in the whole breast, yet that is but in passage to be painted.

Shak.

Blush then, but blurt for your destructive silence, that terrifies your soil.

Smith.

2. To carry a red colour, or any soft and bright colour.

To-day he puts forth

The tender leaves of hope; a no-no more blushing; and bursts his blushing honours thick upon him.

Shak.

But
3. It has at before the cause of shame.
To them, and, most away your victors,
That pages blushing at him; and men of heart
Look'd wondering at each other. Shakespeare
You have not yet loft all your natural modesty, but blushing Calamy's Scorn
To blush. u. a. To make red. Not used.
Pale and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labring heart,
Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er return
To blush and beautify the cheek again. Shakespeare BLUSHING. m. f. [from blushing.] Having the colour of a blush.
Blushing of trees, that are white, are commonly in flowers; clothe the trees, crabs, peaches, are blushy, and smell sweet.
Stratton's entering, moved a blushy colour in his face; but detecting him, he relapsed into pale mouths. Henry IV. Part II.
To BLUSH. u. n. [Opposed from blushing.]
1. To roar as a torrent; to be violent and loud.
Earth his anchor mother was,
And blushing Ecclus his hoated fire. Spenser
So now he forms with many a sturdy bow.
So now his blushing blist each coast doth smother. Spenser
2. To bully; to puff; to swagger; to be tumultuous.
In hot heart; too big to hear this, says a blustering follower; I'll destroy myself. Sir, says the gentleman, here's a dagger at your service; in the humour went off.
Le Ffrang. Then the musk flint to a downright meeting, or musk bluff and blunter, till perhaps he raise a counter.
Blustering. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A roar of forms; tempest.
The fires look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. Shakespeare
To the winds they set.
Their corslets will with bluster to confound
Sea, sir, and there.
2. Noise; tumult.
So, by the heaven's trumpet's bluster,
You hear all tongues and nations mutter. Swift
3. Turbulence; fury; fire.
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall.
With those that have offended. Shakespeare
4. Boast; boisterous.
A cortiour makes a great deal more bluster than a man of honour. Le Ffrang.
BLUSTEROUS. m. f. [from bluster.]
A swaggerer; a bully; a tumultuous noisy fellow.
Vol. I.
BOA

Some furtive; I have met, carrying bones about in their pockets, bagging in that which was their shame.

2. To exalt one's self.

Thus with your mouth you have bagged against me, and multiplied your words against me.

Each xvi. 15.

To BOAT. v. a.

1. To brag of; to display with ostentatious language.

For if I have bagged any thing to him, I am not ashamed.

Neither do the spirits damn'd
Lost all their virtue, left bad man should bag.

Their squalid deeds.

If they wou'd chuse to give God the praise of his goodness; yet they did it only, in order to be bagged in God.

2. To magnify; to exalt.

They that trust in their wealth, and bag themselves in the multitude of their riches. Psalm xlix. 6.

Confounded be all them that serve graven images, that bag themselves of idols. Psalm xxviii. 7.

BOAT. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. An expression of ostentation; a proud speech.

Thou, that makest thy bag to the law, through breaking the law dishonourest thou God? Romans ii. 23.

The world is more apt to find fault with a man, who bag, than commend; the bag will probably be condemned, when the great action that occasioned it is forgotten.

Spatter.

2. A cause of boasting; an occasion of pride; the thing boasted.

Not Tyra, nor Mycono, match her name, nor great Alemona, the proud bag of fame. Pep.

BOASTER. n. f. [from bagful.] A bragger; a man that vaunts any thing ostentatiously.

Complaints the more candid and judicious of the chymists themselves are wont to make of those bagfuls, that confidently pretend that they have extracted the fat or sulphur of quicksilver, when they have digested it by additions, wherewith it resembles the concoction.

Boyle.

No more delays, vain bagful! but begin; I prophesy beforehand I shall win:

I'll teach you how to brag another time. Dryden.

He that proud bagful, and with them swells,
Down to the realms of night. Philips.

Boastful. adj. [from bagful and full.]

Ostentatious; inclined to brag.

Bagful, and rough, your first son is a squire;
The next a tradesman, meag, and much a liar.

Boastfully, adv. [from bagfull.] Ostentatiously.

We look on it as a pitch of impertinency, boastfully to shew our sins; and it deferves to be considered, whether this kind of conceit, have not some affinity with it.

Decay of Piety.

BOAT. n. f. [bat, Saxon.]

1. A vessel to pass the water in. It is usually distinguished from other vessels, by being smaller and uncovered, and commonly moved by rowing.

Do not think that any one nation, the Syrian executed, to whom the knowledge of the art came, did find out at once the device of either ship or boat, in which they durst venture themselves upon the sea.

An effeminate foundid multitude.

Whose utmost daring is to cross the Nile
In painted boats, to fright the crocodile.

The Gentleman's Journal.

2. A ship of a small size; as, a passing boat, paquet boat, advice boat, fly boat.

BOATMAN. n. f. [from boat, Lat.] Roar; noise; loud sound.

In Meina Insurrection, the guns were heard from thence as far as Augsburg and Syracuse, about an hundred Italian miles, in loud boastes.

Dorck's Physica-theology.

BOATMAN. n. f. [from boat and man.]

He that managis a boat.

Boatsman, a man that sailis the boat.

To wond'ring pangleers, the walls below. Dryd.

That boasty Phaon only was unkind,
An ill-bred boaster, rough as waves and wind.

Prior.

BOATSWAIN. n. f. [from boar and saw.]

An officer on board a ship, who has charge of all her rigging, ropes, cables, anchors, sails, flags, colours, pendants, &c.

He also cares take of the long-boat, and its furniture, and fleers her either by himself or his mate. He calls out the several gages and companies to the execution of their watches, works, and spells; and he is also a kind of provost-marshal, feires and punishes all offenders, that are sentenced by the captain, or court-martial of the whole fleet.

Harris.

Sometimes the meanest boatswain may help to prefer the ship from flabbling.

An officer of Parliament.

Slimmer deduces it from boof, foolish, Span.

2. To beat; to drub; to bang.

To boast. If boastful Britons, whom their fathers have in their own land beaten, boast'd, let them blush. Skubefair.

3. To cheat; to gain by fraud.

I have boast'd his brain more than he has boast'd my bones. Shakespeare.

Live, Rodrigues!

He calls me to a refutation large
Of gold and jewels that I boast'd from him,
As gifts to Delmoream. Shakespeare.

Here we have been worrying one another, who should have the booty, still this cursed fox has us boast'd both on's. L'Estrange.

To BONE. v. n. To play backward and forward; to play looely against anything.

They comb, and then they order every hair;
A birthday jewel babbling at their ear. Dryden.

You may tell her,
I'm rich in jewels, rings, and babbling pearls,
Pluck'd from Moors ears. Dryden.

BONE. n. f. [from the verb neuter.]

1. Something that hangs so as to play loosely; generally an ornament at the ear; a pendant; an ear-ring.

The gaudy goblet, when the face is agog,
In jewels dress'd, and at each ear a bob. Dryden.

2. The words repeated at the end of a stanza.

To bed, to bed, will be the bob of the song. L'Estrange.

A blow.

I am full tainted, yea sometimes with pinches, nips, and bobs. Ascham's Scholemaster.

A mode of ringing.

BOBBIN. n. f. [bobbin, Fr. From bonbon, Lat.] A small pin of wood, with a notch, to wind the thread about when women weave lace.

The things you follow, and make fongs on now,
Should be sent to knits, or set down to bobbins, or bonnets. Twiss.

BOBBINWORK. n. f. [from bobbin and work.] Work woven with bobbins.

Not netted nor woven with warp and woof, but after the manner of bobbinwork. Grey's Magna.

BOCHERRY. n. f. [from bob and cherry.]

A play among children, in which the cherry is hung so as to bob against the mouth.

Beckbery teaches at once two noble virtues, patience and constancy; the first, in adhering to the pursuit of one end; the latter, in bearing a disappointment. Arkwright and Deyg.

BOAT TAIL. n. f. [from bob, in the sense of cut.] Cut tail; short tail.

Avanta, you ears!

Be thy mouth or black or white, Or bobbed like, or twisted tail,
Tom will make him weep and wail. Shakespeare.

BOAT-TAILLED. adj. [from boat-tail.] Having a tail cut, or short.

There was a boatailed cur cried in a gazette, and one that found him brought him home to his master.

L'Estrange.

BOB-WIG. n. f. [from bob and wig.] A short wig.

A young fellow riding towards us full gallop, with a bobwig and a black filk bag tied to it, flit-hurt at the coach, to ask us how the judges were behind.

Spectator.

BOCACEINE. n. f. A fort of linen cloth; a fine buckram.

Dib.

BOCCELET. n. f. A kind of long-wing.

BOCCELET. ed hawk.

To BODE. v. a. [to boban, Sax.] To portend; to be the omen of. It is used in a sense of either good or bad.

This boste some strange eruption to our feet.

Hemster.

You have oppossed their faire policy with true and great wisdome; what they should have been to us a mightie cuss, you are providing shall be one of our principal strengths.

Sparris's German.

It happen'd once, a sadness pringy
A swarm of bees that cut the liquid sky
Upon the topmost branch in clouds aligned to his master. Dryden.

If fiery red his glowing globe descends,
High winds and furious tempests he portends;
But if his cheeks are swohn with livid blue,
Direct his weather by his wepy huir. Dryden.

To BODE. v. n. To be an omen; to forecast.

Sir, give me leave to say, whatsoever now
The omen prove, it bode'll well to you. Dryden.

BODEMENT. n. f. [from bode.] Portent; omen; prophecies.

This foolish dreaming, superstitious girl,
Makes all those bodeaments. Shakespeare.

Macketh never vanquish'd be, until Great Binam-wood to Dunmow's high hill
Shall come again his fopp'd will.

That will never be.

Sweet boograments, good. Shakespeare.

To BODGE. v. n. [a word in Shakespeare, which is perhaps corrupted from beggle.] To begle.

With this we charg'd again, but out, alas! We bodeg'd again; as I have seen a swan,
With bothael beard, fam in the tide. Skat.

BOIDCE. n. f. [from bodce.] Stays; a waistcoat quitted with whalebone, worn by women.

Her bodece half way she unlaid;
About her arms she filly cast.

The filk band, and held him fast. Prior.

This should she keep ignorant strangers and bodice-makers from meddling. Locke.

BOIDLESS. adj. [from body.] Incorporeal; having no body.

They bodiess and immaterial are.

And can be only lodg'd within our minds. Daviss.
BOD

This is the very coinage of our brain;
This bodiless creation empties
Is very cunning.
Shakespeare.

1. Corporeal: containing body

What resemblance could wood or stone bear
In fabric void of all sensible qualities, and bodily dimensions?
Swift.

2. Relating to the body, not the mind.

Of such as refered to our Saviour Christ, being present on earth...
And any unto him with better forces, for the benefit of the souls everlasting happiness, than those whose bodies so unnecessarily gave occasion of seeking relief. Hooker.

BODILY, adj. [from body.]

- The Literary and Historical Dictionary
- The Standard Dictionary of the English Language

3. Body: a part of the body

Each of them bad bodkins in their hands, whereas continually they pricked him. Sidney.

4. Reality; opposed to representation: a scriptural sense.

A shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ. Colossians.

5. A collective mass; a joint power.

There is in the knowledge of God and man this certainty, that life and death have divided between them the whole body of mankind. Hooke.

There were so many disaffected persons of the foot, that there might a body stand up for the king. Clarke.

When pigners pretend to form themselves into a body, it is the same for us, who are men of blood, to look about us. Addison's Guardian.

6. The main army; the battle: distant from the wings, van, and rear.

The van of the king's army was led by the general and Wilmot; in the body was the king and the prince; and the rear composed of one thousand foot, commanded under colonel Welbel. Clarke.

7. A corporation; a number of men united by some common eye.

I shall in the mention a particular whereby your whole body will be certainly against me; and the body, almost to a man, on my side. Swift.

Nothing was more common, than to hear that preserved body charged with what is incomprehensible; despised for their poverty, and hated for their riches. Swift.

8. The main part; the bulk: as, the body, or hall, of a ship; a body of a coach; the body of a church; the body, or trunk, of a tree.

Thence come rich merchantile trades by to Babylon; from whence, by the body of Ephraim, as far as it is bended westward; and, afterward, by a branch that. Clarke.

This city has navigable rivers, that run up into the body of Italy; they might supply many countries with fish. Addison.

9. A substance; matter, as distinguished from other matter.

Even a metallic body, and therefore much more a vegetable or animal, may, by fire, be turned into water. Boyle.

10. In geometry. Any solid figure.

11. A pandent; a general collection: as, a body of the civil law; a body of divinity.

To BODY, v. n. [from the noun] To produce in some form.

As imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name. Shakespeare.

BOG, n. [beg, loth, Irish; bagae, Fr.] A marsh; a morass; a ground too soft to bear the weight of the body.

Through fire and through flames, through fire and whirlpool, o'ergap and nargle, Shakespeare.

A gull profound! as that Soliman, betwixt Damiata and mount Caucas old, Milton.

He walks upon legs and whirlpools; wherever he treadeth, he sinks. South.

Learn from to great a Welt, a land of bog.

With ditches foned, a heaven fat with fog. Dryd.

He is drawn, by a snart of grisly frowns, into legs and more and more every day of his by the grace of God.

BOG-ABRINTER, n. [from leg and crab.]

One that lives in a boggy country.

To BOGGLE, v. n. [from begg, Dutch, a speck, a bugbear, a phantom.]

1. To start; to fly back; to fear to come forward.

You boggle-throwly; every feather starts you. Shakespeare.

We start and boggle at every unausal appearance, and cannot endure the sight of the bugbear. Gravatelle.

Nature, that rude, and in her first effay, Stood boggling at the roughness of the way;
U'd to the road, unknowing to return. Goes boldly on, and loves the path when worn. Dryden.

2. To hesitate, to be in doubt.

And never boggle to resolve.

The members you deliver o'er, upon demand. Hudibras.

The well-shaped changeling is a man that has a rational soul, fly you? Make the cress a little longer, and more pointed, and shee a little flatter than ordinary, and then you begin to boggle. Locke.

3. To play fast and loose; to dabble.

When summoned to his last end, it was no time for him to boggle with the world. Howel.

Bo'Giller, n. s. [from boggle.] A doubter; a timorous man.

You have been a boggler ever. Shakespeare.

Bo'gy, adj. [from beg and bogle.] Swamy.

Their country was very narrow, low, and boggie, and the great industry and expence, defended from the foes. Arbuthnot.

Bo'ghouse, n. f. [from beg and boughly.] A house of office.

Bo'he'a, n. f. [from Indian word.] A species of tea, of higher, colour, and more affluent taste, than green tea.

Coarse peeters, confiding chiefly of lead, is part of the holds in which bocas tea was brought from China. Woodward.

As some frail cup of China's fairest mold
The tumults of the boiling boggie braves,
And holds secure the coffee's falve waves. Tickell.

She went from opera, park, as fillly, play,
To morning walks, and pray's three hours a day;
To part her time 'twixt reading and boggie,
To maste, and fill all the necessary tea.

To BOIL, v. n. [bouiller, Fr. bulla, Lat.]

1. To be agitated by heat; to fluctuate with heat.

He saw there boil the fiery whirlpools. Chapman.

Suppose the earth removed, and placed nearer to the sun, in the orbit of Mercury, there the whole world would boil within the compass of a year. Bekulley.

2. To be hot; to be fervent, or effervesc.

That strength with which my boiling youth was fraught,
Within the vale of Bashan I fought. Dryden.

Well I know. What perils youthful ardour would purge,
That boiling blood would carry thee too far. Dryd.

3. To move with an agitation like that of boiling water.

Then headlong flouts beneath the dashed tide,
The trembling fins the boiling waves divide. Gay.

4. To be in hot liquor, in order to be made tender by the heat.

Bos'let of a fenny snake, in the cauldron boil and bake. Shakespeare.

5. To cook by boiling.

If you live in hot liquor, roasting and boiling are below the dignity of your office, and which it becomes you to be ignorant of. Swift.

6. To boil over. To run over the vesel with heat.

A few soft words and a kiss, and the good man meest; for he nature works and boils over in him. Congreve.
This hollow was a vast cavern, filled with molten matter, which, as it boiled over in any part, ran down the sides of the mountain. Addis, in Italy.

To Boll. v. a. To heat, by putting into boiling water; to seethe. To try whether food be old or new, the fense cannot inform; but if you boil it in water, the newness of the meat is in the vapour that bears such grace, into the harth and boil't to the tongue of war? Shaq. His sweetness won a more regard unto his place, than all the boil'd means. The ignorant greatest praffith, Ben Hoyt. God into the hands of their deliverer Puts invincible might, To quell the might of the earth, the oppreffer, The heat and boil't force of violent winds. Milke. Still mult I beg thee not to name Sempronius: Lucia, I like not that loud boil'serous man. Addis, in Italy.

3. Unwieldy; clumsily violent. His boil'serous club, fo buried in the ground, He could not raise it up again in fight. But that the knight him advantage found. Fairy Queen.

4. It is used by Woodward of heat; violent. When the fun hath gained a greater strength, the heat becomes too powerful and boil'serous for them. Natural History.

Bolsterously, adv. [from boil'serous.] Violently; tumultuously. A fceptre, snatch'd with an unruly hand, Must be as boil'serously maintaine'd as gain'd. Stat. Those are all remains of the universal deluge, when the water of the ocean, being boil'serously turned upon the earth, bore along all moveable bodies. Woodward. Another faculty of the intellect comes boil'serously in, and makes me from fo pleasing a dream. Swift.

Bolsterousness, n. f. [from boisterous.] The state or quality of being boil'serous; tumultuosity; turbulence. The word boil'serous means pertaining to the nature of boil, or clay.

BOL. adj. [bald, Saxon.]

1. Daring; brave; stout; courageous; manly; fearless; intrepid; The wicked fire when no man pursueth but the righteous are boil'd as a lion. Prov. 30.

I have seen the councils of a noble country boil'd, or timorous, according to the fits of his good or ill health that managed them. Temple.

2. Executed with spirit, and without mean caution. Thieves, nervous, bold; thefe, languid and reftless. Roscommon.

The cathedral church is a very boil'd work, and a master-piece of Gethick architecture. Addison Italy.

3. Confident; not scrupulous; not timorous. We were boil'd in our God to speak unto you the gospel with much contention. I Thess. I can be boil'd to fay, that this age is adorned with some men of that judgment, that they could open new and undiscovered ways to knowledge. Locke.

4. Impudent; rude. In thy prosperity he will be as thyfelf, and will be boil'd over thy fervants. If thou be brought low, he will be against thee. Addis, in Italy.

Lictor, such as fweb great liberty of ficion, or expression. The figures are boil'd even to tennery. Cottle. Which no boil'd tales of gods or monfters ill. But human paffions, fuch as with us dwell. Walker.

6. Standing out to the view; striking to the eye. Catafcreaps and hyperboles are to be used judiciously, and placed in poetry, as heightenings and shadows in painting, to make the figure boil'd, and caufe it to hand off to light. Dryden.

Open; smooth; even; level: a failer's term. Her dominions have boil'd accessible coasts. Howell.

8. To make bold. To take freedoms: a phrase not grammatical, though common. To be boil'd is better; as, I want boil'd to tell the howfe, that scandalous livings make scandalous minifteries. Roderick.

I have made boil'd to fend to your wife; My falt is, that the will to Defidora Procume me fome accedes. Shakespeare. Making & bold, my fears forgetting manners, to unfeal their grand commiffion. Shakespeare. And were you as good as George a Green. I hall make boldly to turn upon. Hudson. I durft not thus boil'd with Ovid, let fpread future Milburn should arife. Dryden. Some men have the fortune to be eafened with, only for making bold to fcoff at their things, which is the greater part of mankind reverence. Tullion.

To boil'den, v. a. [from bold.] To make boldly; to give condence. Quick inventers, and fair ready fpeakers, being boil'den with their preuent abilities to fay more, and porance better too, in the hidden for that preuent, than any other can do, ufe lefs help of diligence and study. Addison's Schoolmaster.

I am much too ventous in templing of your patience, but am boil'den Under your promis'd pardon. Shakespeare. Boldface, n. f. [from bold and face.] Impudence; fauceines; a term of reproach and reprehension. How now, boil'dface! teres an old troth; trefch, we eat our owne meat, I'ye known you what you eat, ye foal. L'Estrange.

Impudent. I have seen thou fill'd of creatures; and, seeing their rare works, I have seen enough to confute all the boil'dface atheists of this age. Bramhall against Hobbes.

Boldly, adv. [from bold.] 1. In a bold manner; with courage; with spirit. Thus we may boldly speak, being strengthened with the example of a converted peafe. Hobbes.

I speak to subjedts, and a fubject speaks. Sture's up by hew's, thus boldly for his king. Shakespeare.

It may perhaps be sometimes ufed, in a bad fene, for impudently. Boldness, n. f. [from bold.] 1. Courage; bravery; intrepidity; spirit; fortitude; magnanimity; daring.

Her heart the rid do, as might show a fearful boil'defy, daring to do that which the knew not how to do. Sidney.

2. Exemption from caution and scrupulous nicety. The boil'dings of the figures is to be hidden sometimes by the address of the poet, that they may work their effect upon the mind. Dryden.

3. Freedom; liberty. Great is my boil'dness of speech toward you; great is my glorying in you. 2 Corinthians.

4. Confident trul in God. Our fear excludeth not that boil'defy which becometh faints. Hooper. We have boldenfs and access with confidenty, by the faith of him. Having therefore boil'denfs to enter into the holy by the blood of Jefus. Hebrews.

Sure, if the guilt were theirs, they could not charge thee. With fuch a gallant boldenfs! if 'twere thing, Thou couldat not bear 'tw with a fuch a fient. Dryden.

His di芬th, though it do not infruct him to think wifer than other princes, yet it helps him to speak with more boil'denfs what he thinks. Temple. Boldenfs is the power to speak or do what we intend, before others, without fear or disorder. Locke.

6. Impudence. That moderation, which ufed to fupport boil'denfs, and to make them conquer that fuffer. Hooper.

BOLE. n. f. 1. The body or trunk of a tree. All fell upon the high-hair'd oaks, and down hill fell bulting upon the earth; and up all the boles and boughts. Chaguarre.

But when the smoother bole from knots is free, We make a deep impenetrable in the earth. Dryden. View well this tree, the queen of all the grove! How vat her bole, how wide her arms are spread, How high above the rest the foout her head? Dryd.

2. A kind of earth. A bole Armeica is an alalreng earth, which takes its name from Armenia, the country from which we have it. Woodard.

3. A measure of corn, containing six buiches. Of good barley put eight bushels, that is, about 40 English quarters, in a stone trough. Mariner.

BOLIS, n. f. [Latin.] Bulis is a great fiery ball, swiftly hurried through the air, and generally throwing a tail after it. Aristotle calls it agens. There have often been imme-

BOLSTER, n. f. [boltere, Sax. bolster, Dutch.] 1. Some-
1. Something laid on the bed, to raise and support the head; commonly a bag filled with down or feathers.

2. Perhaps some cold blank in her bolster now, or, rather, rugged, and taking off from the main to lean her unpillow'd head.

3. This arm shall be a bolster for thy head; I'll fetch clean straw to make a soldier's bed. Gay.

4. A pad, or quilt, to hinder any prejudice, or fill up a vacancy.

5. Up goes her hand, and off the slips.

6. The bolters that supply her hips.

7. A bolster, or compress, to be laid on a wound.

8. The bandage is the girl, which hath a bolster in the middle, and the ends tied firmly together.

10. Walton.

11. Which, Dryden.

12. jiddifon on mortar, could Chambers.

13. Sbarf, at upright have Hooktor.

14. ilart BiM.

15. the Hale.

16. expression up to I.

17. to dMfon.

18. to Hudibras.

19. A Lightning.

20. BOLT.

21. BOLT-ER, v. a. [from the noun.]

22. To support the head with a bolster.

23. To afford a bed to.

24. Mortal eyes do see them bolster.

25. More than their own.

27. To hold wounds together with a compress.

28. The practice of bolstering the cheeks forward, does little service to the wound, and is very uneasy to the patient.

29. Sharp.

30. To support; to hold up; to maintain.

31. This is now an expression somewhat coarse and obloque.

32. We may be made wiser by the publick persuasions granted in men's minds, so they be used to further the truth, not to bolster errors.

33. Hooker.

34. The lawyer forths his tongue to fail for the bolstering out of unjust causes.

35. Hakewill.

36. It was the way of many to bolster up their crazy darting confidences with confidences.

37. South.

38. BOLT. n.f. [boul, Dutch; Blasct.]

39. An arrow; a dart shot from a crossbow.

40. Yeak's'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell.

41. It fell upon a little white flower.

42. Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound.

43. Shakespeare.

44. The blunted bolt against the nymph he deeds;

45. But with the sharp transfix'd Apollo's breath. Dryden.

46. Lightning; a thunderbolt.

47. Sing'd with the flames, and with the bolt transfix'd.

48. With native earth your blood the monsters mix'd.

49. Dryden.

50. Bolt upright; that is, upright as an arrow.

51. Both iron, native or from the mine,做成of long diaries, on the thickness of a small knitting needle, bolt upright, like the bristles of a stiff brush.

52. As I stood bolt upright upon one end, one of the ladies back'd out.

53. Addition.

54. The bar of a door, so called from being straight like an arrow.

55. We now say, 'shoot the bolt, when we speak of fastening or opening a door.'

56. 'Tis not in, then, to oppose the bolt.

57. As a carcass may be cased.

58. Shakespeare.

59. An iron to fasten the legs of a prisoner.

60. This is, I think, corrupted from bought, or link.

61. Away with him to prison; lay bolt enough upon Shakespeare.

62. To BOLT. v. a. [from the noun.]

63. To shut or fall with a bolt.

64. The bolted gates flew open at the blast.

65. The flame rush'd in, and Armea stood aghast.

66. Dryden.

67. To bolt out, or throw out precipitantly.

68. I hate when wise can bolt her arguments.

69. And virtue has no tongue to check her pride. Milton.

70. To fall, as a bolt or pin; to pin; to keep together.

71. That I could reach the axle, where the pins are which bolt this frame, that I might pull them out! Bar Jemmy.

72. To fetter; to shakele.

73. It is great.

74. To do that thing that ends all other deeds, which shakeles accidents, and bolts up change. Shakespeare.

75. To fit, or separate the parts of any thing with a sife. [blatter, Fr.]

76. He now had bolted all the flour.

77. Spooner.

78. In the bolting and fitting of fourteen years of power and favour, all that came out could not be pure meal.

79. Hutton.

80. I cannot bolt this matter to the brain.

81. Bradwardin and holy Aulfin can. Dryden.

82. To examine by fitting; to try out; to lay open.

83. It would be well bolted out, whether great refractions may not be made upon reflections, as upon direct beams. Bacon.

84. The judges, or jury, or parties, as the council of attorneys, propounding questions, beats and bolts out the truth much better than when the witnesses deliver only a formal series. Holts.

85. Time and more time bolt out the truth of things, through all disguises.

86. L'Estrange.

87. To purify; to purge. This is hard.

88. The rained snow.

89. That's bolt'd by the northern blast twice over.

90. Shakespeare.

91. To BOLT. v. n. To spring out with speed and suddenness; to start out with the quickness of an arrow.

92. This Puck seems but a dreaming doll.

93. Still walking like a raging colt.

94. And oft of a beat, but bolt.

95. Of purpose to deceive us. Dryden.

96. They erected a fort, and from thence they bolt'd like to the forest, sometimes into the forest, sometimes into the woods and woodsmen, and sometimes back to their den.

97. Bacon.

98. As the house was all in a flame, out bolts a mouse from the smol to save herself. L'Estrange.

99. I have reflected on those men who, from time to time, have shaft themselves into the world. I have seen many succussions of them some bolting out upon the stage with vast applause, and others killed off.

100. Dryden.

101. The birds to foreign parts repair'd; And beats, that bolted out, and saw the forest.

102. Dryden.

103. BOLT-ROPE. n.f. [from bolt and rope.]

104. The rope on which the fail of a ship is fowed and fastened.

105. Sea Dict.

106. BOLTER. n.f. [from the verb.]

107. A sieve to separate meal from bran or husks; or to separate finer from coarser parts.

108. Dowsw, filthy dowlas! I have given them away to bakers wives, and they have made bolters of them.

109. Shakespeare.

110. With a good strong chopping kniffe mince the two capons, bones and all, as small as ordinary minced meat; put them into a large neat bolter.

111. Bacon's Natural History.

112. When superciliously be fists.

113. Through coax'd bolter others gifts. Hudibras.

114. 2. A kind of net.

115. Those lakes, and divers others of the fore-casted, are taken with threads, and some of them with the bolter, which is a puller of a bigger size.

116. Carew.

117. BOLTHEAD. n.f. A long straight-necked glass vefiel, for chemical distillations, called also a matrafe, or receiver.

118. This spirit abounds in fatty, which may be sepa-rated, by putting the liquor into a bolver with a long narrow neck.

119. Boyle.
BOMBARD. noun. [from bombard, Lat.] A great gun; a cannon: it is a word now obsolete.

To BOMBARD. verb. a. To attack with bombs.

BOMBARDIER. noun. [from bombard.] The engineer whose employment it is to throw bombs.

BOMBARDMENT. noun. [from bombard.] An attack made upon a city, by throwing bombs into it.

BOMBAST. adjective. [from the substantitive.] High sounding; of big sound without meaning.

BOMBAY. noun. [from Bombay, Lat.] A city in India.

BOMBAY ROBA. noun. [Ital. a fine gown.] A fluey wanton.

BONASUS. noun. [Lat.] A kind of buffalo, or wild bull.

BONCHRETIIEN. noun. [French.] A species of pear, so called, probably, from the name of a gardener.

BOND. noun. [bomb. Sax. bond; it is written indifferentely, in many of the modern documents, bond or bond. See band.] 1. Cords, or chains, with which any one is bound. 2. Agreement that holds any thing together. Let any one send his contemplation to the extremities of the universe, and see what conceivable hoops, what load he can imagine to hold this mass of matter in so close a prefecture together.

BONDAGE. noun. [from bond.] 1. Captivity; imprisonment; state of servitude. You only have overthrown me, and in my bondage confound my glory. — Dryden. 2. Obligation; law by which any man is obliged. Unhappy that I am! I cannot leave my heart into my mouth! I love your majesty. According to the law of the land, this man is free. — Dryden.

BONDSWOMAN. noun. [from bond and woman.] A woman slave. My lords, the senators are for slaves, and their wives for bond-servants. — Pope's Jovius's Cato.

BONE. noun. [ban, Saxon.] 1. The solid parts of the body of an animal, made up of hard fibres, tied one to another by small transverse fibres, as those of the muscles. In a fucus they are porous, soft, and easily dismembered. As their pores fill with a substance of their own nature, so they increase, harden, and grow close to one another. They are all spongious, and full of little cells; or are of a considerable firm thickness, with a large cavity, except the teeth, and where they are articulated, they are covered with a thin and strong membrane, called the periosteum. Each bone is much bigger at its extremity than in the middle, that the articulations might be firm, and the bones not easily put out of joint. But, because the middle of the bone should be strong, to favour its allotted weight, and resist accidents, the fibres are there more closely compacted together, supporting one another; and the bone is made hollow, and consequently not so easily broken, as it must have been had it been solid and smaller.

BONDE'SWANTY. noun. [from bond and servant.] A slave; a bond-servant; without the liberty of quitting his master.

And if thy brother, that dwelleth by thee, be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bond-servant.

BONDSWIVCE. noun. [from bond and service.] The condition of a bond-servant; servitude.

Upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of bond-servants. — Kings.

BONDSLAVE. noun. [from bond and slave.] A man in服; a bond-servant, who cannot change his master.

Love enjoined such diligence, that no apprehensions, no, no bondslaves could ever be, by fear, more readily at all commands than that young prince was. — Sillery.

All her ornaments are taken away; of a free woman she becomes a bond-servant. — Act ii. p. 11. Commonly the free-servant is led by his lord; but here the lord was led by his bond-servant.

Sir J. Denies.

BONDSMAN. noun. [from bond and man.] 1. A slave. Carnal greedy people, without such a precept, would have no mercy upon their poor bondmen and he that.

2. A person bound, or giving security, for another.

BONDSWOMAN. noun. [from bond and woman.] A woman slave.

My lords, the senators are for slaves, and their wives for bond-servants. — Pope's Jovius's Cato.
To merry acquaintance. Shakespeare.

Bo Néless, adj. [from bone.] Wanting bones.

I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have looked on, or read in his face, and sheeted
The brains out. Shakespeare.

To Bone-set, n. n. [from bone and set.] To re-lore a bone out of joint to its place; or join a bone broken to the other part.

Bo Nésetter, n. s. [from bone-set.] A chirurgeon; one who particularly professes the art of rejoining broken or luxated bones.

At present my defer to have a good bone-setter.

Bo'Nére, n.s. [from bone, good, Fr. and fire.] A fire made for some publick caule of triumph or exultation.

Ring ye the bells to make it wear away.
And forbes make all days.

Her forbes to make it wear away.
Mary's days? Why, she had abused and deceived her people.

Full soon by forbes and bell, we find to wear away.
Gay.

Bo'Nérace, n.s. [bonge race, Fr.] A forehead-cloth, or covering for the forehead, not now used.

Skinier.
I have from her bolt all over with emeralds and pearls, ranged in rows about her cowl, her peruke, her bonnet, and chaplet.

Hair dall'd on her breasts.

Bo'net, n.s. [bonet, Fr.] A covering for the head; a hat; a cap.

Go to them with this bonet in thy hands.
And thus far charging'th'head, here or wither'n.
Thy knee but the bone; for, in such buskets.
Adson is eloquent. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

They had not probably the ceremony of vailing the bone of the head when it was taken off, for, in the ancients, they still have it on their heads.

Adson.

Bo'net. [in fortification.] A kind of little ravelin, without any ditch, having a parapet three feet high, anciently placed before the points of the salient angles of the glacis.

Bo'net. [in law.] A sort of the priest's cap, is an outwork, having at the head three salient angles, and two inwards.

Bo'netts. [in the sea language.] Small sails fast set on the mizen.
BOO

This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps hogs in court.
A phantast, a monarch, and one that makes sport
To the prince and his bookmaker. Shakespeare.

Book-keeper. n. s. [from book and sell.]
He whose profession it is to sell books.
He went to the bookseller, and told him in anger,
he had sold a book in which there was false divinity.
Walsh.

Bookworm. n. s. [from book and worm.]
1. A worm or mite that eats holes in books, chiefly when damp.
My lion, like a moth or bookworm, feeds upon nothing but paper and ink, and will eat up any book to "dirt" him with wholesome and substantial food.
Guardian.

2. A fluent too closely given to books;
A reader without judgment.
Among those venerable galleries and foliary scenes of the university, I visited but a black gown, and a silk, to be at once a bookworm at any there. Pepys's Letters.

Booly. n. s. [An Irish term.]
All the Tartarians, and the people about the Cockney style in which we are naturally Scythians, live in hordes; being the very same that the Irish boys are, driving their cattle with them, and feeding only on their milk and white meat.
Spenser.

Boon. n. s. [from boon, a tree, Dutch.]
1. In sea language. A long pole used
To spread out the clue of the fludding fail;
and sometimes the clue of the mainail and forecastle are boom'd out.
2. A pole with buches or baskets, set up
As a mark to show the sailors how to steer in the channel, when a country is over fown. Sea Dictionary.

To Boon. v. n. [from the noun. A sea term.]
1. To rush with violence; as a ship is paid to come boonning, when she makes all the fail she can.
Dobson.

2. To swell and fall together.
Boonning our head
The billows cloot; he's numb'rd with the dead.
Forlook by thee, in vain I fought thy aid,
When booming billows cloot'd above my head. Pope.

Boon. n. s. [from bene, Sax. a petition.]
A gift; a grant; a benefaction; a present.
You shall me for my need but one fair look,
A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And left than this, I'm sure, you cannot give. Shakespeare.

That courtier, who obtained a boon of the emporer,
that he might every morning whisper his ear,
and say nothing, asked no unprofitable
foit for himself. Bacon.
The blust ring fool has fatisf'd his will;
His boon is given; his knight hath giv'd the day;
But loth the price. Dryden's Fables.

What rhetoric didst thou use
To gain this mighty boon? she pities me.
Addison's Cato.

Boon. adj. [boon, Fr.] Gay; merry as,
a boon companion.
Satiate at length,
And heighten'd with as wine, jocund and boon.
Thus to herself the pleasingly began. Parr. Left.
I know the influence of all our family, we play boon companion, and throw our money away in our cups. Arbuthnot.

BOOR. n. s. [boor, Dutch; ëbûn, Sax.] A ploughman; a country fellow; a clown.
The bare ends of a calamin is called grumbling;
If a man does not make a face upon the boor, he is profusely a malcontent. L'Estrange.
He may live as well as a bar of Holland, whole families of growing folk richly outfit his life. Temple.
To one which has not a fortune to move and when he's abs'd and baffled by a boor. Dryden.

Boorishly. adv. [from boor.] Clownishly;
ruffike; untaught; unchristianized.
Therefore, you known, sachem, which is,
In the vulgar, lack the society, which, in the bocch of,
Is company of this female. Shaftes. As you like it.

Boorishness. n.f. [from boorlsh.] Clownishness;
ruffikey; coarseness of manner.

Boor, n. s. [boor, Sax.] A fall for a cow or an ox.
To BOOR. v. n. [boar, to profit; Dutch:
bot, in Saxony, is recompence, repentance, or fine paid by way of expiation; bocn is, to repent, or to compensate;
as,
He is not to be nor borne.
And he beavened bone.

1. To profit; to advantage: it is commonly used in these modes, it bot, or what beats it.
In shall not bow them, who derogate from reading,
To exculpate, it, when they set no other remedy
as if their intent were only to deny that aliens and strangers from the family of God are won,
Or that one who does not know what is; is be wrougbt in them, without fames.

For what I have, I need not repeat;
And what I want, it bot not to complain. Shak.
Up.
To be wrougbt in them, without fames.

The purpo's end, or here lie fixed all
What bocn us these wars have to begun. Fairf.
What bocn the regal circle on his head,
That long behind he crafts his pompous reape; Pop.

2. To enrich; to benefit.
And I will bow thee with what gift before,
That modestly can beg. Shak. Ast. and Cleop.

Boor. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Profit; gain advantage; something given to mend the exchange.
MyGravity,
Wherein, let no man hear me, I take pride,
Could I, with bocn, change for an idle plume.
Which the air beats for vain. Shak.

2. To boot. With advantage; over and above;
besides.
Canst thou, O partial sheep, give thy repro,
To the wet fawby, in an hour's ride?
And, in the calm est and the full est night,
With all applauses and means to bocn,
Deny it to a king? Shakespeare.

Man is God's image; but a poor man is Christ's man to bocn; both images regard. Heronis.
He might have his mind and manners formed, and be instructed to bocn in several sciences. Locke.

3. It feems, in the following lines, used for bocn, or plunder.
Other, like bees, armed in their rings,
Make bocn the foarer's velvet bod. Shak.

BOOT. n. s. [bot, Armorick; bot, a shoe, Welsh; bote, French.]
1. A covering for the leg, used by horsemen.
That my leg is too long—
No; that it is too little.
I'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat rounder.
Shakespeare.

BOOT. n. s. [bot, Dutch; butin, Fr.]
1. Plunder; pilage; spoils gained from the enemy.
One way a band feft from forage drives
A herd of beests, fair oxen, and kine, and Their byste. Milton.

His confidence is the hus and ery that promotes him;
and when he reckons, that he has gotten a boot, he has only caught a Tartar. L'Estrange.

For, should you to extort be inclin'd,
Your cruel guilt will little bood find.
Dryden.

2. Things gotten by robbery.
If a man, in his fortune would not suffer me; she drops bones in my mouth.
Shakespeare.

3. To

To play booby. To play dishonestly, with an intent to lose. The French use, Je fais bétis, when they mean to say, I will not go.

We understand what we ought to do; but when we endeavor, we play booby against ourselves: our confidences direct us in the wrong way; our corruption hurries us another.

I have set this argument in the best light, that the ladies may not think that I write booby.

BOPE'ER, n. f. [from bo and pep.].

The art of looking out, and drawing back as if it were, or with the purpose to fright some other.

Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And for the same, my dear, I think.
Shakspeare.

Rivers.

That serve instead of peaceful barriers.
To part the engagements of their warrior.
Where both from side to side may slip.
And only encounter at bopees.

Dilfbrat.

That the devil plays at bopees, puts out his horns to do mischief, then thrusts them back for better.

Dyrd.

BORAC'HO, n. s. [barroso, Span.].

A drunkard.

How you think of wine! D'ye think my niece will ever endure such a boarly? you are an absolutely boarly in my opinion.

Bo'rale, adj. [from borale]. That may be bored.

Bo'race, n. s. [from archa.]. A plant.

Bo'ramez, n. s. The Scythian lamb, generally known by the name of Agnus Scyticus.

Much wonder is made of the boarax, that deformed animal, or vegetable lamb of Tartary, which wolves delight to feed on; which hath the shape of a lamb, affordeth a bloody juice upon breaking, and livesth while the plants be consumed about it.

Bo'ress, n. s. [borax, Low Latin.]. An artificial salt, prepared from salt amniac, nitre, calcined tartar, sea salt, and alum, dissolved in wine. It is principally used to folder metals, and sometimes an ucrine ingredient in medicine. Quincy.

Bo'rdel, n. s. [borderel, Teut. bordel, bordel'.] A brothel; a bawdy-house.

From the bordel it might come as well, the spit, or pitchfork.

Ben Jonson.

Making even his own house a bordel, a bordel, and a school of lewdness, to infill into the unwarne ears of his poor children.

Bacon's 'Vulgar Errors.'

Bo'rdel'lo, n. s. [Arnmorch.]. A brothel; a bawdy-house.

From the bordel it might come as well, the spit, or pitchfork.

Ben Jonson.

Making even his own house a bordel, a bordel, and a school of lewdness, to infill into the unwarne ears of his poor children.

Bacon's 'Vulgar Errors.'

Bo'rdex, n. s. [from bordex.]. May be bored.

To Bordel's, v. n. [from bordex.]. To adorn with a border of ornaments.

2. To reach; to touch; to confine; to be contiguous to.

To Bordel's, v. a.

1. To divide a frontier.

2. To bore a hole in any thing.

The have looking-glass divided with broad borders of crystal, and great counterfeit precious flowers.

Bacon.

The light must strike on the middle, and extend its greatest clearness on the principal figures; diminishing by degrees, as it comes nearer and nearer to the borders.

Dyrd.

Bo'rdex, n. s. [from bordex.]. A confine.

If a prince keep his residence on the border of his dominions, the remote parts will rebel; but if he make the centre his seat, he shall easily keep them in obedience.

Speicer.

3. The outer part of a garment, generally adorned with needlework, or ornaments.

4. A bank raised round a garden, and set with flowers; a narrow rank of herbs or flowers.

Vol. I.

There he arising, round about both thy
From bed to bed, from one to other border;
And takes survey, with curious blye eyes,
Of every flower and bird there for his order.

Shakspeare.

All with a border of rich fruit-trees crown'd,
Where loaded branches hide the lofty mound:
Such various ways the spacious alleys lead.

My doubtful muse knows not what path to tread.

Walter.

To Bord's, v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To confine upon; to touch something else at the side or edge: with upon.

It bordereth upon the province of Creagiana, which, in time past, had continual wars with the Turks and Grecians.

Knolles.

Virtue and honour had their temples bordering on each other, and are sometimes both on the same chin.

Addison.

2. To approach nearly to.

All wife, which borders upon profaneness, and makes bold with those things to which the greatest reverence is due, that they be named with folly.

Tillotson.

To Bord's, v. a.

1. To adorn with a border of ornaments.

2. To reach; to touch; to confine; to be contiguous to.

Bo're, v. n. [with archa.].

If in the borders of a foot.

There is no reason why there should not be borders.

Bo're, v. n. [from the verb.]

1. The hole made by boring.

Into hollow engines long and round,
Thick rammed'd, at th' other bore with touch of fire
Diluted, and infaturate.

Millen.

2. The instrument with which a hole is bored.

So shall that hole be fit for the file, or square bores.

Makos.

3. The face of any hole; the cavity.

The hollow.

We took a cylindrical pipe of glass, whose bore was about a quarter of an inch in diameter.

B啶.

Our careful monarch stands in peril here. This new east cannon's armament to explore;

The strength of big-corn'd powder loves to try,

And kill and cartridge forts for every bore.

Dyrd.

It will often appear in the hands of wind instruments; therefore cause pipes to be made with a single, double, and so on, to a sextuple bore and mark what tone every one giveth.

Bacon.

Bo're, the prettiest of bear.

The father bore it with undaunted soul.

Like one who durst his defiling accent:
Yet with becoming grief he bore his part,
Refused his heart, but not refused his heart.

Dryn.

To kill my father, and pollute his bed
By marrying her who bore me.

Dryn.

Bo'real, adj. [boreal, Lat.]. Northern; septentrional.

Cretes ample fields diminish to our eye;

Bo'real, and bound, as the whirl about, and very.

And Thracias, rend the woods, and feast upon

Millen.

Bo'ree, n. s. A kind of dance.

Dick could hardly dance a jig.

But Tom was better at a somerset.

Swift.

Bo'ree, n. s. [from boree.]. A piercer;

an instrument to make holes with.

The master-bricklayer must try all the foundations with a boree, such as well-diggers use to try the ground.

Millen.

Bo're, the participle of bore.

Their charge was always bore by the queen, and duly paid out of the exchequer.

Bacon.

The great men were enabled to oppress their inferiors; and their followers were bore out and entrenched in wicked actions.

Bacon.

Upon some occasions, Cicelius may be bold and infect, bore away by his pullion.

Swift.

To be Born, n. w. paff. [derived from the word To bore.]

In the sense of bringing forth: as, my mother bore me twenty
The compafs
Wood, Sot covered from oppofed
Grjy,
O, embrace.
the as Milton.
Sfenfr.

Bo’rrel.
1.

Bo’row.

Bosom, in composition, implies intimacy; confidence; fondness.
No more than Thane of Cawdor shall derive Our bosom-interior's gift, pronounce his death. Shak.
This paper bears the title, Being the bosom-lover of my lord. Shakespeare.
Muff needs be like my lord. Shakespeare.
Their damask'd fingers, bosom-fingers, Whom custom lath call'd us ere the reader helps To betray the heady husbands, rob the easy. Ben Jonson.
He feast for his bosom-friends, with whom he most confidenly confulted, and threw the secrets to them; the contents whereof he could not conceive. Clarendon.
The fourth privilege of friendship is that which is here specified in the text, a communication of secrets. A bosom-secrets, and a bosom-friends, are usually put together. Swift.
She, who was a bosom-friend of her royal mistress, he calls an infident woman, the wrong of her face. Addison.

To Bosom. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To incline in the bosom.
Bosom up my counsel; You'll find it without fail.
I do not think my father to seek,
Or so unprincipled in virtue's book,
And the sweet peace that bosoms good doers ever.

2. To conceal in privacy.
The groves, the four-tuns, and the flowers,
That open now their covetous bosom't diners,
Refrain for nights, and kept for thee thro're.

Bo'son. n. f. [corrupted from boatswain].
The
1. A fluid; an ornament raised above the rest of the work; a shining prominence. What signifies beauty, strength, youth, fortune, embroidered furniture, or gaudy stuffs? L'Ébranle. This theory, intended to raise the bottle of a bride, was laid up for a prince, and a woman of Caria or Mocania dyed it. Bock.

2. The part rising in the midst of anything. To be bottle, was even on his neck, upon the thick bottle of his bucklers. Job, xv. 26.

3. A thick body of any kind. A bottle made of wood, with an iron hook, to hang on the ladder, or on a ladder, in which the laborer puts the mortar at the bristles of the tiles. Misce. If a close aperture be made by the lips, then is framed M; if by the bottle of the tongue to the palate, near the throat, then K. Bode.

Bo'ssage, n. f. [in architecture.] Any bone that has a projecting, and is laid in a place in a building to be afterward carved.

2. Rustic work, which consists of fowls, which seem to advance beyond the naked of a building, by reason of indentures or channels left in the joints: these are chiefly in the corners of edifices, and called rustic quoins.

Bo'svel, n. f. A species of crocus.

Botanist, n. f. [from botany.] One skilled in plants; one who studies the various species of plants. The ingenious lazzar, matter, taken notice of, by that diligent botanist, was only a collection of corals, found at Woodwards.

Then springing the living herbs, beyond the power of botanist to number up their tribes. Thou.

Botany, n. f. [from botanize.] A discourse upon plants.

Botany, n. f. [from Botan, an herbar.]

The science of plants; that part of natural history which relates to vegetables.

Bottrio. n. f. [botarga, Span.] A relishing sort of food, made of the roes of the mullet, fish; much used on the coasts of the Mediterranean, as an infective to drink. Chambers.

Botch, n. f. [benza, pronounced benza, Ital.]

1. A swelling or eruptive discoloration of the skin. Time, which rots all, and makes benza paxent.

And, plodding on, must make a call on, Hast made a lawyer. Donne.

Botches and blains must all his flesh lament.

And this my people, Milton.

It proves far more inconsiderable, which, if it were propelled in boils, botches, or ulcers, as in the former, would rather conduct to health. Harvey.

2. A manner, any work ill finished, to as to appear worse than the rest.

With him, To leave an rub or botch in the work, Please, his son, must embrace the fate. Shakespeare.
any mistake in them; no body may be add led by his repartites.

7. The utmost extent or proficiency of any man's capacity, whether deep or shallow.

I will fetch off these justices: I do set the bottom of Justice Shallaw: how quickely we old men are to fling! Shakespeare.

8. The last refort; the remotest caufe; first motion. He wrote many things which are not published in his works, especially from the 43d of the month, of which he had not been disapproved. Adj.

9. A ship; a vessel for navigation. A bawbling vessel! was he captian? With which foot scatchful grapple did he make With the moft noble bottom of our fleet. Shakespeare.

My ventures are not in one bottom trusted.

Not to one place. Shakespeare.

We have memory not of one ship that ever returned. Our princes, of seventeen years, as it were in feveral times, that chose to return in our bottom.

10. A balance; an adventure; state of hazard. He began to say, that himself and the prince were too much to venture in one bottom. Claremdon.

We are embarked with them on the fame bottom, and must be parakers of their happiness or misery. Spenser.

11. A ball of thread wound up together. This whole argument will be bottom of thread, close wound up. Bacon.

Silkworms finifh their bottoms in about fifteen days. Mortimer.

Each Christmas they accounts did clear, and wound their bottom round the year. Prior.

12. Bottom of a lane. The lowest end.

13. Bottom of beer. The grounds, or dregs.

To Bottom. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To build upon; to fix upon as a support; with on. They may have something of obliquity, as being bottomed upon, and fetched from the true nature of the things. Harte.

Pride has a very strong foundation in the mind; it is bottomed on false glory. Collier.

The grounds upon which we bottom our reasoning, are but a part; something is left out, which should go into the reckoning. Locke.

Action is supposed to be bottomed upon principle. Atterbury.

2. To wind upon something; to twist thread round something. Therefore, as you unwind your love for him, Left it should ravel, and be good to none. You must provide to bottom it on some. Shakespeare.

To Bottom. v. n. To reft upon, as its ultimate support.

Find out upon what foundation any proposition advanced, bottom; and observe the intermediate ideas, by which it is joined to that foundation upon which it is enframed. Locke.

Bottomed. adj. [from bottom.] Having a bottom; it is usually compounded. There being prepared a number of flat-bottomed boats, to transport the land-forces, under the wing and protection of the great navy. Bacon.

To Bottomless. adj. [from bottom.] Without a bottom; fathomless. Wickedness may well be compared to a bottomless pit, into which it is eager to keep one's self from falling, than, being fallen, to give one's self any flay from falling infinitely. Sidney.

Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom? Then be my passions bottomless with them. Shak. Him the Almighty Pow'r! Hurt! deadlong flaming from the ethereal sky To bottomless perdition. Milton.

To Bottomly. [n. f. [in navigation and commerce.] The taking of borrowing money on a ship's bottom, that is, by engaging the vessel for the repayment of it, so that, if the ship miscarries, the lender lofes the money advanced; but, if it arrives safe at the end of the voyage, he is to repay the money lent, with a certain premium or interest agreed on, and this on pain of forfeiting the ship. Harriss.

BOUCHET. n. f. [French.] A sort of pear.

Bou. n. f. An infect which breeds in malt; called also a variol. Dig. To Bouce. v. n. [bouge, Fr.] To swell out.

Bough. n. f. [box, Sax. the gb. is mute.] An arm or large shot of a tree, bigger than a branch, yet not always diluted from it.

Bough-covers. n. p. A v. labours, finding a bough broken, took a branch of the same bough, and tied it about the place broken. Sidley.

Their lord and patron bough did him proclaim, And at his feet their boughs did each throw. Fairy Queen.

From the bough She gave him of that fair enticing fruit. Milton. As the dove's flight did guide Aneas, now May chide conduite to me the golden bough. Dryd. Under some fa'rite mytie's shady boughs, They speak their passions in repeated vows. Bysemlin.

See how, on every bough, the birds express, In their sweet notes, their happiness. Dryd.

'Twas all her joy the ripening fruits to tend, And the boughs with happy bowerd. Pope.

Bought, passer, and participle of To buy; which fee.

The chief were these who not for empire sought, But with their blood their country's safety bought. Pope.

BOUGHT. n. f. [from To bouce.]

1. A twist; a link; a knot. His huge long tail wound up in hundred folds, Whole wreathed boughs whenever he unfolds, And thrust entangled knots adown does flack. Fairy Queen.

Such as the melting foul may pierce, In noes, with many a winding bough Of linked foreheads, long drawn out. Milton.

2. A flexure. The flexure of the joints is not the same in elephants as in other quadrupeds, but nearer unto those of a man; the boughs of the fore-legs not di rectly backward, but laterally, and from that in ward. Browne's Vulgar Errors.

BOU'ILLON. n. f. [French.] Broth; soup; any thing made to be supped: a term used in cookery.

BOULDER WALLS. [in architecture.] Walls built of round flints or pebbles, laid in a strong mortar; used where the sea has a beach cast up, or where there are plenty of flints. Builder's Dictionary.

To Bouil. v. a. See To Boul.

To BOUNCE. v. n. [a word formed, says Skinner, from the found.]

1. To fall or fly against any thing with great force, so as to rebound. The flight awakened him; boud his heating heart. Dryd.

To fring; to make a sudden leap, a sudden explosion. High scotchman is like beer in a bottle, which has, in reality, no strength and spirit, but fluits, and bounces, and imitates the passions of a much nobler liquor. Addison.

They bounce from their neft, No longer will they.

Out beyond the midst of the triple head; Away the hare with double swifhness fled. Swift.

To make a sudden noise.

Full as I was putting out my light, another bouncer as he can knock. Swift.

To boast; to bully; a sense only used in familiar speech.

5. To be bold, or strong. Forsooth the bounching Amazon, Your buckin'ld mistrels, and your warrior love, The wills must be wedded. Shakespeare.

BOUNCE. n. f. [from He bound the verb.]

1. A strong bouncer. The bouncer built ope the door; with the scornful Rencelles look'd. Dryd.

2. A sudden crack or noise. What cannon see not this lucky blood? He spoke plain cannon fire, and smokes, and bouncies.

He gives the buffandino with his tongue. Shak.

Two hard-nose I throw into the flame, And to each nut I give a overthrower's name; This with the loudest bounce me fore am'd, That in a flame of heightest colour blazed. Gay.

3. A boast; a threat: in low language. Bouncer. n. f. [from bouncer.] A boaster; a bully; an empty threatener; in colloquial language.

BOUND. n. f. [from bind.]

1. A limit; a boundary; that by which any thing is terminated. Illimitable ocean! without bound, Without dimension; where length, breadth, and height, And that and place, are left. Milton. Those vast Scythian regions were separated by the natural bounds of rivers, lakes, mountains, woods, maris, in several Temples, Indies and Ganges, our wide empire's bounds, Swell their dy'd currents with their natives wounds. Through all the infernal bounds, Which flaming Philogeron surrounds, Sad Orpheus fought his content left. Pope.

2. A limit by which any excursion is restrained.

Has he set bounds between their love and me? I am their mother, who shall bar me from them? Shakespeare.

Stronger and fiercer by restraint he roars, And knows no bound, but makes his pow'rs his bounds. Dryd.

Any bounds made with body, even adamentine walls, are far from putting a flop to the mind, in its progress in space. Locke.

3. [from To bound. v. n.] A leap; a jump; a spring. Do but note a wild and wanton herd, Or race of youthful and unhandled colts, Fetching mad bounds, hollering, and neighing. Shakespeare. The horses started with a sudden bound, And flung the reins and chariot to the ground. Addis.

Don't you 'scaper the couch with nimble bounds, Whil'st ev'ry hossle tongue Stop thief resounds. Gray.
BOUNTY.

1. Generosity; liberality; munificence.

We do not so much manifest her exceeding bounty, as to affirm, that she brings into the world the sons of men, adorned with gorgeous attire. Homer.

If you knew to whom you gave this honour, I know you would be proud of the world: The customary bounty can enervate you. Shakespeare.

Such moderation with thy bounty,
That thou mayst nothing give that is not thine.

Thofe godlike men, to wanting virtue kind,
Bounty well placed prefer'd, and well design'd.
To all their titles.

Dryden.

2. It seems distinguished from charity, as a present from an alms; being used when persons, not absolutely necessitous, receive gifts; or when gifts are given by great persons.

Telt a mite of bounty to a friend, or mercy to the poor, and he will not understand it. South.

Her majesty did not fee this affummary to proceed to excite charity and compassion; though I question not but her royal bounty will extend itself to them. Addison.

BOURNE.

To spout; to shoot into branches; to put forth buds.

Long may the dew of heaven diftill upon them, to make them bourne and propagate among benefactors. Pope.

O that I had the fruitful heads of Hydra,
That one might bourne where another fell!
Still would I give thee work.

Dryden.

BOUNTY.

1. A bound; a limit.

Bour, bound of land, thil, vineyard, none.

That undecover'd country, from whose banks
No traveller returns.

Shakespeare.

Faire,

As dice are to be with'd by one that fizzes
No bour 'twixt his and mine.

Shakespeare.

I know each lane, and every alley green,
And every bokbourn from side to side.

Milton.

2. [From bunj, Saxon.] A brook; a torrent: whence many towns, seated near brooks, have names ending in bourn.

It is not now used in either sense; though the second continues in the Scotch dialect.

Dryden.

BOURNE.

To Bourse.

w. n. [bouyer, Dutch.] To drink lavishly; to roar.
As he rode, he somewhat did eat,
And in a hard bed bear a bawdy look.
Of which he slept.

Bow'sy. adj. [from bow.] Drunken.
With a long leg of romantic things,
Which in his bowy poet fings.

Dryden.

Thousand a thousand is appointed care,
Each bowy farmer with his spiring dame.
King.

Bout. n. f. [fart, fal.] A turn; as much of an action as is performed at one time, without interruption; a single part of any action carried on by successive intervals.
The play began; but not from Chus' choice.
For did intend next hour with her to meet.
Sidney.

Lady's, that have your feet
Unaglued with shoes, we'll have a bout.
Shakespeare.

When in your motions you are hot,
As make your bow to violent to that end,
He calls for drink.

If he chance to 'scape this dismal bout,
The former legates are blotted out.
Dryden.

A vessel felled a baw; the baw begg'd for life;
Says the wench, I give no quarter to birds: says the baw, I cut a mouse; look on my body: so the got off for that baw.
L'Estrange.

Or if it want the nice concluding bout. King Charles.

Boutefeu. n. f. [French.] An incendiary; one who kindles feuds and discontents.
Now diffused.

Animated by a base fellow, exiled John J. Chambers,
A very bowtiff, who bore much away among the vulgar,
They entered into open rebellion. Bacon.

No could ever any order be obtained impartially to punish the known boutfeus, and open incendiaries.

Osborne.

Bouts Rimez. [French.] The last words or rhymes of a number of verses given to be filled up.

To Bow. v. a. [buygen, Saxon.]

1. To bend, or incline. It sounds as bow, or bow.

Bow this wond'rou bawd would hire me,
Old as I am, to queen it. Shakespeare.

Orpheus, with his lute, made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze.
Bow themselves when he does sing.
Shakespeare.

Some keep the vines, which bury'd in the plain,
Their tops in distant arches rise again.
Dryden.

The mind has not been made obedient in discipline, when at first it was most tender and most easy to be bow'd.
Locke.

2. To bend the body in token of respect or submission.
They came to meet him, and bow'd themselves to the ground before him.
Is to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a faith, and an acceptable day to the Lord?

3. To bend, or incline, in condensation.
Let it not griev e thee to bow down thine ear to the poorest, and give him a friendly answer. Bishop.

4. To deprest; to crutch. Are you so goddess'd,
To pray for this good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever? Shakespeare.

Now walking years my former strength confound,
And added years may bow me to the ground. Pope.

To Bow. v. n.

1. To bend; to suffer flexure.

2. To make a reverence.

Rather let my head
Stoop to the block, in the face bow to any,
Saw it to the God of heaven's, and to my king, Shakespeare.

This is the grand idea to which the world bow'd; to this we pay our devoutest homage.

Admir'd, ador'd, by all the circling crowd,
For where'er the turn'd their face, they bow'd.
Dryden.

3. To floor.

The people bow'd down upon their knees to drink.

4. To fink under pressure.

They flipp'd, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden.
Shakespeare, xlii. 2.

Bow. n. f. [from the verb. It is pronounced, like the verb, as bow, bow.]

An act of reverence or submission, by bending the body.

Some clergy too the would allow,
Nor quarrell'd at their awkward bow. Swift.

Bow. n. f. [pronounced as grow, no, lo, without any regard to the w.]

1. An instrument of war, made by holding wood or metal bent with a string, which, by its spring, sends arrows with great force.

Take, I know thee, thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go out to the field, and take me some version.
Genef.

2. A rainbow.

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.
Gen. xxi. 8.

3. The instrument with which string-instruments are struck.

Their instruments were various in their kind;
Some for the bow, and some for breathing wind.
The fawny, pipe, and hushtony noisy band,
And the falt late trembling beneath the touching land.
Dryden's Fables.

4. The doubling of a string in a filp-knot.
This is perhaps corruptly used for bought.
Make a knot, and let the second knot be with a bow.
Wjinson.

5. A yole.

As the ox hath his bow, Sir, the horse his curl,
The fawne's bolls on, so man hath his deserv.
Shakespeare.

Bow of a faddle. The bow of a faddle is two pieces of wood laid archwise, to receive the upper part of a horse's back, to give the faddle its due form, and to keep it tight. Farrar's Dictionary.

7. Bow of a ship. That part of which begins at the loof, and compasis ends of the stern, and ends at the stern-most parts of the forecastle. If a ship hath a broad bow, they call it a bold bow; if a narrow thin bow; they Fay the hath a lean bow. The piece of ordnance that lies in this place, is called the bow-piece; and the anchors that hang here, are called her great and little bowers.

8. Bow is also a mathematical instrument, like the bow, formerly used by seamen in taking the sun's altitude.

9. Bow is likewise a beam of wood or brass, with three long screws, that direct a Iath of wood or steel to any arch; used commonly to draw draughts of ships, projections of the sphere, or wherever it is requisite to draw long arches. Harris.

Bow-bearer. n. f. [from bow and bear.]

An under-officer of the forest. Congreve.

Bow-ent. adj. [from bow and bent.] Crooked.

A fiddle old, bow-bent, with crooked age.
That far events widely might circulate. Milton.

Bow-hand. n. f. [from bow and hand.]
The hand that draws the bow.

Surely he shoots widows on the bow-banks, and very good boats on the arrow; the archer.
Spenser's Faery Queen.

Bow-legged. adj. [from bow and leg.] Having crooked legs.

Bow-shot. n. f. [from bow and shot.]
The space which an arrow may pass in its flight from the bow.
Though he were not then a bow-shot off, and made haste; yet, by that time he was come, the thing was no longer to be seen.
Boyle.

Bowels. n. f. [bowels, Fr.]

1. Intestines; the vessels and organs with, in the body.
He smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and smote out his bowels.
Sam. xx. 10.

2. The inner parts of any thing.
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would mutter all
From twelve to seventy; and pouring war Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, Like a bold flood appear.
Shakespeare.

His fellows spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! Talbot! cried out again,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
Shet.

The bow of the vessel.

With bow'd, and in bow's hale,

4. Tendersnefs; compation.
He had no other consideration of money, than for the support of his lute; and whilt he could do that, he cared not for money; having no bowels in the point of running in debt, or borroweing all he could.
Clarendon.

5. This word seldom has a singular, except in writers of anatomy.
Bower. n. f. [from bough or branch, or from the verb to bow or bend.]

1. An arbour; a sheltered place covered with green trees, twined and bent.
But, O fud virgin, that thy power Might raise Mufes from his bowers. Milton.

To gods appealing, when I touch their bowers
With bowd complaints, they answer me in bow's words. Waller.

Refresh'd, they wait them to the bower of hate,
Where, circled with his peers, Aresidates. Pope.

2. It seems to signify, in Spenser, a blow; a brooke; or bowere, Fr. to fall upon.
Highrawbone arms, whose mighty branched fowres Were wont to rive felle plates, and helme bow, Were clean confum'd, and all his vital powers Decay'd.

3. Bow's. n. f. [from the bow of a ship.]

Anchors so called. See Bow.

To Bow'er. v. a. [from the noun.] To embower; to inclose.

Thou didst bowe the spirit
In mortal parachute of fch forest thúth. Shakespeare.

Bowering. adj. [from bow'er.] Full of bowers.

Landship bowe the bowry grutto yields,
Which thought creates, and lavish fancy buildes Whick.

Snatch'd through the verdant maze, the hurried Distracted wanderers; now the bowry wak
BOY

The whole city shall flee, for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen. Jeremiah, iv. 29.

BoY's PRiT. n. f. [from bow of a ship.] This word is generally spelt boil'spirit; which see.

To Boy'wesen. v. a. [probably of the same original with bools, but found in no other pallage.] To drench; to soak.

The water fell into a close-walled plot; upon this wall was the franket perfon set, and from thence tumbled headlong into the pond; where a strong flour towed him up and down, until the patient, by foregripping through, had him, who forgot his fury: but if there appeared small amendment, he was boystained again and again, while there remained in him any hope of life, for recovery.

BoY'strine. n. s. [from bow and firing.] The firing by which the bow is kept bent.

He hath twice or three cut Cupid's bowstring, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. Shakespeare.

Sound will be conveyed to the ear, by striking upon a bowstring, if the horn of the bow be held to the ear. Bacon.

BoY'wER. n. s. [from bow.] 1. An archer; one that uses the bow.

Call for vengeance from the bowyer kings. Dryden.

2. One whole trade is to make bows.

Bo'x. n. s. [box, Sax. buxus, Lat. a tree.

The leaves are penatated, and evergreen; it hath male flowers; those produced at remote distances from the fruit, on the same tree; the fruit is shaped like a pridge-port inverted, and is divided into three castes, containing two seeds in each, which, when ripe, are cast forth by the elasticity of the vellum. The wood is very useful for engravers, and mathematical instrument makers; it is also hard, close, and penetrant, as to sink in water.

There are two forts; the edward box, and a taller fort. The dwarf box is good for borders, and is easily kept in order, with one clipping in the year. It will increase of flaps set in March, or about Bartholomew tide: and will sprout on cold barren hills, where nothing else will grow. Maritimer.

Box. n. s. [box, Sax. buxus, Germ.] 1. A case made of wood, or other matter, to hold anything. It is distinguished from chests, as the life from the greater.

It is supposed to have its name from the box wood. A magnet, though put in an ivory box, will, through the box, send forth his embracing virtue to a beloved needle. Sidney.

A beggarly account of empty boxes. Shak.-shakes.

The lion's head is to open a most wide voracious mouth, which shall take in letters and papers. There will be but one box, of which the key will be kept in my custody, to receive such papers as are dropped into it. Scotoe.

This collect Lord's glowing gems unlocks, and all Arabia breaches from yonder box. Pope.

2. The cafe of the mariners companions.

The cheet into which money given is put.

So many more, so every one was odd.

That to give largely to the box refused. Spect.

4. The seats in the playhouse, where the ladies are placed.

'Tis left to you, the box, and the pit Are foreign judges of this fort of wit. Dryden.

She glares in bells, front boxes, and the ring.

A vain, unquiet, glittering, wretched thing. Pope.

To Box. v. a. [from the noun.] To include in a box.

BOY'st. adj. [from boxy.] Belonging to a boy.
I ran it through, to feel the joyfyl day.
To thy very moment that he bade me tell it. Skah.

2. Childish ; trifling.
This unhil'd daffiness, and joyful troop, the King doth smile at, and is well prepared. To whip this daffiness, take these pigg-y arms. Dryden.
Young men take up some English poet for their model, and imitate him, without knowing wherein he is defective, where he is joyful and trifling.

Bo'ysily. adv. [from boyful.] Childish; trifling.
Boyishly. n. s. [from boyful.] Childishness; trifling manner.
Boyish. n. s. [from boy.] Puerility; childishness.
He had complained he was farther off, by being so far, and a thousand such boyfils, which Chaucer rejoin'd as below the subject.

Dr. An abbreviation of bishop.
Brable. n. s. [brablen, Dutch.] A clamorous conclave; a quibble; a broil. Here in the streets, desolate and in frate, in private brabled did we apprehend it. Skal.

To Brable. v. n. [from the noun.] To clamour; to outcrie noisily.

Brable. n. s. [from brablen.] A clamorous, quarrellosome, noisy fellow.

To Brace, v. a. [embrasser, Fr.]
1. To bind; to tie close with bandages. The women of China, by bracing and binding them from infancy, have very little feet. Dincl.
2. To intend; to make tense; to strain up. The symposium is not capable of tension that way, in such a manner as a drum is braced. Holdcr. The diminution of the force of the preeife of the external air, in bracing the mere, must create a defility in mufcular motion. Accou. on An.

Brace. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Cinture; bandage.
2. That which holds any thing tight. The little bones of the ear-drums do in fraying and relaxing it, as the braces of the war-drums do in that.
3. Braces [in architecture] is a piece of timber framed in with bevil joints, used to keep the building from swerving either way. Builder's Dict.
4. Brace[s a sea term.] Ropes belonging to all the yards, except the main. They have a pendant to the yard-arm, two braces to each yard; and, at the end of the pendant, a block is fixed, through which the rope called the brace is receaved. The braces serve to square and traverse the yards. Sea Dict.
6. H. B.
7. Braces. [in printing.] A crooked line inclosing a page, which ought to be taken together, and not separately; as in a tripeet.
Charge Venus to command her son, Wherever else he lets him rove;
This is the girt filly, so broad, and grove; Peace cannot dwell with hate or love. Prior.

Warlike preparation; from bracing the armour, as we say, girted for the battle. As it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes, so may he with more facility quaff bear it; For that it standeth not in warlike braves, but altogether lacks the ability.
That Rhodes is dress'd in, Shakespeare.

9. Tension; tightness.
The most frequent cause of distress is the laxness of the tympanum, when it has lost its brace or tension. Holder.

Brace. n. s. (of uncertain etymology, probably derived from row to brace together.)
1. A pair; a couple. It is not braces, but brace, in the plural.
Down from a hill the beasts that reign in woods, First hunter then, pursu'd a passage brace, Goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind. Par. Loth.
Ten manes and ears of greyhounds, fromy fair, And tall as flags, ran loose, and course'd around his chair.
Dryden's Fables.
2. It is used generally in conversation as a sportman's word. He is said, this summer, to have shot with his own hands fifty brace of pheasants. Addison.
3. It is applied to men in contempt. But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded, I here could pluck his highness' brow upon you. Dryden's Fables.

Bra'celet. n. s. [bracelet, French.]
1. An ornament for the arms.
Both his hands were cut off, being known to have worn bracelets of gold about his wrist. Sir J. Haward.
Tie about our tawn.
Bracetts of the fairy twills. Ben Jonson.
A very ingenious lady used to wear, in rings and bracelets, flower of these gems.
Boyle.
2. A piece of defensive armour for the arm.

Bracer. n. s. [from brace.]
1. A cinture; a bandage; When they affect the belly, they may be restrained by a bracer, without much trouble. Holder.
2. A medicine of conftringent power. Brach. n. s. [brague, Fr.] A bitch hound. Truth's a dog must kind; he must be whipped out, when the lady brach may stand by the fire, and think.
Shakespeare.

Brachial. adj. [from brachium, an arm, Lat.] Belonging to the arm.

Brach'ygraphy. n. s. [graphe, short, and graphe, to write.] The art or practice of writing in a short compass. All the certainty of those high pretenders, bating what they have of the first principles, and the word of God, may be circumscribed by as small a circle as the compass of a brach. Blackmore.

Brach. n. s. [from break.]
1. A breach; a broken part.
The place was but weak, and the brach be fair; but the defectants, by revolution, supplied all the defects.
Hayward.
Let them compose my work with what is taught in the schools, and if they find in theirs many brach and short ones, they cannot be pin'd into an even piece; and, in mine, a fair coherence throughout; I shall profly myself an acconcie. Dryg.

Bracket. n. s. [a term of carpentry.] A piece of wood fixed for the support of something.
Let hurst be laid upon brackets, being about two foot wide, and with an eddall下巴.

Brackish. adj. [brack, Dutch.] Salt; somewhat salt: it is used particularly of the water of the sea.
Fits upon the face; those two turn into fresh water, by percolation of the salt through the sand; but it is farther noted, after a time, that the water in such pits will become brackish again.

Then I had girded the breech and top. A lake of brackish waters on the ground. Was all I found. Herberts.

The wife contriver, on his end intent, Mix'd them with salt, and season'd all the sea. What other cause could this effect produce? The brackish structure through the main diffuses. Locke.

Brackishness. n. s. [from brackish.] Saltiness in a small degree.
All the artificial drainings hitherto a brackish in salt water, that makes it unfit for fish. Chayre.

BRAD, being an initial, signifies broad, spacious, from the Saxox broad, and the Gothick broad.
Giffon.
BRAD. n. s. A fort of nail to floor rooms with. They are about the size of a ten-penny nail, but have not their heads made with a shouder under their shanks, as other nails, but are made pretty thick towards the upper end, that the very top may be driven into, and buried in the board they nail down; so that the tops of these broads will not catch the thumbs of the mops, when the floor is washing.
Maxos.

To BRAG. v. n. [braggen, Dutch.]
1. To boast; to display ostentatiously; to tell boastful stories.
Thou coward! how thou bragging to the stars! Telling the heavens that thou lookest for wars, And wilt not come? Shakespeare.
Mark me, with what violence the first loved the Moon, but for bragging, and telling her fastidest list. Shakespeare.
In bragging out some of their private tenets, as if they were the established doctrine of the church of England. Selden.
These were grown so forest, that they intended then, as they already bragged, to come over and make this the seat of war. Clarendon.
Mrs. Bull's condition was looked upon as desperate by all the men of art; but there were those that bragged they had an infallible ointment.
Arabins.
2. It has of before the thing boasted.
Knowledge being the only thing whereof we poor old men can brag, we cannot make it known but by utterance. Sidney.
Verona braggs of him, To be a virtuous and well-government youth. Skaf.
Every buoy little scribbler now Swells with the prats which he gives himself, And taking fanciuty in the crowd, Brags of his impudence, and fears to mend. Dry amongs.

3. On is used, but improperly.
Yet lo! in me what authors have to brag on; Redic'd at last to his in my own desig. Dryg.

BRAG. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A boast; a proud expression.
A kind of conquest Caeas made here; but thus is he brag Of came, and fame, and overcome. Shakespeare.
It was such a new thing for the Spaniards to receive so little hurt, upon dealing with the English, as AvaCXcisco made great brag of it; for no greater matter than the waiting upon the English after off.
Bacon.

2. The thing boasted.
Beauty is naturis, brag, and must be shown in courts, at feasts, and high solemnities, Where might well may wonder. Milton.
BRAGGADO'GIO. n. s. [from brag.] A puffing, swelling, boasting fellow.
The world abounds in terrible sinfulness, in the masque of men of honour; but their braggiadrazo are rare to be detected, and to be charged.
By the plot, you may guess much of the character of the persons; a braggiadrazo captain, a garribole, and a lady of pleasure. Dryden.

Brag'd, Braggardian.
BRA

Bragging, n.f. [from brag] Bockish; vain, pompous.

Bramble, n.f. [from bram] A thorny bush.

Brazen, adj. [from brag] Boastful; vainly ostentatious.

Shall I none have, of high born or raised men, Fear towards; and my mistress, truth, betray thee To th’ making, braggy, put nobility onto John.

Braggery, n.f. [from brag] A boaster.

Who knows himself a boaster, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass, That every braggy shall be found at an. Scot.

Bragging, n.f. [from brag] A boaster; an ostentatious fellow.

I have only in my hands to find these braggers thoroughly, by having sometimes endured the presence of their fellow company, have found them, in converse, empty and insipid. Shakespeare.

Bra'vissimo, adj. [from brag] Without a boast; without ostentation.

The brazen is, Hector’s brain, and by Achilles.

If it be so, braggy let it be, Great Hector was a good man as he; Shakespeare.

Bra'vally, adv. [from brag] Finely; to brag.

But it may be bragged.

Seest not this humble flower, How braavly it begins to bud, And under its tender head? It has a thousand roots, and bids him make ready Minos’s tower. Spenser.

To Braid. v. a. [Breedan, Sax.] To weave together.

Close the torrent fiery, Infiniting, work her golden twine, To her braided grain, and of his fatal gulf Gave point unheeded. Milton.

Other wands, tying loosely, may each of them be easily refloated from the rest; but, when worked into a basset, they coherence strongly. Bylze.

A ribbon did the braided tresses bind, The rest was loose, and wanted in the wind. Dryden.

Since In Braided gold her foot is bound, And a long trailing mantel sweeps the ground, Her face disfigures the street. Gay.

Braid, n.f. [from the verb.] A texture; a knot, or complication of something woven together.

Listen where thou art sitting, Under the glossy, cool, translucent wave, In twisted braid or silver knitting. Shakespeare.

The under-dropping hair, Milton.

No longer shall thy trendy braid be left.

In flowing ringslets on thy golden neck, Or fit behind the head, an ample round, In combination with various braid and braids. Fair.

Braid, adj. [To braid, as Chaucer, is to disgrace.] An old word, which seems to signify disgraceful.

Since the Frenchmen are so braid, Marry’em that will. I’ll live and die a bold. Shakespeare.

Brails, n.f. [sea term] Small ropes received through blocks, which are seized on either side the ties, a little off upon the yard; so that they come down before the falls of a ship, and are fastened at the skirt of the fall to the shrouds. Their use is, when the fall is furled across, to haul up its bent, that it may the more readily be taken up or let fall. Harris.

BRAIN. n.f. [briyen, Sax., breyn, Dutch.]

1. That collection of vessels and organs by which we are endued, from which sense and motion arise.

The brain is divided into cerebrum and cerebellum. Cerebrum is that part of the brain which possesses all the upper and forepart of the cranium, being separated from the cerebellum by the frontal bone.

2. The centre of the dura mater, under which the cerebellum is situated. The substance of the brain is distinguished into outer and inner; the former is called cortical, cerebral, or gray matter; the latter, medul-bra. The propriety of break.

He thought it sufficient to correct the multitude with sharp words, and brake out into this cholerick speech.

BRAKE. n.f. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. A thicket of brambles, or of thorns.

A ring of this town daily reaches to the bank, and to carry the same unto a blind: marsh, that lay in a brake without the town. Carew.

If I'm traduced by tongues, which neither know My faculties nor perform, let me lay Shakespeare.

This is but the fate of place, and the rough brake.

That virtue must go through. Shakespeare.

In every bud and brate, where hap may and the tender feasting.

Full little thought of him the gentle knight Who, dying, did perish, here concealed his life In brack and brambles hid, and shunning mortal fight. Dryden, Fable.

2. It is said originally to mean fern.

BRAEKE, n.f. 1. An inlorm for dressing hemp or flax.

2. The handle of a ship’s pump.

3. A baker’s kneading-trough.

4. A sharp bit or fascias for horses. Dia.

A smith’s brake is a machine in which horses, willing to the food, are confined during that operation.

BRA'K'Y. adj. [from brakes.] Thorny; prickly; rough.

Readm toms from their rough and braky seats, where they lie hid and overgrown with thorns, to a pure, open light, where they may take the eye, and may be taken by the hand. Bunyan.

BRA'MBLE. n.f. [bramplar, Sax. rubus, Lat.]

1. The blackberry bush; the raspberry bush, or hindberry.

Müller.

2. With which the nature freely bred.

On wadding and on strawberries they feed.

Cornels and bramble berries gave the rest. And falling cown furnished us a feast. Dryden.

It is taken, in popular language, for any rough prickly shrub.

The bux my bed, the brambles was my bower. The woods can with a word or shrub.

There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carrying Rosalin on their backs; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and envelopes them, all over, decorating the same as if it was his own.

Shakespeare.

Thy younglings, Cuddy, are but just about the shrub! they thrash the bramble bushes forth. Gay.

BRA'NING. v.f. [braing, to call on a mountain chaffinch.]

Diat.

BRAN. n.f. [briena, Ital.] The husks of corn ground; the refuse of the sieve.

From me do back receive the flour of all; And leave me but the bran.

Shakespeare.

The citizens we a driven to great delights, the want of victuals; they made so of the coarsest bran, moulded in cloaths; for otherwise it would not have come together.

Ham.

In the making of fourteen years of peace and favour, all that came out could not be pure meal, but must have among it a certain mixture of puder and bran; in this lower age of human fragility.

Then water him, and drinking what he can, Encourage him to thirst again with bran. Dryden.

BRANCH, n.f. [brancon, French.]

1. The shoot of a tree from one of the main boughs.

How grow the branches, when the root is gone? Why wilt not the leaves that want their up? Shakespeare.

2. Any member or part of the whole; any distinct article; any fiction or subdivision.
Your oats are past, and now subscribe your name.
That his own hand may strike his honour down.
That violateth the smallest branch herein. Shakespeare.
The belief of this was of special importance, to confirm our opinion of another life, on which so many branches of Christian piety do immediately depend.
Hammond.
In the several branches of justice and charity, company, and private rules, of loving our neighbour as ourselves, and of doing to others as we would have them do to us, there is nothing but what is most fit and reasonable. Tithmarsh.
This is the plain sight to perform our duty, according to the nature of the various branches of it.
Rogers.
3. Any part that shoots out from the root.
And five branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side. Exodus.
His blood, which differeth itself by the branches of veins, may be reunited to waters carried by brooks.
Raleigh.
4. A smaller river running into, or proceeding from, a larger.
If, from a main river, any branch be separated from it, then there are others that branch doth itself first bound itself with new banks, there is that part of the river, where the branch forsooth the main stream, called the head of the river. Raleigh.
5. Any part of a family depending in a collateral line.
And, from the younger branch of the ancient stock planted in Somerbyshire, took to wife the widow. Carew.
6. The offspring; the descendent.
Great Anthony! Spain’s well-doing pride, Thou mighty branch of emperours and kings!
Crawford.
7. The antlers or shoots of a stag’s horn.
8. The branches of a brier are two pieces of bended iron, that bear the bit-mouth, the chains, and the curb, in the interval between the one and the other.
Farrier’s Dictionary.
9. [In architecture.] The arches of Gothic vaults; which arches transversing from one angle to another, diagonal wise, form a crosst between the other arches, which make the sides of the square, of which the arches are diagonals.
Harriss.
Branch. n. a. [from the n.]
1. To spread in branches.
They were trained together in their childhoods, and there rooted between them such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Shakespeare.
The cause of scattering the boughs, is the happy breaking forth of the sap; and therefore those trees rise not in a body of any height, but branches near the ground. The cause of the pyramids, is the keeping in of the sap, long before it branch, and the spending of it, when it beginneth to sink, by equal degrees. Bacon.
Plant it round with shade
Of laurel, evergreen, and blossoming plane. Milton.
Slightest as a line of fictitious order second, Of oaklets unnorn a venerable wood.
Fret was the graft beneath, and ev’ry tree
As diffusely planted, in a due degree.
Then, in time, brought in, equal rules
Stretch’d to their neighbours with a long embrace.
Dryden.
One sees her thighs transform’d, another views
Her arms float out, and branching into boughs.
Addison.
2. To spread into separate and different parts and subdivisions.
The Alps at the one end, and the long range of Apennins that pales through the body of it, branch out, on all sides, into several different divisions.
Addison.
If we would weigh, and keep in our minds, what it is we are considering, that would befal us wherein we should, or should not, branch.
Locke.
3. To speak diffusively, or with the distinction of the parts of a discourse.
I have known a woman branch out into a long dissertation upon the edging of a petticock. Spel.
4. To have horns shooting out into antlers.
The swift flag from under ground Bore up his branching head. Milton.
To Brancli. u. a.
1. To divide as into branches.
The spirits of things animate are all continued within themselves, and are branch’d into cells, as blood is; and the spirits have not only branches, but certain cells or fests, where the principal spirits do reside.
Bacon.
2. To adorn with needlework, representing flowers and sprigs.
In robe of purple she was arrow’d, That from her shoulder to her heel down rul’d, The train whereof loose far behind her stray’d. Brand.

Brand.

4. A mark made by burning a criminal with a hot iron, to note him as infamous; a stigma.
Clerks convict should be burned in the hand, both because they might take some corporal punishment, and that they might carry a brand of infamy.
Locke.
The rules of good and evil are inverted, and a brand of infamy passes for a badge of honour.
L’Histoire.
5. Any note of infamy.
Where did his wit on learning fix a brand.
And all at arms he did not understand? Dryd.
To Brand. n. a. [branches, Dutch.] To mark with a brand, or note of infamy:
Have I lived thus long a wife, a true one,
Never yet branded with tuplicion?
Shakespeare.
The king was after branded, by 's proclamation, for an extemporary breaker of the rights of holy church.
Bacon.
Brand not their actions with so foul a name; Pity, at least, what we are forc’d to blame.
Dryd.
I dare not for thy life, I charge thee, dare not to brand the spots’d virtue of my prince.
Rusdy.
Our Puny right is infamous, and branded to a proverb. Addison.
The speader of the pardons answered him an easier way, by brandimg him with hereby. Aubrey.
Brands.

Bran’s.

A kind of wild fowl, less than a common goose, having its wings and wings of a darker colour. Ditz.
To Brandish. n. a. [from brand, a sword.]
1. To wave, or shake, or flourish, as a weapon.
Brave Macketh.
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish’d steed.
Like valour’s minions, carved out his passage. Sherdale.
He said, and brandishing at once his blade.
Dryd.
With eager pace pursued the flaming blade.
Dryd.
Let me march their leader, not their prince.
And at the head of your renowned Cydonians Brands this sword.
Smith.
2. To play with; to flourish.
He, who shall employ all the force of his reason only in brandishing of syllogisms, will discover very Locke.

Brandish.

The name for a particular worm.
The dew-worm, which some also call the lobwork, and the brandings, are the chief. Wals.

Brand.

2. [contrasted from brandish, or burst-out.] A strong liquor distilled with wormwood.
If your master lodgeth at inns, every dram of brandy extraordinary that you drink, raiseth his character.
Swift’s Farmer.

Brandy.

The fame with brandy.
It has been a common saying, A hair of the same dog; and thought that brandy-wine is a common relief to such.
Wimman.

Brangle.

[uncertainly derived.]
Squabbl; wrangle; litigious contest.
The payment of tythes is subject to many brangles, quarrels, and other difficulties, not only from papists and dissenters, but even from those who profess themselves protestants. Swift.
To Brangle. n. a. [from the n.]
To wrangle; to squabble.
When poitee circumstances shall be improved, company will no longer pester with dull story-tellers, nor brandishing disputers.
Swift.

Branglement.

[from brandle.

The fame with brandle.

Brand.

3. Buckwheat, or brand, is a grain very useful, and advantageous in dry barren lands. Merimier.

Brantry.

adj. [from bran.

Having the appearance of bran.
BRA

It became sanguine, and was, when I saw it, covered with white brassy scales. Wheler.

BRA'sen, adj. [from bra's]. Made of bra's. It is now less properly written, according to the pronunciation, brazen.

BRA'sier, n. f. [from bra's].
1. A manufacturer that works in bra's.
There is a fellow somewhat near the door,
he should be a bra'ier by his face. Shakespeare.
Bra'siers who turn andirs, pots, kettle's,
&c., have their laths made different from the common turners laths. Moxon.
2. A pan to hold coals. [probably from embraser, Fr.]
It is thought they had no chimneys, but were warmed with coals on bra'siers.

BRAZil'. m. f. An American wood,
BRAZil'. commonly suppos'd to have been thus denominated, because first born from Brazil; though Huett shews it had been known by that name many years before the discovery of that country; and the belt fort comes from Fernambuc. It is used by turners, and takes a good polish; but chiefly in dying, though it gives but a furious red. Chambers.

C.B.R.A.S. "n. f. [b*r, Sax. brt, Welfh.]
1. A yellow metal made by mixing cooper with lapis calaminaris. It is used, in popular language, for any kind of metal in which cooper has a part.
Bra's is made of copper and calaminaris. Bacon.
Men's evil manners live in bra's, their virtues. We write in water. Shakespeare.
Let others mold the running male
Mets, and inform the breathing bra's. Dryden.

C.B.R.A.SKness, n. f. [from bra's]. An appearance like bra's; some quality of bra's.

BRA'sy, adj. [from bra's].
1. Partaking of bra's.
The part in which they lie, is near black, with some sparks of a brassy pyrites in it. Woodward.
2. Hard as bra's.
Lofts.
Enough to prey a royal merchant down,
And pluck commination of his state
From bra'sy bolts, and rough hearts of flint. Shakespeare.

3. Impudent.
BRA'st. particip., adj. [from burst]. Burst' broken. Obloque.
There creature never falls,
That back returned without heavenly grace,
But dreadful furies whish their chains have bra'ed,
And damned spirts pent forth to make ill men again. Spencer.

BRA't. n. f. [its etymology is uncertain;
bra't, in Saxon, signifies a blanket;
from which, perhaps, the modern signification might have come.]
1. A child, so called in contempt.
He treats them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us bra'ts, with no less confidence,
Than boys pursuing common butterflies. Shakespeare.
This bra't is none of mine;
Hence with it, and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire. Shakespeare.
The friends, that got the brats, were poison't too;
In this sad cafe what could our vermin do? Beaumont.

Jupiter summoned all the birds and beasts before him, with their brats and little ones, to see which of them had the prettiest children. L'Estrange.
I shall live to see the invisible lady, to whom I was obliged, and whom I never beheld since she was a bra't in hanging-thieves. Swift.
I live as if I was to kill or live,
Can grant ten thousand pounds a-year,
And make a beggar's bra't a peer. Swift.

2. The progeny; the offspring.
The same confusion was the brats and offspring of two contrary factions. South.

BRA'vado, n. f. [from bravada, Span.]
A boat; a bra't.
Spain, to make good the bra'vado,
Names it the Inviolable Armada. Anonymous.

BRA've.ad. [from bravado, Fr.]
1. Courageous; daring; bold; generous;
high-spirited.
An Egyptian footsman made Antonius believe, that his genius, which otherwise was brave and confident, was, in the presence of Octavius Caesar, poor and cowardly. From armed foes to bring a royal prize, Shows your brave heart victorious as your eyes. Waller.

2. Gallant; having a noble mien; lofty;
graceful.
I'll prove the prettiest fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with a brave grace. Shak.

3. Magnificent; grand.
And bravery attended near him, when he wakes;
And brave attendants near him, when he wakes;
Would not the beggar then forget himself? Shak.
But whether it was nature design'd;
Firth a brave place, and then as brave a mind. Dryden.

4. Excellent; noble; it is an indetermina-tive word, used to express the superbundance of any valuable quality in men or things.
Let not old age disfigure my high defile.
O bravely foul, in human shape contain'd!
Old wood in man's doth yield the bra'tst fire,
When younger doubt in smoke his virtue spend. Sidney.
If he be iron one, and milts, iron is a brave commodity where wood aboundeth. Bacon.
If a Statesman has not this chivalry, he must be subject to a brave man than himself, whole province is he under all his actions to the hand. Digby.

BRA'vy, n. f. [brav, Ital.] A man who murders for hire.
For boldness, like the bra'vado and banditti, is seldom employed, but upon desperate services.

Bra'vado of the Stage. Dryden.
No bra'vado here profest the bloody trade,
Nor is the church the murder's refuge made. Gay.

To BRAWL. v. n. [brauiller, or brasser,
Fr.]
1. To quarrel noisily and independly.
She troubled was, also, that it might be,
With tedious brawling of her parents de.

Here comes a man of comfort, who's advice
Hath often filled all that was advers万一t. Shak.
How now? Sir John! what are you brawling here?
Does this become your place, your time, your business? Is it not enough that you have been brawling? IV.
Their batt'ry cunning changed to the mouth,
Till their soul-fearlesse clamours have brawld down
The finny ribs of this contemplative city. Shak.
In council the gives licence to her tongue.
Loganously, brawling, ever in the wrong. Dryden.

2. To speak loud and independly.
His divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads; one pow'r against the French,
And one against Gledenower. Shakespeare.

3. To make a noise. This is little used.
As he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brauills along this wood. Shak.

BRAWL, n. f. [from the verb.]
Quarrel; noisiness; brawling.
He findeth, that controversies thereby are made but brauills; and therefore willst thou, that in some lawfull assembly of churches, all these strifes might be included. Hooker.

Never since that middle summer's spring
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
But with thy brauill thou hast disturb'd all sound.

Fife.
B R A

That boar is an animal.

Mastiff, with short thick bristly hair. Harebell.

BRAVER. n. s. [from brook.] A wrangler; a quarrelsome, noisy fellow.

An advocate may incur the censure of the court, for being a braver in court, on purpose to lengthen out the Affidavit.

BRAWNER. n. s. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. The fleshy or muscular part of the body.

The brown of the arm must appear full, shawled on one side; then shew the whole bone there.

But most thine honest on the black monarch's head, his rising muscles and his brazen command; his double biting sword, and beamy spear, each a gigantic force to rear. Dryden.

2. The arm, so called for its being muscular.

I'll ride my silver steed in a golden vacuum, and in my vanbrac put this wither'd brazen. Shakespeare.

I had purpose

Once more to hear thy target from thy brazen. Shakespeare.

BULK; muscular strength.

The body that has any of the force, when 1. With this directing head, those hands apply; 2. The whole arm, without brain is thin. Dryden.

The flesh of a boar.

The first age for the boar is from two to five years, at which time it is best to kill it, or if he is killed for brazen. Mortimer.

5. A boar.

BRAVENESS. n. s. [from brazen.] Strength; hardnecess.

This brazening and infonnability of mind, is the best armament against the common evils and accidents of life. Locke.

BRAVNY. adj. [from brazen.] Muscular; fleshy; bulky; of great muscles and strength.

The brazen fool, who did his viour bough, in that preceding confidence was but. Dryden.

Turns all into the fulness of the tree, Staves and destroys the fruit, is only made for brazen and, for a barren shade. Dryden.

To BRAY, v. a. [brazen, Sax. braier, Fr.] To pound, or grind small.

I'll bray him; I will braze.

His bones as a mortar.

Except you would say bray Christendom in a mortar, and mould it into a new path, there is no possibility of a holy war. Bacon.

To BRAY, v. a. [bray, Fr. barrie, Lat.]

1. To make a rude noise as an ass.

Laughter, and they return it louder than an ass can bray. Dryden.

Ag'd if he should hear the lion roar, he'd cullge him into an ass, and his primitiveness of grace. Caxton.

2. To make an offensive, harsh, or disagreeable noise.

What shall our feast be kept with daughter's men.

Shall bray, bray, trumpet, and loud trumpet dreams, Clouds of hell, become muses to our pope? Shakespeare.

Arms on armour clashing, bray'd.

Bray, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Havish.

3. That path would fire contain them greely, or the brazen of it bring them to shorter vengeance. Pope.

What are the brazen of the law of nature, and nations, who do forfeit all right in a nation to govern? Bacon.

Breach of duty towards our neighbors, still involved in it a breach of duty towards God. Bacon.

The laws of the soul are the only standing rules of morality; and the penalties imposed by God to the breach of those laws, the only guards that can effectually restrain men within the true bounds of decency and virtue. Bickerst.

5. The opening in a coal.

But 'tis beaurful bastin strongly forth all stretch.

His brazen arms, and all his body strain;

That Uranus sandy breach they shortly fetchs. While the broad danger does behind remain.

6. Difference; quarrel; separation of kindred.

A mote that bare been long before the jestes and breach between the armies were been compos'd.

Clarendon.

7. Inflammation; injury.

This breach upon kingy power was without precedent. Clarendon.

8. Food made of ground corn.

Manchick have found the means to make grain into bread, the lightest and most proper aliment for human bodies. Arbuthnot.

Bread, that decaying man with strength supplies; And generous wine, which thoughtful fellow flies. Pope.

2. Food in general, such as nature requires: to get bread, implies, to get sufficient for support without luxury.

In the sweet of thy face that thou eat bread. Genesis.

If pretenders were not supported by the simplicity of the iniquitous fools, the trade would not find them bread. *Bishop.

This dowager, whom on my tale I found,

A simple sober life in patience led,

And had but just enough to buy her bread. Dryden.

While I submit to such indignities,

Make me a citizen, you master of home; To sell my country, with my voice, for bread. Pope.

I neither have been bred a scholar, a squire, nor to any kind of business, this creates uneasiness in my mind, fearing I shall in time want bread. Spectator.

God is pleased to try our patience by the insufficiency of those who, having eaten of our bread, have lit up themselves against us. King Charles.

But sometimes virtue itselfs, while vice is fed; What then? is the reward of virtue bread? Pope.

BREAD-CRIPPER. n. s. [from bread and chip.] One that chips bread, a baker's servant; a kind of blister.

Bread, Hal, on my honour, no abuse.

Not to dispute me, and call me pantler, and bread-crisper, and I know not what. Shakespeare.

BREAD-CORN, n. s. [from bread and corn.] Corn of which bread is made.

There was none one drop of beer in the town; they drank, and bread-corn, dieted not for six days. Heywood.

When it is ripe they gather it, and, burning it among bread-corn, they put it up into a vessel, and keep it as food for their horse. Shakespeare.

BREAD-ROOM, n. s. [In a ship.] A part of the hold separated by a bulk-head from the rest, where the bread and biscuit for the men are kept.

BREADTH.
To break a neck. To plough.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.

Breadth. Breadth.
When you begin to consider, whether you may not have too strong an aversion, or that you may have too great a desire to brave it.

17. To break the goal. To part from with violence.

A man from this unskilful sphere.

18. To break out. To disclose; to break, burst, burst.

Let not the speech of your mouth be burst out, that your discourse come not to your heart, but in a low, a gentle manner, and with more solemn and sublime bearing.

Oh, through their thorns the sum of knowledge
And Pains were ten to the sum of virtues.
Or through their thorns, you do not know,

19. To break out. To disclose.

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

1. To part in two. Some words,

2. To part. Oh, while I judge,

3. To part. The doors are all

4. To part. But all your doors

5. To part. As the falling

6. To part. No, my dear.

7. To part. Oh, you understand,

8. To part. Do you understand

10. To part. Oh, no, I could

11. To part. For your respect.

12. To part. Oh, no, I could

13. To part. Oh, no, I could

14. To part. Oh, no, I could

15. To part. Oh, no, I could

16. To part. Oh, no, I could

17. To break the goal. To part from

18. To break out. To disclose; to

19. To break out. To disclose.

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, through their thorns the sum of knowledge
And Pains were ten to the sum of virtues.
Or through their thorns, you do not know,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,

Oh, how the labour of our author's heart,
To break with Birtman.

26. It is the end and use of this extensive and perplexed verb, in that all its significations, whether active or neutral, it has some reference to its primitive meaning, by implying either detriment, suddenness, violence, or separation. It is used often with additional particles, up, out, in, off, forth, to modify its signification.

BREAK. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. State of being broken; opening.
2. To break. It is often used in full moon, the rising of the moon causes these effects.

3. A wave broken by rocks or sandbanks: a term of navigation.

BREAKFAST. v. a. [from break and fast.] To eat the first meal in the day.

To break. A piece of bread for a young man: and a small piece of bread and butter.

4. A meal, or part of a meal in general.

5. If I should be broken by a agency, I would have been broken to the break. Skid. I like you to go to sleep by myself. The break is put up by my body. Yet it is that which is to supply.

BREAKFAST. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The first meal in the day.

2. The thing eaten at the first meal.

BREAST. n. s. [breast and fast.] The breast is put forward; to oppoit break to break.

The breast begins to make itself known through the forward, breaking the back of a broken. Shakespeare's Henry V.

The breast is broken and air, and cedes to its place. Gifford.

BREASTBONE. n. s. [from breast and bone.] The bone of the breast; the femur.

The breast shall be eminent, by the whole, and the breast shall be strong. Shakespeare.

BREASTCASKET. n. s. [from breast and cask.] With mariners, the largest and longest caskets, which are sort of firings placed in the middle of the yard.

BREATH. n. s. [from breast and fast.] A stop, a rope, a polish to some part of her forward on, to hold her hold to a warp, or the like. Harris.

BREATHING. adv. [from break and high.] Up to the break.

The eye is open; the breast is open; the mouth is open. Shakespeare.

BREATHED. n. s. [from breast and head.] With shipwrights, the compassing timbers before, that help to strengthen the stem, and all the forepart of the ship. Harris.

BREATHKNOT. n. s. [from breast and knot.] A knot or bunch of ribbons worn by women on the breast.

Our ladies have full faces, and two men horses; why may not be hope for thefamilies, in the influence of this breathknot? Addison's Spectator.
3. To take breath; to rest. He presently followed the victual to hot upon the Scots, that he might them not to breathe, or gather themselves together again.

Shakespeare's State of Ireland.

Three times they breathed, and three times they drank.

Upon agreement, Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Rest, that gives all men life, gave him his death, and too much breathing put him out of breath. Milton.

When France had breathed after intense broils, and peace and conquest crownd her foreign toils. Richardson.

4. To pass as air. Shall I not then be flied in the vault, To whole foul mouth no kestrel crowt sitteth in, And there be tangled ere my Roumme come. Shakespeare.

To Breathe, v. t.
1. To inspire, or inhale into one's own body, and expire or eject out of it. They did to live, their pains and gravity desire to bear. To view the light of heaven, and breathe the vital air. They here began to breathe a most delicious kind of ether, and saw all the fields about them covered with a kind of purple light. Milton.

2. To imbibe by breathing: with into. He breathed into us the breath of life, a vital spirit; after words, he expects, and to own the dignity of its origin. Decoy of Dirty. I grow the young, he beholds, he beholds. Could I but breathe myself into Achilles. Dryden.

3. To expire; to eject by breathing: with out. She is called by ancient authors, the tenth muse; and by Plutarch is compared to Calm, and Titus of Vulcan, who breathed no living breath. Sigerist.

4. To exercise; to keep in breath. Thy greyhounds are as swift as their blood. Shakespeare.

5. To move or affect by breath. The nasal youth proceed to fence the spine; they breathe the dust, or strike the vocal wires. Prior.

6. To exhale; to send out as breath. His after breath was aromatic odours, and ambrosial flowers. Milton's Paradise Lost.

7. To utter privately. I have told her 'neath a secret vow, To live in prayer's and contemplation. Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

8. To give air or vent to. The ready cue to cool the raging pain, Is underneath the foot to breathe a vail. Dryden’s Virgil.

BREATHE, n. f. [from breathe.]
1. One that breathes, or lives. Such a body rather than a life, A nature, or a breather. Shakespeare. Aris, and sleep. I shall choose no breather in the world but myself. Shakespeare.

2. One that utters any thing.

No particular femin once can touch, But it confounds the breather. Shakespeare's Macbeth for Macbeth.

3. Inpirers; one that animates or infuses by inspiration. The breath of all life does now expire. His milders talker tumultuous him away. Shakespeare.

Breathing, n. f. [from breathe.]
1. Aspiration; secret prayer.

While he high, his pins breathing turn'd, Weeping for hope, and interciting our Lord. Prior.

2. Breathing place; vent.

The warmth tendeth the sparks, and makes New breathing, whose new nourishment he takes. Dryden.

Breathe less, adj. [from breathe.]
1. Out of breath; spent with labour. Well know the princes, with passion and difficulty. So hastily hear sound to subdue; The when he breathless was, that battle gain renew. Fairy Queen.

I remember, when the sight was done. When I was dry with rage and extreme toil, Breathless, and faint, laying upon my sword. Come there a certain bird. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

May to their breathless and faint race, that they fell down breathless and dead. Hayward. Breathless and tired, is all I know spent? Or does my glutton spleen at length return? Dryden's Tenida.

2. Dead. Kneading before this rule of sweet life, And breathing to this breathless excellence. The incomer of a very, a lively voice. Shakespeare's King John.

Yielding to the sweetness, breathless they fly. And pale and tall, as white as the sun burnt now. Prior.

Breath, particip. poff. [from To breathe.]

Their matter was best in them, and in this case would never be changed. Whylham, Mr. 11. 10.

BREATH, n. f. See Brain. In a curious of birds of note; one colour falls away by face and body, another rises so interminably that we forgets the variety, without being able to distinguish the total vanity of the one from the first appearance of the other. Addison.

BREATHLESS, adj. [from breathe.]
1. The lower part of the body; the back part. When the king's pardon was offered by a herald, a lead boy turned towards him his naked breast, and usual words suitable to that picture. Hayward.

The storks devour snakes and other serpents, which when they begin to creep up at their brechea, they will presently stop them close to a wall, to keep them in. Cervis' Mafonum.

2. Breeches. Ah! that thy father had been so resolute! —That thou mightst it fill have warn the petitioner, And me it had the breast from London. Shakespeare.

The hinder part of a piece of ordinance. So cannons, when they mount vall paches, Are tumbled back upon their breeches. Anonymous.

4. The hinder part of any thing.

BREECHES, n. f. [from the noun.]
1. To put into breeches.

To fit any thing with a breech; as, to breed a gun. BREECHES, n. f. [from breeches.]

An old Gaulish word; so that Skinner imagines the name of the part covered with breeches, to be derived from that of the garment. In this sense it has no singular.

1. The garment worn by men over the lower part of the body. Patience is coming them in a new hat and an old jerkin, and a pair of old breeches, three times turned. Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew.

Give him a gallow coat to make him'd to. A vest or breech, finely, but the brute could not or conceive all three to make a Lion. King.

2. To work upon the authority of the household. The wife of Xanthus was dominating, as if her fortune, and her carriage, had enticed her to the brechea. L'Estrange.

BREED. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A calf; a kind; a subdivision of species.
I bring you warning,

Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed.
Shakespeare.

The horses were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

And the sires and dams and foundation stock of the breed, and the breed and disposition of the people be front and warlike.
Shakespeare's Effigies.

And the continual streams of crowing flocks and herds.
Reynolds.

Rode fair Acastus on a fiery red;
Queen Dido's gift, and of the Tyrian blood.
Dryden.

3. A family; a generation: in contempt.
A cousin of his late wife's was proposed; but John would have no more of the breed.
Shakespeare's History of J. Bull.

4. A number produced at once; a hatch.
She lays them in the fowl, where they lie till they are hatched; sometimes above an hundred at a breed.
Shakespeare.

BEEFEATE, n. f. [from breed and bats.]
One that breeds quadrats; an incendiary.

An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house whilst; and, I warrant you, no telltale, nor no breedmate.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

BREEDER, n. f. [from breed.]
1. That which produces anything.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.
Shak.

2. The person which brings up another.
Time was, when Italy and Rome have been the best breeders and bringers up of the worthless men.
African's Sicelmosher.

A female that is prolific.
Get thee to a nursery; why wilt thou be a breeder of thieves?
Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Here is the bane, as laudomine as a toad,
Amongst the fairest breeders of our time.
Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus.

Let there be an hundred persons in London, and as many in the country, we say, that there be fifty of them breeders in London, there are more than fifty in the country.
Gracian.

Let, if a friend a night or two should need, He's warned amongst th' other a special breeder.
Pope.

4. One that takes care to raise a breed.
The breeders of English cattle turned much to dairy, or else kept their cattle to fix or seven or eight years.
Templ.

BREEDING, n. f. [from breed.]
1. Education; instruction; qualifications.
She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter.
Shakespeare.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding.
Shakespeare, King Lear.

I hope to see it a piece of none of the meanest breedings, to be acquainted with the laws of nature.
Gilmour's Scotch Prof.

2. Manners; knowledge of ceremony.
As men of breeding, sometimes men of wit.
To avoid great errors, must the left commit.
Pope.

The Grace, from the court did next provide breeding, and wit, and air, and accent, and dignity.
Swift.

3. Nurture; care to bring up from the infant state.
Why was my breeding order's and precept'd,
As of a person separate to God,
Defend'd for great the sin;
Milton's Agnation.

BREEFE, n. f. [bytpra, Sax.]
A flying fly; the gaddfly.
Chapm.

The breefe upon her, like a eave in June.
Hasts fall, and flies.

The besore write, the itch'd breefe.
Is but the mongrel prince of bees.
Hudibras. Vol. J.
The que, Milton.

A bridge, Bacon.

A part of taking or giving rewards for bad practices.

There was a law made by the Roman law against bribery and extortion of the governors of provinces; before, says Cicero, the governors did bribe and extort as much as was sufficient for themselves; but now they bribe and extort as much as may be enough not only for themselves, but for judges, jurors, and magistrate.

There is a map of burnt clay, figured for the use of builders.

For whatsoever doth form a body, as it returneth back again to that it was, may be called alternatio majori as coals made of wood; bricks of earth.

They generally gain enough by the rubish and brick, which the frugal architects value much beyond those of a modern make, to defray the charges of their learning.

But spread, my sons, your glory thin or thick, on paper, or on solid brick.

A loaf shaped like a brick.

To brick, o. a. [from the noun.] To lay with bricks.

The saxon comes to know where he is to be laid, and whether his grave is to be plain or bricked.

Bridgeman, n. s. [from brick and bath.] A piece of brick.

A bridge, Bacon.

Bridgeway, n. s. [from brick and clay.] Clay used for making brick.

I observed it in pits wrought for tile and brick-clay.

Bridgclay, n. s. [from brick and clay.] Clay used for making brick.

Bridgclay, n. s. [from brick and clay.] Clay used for making brick.

Dust made by pounding bricks.

The mixture, being thus sharp, get together a convenient quantity of bricks and dust, and disposed of it, as several papers.

Bridgclay, n. s. [from brick and earth.] Earth used in making bricks.
BRIGADE, n. f. [brigade, Fr.] It is now generally pronounced with the accent on the last syllable. A division of forces; a body of men, consisting of several squadrons of horse, or battalions of foot.

BRIGADE Major. An officer appointed by the brigadier to assist him in the management and ordering of his brigade; and he there acts as a major does in an army.

BRIGADIER General. An officer who commands a brigade of horse or foot in an army; next in order below a major general.

BRIGAND, n. f. [brigand, Fr.] A robber; one that belongs to a band of robbers.

There might be a stout of barbarous thriftiness brigands in some rocks; but it was a degeneration from the nature of man, a political creature.

BRIGANDINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vest; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRIGANTINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vessel; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRIGANTINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vessel; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRICK, n. f. [brief, Dutch, a letter.] 1. A writing of any kind. There is a brief, how many sports are ripe: Make choice of which your heights will see sick.

The apoplectic letters are of a twofold kind and different; one, some are called briefs, because they are comprised in a short and compendious way of writing. Affili.

2. A short extrait, or epitome. The fewest of the fewest woods, one that sits here safe as a sylph. There are a few of the rarest woods, one that sits here safe as a sylph. There are a few of the rarest woods, one that s

3. In law. A writ whereby a man is summoned to answer to any action; or it is an answer of the king in writing, issuing out of any court, whereby he commands any thing to be done. Cowell.

4. A writing given the pleaders, containing the case. The brief with weighty crimes was charg'd, On which the pleader much encharg'd. Swift.

5. Letters patent, giving licence to a charitable collection for any public or private use.

6. In music. A measure of quantity, which contains two strokes down in beating time, and as many up. Harris.

BRIEFLY, adv. [from brief.] Concisely; in a few words. I will speak in that manner which the subject requires; that is, probably, and moderately, and briefly. Manu.

The model of quire swallow, with downcast eye, Ponder'd the speech then briefly thus replied.

Dydman.

BRIEFNESS, n. f. [from brief.] Conciseness; shortness. They excel in gravity and gravity, in smoothness and propriety, in quickness and brevity.

Cromen.

BRIEF. n. f. [from brief.] A plant. The sweet and the wild forth are both species of the rofe.

What fulible hole is this, Where mouth is laid with sundry growing briars? Shakespeare.

Then thefe under a bine both creeping Which of both ends wos, eye deep down, And over it three times doth leap. If not much much availing, Dydman's Mythkild.

BRIEFLY, adv. [from brief.] Rough; thorny; full of briars.

Bri, and possibly also Brics, is derived from the Saxon bries, a bridge; which, to this day, in the northern counties, is called a bryg, and not a bridge.

Gibson, Camden.

BRIGADE, n. f. [brigade, Fr.] It is now generally pronounced with the accent on the last syllable. A division of forces; a body of men, consisting of several squadrons of horse, or battalions of foot.

Or from broad brigades form. Milton.

Here the Bavarian duke his brigades leads, Galling in arms, and gaudy to behold. Philipps.

BRIGADE Major. An officer appointed by the brigadier to assist him in the management and ordering of his brigade; and he there acts as a major does in an army.

BRIGADIER General. An officer who commands a brigade of horse or foot in an army; next in order below a major general.

BRIGAND, n. f. [brigand, Fr.] A robber; one that belongs to a band of robbers.

There might be a stout of barbarous thriftiness brigands in some rocks; but it was a degeneration from the nature of man, a political creature.

BRIGANDINE. n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vest; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRIGANTINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vessel; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRIGANTINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vessel; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.

BRIGANTINE, n. f. [from brigand.] 1. A light vessel; such as has been formerly used by corsairs or pirates. Like a was a waslike brigandine, apply'd To flight, lay forth her tratahul pillars sfere The engines, which in them in death she hide.
2. The upper edge of any vessel.
How my head in old time was drest!—W. Shew
How it cup and looks her brims!—Shew.
The bubbling waters from the bottom rise,
Above the bowls they force their fancy's rise.

Dryden's Address.
Thus in a basin drop a fillling,
Then fill the vessel to the brim,
You shall observe, as you go filling,
That the water will level to itself.

3. The top of any liquor.
The feet of the prints, that bare the ark, were Dipped in the brim of the water. —J. Dryden

4. The bank of a fountain.
Thed was a girl you could not love,
Within whose cheerful brims
That curious nymph had left been known
To battle her snowy limbs. —Dryden.

To Brim, v. a. [from the noun.] To fill to the brim.
May thy brimmed waves, their full tribute never Miss from a thousand rills. —Shew.

This fald, a double wreath brandish'd your head;
And golden black and white his temples bind;
Then brims his ample bowl; with like design,
The red inhote the gods with sparkling wine.

To Brim, v. n. To be full to the brim.
Now hoor! Wares.
Commence, the brimming glasses now are hoo'd.
With dire intent. —Pit.—Bri.Fu.nasl. adj. [from brim and full.]
Full to the top; overcharged.
Measure the cauld, how thy beauty's fillling
With food of wees my heart brimfuls is charg'd.

Sibyl.
We have try'd the utmost of our friends;
Our legions are brimful, our cause is tip.
Her brimful eyes, that ready flood,
And only want to weep a flood.
Rejoice their watry fume. —Dryden's Fables.
The good old king at parting wrung my hand,
His eyes brimful of tears; then sighing cry'd,
Priches, be careful of my morn. —Addison's Cato.

Bri.Fu.nas. n. s. [from brimful.] Full to the top.
The Scot on his unfurnished kingdom
Came pouring like a tide into a beach,
With ample and brimfulness of his forces. —Shew.

Bri.Mer. n. s. [from brim.] A bowl full to the top.
When healths go round, and kindly beverage,
Flow, till the fresh garlands on their forehead glow. —Dryden.

Bri.Ming. adj. [brim.] Full to the brim.
And twice besides her beatings never fail,
To store the dairy with a brimming milk. —Dryden.

Bri.Mo.n. s. [corrupted from brin or brem, in the French sense of bone.] Sulphur. —S.-Su.Lphur.
Upon his infernal furnace forth he threw
Huge flames, that dimmed all the heaven's light,
E'roll'd in dusky smoke and brimful smoke blue.

The vapour of the greats del can is generally supposed to be phleborahous, though I can see no reason for such a supposition: I put a whole bundle of lighted faggots in the smoke, they went out in an instant. —Addison on Italy.

Bri.Mon. s. [from brimstone.] Full of brimstone; containing sulphur; phleborahous.

Bri.ned. adj. [brin, Fr. a branch.] Streaked; tabby; marked with breaks.
Tattle the brindled cat hath mew'd. —Shakespeare's Macbeth.

BRINE, n. p. [from brined.]
1. Water impregnated with salt.
2. The sea, as it is salt.
3. Tears, as they are salt.

BRINE, n. s. [from brine and pit.]
To fetch from another place; distinguished from to carry, or convey, to another place.

To bring, v. a. [bringan, Sax. preter. I brought; part. past. brought; bringe.] To fetch; to carry; to bring.

To bring forth. To bring to light.; to produce.
The good queen,
For she is good, he brought you for a daughter:
Here lies; commands it to you to bring the king. —Shew.

More wonderful
Than that which, by creation, first brought forth
Light out of darkens! —Paradis. Lof.

To bring about. [See About.] To bring to pass; to effect.
This he conceives not hard to bring about.
If all of you would join to help him out.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.
This turn of mind through the oppositions of envy and competition; it enabled him to gain the most vain and irrepresentable in his designs, and to bring about several great events, for the advantage of the public. —Addison's Fre Helder.

To bring forth. To give birth to; to produce.
The good queen,
For she is good, he brought you for a daughter:
Here lies; commands it to you to bring the king. —Shew.

More wonderful
Than that which, by creation, first brought forth
Light out of darkens! —Paradis. Lof.

To bring about. [See About.] To bring to pass; to effect.
This he conceives not hard to bring about.
If all of you would join to help him out.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.
This turn of mind through the oppositions of envy and competition; it enabled him to gain the most vain and irrepresentable in his designs, and to bring about several great events, for the advantage of the public. —Addison's Fre Helder.

To bring forth. To give birth to; to produce.

11. To bring forth. To give birth to; to produce.

12. To bring forth. To bring to light; to produce.
The thing that is hid brings he forth to light.

13. To bring in. To place in any condition.
He presents he loves you,
And needs on other suitors, but his liking.

To bring in. To reduce.
Send over into that realm such a strong power of men, as should perform it to all these people, and lose people.

To bring in. To afford gain.
The faire measure of all his courtiers is, what returns they will make him, and what revenue they will bring him in.

To bring: brought us in plenty and riches.

To bring in. To introduce.
Entertain no long discourses with any; but if you can, bring in something to fascinate it with solicitude. —Taylor.

There is but one God who made heaven and earth, and sea and winds; but the folly and madness of mankind brought in the images of gods.

Still ing feet.
The fruitfulness of Italy, and the like, are not brought in by force, but naturally rise out of the argument.

Addison.
Since he could not have a feast among them himself, he would bring in one who had more merit.

Quotations are best brought in to confirm, or oppose, opinion controverted.

Swift.

17. To bring off. To clear; to procure to be acquitted; to cause to escape.
I trusted to my head, that has betrayed me; and to my legs, that would otherwise have brought me off.

L'Estrange.

Set a kite upon the bench, and it is forty to one he'll bring off a crook at the bar.

L'Estrange.

The least which avoids this imputation is the credit of our understanding, is to be truly religious.

Tilson.

18. To bring on. To engage in action.
If there be any that would reign, and take up all the time, let him find means to make them come, and bring others on.

Bacon.

19. To bring on. To produce as an occasional cause.

The fountains of the great deep being broke open, so as a general destruction and devastation was brought upon the earth, and all things in it.

Burnet's Theory.

The great question, which in all ages has divided mankind, and brought on them those great chiefs.

Locke.

20. To bring over. To convert; to draw to a new party.

This liberty should be made use of by few occasions of small importance, and only with a few who live on their own side, and are most of time to something of greater and more public moment.

Swift's Church of England Man.

The protestant clergy will find it, perhaps, no difficult matter to bring great numbers over to the church.

Swift.

21. To bring out. To exhibit; to shew.

If I make not this cheat bring our another, and the thief doth shine, let me be unroll'd.

Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

Which he could bring out, where he had, and what he bought them for, and paid.

Hudibras.

Thrice break his soul, and, as they boldly pass,

Bring out his crimes, and force him to confess.

Dryden.

Another way made use of, to find the weight of the denary, was by the weight of Greek coins, but these experiments brought out the denarius heavier.

Arabian.

22. To bring under. To subdue; to repulse.

That sharp course which you have set down, for your passage under of these rebels of Ulisses, and preparing a way for their perpetual reformation.

Sperel.

To say, that the more capable, or the better defended, each rich right to govern, as he most comfortably bring under the less worthy, is idle.

Bacon.

23. To bring up. To educate; to instruct; to form.

The well bringing up of the people, serves as a new bond to the nation.

He that takes upon him the charge of bringing up young men, especially young gentlemen, should have something more in him than Lattin.

 Locke.

It might be equally converted with this lovely virgin, who had been brought up by her father in knowledge.

Addison's Guardian.

24. To bring up. To introduce to general practice.

Several obbling defequencies, confecenfions, and fabrificions, with many outward forms and ceremonies, were first of all brought up among the polish part of mankind, who lived in courts and cities.

25. To bring up. To cause to advance.

Bring up your army; but I think you'll find,

They're not prepared for us.

Shakespeare.

26. Bring retain; in all its senses, the idea of an agent, or cause, producing a real or metaphorical motion of something towards something; for it is oft said, that he brought his companion out.

The meaning is, that he was brought to something that was likewise without.

Bri'nger. m. [from bring.]

The person that brings anything.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath not the smallest part in his tongue. Sound ever after as a full bell, Remember'd tolling a dead friend.

Shakespeare.

Blin'd ye see false the bringing

Out of the heart I must attend mine office. Shakspe.

Bri'nger up. Infidrator; educator.

Italy and Rome have been breeders and bringers up of the worthiest men. Addition's Schoolmaster.

Bri'ningsh. adj. [from bring.]

Having the tale of brine; salt.

Nero would be tired with remorse

To hear and for her plaints, her briny tear. Shak.

For now I stand, as one upon a rock, Environ'd with a wilderness of sea, Who marks the washing tide grow worse by wave; Expecting ever when some eminent surge

Will, in his briny bowels, swallow him. Shakspe.

Bri'ningshness. n. fs. [from brining.

Saltiness; tendency to saltiness.

BRINK. m. fs. [brink, Danish.]
The edge of any place, as of a precipice or a river.

The amaz'd flames stand gather'd in a heap,

And from the precipice's brink, Attila.

We stand therefore on the brink of confuses of those flates at the day of doom. Atherleigh.

So have we seen, from Severn's brink,

A rock of men, a stone spring down together;

Swim where the bird of Jove would sink, And, swimming, never wear a feather.

Swift.

Bri'ny. adj. [from brine.]
Salt.

He, who first the passage try'd,

In hundred'ds had, his all brimb; Or his, at least, in hollow wood, Who tempos'd it, with the briny Flood.

Dryden.

Then, briny tear, and watchful springs, farewell,

Where fountain nymphs, confus'd with Merides dwell.

Addison.

A murmick or briny tale seems to be produced, by a mixture of an acid and alkaline falt; for spirit of faith, and salt of taste, mixed, produce a falt like sea falt.

Arabian.

BRINKNEY. See BRONY.

BRISK. adj. [brusque, French.]

1. Lively; vivacious; gay; spiritedly applied to men.

P'thry, dies, and set me free,

Or do, and with me gone, do, and I

Kind and brisk, and gay, like me. Denham.

A creeping young fellow, that had committed matrimony with a brisk gamefome lass, was so alter'd in a few days, that he was like a skeleton than a living man.

L'Estrange.

Why should all honour then be ta'en

From lower parts to bad the brain;

When other limbs when they are free, Each in his way, as brislke as he.

Prior.

2. Powerful; spirited.

Our nature here is not unlike our wine:

Some forts, when old, continue brisk and fine.

Drayton.

Under ground, the rude Riphean race

Mimick brislke cyders, with the brake's product wild, Shiue ponded hips, and hare's hartshod juice.

Philips.

It must needs be some exterior caule, and the brisk acting of some objects without me, when efficacy I cannot reach.

Prior.

3. Vivid; bright.

This is not used.

Objects appeared much darker, because my instrument was overcharged; had it magnified thirty or twenty-five times, it had made the object appear more brisk and pleasant.

Newton.

To bris'ke up.

To come up briskly.
Brittle, adj. [burzak, Saxon.] Fragile; apt to break; not tough.

The wood of vines is very durable; though no tree hath the twigs, while they are green, so brittle, yet the wood dried is extremely tough.

From earth all came, to earth must all return.
Frail as the cord, and brittle as the sinew.

I. Of transients, and fleeting joys.
What does the busy world conclude at last?
But brittle goods, that break like glass? Growable.
When the stone is brittle, it will often crumble, and pass into a certain form of dust.

Brittleness. n.s. [from brittle.] Aptness to break; fragility.
A wit quick without brightness, sharp without brilliancy.

Artrash, in the tempering of steel, by holding it but a minute or two longer or longer in the flame, give it a very differing temper, as to brilliancy or toughness.
Bryce. n.s. The gaddfly.
A brace, a feared little creature, through his fair hide a second sting did threaten.

Broach. n.s. [broche, French.]
1. A pit.
He was taken into a private office in his kingdom so that he turned a broach, that had worn a crown.

Bacon's History VII.
Whoso offered entailed shall his crime reproach,
And strip his fattiness from the hostile broach.
Dryden.

2. A musical instrument, the sounds of which are made by turning round a handle.

3. [With hunters.] A flirt of the head of a young stag, growing sharp like the end of a pit.

To Broach. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To spit; to pierce as with a pit.
Were now the general of our gracious empress,
As in good time he may, from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword.

Shakespeare.

He fell men as one would bow hay, and sometimes broached a great number of them upon his pike, as one would carry little birds spitted upon a stick.

Hakewill.

2. To pierce a vessel in order to draw the liveliness to top.

3. To open any flower.
I will notably provide, that you shall want neither weapon, victorious, nor aid; I will open the old armories, I will break my store, and bring you knowledge.

Broacher. n.s. [from broach.]

This opinion is commonly, but falsely, attributed to Aristotle, not as its first broacher, but as its chief patron.

Broad. adj. [brah, Saxon.]
1. Wide; extended in breadth, distinguished from length; not narrow.
The roof that its broad spreading leaves did shelter
Are pull'd up, root and all.

Shakespeare.
The top may be justly said to grow broader, as the bottom.

Of all your knowledge this vain fruit you have,
To walk with eyes broach open to your grave.
Dryden.

So lofty was the pile, a Parthenian bow,
With, vigorous feet, mark'd the shaft below.

The bottom was full twenty fathom broad.

Dryden.

He launch'd the fiery bolt from pole to pole,
Broach the lighthouses, the lights dispelling.

Pyfes.

2. Large.
To keep him at a distance from falsehood, and cunning, which has always a broad mixture of falsehood; this is the first preparation of a child for wisdom.

Locke.

3. Clear; open; not sheltered; not affording concealment.
In mean time be, with cunning to conceal
All thought of this from others, himself born
In broach house, with the wouers, us before.

Chapman.

No longer shrouds the thunders of night and broadens, but appears in the broach light.

Disgrace of Pyr.

If children were left alone in the dark, they would be no more afraid than in broad sunshine.

Locke.

4. Grofs; coarse.
The revet and the miller are distinguished from each other, as much as the lady prieters and the broad-breaking, gap-toothed wife of Bath.

Dryden.

Love made him doubt his bread barbarian found;
By love, his want of words and wit he found.

Dryden.

If open vice be what you drive at,
A name to broach we'll never connive at.

Dryden.

The breads' mirth unfeeling fully wears,
Left pleasuring far than virtue's very tear.

Pope.

Room for my lord's three jockeys in his train;
Six hunters with a stout precede his chair;

He grins, and looks broad nonsense with a glare.

Pope.

5. Obscene; fulsome; tending to obscenity.
As chaste and modest as he is esteemed, it cannot be denied, but in some places he is broad and fulsome.

Dryden.

Though now arraigned, he read with some delight.
Because he seems to chew the cud again,

When his bread comment the words too plain,

Pope.

6. Bold; not delicate; not reserved.
Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? Such may rail against great buildings.

Shakespeare.

From broad words, and 'cause he failed,
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
Mandeville lives in disgrace.

Shakespeare.

Broad as long. Equal upon the whole.
The mobile are still for beseeching; that is to say, for advancing themselves for it as it broad, whether they relate others, or bring others down to them.

L'Estrange.

Broad-cloth. n.s. [from bread and cloth.] A fine kind of cloth.
Thus, a wife taylor is no pinching,
But turns at every feast an inch in.

Or wife, he farts, your broad-cloth breaches
Will never be smooth, nor hold their stitches.

Shakespeare.

Broad-eyed. adj. [from broad and eyes.]
Having a wide surve.

In despite of bread-eyed watchful day,
I would invo the bosom pour my thoughts.
But, all! I will not.

Shakespeare.

Broadeaved. adj. [from broad and leaf.] Having broad leaves.
Narrow and broad-leaved cypress graft.

Windward on Pelion.

To Broadsen, v.n. [from broad.] To grow broad. I know not whether this word occurs, but in the following passage.

Low walks the fun, and broadens by degrees,
Just o'er the verge of day.

Dryden.

Broadly. adv. [from broad.]

1. Breadth; extent from side to side.

2. Courtesies; fulsome.
I have used the clemency whither I could and to palliate the broadness of the meaning. Dryden.

Broadsoulereder. adj. [from broad and shoulder.]
Having a large space between the shoulders.

Big-boned, and large of limbs, with sinews strong.

Broadsoulered, and his arms were round and large.

Dryden.

I am a tall, broad-shouldered, impudent, black fellow: and, as I thought, every way qualified for a rich widow.

Spectator.

Broadsied. n.s. [from broad and side.]
1. The side of a ship, distinct from the head or stern.
From water hopes than this he found't to fall,
That dwarf attempt the British admirals
From her broadsides a rude flame is thrown,
Than from the fiery chariot of the sun.

Waller.

2. The volley of shot fired at once from the side of a ship.

3. [in printing.] A sheet of paper, containing one large page.

Broadsword. n.s. [from broad and sword.]
A cutting sword, with a broad blade.
He in fighting a duel, was run through the thigh with a broadsword.

Wycher.

Broadsweise. adv. [from broad and wise.] According to the direction of the breadth.
If one should, with his hand, thrust a piece of iron broadwise against the flat ceiling of his chamber, the iron would not fall as long as the force of the hand percives to press against it.

Bylges.

Brocade. n.s. [brocade, Span.] A filken stuff, variegated with colours of gold or silver.
I have the convenience of buying and importing rich brocades.

Spectator.

Or flas her honour, or her new brocade.

Forget her prayers, or she'll a masquerade.

Pope.

Brocade. adj. [from brocade.]

1. Dreff in brocade.

2. Woven in the manner of a brocade.
Should you the rich brocatel ask unshod,
Where sith flow'r's grow still with frosted gold.

Gay.

Brocage. n.s. [from broke.]

1. The gain gotten by promoting bargains.
Yet sure his benevolence
Get him small gains, but thine excelles flattery,
And righteousness, and unevil fullness,
And hurtless sects, and good good ladies, gain.

Shakespeare.

2. The hire given for any unlawful office.
As for the politics and who'se office, they e interpreted to be broage of an officer, thereby to woo and win the hearts of the people.

Brock.

3. The trade of dealing in old things; the trade of a broker.
Poor poet age, that would be thought our chief,
Whole works are often the tripping of wit,
S.JorJ.

1. Thing

To BROC, see Brooch.

So trivial of Bouillon, at one draught of his bow, shouting against David's tower in Jerusalem, broke three feet off it. Cambus.

BROKE.

As swift as an intending shaving. To attend to only a trick.

BROKEN.

To a fence; to a broker. To break, or chip.

BROKEN, n.f. From broken.

1. A factor; one that does business for another; one that makes bargains for another. Brokers, who, having no stock of their own, fit up and trade with that of other men; buying here, and selling there, and commonly abusing both sides, to make out a little paltry gain. Temple.

Some Sooth-fa broken, from the city, will purchase me, the more's the pity. Lay all my fine plantations waste, To fi^ to them in vulgar taste. Swift.

2. One who deals in old household goods.

3. A pimp; a match-maker. A goodly broker!

Dare you presume to barrow wanton lines?
To whisper and cozenage against my youth? Shak.

In chiding for yourself, you think'd your judgment,
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf. Shak.

BROKERAGE, n.f. [From broker.] The pay or reward of a broker. See Brokerage.

BROCHER, n.f. [Brocher, Fr.] A dross of that part of the aspera arteria, called the bronchus. Quincy.

BROCHIAL, n.f. [Brochial.] Belonging to the bronchus.

BROCHIC, n.f. To the throat.

Inflammation of the lungs may happen either in the bronchial or pulmonary vessels, and may soon be commended to one or the other, when the inflammation affects both the lobes. Arbuthnot.

BROCHOTOMY, n.f. [Brochotomia.] That operation which opens the wind-pipe by incision, to prevent suffocation in a quinsey. Quincy.

The operation of bronchotomy is an incision into the aspera arteria, to make way for the lungs to be inflated, which is performed by any tumour compressing the larynx. Sharp's Surgery.

BROND, n.f. See Brand. A sword.

Foolish old man, said then the pagan wroth,
That woebest words or charms may force with force.

Soon shalt thou see, and their believe for truth,
That I can carve with this enchanted brand. Spenser.

BROCH, n.f. [Broche, Fr.]

1. Brash.

Imbrp'd with native, bronze, lo! Henley.

With his voice, and balancing his hands. Pope.

2. Relief, or statue, call in brass.

I saw with anger and disdain,
How little gives they joy and pain? A pint, a broche, a flower, a root.

Broch, a signal for the boats which we row now. Shakespeare.

I know him well; he is the brooch, indeed.
And gem of all the nation. Shakespeare.

2. [With painter:] A painting all of one colour. Diff.

To Brooch, &c. [From the noun.] To adorn with jewels.

Not th' imperious show
Of the full-front'd Caesar, ever shall
Be brooch'd with me. Shakespeare.

To BROOD, v.n. [braun, Sax.]

1. To sit as on eggs; to hatch them.

Thus from the first
Walt prentick, and, with mighty wings outspread,
Dove-like fast brooding on the vaub abyss,
And mad'd it pregnant.

Nature, specious, fruitful sweetneees round,
Breathes on the air, and broods upon the ground.

2. To cover chickens under the wing.

Exalted hence, and drunk with secret joy,
Their young succussion all their cares expelling,
They breed, they brood, instruct, and educate;
And make provision for the future state. Dryden.

Find out some uncouth cell,
Where brooding darkness feeds his jealous wings,
And the night raven flings. Milton.

3. To remain long in anxiety, or solicitude.

Defraud their clients, and, to lure fold,
Sit brooding on unprofitable gold.

An anxious mifer
Brood o'er their precious flowers of secret gold. Smith.

4. To mature any thing by care.

It was the opinion of linon, as if there were ever amongst nations a brooding of a war, and that there is no sure league but impudence to do hurt. Bacon.

To BROOD, &c. To cherish by care.

Of crowds afraid, yet anxious when absolv,
You'll sit and brood your forrow on a throne. Dryden.

BROOD, n.f. [From the verb.]

1. Offspring; progeny. It is now hardly used of human beings, but in contempt.

The heavenly father keeps his brood.
From soul infection of so great a vice. Fairfax.

With terrors and with clowns compass'd round,
Of mine own breed, that on my bowels feed. Mills.

Or any other of that heavenly breed.
Let down in cloudy throne to do the world some good. Mills.

Albion's flocks of flocks, and their affection,
To their breed, whom they instruct to fly. Brown's Valley Errors.

2. Thine bred ; species generated.

Have you forgotten Lybia's burning walcres,
Its barren snakes, parch'd earth, and hills of sand,
Its tainted air, and all its broods of poison? Addis.

3. A hatch; the number hatched at once.

I was wonderfully pleased to fee the different workings of infancy in a ham followed with a bread of ducks. Spenser.

4. Something
4.

4. Something brought forth; a production.

Such things become the hatch and brood of time.

Shakespeare.

5.

5. The act of covering the eggs.

Brooming 'em in his soul.

O'er which his melancholy fits on brood;

And I doubt the hatch and the dikes.

Will be some danger.

Bro'ody, adj. [from brood.] In a state of fitting on the eggs; inclined to fit.

The common hen, all the while the dikes, fits, and leads her chicks, and utters voice which we call cocking.

Ry.

Brook, n. f. [bpec, or brocha, Sax.] A running water, less than a river.

A substrate shines brightly as a king,

Until a kinsman or his flat

Emples itself, as doth an inland brook

Into the main of waters.

Or many grateful altars I would rear

Of grateful turf; and pile up every stone

Of hurt from the brook in memory.

Of monument to age:

And to Cephalus' brook their way pursue;

The stream was troubled, but the ford they knew.

Dryden.

Springs make little rivulets; those united, make brooks; and those coming together, make rivers, which they threaten into the seas.

Locke.

7. To brook. v. n. To bear; to endure; to support.

Even they, which brook it worst that men should tell them of their duties, when they are told the fame by a law, think very well and reasonably of it.

A thousand more mischiefs than this one.

Have leamed me to brook this patiently. Shakspere.

How use doth habbit a man in this shallow earth, unconfined woods.

I better brook than flouritious peopled towns. Shak.

Heaven, the seat of bliss,

Breaks not the works of violence and war. Milton.

Man can no more suffer their being repulsed knaves, than for their honesty be accounted fools.

South.

Refrain that will not brook; but think it hard,

Your prudence is not trusted by your guards. Dryden.

7. To brook. v. n. To endure; to be content.

He, in these wars, had rather good his aids; because he could not brook that the worthy prince

Pigoung was, by his choyen Titidates, proriter before him.

Simsy.

Brookline, n. f. [becenba, Lat.] A barrier of water speedwell, very common in ditches.

Broom, n. f. [genista; bpec, Saxon.]

1. A small tree.

Ev'n humble brome and often have their use,

And shade for sheep, and food for flocks, produce.

Dryden.

2. A beemow: so called from the matter of which it is sometimes made.

Not a mean.

Shall disturb this hallow'd hou'se?

I am fent with brome before,

To sweep the dui behind the door. Shak.

If they came into the bed apartament, for any thing in order, they were saluted with a brome.

Arbuthnot.

Broomland, n. f. [broom and land.] Land that bears broom.

Most brown deep rooted in the root, when they have not been far gone with it, by being put into broomlands.

Morriner.

Broomstaff, n. f. [from brome and staff.] The staff to which the brome is bound; the handle of a beemow.

They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the brome with fire; I defined em all.

Shakespeare.
BRU

BROWNSICK, adj. [from brow and sick.] Dejected; hanging the head. But yet a gradual influence from you may alter nature in our browfsick crew. Sweeting.

BROWN, adj. [brun, Sax.] The name of a colour, compounded of black and any other colour.

Brown, in high Dutch, is called bruin; in the Netherlands, bruinen; in French, colour brun; in Italian, brun. Peacham. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a little brown. From whence he high Ithaces o'erlook the floods, Brown with o'ercharging shades and pendant woods. Pope. Long untravel'd heaths, With defolation brown, he wanders wafte. Theocritus.

BROWNBILL, n. s. [from brow and bill.] The ancient weapon of the English foot; why it is called brown, I have not discovered; but we now say brow brown from it.

And browbills, level in the city, Made bills to the grand committee. Hudibras.

BROWNISH, adj. [from brown.] Some what brown. A brownish grey iron-stone, lying in this strata, is poor, but runs freely. Woodward.

BROWNISHNESS, n. s. [from brown.] A brown color.

Brown would confess the contention in her own mind, between that lovely, indeed most lovely, browns of Mulford's face, and this colour of mine. Ruskin.

BROWNSTUDY, n. s. [from brow and study.] Gloomy meditations: study in which we direct our thoughts to no certain point. They live retired, and then do they awake their time in browniest and browndrakes; or, if brisk and lively, they lay themselves out wholly in making common places. Norris.

TO BROWSE. v. a. [browfer, Fr.] To eat branches, or shrubs. And being down, is trod in the durt Of cattle, and browfed, and finely hurt. Spenser. Thy palate then did dig a

The roughest berry on the rudest hedges Yes, like the flag, when now the pallure sheets. The opening way to their brawny, St. Philips.

TO BROWSE. v. n. To feed: it is used with the particle on.

They have feared away two of my beef steers; If any where have them, 'tis by the staid side, browsing as he went. Shakespeare. A goat, hard-paced, took hatchery in a vineyard, so soon as he thought the danger over, he fell prettily a browsing upon the leaves. L'Estrange. Could eat the tender pasturage and, by degrees, Browse on the flied, and crop the budding trees. Blackmore.

The Greeks were the descendants of savages, ignorant of agriculture, and browsing on brambles, like cattle. Arbuthnot.

BROWSE, n. s. [from the verb.] Branches, or shrubs, fit for the food of goats, or other animals.

The greedy lienselfe the wolf pursues, The wolf the kid, the wanton kid the browse. Dryden. On that cloud-piercing hill, Phinlimmonm, from afar, the traveler keen, Athone'sd, how the goats their browsey browse. Dryden.

TO BRUISE. v. a. [brefjer, Fr.] To crush, or mangle with the heavy blow of something not edged or pointed; to crush by any weight; to beat into gross powder; to beat together coarsely.

Gallows in arms, and my most loving friends, Bro'd under the yoke of tyranny. Shakesp. Vol. I.

And fix far deeper in his head their rings, Than seasonable death shall bruise the victor's heel, Or theirs who redeem them. Milton. As in old chant hewn with earth confounding, And claws with rocks together crafted and placed. Waller. They beat their breasts with many a brushing blow, Till they turn livid, and corrupt the snow. Dryd.

BRUISE. n. s. [from the verb.] A hurt with something blunt and heavy. One arm'd with metal, th'o' other with wood, This fit for bruise, and that for blood. Hudibras. I since have laboured To blind the bruises of a civil war, And flop the issues of their wailing blood. Dryd.

BRUISEWORT, n. s. An herb; the same with Comfrey.

BRUI.X. n. s. [bruits, Fr.] Rumour; noise; report.

A bruise ran from one to the other, that the king was slain. Upon some bruises he apprehended a fear, which moved him to send to Sir William Herbert to remain his friend. Haywood.

I am not One that reproches in the common wretches; At common bruise both put it. Shakespeare.

TO BRUIT. v. a. [from the noun.] To report; to noise abroad; to rumour. Neither the verb nor the noun are now much in use.

His death, Being bruised once, took fire and heat away From the belt temper'd courage in his troops. Shakespeare. It was bruised, that I meant nothing let, than to go to Guiana. Raleigh.

BRUM. adj. [brumalis, Lat.] Belonging to the winter.

About the bruimal coldness, it hath been observed, even when unbruised, that the sea is calm, and the winds do cease, till the young oars are excluded, and forsake their nests. Brown.

BRUN, BRAN, BROWN, BOURN, BURN, are all derived from the Saxon, bonis, bown, boun, buonas; all signifying a river or brook. Gibson.

BROWN'T, n. s. [brunette, French.] A woman with a brown complexion.

Your five women therefore thought of this fashian, to inful the olives and the brunettes. Addison.

BR'NION, n. s. [bruynes, Fr.] A fort of fruit between a plum and a peach.

BRU'T, n. s. [bruff, Dutch.]

1. Shock; violence.

From choise rather to bruise the blunt of war, than venture him. Sidney.

God, who canst a fountain, at thy pleazur, From the dry-ground to spring, thy ditt'r stily, After the burst of the battle. Milton. Faithful ministrers are to stand and endure the bruises; a common fodder may fly, when it is the duty of faithfuls that holds the standard to die upon. Swift.

2. Blow; stroke.

A wicked ambush, which lay hidden long In the cloke covert of her guilty eyes; Thence breaking forth, did thieve me through, Too feeble I t'abuse the blunts so strong. Spenser. The friendly rug prefers the ground, And bruising knight, from bruise or wound, Like feathered watches a wall, And heavy brunt of cannon-ball. Hudibras.

BRUSH. n. s. [bruff, Fr. from bruise, Lat.] An instrument to clean any thing, by rubbing off the dirt or soil. It is generally made of bristles set in wood.

1. It is used for the larger and stronger pencils used by painters. Whence comes all this rage of wit? is this arming all the pencils and brushes of the town against me? Stillingfleet.

With a small brush you must smear the ground well upon the joint of each piece. Maxon.

3. A rude affault; a flocch; rough treatment; which, by the same metaphor, we call a searing.

Let grow thy finevs till their knots be strong, And tempe not yet the brystes of the war. Shak. It could not be permitted, that, upon so little a bryse as Waller had faultain, he could not be able, to follow and disturb the king. Clarendon.

Elie, when we put it to the push, They had not given us such a brushe. Hudibras.

To BRUSH, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To sweep or rub with a brushe.

If he be not in love with some woman, there it no believing old signs: he bruised his hat the morining; what shal that bode? Shakespeare.

2. To strike with quickness, as in brushing.

The wrathful beast about him turnd light, And him to rudely paling by, did bruise With his long tail, that horse and man to ground did rush. Spenser's Fairy Queen. Has Sumnum bruised thy eyelids with his hoof? Dryden.

His son Cupcube bruised the briny flood, Upon his stern a brassy centaur faunce. Dryden. High o'er the billows flew the mailly loud, And near the ship cam thundring on the flood, It almost brushe'd the helm. Pope.

3. To paint with a brushe.

You have commissioned me to paint your shop, And I have done my bell to bruise you up like your neighbours. Pope.

4. To carry away, by an act like that of bruising; to sweep.

And from the boughs brushe off the evil dew. And heal the harms of thwarting thunder. Milton.

The receptacle of waters, into which the mouths of all rivers must emptieth themselves, ought to have so spacious a surface, that as much water may be continually bruised off by the winds, and exhaled by the sun, as suffices what falls again, is brought into by all the rivers. Bentley.

5. To move as the brushe.

A thousand nights have brushe'd their blistery wings Over these eyes. Dryden.

To BRUSH, v. n.

1. To move with haste; a ludicrous word, applied to men.

Nor went his fate, nor cal'ning eyes, Nor took him down, but brushe'd regardless by. Dryden.

The French had gathered all their force, And William men in their way; 'Tis oft they have done both, foot and horse. Prior.

2. To fly over; to skim lightly.

Nor love is always of a vicious kind, But oft to virtuous acts infames the mind, Awakes the fitful vigour of the soul, And, bruising o'er, adds motion to the pool. Dryd.

BRUSHEL. n. s. [from brusshe.] He that uses a brushe.

Sir Henry Wotton used to say, that critics were like brushes of noblemen's cloaths. Bacon.

BRUSHWOOD. n. s. [from bruises and wood.] I know not whether it may not be corrupted from bruise wood.] Rough, low, clove, shrubby thickets; small wood fit for fire. It smokes, and then with trembling breath she blows, Till in a cheerful blaze the flames arose. H h
With bravado, and with chip, she strengthes
And adds at last the boughs of rotten trees. Dryden.

B R U S H y. adj. [from brush]. Rough or fsy, as a brush
I expected, that it might have proceeded from some small unheeded drop of blood, wiped off by the brushy substance of the nerve, from the knife where it was first applied. Add.

To B R U S T L E, v. n. [margaran, Sax.] To tackle; to make a small noise. Skinner.

B R U T A L adj. [brutal, French; from bruich.
1. That which belongs to a brute; that which we have in common with brutes.

There is no opposing brute force to the fastening of human reason. L'Eeprage.

2. Savage; cruel; inhuman.

The brutal bus'ness of the war is managed by such dreadfull servants. Dryden.

B R U T A L I T Y n. f. [brutalitie, Fr. Savageness; churlishness; inhumanity.

Courage, in an ill-bred man, has the air, and escape not the opinion of brutality. Locke.

To B R U T A L I Z E v. n. [brutalizer, Fr.] To grow brutal or savage.

Upon being carried to the Cape of Good Hope, he mixed, in a kind of transport, with his countyman's religion, and with his in their habit and manner, and would never again return to his for-reign acquaintance. Add.

To B R U T A L I Z E v. a. To make brutal or savage.

B R U T A L I S T. adv. [from brutalit.
Churlishly; inhumanly; cruelly.

Mr. Bull simply a knife at John, though John threw a bottle at her head, very brutally indeed.
Add.

B R U T E adj. [brutas, Latin.]

1. Senfeless; unconscious.

Nur yet we so low and base at their ataffin would defpise us, not walking fixture of clay, not the sons of brute earth, whose final inheritance is death and corruption.

2. Savage; irrational; ferine.

Even brute animals make use of this artificial way, of making use of motions have fewer nations, to call, war, chide, cheerish, threaten.
Holdern.

In the promulgation of the Moslack law, if I must confess, I found myself touched the mountain.
It was to be struck through with a dart. Swift.

3. Befial; in common with beasts.

Then to subdue, and quell, through all the earth,
Brute violence, and proud tyrannic power. Milton.

4. Rough; ferocious; uncivilized.

The brute philopher, who never has proved
The joy of loving, or of being loved.

B R U T E n. f. [from the adjective.] An irritational creature; a creature without reason; a savage.

What may this mean? Language of man proingly.

By tongue of brute, and human fene express'd!
Milton.

To those three present impulses, of fene, memence, and indignation, if not all, the fate of brutes may be reduced. Hais.

Brutes may be considered as either aerial, terre-trial, aquatic, or amphibious. I call those aerial which feel the sense of sight; those terrestrial which have only one eye upon the earth; aquatics those, whose constant abode is upon the water.

Heav'n from all creatures hides the book of fate,
All but the page preferv'd, this present fate
From brute what men, from men what spirits
Or who could suffer being here below? Page.

B U B v. a. [written ill for brisk.]

To report.
This, once brisked through the army, filled them all with heaviness. Kenilworth.

Br u t a n e s s n. f. [from brake.] Bruta-ity: a word not now ufed.

Sperer.

B R U T I F Y v. a. [from brute.] To make a man a brute.

O thou infamous woman; I am I then brisked?
Ay; I feel it here; I spout, I, I am ripe horn mad. Congreve.

B R U T I S H adj. [from brute.]

1. Befial; reeling a beast.

Olivs, Ihs, Orus, and their train,
With monstrous shapes and ferocious plan'd
Fanatize Egypt; and her prides, to seek
Their wand'ring gods disguis'd in brutish forms.
Milton.

2. Having the qualities of a brute; rough;
ferous.

Brutes and, of brutish men, are commonly more able to bear pain than others.

Gros.; carnal.

For thou thyself had been a libertin
As lofty as the brutish thing itself. Shakespeare.

Now he that after he had flown himself into some issue of himself by much ado he staggered to his table again, and there set over the same brutish scene. South.

4. Ignorant; untutored; uncivilized

They were not so tyrannical, that they could be ignorant to call upon the gods of God. Heber.

B R U T I S H L Y adv. [from brutish.] In the manner of a brute; savagely; irration-ally; grossly.

I am not so diffident of myself, as brutishly to submit to any man's dictates. King Charles.

For many who, by a sufficient practice upon a dispensible principle, is brutishly to overrun his reason. South.

B R U T I S H N E S S n. f. [from brutish.]

Brutality; savageness.

All other courage, befriends that, is not true valor, but brutish. Sprat.

B R Y N O N Y n. f. [bryonias, Latin.] A plant.

B u b. n. f. [a cant word.] Strong malt liquor.

Or if it be his fate to meet
With folks who have more wealth than wit,
He loves cheap port, and double claret,
And to it, as he loves it, open the name of Day! Add.

B U R B E R n. f. [from bubble.] A cheat.

What words can suffice to express, how infinitely I esteem you, above all the great ones in this part of the world; above all the Jew, the banker! Dryden.

B U B B Y n. f. [Lat. from bubs, the groin.] That part of the groin from the bending of the thigh to the scrotum; and therefore all tumours in that part are called bubos. Quincy.

I accounted it after the manner of the owlet's opening it, and adders' dreeaqueation. Wilm.

B U B N O n. f. [Lat. from bubo, the groin, and vix, a rupture.] A particular kind of rupture, when the intestines break down into the groin. Quincy.

When the intestine, or omentum, falls through the rings of the abdominal wall, the intestines are said to protrude, or fall into the scrotum;
this being of true nature, only is properly called,
are known by the name of bubo.

B U B B L E. n. f. A red pimple.

His face is all bubbles, and wheels, and knobs, and fames of fire.

B U C C A N E R S. n. f. A cant word for the privaters, or pirates of America.

B U C C A L L A T I O N. n. f. [barcella, a mouthful, Lat.] In some chymical authors, signifies a dividing into large parcels.

B U C K n. f. [bocks, Germ. fuds, or lyre.] 1. The liquor in which clothes are washed.

Back.
1. To fasten with a buckle.
2. To prepare to do any thing; the metaphor is taken from buckling on the armor.
3. To join in battle.
4. To confine.

Buck. v. a. [from the noun.] To fasten clothes. The chief time of letting traps, is in their buckling time. Maritimer.

Buckbasket, n. s. The basket in which clothes are carried to the whale. They conveyed me into a buckbasket; saddled me in with foul shirts, foul flounders, and greedy Shakespear.

Buckbean, n. s. [backbean, Dutch.] A plant; a sort of herb. The bitter nauseous plants, as century, buckbar, gentian, of which tea may be made, or wines prepared. Fries.

Buck, v. n. [from the noun.] To copulate as bucks and does.

Buckler, n. s. [bouget, French.] 1. The veilful in which water is drawn out of a well. Now is this golden crown like a deep well, That over two buckets, filling one another; The empty ever dancing in the air, The other down unfein, and full of water. Shakespear. Is the sea ever likely to be evaporated by the sun, or to be emptied with buckets? Shakespear.

2. The veilful in which water is carried; particularly to quench a fire. Now streets grow th'wend, and, bags by day, Some run for buckets to the hallowed quire; Some cut the pipes, and some the engines play; And some, more bold, mount ladders to the fire. Dryden.

The porringers, that in a raw Hang high, and made a glistening show, To lend the moon's light a double shew. Dryden. Were now but leathern buckets round'd. Swifts.

Buckler, n. s. [buccei, Welsh; bocle, Fr.] A shield; a defensive weapon buckled on the arm. He took his arm, and while I forc'd my way Through troops of foes, which did our passage stay; My buckler o'er my aged father call'd, Still fighting, still defended, as I past. Dryden. This metal compliments the emperor as the Romans did dictator Caesar, when they called him the buckler for the cause. Addison.

To Buckler, v. n. [from the noun.] To support; to defend. Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee, Kate. I'll buckler thee against a million. Shakespeare. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right, Now buckler falsehood with a pedagogue? Shakespeare.

Buckler-thorn, n. s. Christ's thorn.

Buckmast, n. s. The fruit or malt of the bee tree.

Buckram, n. s. [bougrain, Fr.] A sort of strong linen cloth, stiffened with gum, used by tailors and staymakers. I have of Raydon two of them; two, I am sure, I have paid, two paguies in buckram Malfins. Shakespeare.

Buckram, n. s. The fame with wild garlic.

Buckshorn Plantain, n. s. [ramnopus, Lat. from the form of the leaf.] A plant. Miller.

Buckthorn, n. s. [bhamus, Lat. supposed to be so called from buce, Sax. the belly.] A tree that bears a purging berry.

Buckwheat, n. s. [buckweat, Germ. faggeyram, Lat.] A plant. Miller.

Buck's. adj. [henceforth, always.] To buck, to do the deed. A rep.
BUFF

A rope chain of lemons, a village rough,
Defor'd, unfruitful'd, and a skin of buff. Dryden.
2. The skins of elk and oxen dressed in oil, and prepared after the same manner as that of the buffalo.
3. A military coat made of thick leather, so that a blow cannot easily pierce it.
A friend, a fairy, piti'ful and rough.
A wolf, many words, a fellow all in buff. Skaggs.
7. BUFF. v. a. [buffet, Fr.] To strike: it is a word not in use.
There was a shock,
To have buff'd out the blood
From aught but a block. Ben Jonson.
BUFFALO. n. f. [Ital.] A kind of wild ox.
Become the unworthy bows
Of buffaloes, fell goats, and hungry cows. Dryden.
BUFFET. n. f. [buffet, Ital.] A blow with the fist; a box on the ear.
O, I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dhill of skimmed milk with us to honours and wold Shakespeare.
A man that fortune's buffets and rewards has ta'en with equal thanks. Shakespeare.
Go, buffeted coward, left I run upon thee,
And with my hand; I'll fill thy face. Milton.
Round his hollow temples, and his ears,
His buckler beats; the fun of Neptune, honour'd
With these repeated buffets, quite the ground. Dryden.
BUFFET, n. f. [buffet, Fr.] A kind of cupboard; or set of shelves, where plate is set out to dwell, in a room of entertainment.
The rich buffet well-colour'd serpents grace,
And exhibiting Teyton's face with your face. Pope.
To BUFFET. v. n. To play a box-match.
If I might buffet for my love, I could lay on like a butcher. Shakespeare's Henry V.
BUFFETTE. n. f. [buffet, Fr.] A bovr; one that buffets.
BUFFE. n. f. [buffet, Fr.] The same with buffets; wild ox.
To BUFFET. v. n. [from the noun.] To strike with the hand; to box; to beat.
Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again; so he buffet himself on the forehead, crying, Peer out, peer out! that any madness, I ever yet beheld, formed but tanzenes. Shakespeare.
Our ears are cudgel'd; not a word of his
But buffets better than a firk of France. Shakep.
The current roar'd, and we did buffet it.
With the far country, throwing it aside. Shakespeare.
Instantly I plung'd into the sea.
And buffeting the billows to her rescue
Redeem'd her life with half the loss of mine.

To BUFFET. v. n. To play a box-match.
If I might buffet for my love, I could lay on like a butcher. Shakespeare's Henry V.
BUFFETTE. n. f. [buffet, Fr.] A bovr; one that buffets.
BUFFE. n. f. [buffet, Fr.] The same with buffets; wild ox.
To BUFFET. v. n. [from the noun.] To puzzle; to be at a loss.
This was the utter ruin of that poor, angry, buffeting, well-meaning mortal, Puffitores, who lies equally under the contempt of both parties. Dryden.
BUFFETHEADED. adj. [from buffet and head.] A man with a large head, like a buffalo; dull; stupid; foolish.
BUFFOON. n. f. [buffon, French.] 1. A man whose profession is to make sport, by low jests and antic postures; a jack-pudding.
No prince would think himself greatly honoured, to have his proclamation crowned on a publick stage, and become the sport of buffoons. Dryden.
2. A man that practises indecent raillery.
It is the nature of drunks and buffoons, to be insolent to those that will bear it, and laugh at others.
O, Buffoonery. n. f. [from buffon.]
1. The practice or art of a buffoon.
2. Low jests; ridiculous pranks; scurrile mirth. Dryden places the accent, improperly, on the first syllable.
Where publick ministers encourage buffoonery, it is no wonder if buffoons set up for publick minis-ters. L'Estrange.
And while it lasts, let buffonery succeed,
To make us laugh: for never was more need.
BUFFOON. n. f. A flinking insect bred in old household stuff. In the following passage, wings are erroneously ascribed to it.
Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings,
This painted child of dirt, which flings and things. Pope.
BUFF. n. f. [It is derived from buff.]
BUCEARE. n. f. [from big, by others from bug; bug, in Wells, has the fame meaning.
A frightful object; a walking spectre, imagined to be seen; generally now used for a false terror to frighten babies.
Each trembling leaf and whistling wind they hear,
As ghastly bug their hair on end does rear,
Yet both do strive their fearfulness to feign. Dryden.
Sir, spare your threats;
The bug which you would fright me with, I seek. Shakespeare.
Has not slept to-night? would he be not, naughtus,
Man it be deep? is bugbear take him. Shakespeare.
We have a horrid for uncouth monsters; but,
Upon experience, all these bugs grow familiar and easy to us. L'Estrange.
Such bugbear thoughts, once got into the tender minds of children, cause deep, so as not easily, if ever, to begot again out. Locke.
As we are at the doors of buffoons, I find
A more generous sense of it than ordinary.
As if to present, and a small effect. Pope.
BUCEOUS. n. f. [from buggy.] The state of being infected with bugs.
BUCEOUS. adj. [from bugy.] Abounding with bugs.
BUGLE. n. f. [from bugen, Sax.
BUGLEHORN. n. f. [to bend, Skinner; from bugula, Lat. a heifer, Triumph; from bugle, the bonafus, Lyr.] A hunting horn.
That took that figure an horn'y bugle small,
Which sung aloud his face in twintled gold,
And tallay gies. Fairy Queen.
I may lay, there was then in my forehead,
Or hang my bugle in an invisible baldric. Shaks.
He gave his bugle horn a blow,
That through the woodland wind did far and wide. Tickell.
BUGLE. n. f. A shining bead of black glass.
BUGLE bracelets, necklace amber,
Perch'd for a lady's chamber. Shakespeare.
Your bugle eye, balls, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your whisper. Shaks.
BUGLE. n. f. [from bugula, Lat.] A plant.
MILLER.
BUGLE. n. f. A sort of wild ox.
Phillips's World of Words.
BUGLOSS. n. f. [from bugloss, Lat.] The herb ox-tongue.

To BUILD. v. n. To raise from the ground; to make a fabric, or an edifice.
Thou shalt not build an house unto my name. Chronicles.
When sufferers tell their gold in the field,
And feeders and bowels of starv'd buffoons. Shaks.
2. To raise in any laboured form.
When the beasts were built up in a couple of cones and spires, which stood so excellently high on the side of the head, that a woman, who was in a plague without her head-dress, appeared like a Caelus upon it putting it on. Spectator.
3. To raise any thing on a support or foundation.
Love built on beauty, foo as beauty, dies. Dryden.
Caught this fancy, chang'd thy deformity. Dryden.
I would endeavour to destroy those curious, but groundless structures, that men have built up of opinions alone. Dryden.

To BUILD. v. n.
1. To play the architect.
To build, to plant, whatever you intend,
To rear the column, or the arch to bend. Pope.
2. To depend on; to rest on.
By a man's authority, we here understand the force with which his word has the appearance of another's mind, that builds upon it. Hecker.
Some build rather upon the abusing of others, and putting tricks upon them, than upon fundamentals of their proceedings.
Even those who had not tasted of your favours,
Yet built so much on the fame of your beneficence,
That they bemoan the loss of their expectations. Dryden.
This is certainly a much farre way, than to build on the interpretations of an author, who do not consider how the ancients used to think. Addison.

BUGLE. n. f. [from build.] He that builds; an architect.
But fore-accounting off makes builders misl
They found, they felt, they had no leaf of bliss.

BUGLE. n. f. [from build.] A fabric; an edifice.
Thy rampituus buildings, and thy wife's altars,
Have coffd a nafs of publick treasury. Shakespeare.
View not this spire by measure giv'n
To buildings rais'd by common hands.
That fabric rises high as heaven,
Among the greatest variety of ancient coins which I saw at Rome, I could not but take particular notice of such as related to any of the building's or statues that are still extant. Addison.

BULB. n. f. [from build.] A round body, or root.
Take up your early autumnal tulip, and bulbs,
If you will remove them. Evelyn's Kladder.
If we consider the bulk, or ball of the eye, the excreta membrane, or coat thereto, is made thick, tough, or strong, that it is a very hard matter to make a rupture in it.

Bulifaceous. adj. [balfaced, Lat.]. The fame with bulbus.

Bulbus. n. f. [from bulb.]. Containing bulbs or clusters of bulbs; having round or roundish knobs.

There are roots, bulbus roots, fibrous roots, and hircute roots. And I take it, in the bulbous, the fip habenfe more to the air and fun. Bucce. but there are no fpecialts for vermin, erroneously among your bulbous roots.

Their leaves, after they are fveilled out, like a bulbous root, to make the blade, bend inward, or come together, the fip habens nature. Ray on the Great To Bulbus. n. f. [It was originally written bilge: bilge was the lower part of the ship, where it fveilled out; from bulby, Sax. a blader.]

1. To take in water; to founder. Thrice round the ship was twif, then bult'd at once, and in the deep was left.

Dryden.

2. To get out. The side, or part of the side of a wall, or any timber that bulges from its bottom or foundation, is faid to be, or he gets on the foundation.

Moxon's Meafuring Exercifes.

Bullimy. n. f. [Bullia, from Bes, an ox, and xile, hunger.] An enormous appetite, attended with fainting, and coldness of the extremities. Dryden.

Bulk. n. f. [bulcke, Dutch, the breadth, or largest part of a man.]

1. Magnitude of material substance; mass. Against the forces that were prepared near one hundred ships; not so great of bulk indeed, but of a more nimble motion, and more serviceable.

Bacon: Of War with Spain.

The Spaniards and Portuguese have ships of great bulk; but fitter for the merchant than the man of war, for burden than for battle. Robley.

Though an animal arrives at its full growth at a certain age, perhaps it never comes to its full bulk till the last period of life. Arbuthnot.

2. Size; quantity.

Things, or objects, cannot enter into the mind as they fveilled the devil, and by their own natural full pafs into the apprehenion; but they are taken in by their ideas.

Swift.

3. The gros; the majority; the main mass.

The very points, in which their wise men difagreed from the bulk of the people, are the very points in which they agreed with the received doctrines of our nature.

Addison's Freethinker.

Change in property, through the bulk of a nation, makes flow marches, and its due power aâways runs into

Swift.

The bulk of the debt must be leneved gradually.

Swift.

He rul'd a figh so pious and profound, That it did fveen to fatter all his bulk.

And end his being. Shakespeare.

5. The main part of a ship's cargo; as, to break bulk, is to open the cargo.

Bulke. n. f. [from bieke, Dan. a beam.]

A part of a building jutting out.

Here hand behind this bulke, Straightwill become: Wear thy good raper bare, and put it home. Shak.

This event, coming upon Jack with no life in him; he took down the body, and laid it on a bulke, and brought out the rope to the company. Arbuthnot's Perf. p. 3. S. Bull.

Bulke-head. n. f. A partition made across a ship, with boards whereby one part is divided from another.

Harries.

Bulkiness. n. f. [from bulky.]. Greatness of figure, or size.

What, or any other grain, cannot force in- feed of your week, because of its bulkiness, and change of its quantity.

Bulky. adj. [from bulk.]. Of great size or stature.

Lateus, the bulblift of the double race,

When the spoil'd arms of Hades grace.

Dyden.

Huge Telephus, a formidable page,

Glees vengeance; and Orestes' bulky rage,

Unfeififf'd with margins chiefly wide.

Foams and damps the warlike Grunt.

Dyden.

The manner of sea engagements, which was to bore and sink the enemy's ships with the rofta, gave bulky and high ships a great advantage. Arbuthnot.

Bull. n. f. [bulls, Dutch.]

1. The male of black cattle; the male to a cow.

A gentleman woman, Sir, and a Kinwoman of my master's—Even fuch kin as the parish Hebrews are to the town bull. Shakespeare.

Bulls are more crisp upon the forehead than cows. Bacon.

Bull's eye to go to bull, to caufe, we hold,

Begins at four, and ends at ten years old. May.

2. In the fcriptural fense, an enemy powerful, fierce, and violent.

Many bulls have companions me: strong bulls of Britain have beaten me round. Pinfon.

One of the twelve signs of the zodiac.

As bull from Aries calls it, but monstrous.

And the bright Bull receives him. Thomson.

A letter published by the pope.

A bull is letters called apostolicks by the canoni- cals, that preceded with a bullock seal, and containing in them the decrees and commandments of the pope or bishop of Rome. Addison.

There was another fort of ornament wore by the young nobility, called a bull's round, or of the figure of a heart, hung about their necks like diamond crofles. Those bulls came afterwards to be hung to the dalmatics of the emperors and popes, from whence they had the name of bulls. Addison.

It was not till after a fresh bull of Janus had declared how inflexible the court of Rome was in the point of abuse.

Aubrey.

5. A blunder; a contradiction.

I confefs it is with the English call a bull, in the expression, though the fuchs be manifest enough.

Pope's Letters to Young Men.

Bull, in composition, generally notes the large fire in any thing, as bull-head, bullwing, bull-lang, and is therefore only an augmentative fpecies, without much reference to its original thing.

Bull-baiting. n. f. [from bull and bait.]

The sport of baiting bulls with dogs.

What am I the waiter for knowing, that Trajan was in the fifth year of his trinarchy, when he eneouraged the people with a hunting tour or bull-baiting?

Bull-beef. n. f. [from bull and beef.]

Coarse beef; the beh of bulls.

They want their porridge and their fat bull-beef. Shakespeare.

Bull-beggar. n. f. [This word probably came from the influence of those who begged, or raised money by the pope's bulk.]. Something terrible; something to frighten children with.

Their fulminations from the Vatican were thought so ridicules; and, as they were called bull-beggars, they were used as words of scorn and contempt.

Addison.

Bull-calf. n. f. [from bull and calf.]

A he-calf; used for a frupid fellow: a term of reproach.

And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, and reared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard a bull-calf. Shakespeare.

Bull-dog. n. f. [from bull and dog.]

A dog of a particular form, remarkable for his courage. He is used in baiting the bull; and this dog is so peculiar to Britain, that they are fast becoming degenerate when they are carried to other countries.

All the harmless part of him is that of a bull, dog; they are tame no longer than they are not Forc'd. Addison.

Bull-finch. n. f. [rubicilla.]

A small bird, that has neither long nor whistle of its own, yet is very apt to learn, if taught by the mouth.

Philips's World of Birds.

The blackbird whistles from the thorny brake, The mellow bull-calf answers from the groves, Tommy.

Bull-head. n. f. [from bull and head.]

1. A frupid fellow; a blockhead.

2. The name of a fish.

The miller's thumb, or bull-head, is a fish of a slender form, having thump or big and flat, much greater than fitable to its body; a mouth very wide, and usually gaping; he is without teeth, but his lips are very rough, much like a file; he has but two fins near to his gills, which are roundish or cleft; two fins under his belly, two in the back, one below the vent, and the fin of the tail is round. Nature hath painted the body of this fish with white, blackish, brown and white spots. They are usually full of spaws all the summer, which festers their vents in the form of a dug. The bull-head begins to spawn in April; in winter we know no more becomes of them than of beds or swallows. Walter.

3. A little black water vermin.

Philips's World of Birds.

Bull-trout. n. f. A large kind of trout.

There is, in Northumberland, a trout called a bull-trout, of a much greater length and bigger than any in those farther parts. Walter.

Bull-head. n. f. The same with knob-nosed.

Bull-wort, or Bishop's-weed. n. f. [ammi, Lat.]. A plant.

Bulb.. n. f. A wild four plum.

In Obedotes, and the opinions of Newbourn, come services, mediators, blockheads; roles cut removed, to come late; holy oaks, and such like.

Bacon.

Bull-bait. n. f. [houter, Fr.]. A round ball of metal, usually shot out of guns.

As when the devilish iron engine, wrought in deep hell, and formed by furies skill.

With windy sire, and quick sulphur fraught.

And ramm'd with buller round, ordain'd to kill.

Glasier, their leaders, desperately fighting al- though the foremost of the janizaries, was at once shot with two bullets, and slain.

Kiaus.

And as the bull, so different is the fight.

Their mounting showers on our fails design'd.

Deep in their bulls our deadly bullets light.

And through the yielding planks a paffage feal.

Bullion. n. f. [bullion, Fr.]. Gold or silver in the lump, unwrought, un coined.

The balance of trade much of necessity be returned in coin or bullion.

Bacon.

A second multitude.

With wondrous art, found out the massey one,

Severing each kind, and feem'd to the bullion drafts.

Melvin.

Bullion.
B U L

BULLEN is silver whose workmanship has no ra-ler. And thus foreign coin hath no value here for trading, and our coin is bullion in its most dominions.

In every vessel there is stowage for immense treasures, when the cargo is pure bullion. Addition.

B U L L I T I O N. n. f. [from bullis, Lat.] The act or state of boiling.

Bullion is not boiled in these possessions, which will not easily incorporate, what the effect are, as the bullion, the precipitation to the botton, the ejection of the top, the fusion in the middle, and the trembling wood. Dryden.

B U L L Y. n. f. [from bull.] A young bull.

Why, that's spoken like an honest drover: for they sell bullocks.

Some drive the birds; here the forcible

Th' appointed way, and runs with threatening horns.

Cowboy.

Until the transportation of cattle into England was prohibited, the quickest trade of ready money here was driven by the sale of young bulls.

To B U L L Y. v. a. [from the noun.] To overbear with noise or menaces.

Plaintiff, parish clocks, and beeches meet.

He that is drunk, or bully'd, pays the treat. King.

To B U L L Y. v. n. To be noisy and quarrelsome.

B U L R U S H. n. f. [from bull and rush.] A large rush, such as grows in rivers, without knots; though Dryden has given it the epithet knotty; confounding it, probably,
with the reed.

To make fine cages for the nightingales, and baskets of bulrushes, was my wont. Spen.

All my gratifies are but as a bulrush call upon a firebrand; they are born by the strength of the reign.

Dryden.

The edges were with bending rivers crown'd;
The knotty bulrush next in order stood,
And all within of reeds, a trembling wood. Dryden.

B U L W A R K. n. f. [bulwarkes, Dutch; probably only from its strength and largeness.]

1. What is now called a ballion.

But him the squire made quickly to retire,
Encountering fence with fingle sword in hand,
And 'twixt him and his lord did like a bulwark stand.

They oft repel;
Their earthen bulwarks' gainst the ocean wind.

Fairfax.

We have bulwarks round us.

Within our walls are troops cou'd to toil. Addison.

2. A fortification.

Taking, away needles bulwark, divers were demolished upon the castle wall.

Hayward.

Our naval strength is a bulwark to the nation.

Addison.

3. A security; a screen; a shelter.

Some making the wars their bulwark, that they before the gentle blemish of peace with pilgrimage and robbery.

Shakespeare.

To B U L W A R K. v. a. [from the noun.]
To fortify; to strengthen with bulwarks.

And yet no bulwark's town, or distant coast.

Shakespeare.

Prefers the beastous youth from being seen.

B U M. n. f. [bomme, Dutch.] The buttocks;
the part on which we sit.

The aise aunt telling the faultless tale,
Sometimes for three hours thou mistaketh me.

Then slip I from her bow, down toppling. Shat.

This said, he gently raised the knight.

And set him on his bow upright.

Hudibras.

From dully shops neglectful authors come,
Martyr of pies, and relics of the bow.

Dryden.

The learned Sydenham does not doubt.

But profound thought will bring the grace.

And that with bow on couch we lie.

Because our reason's foot too high.

W. m.

B U M B A R D. n. f. [This is a corruption of bound ballist, pronounced by gendar corruption boun, bun, bun bailist.] A ballist of the meanest kind; one that is employed in arrears.

Go, Sir Andrew, form me for the corse of the orchard, like a bumbillard. Shakespeare.

B U M B A R D, n. f. [wrong written for bombard; which see.] A great gun; a black jack; a leathern pitcher.

You fame black cloud, you hang one looks
Like a fool bumbard, that would shed his liquor.

Shakespeare.

B U M B A S T. n. f. [fallely written for bombard; bombard and bumbard for being mentioned, with great probability, by Juances, as coming from bumbus, a tree, and feen, filke, the filk or cotton of a tree.

Mr. Stevens, with much more probability, deduces them all from bumbachus.

1. A cloth made by feewing one stuff upon another; patchwork.

The usual bumbast of black bowd woven into earine, our English women made to think very fancy.

2. Linen flushed with cotton; flushing;

wadding.

. We have receiv'd your letters full of love,

And in our maiden councils, rated them
At courtesies, pleasant joue, and courtey,
As bumbast, and as living to the time. Shat.

B U M P. n. f. [perhaps from bumb, as being prominent.] A swelling; a protuberance.

. It had upon its brow a bump as big as a young cockrel's bone; a porous knob, and it cried bump, bump, bump, with a hollow sound.

Not though his teeth are broken out, his eyes
Hang by a string, in bump his forehead rise.

Dryden.

To BUM. v. a. [from bumbas, Lat.] To make a loud noise, or bomb. [See Bomb.] It is applied, I think, only to the bittern.

Then to the water's brink she laid her head,
And as a bistour bumps within a reed.

To thee alone, O take, thy boun.

Dryden.

BUMPER. n. f. [from bump.] A cap filled till the liquor swells over the brims.

Place his delight.

All day in playing, bungers, and at night
Reels to the bands.

"Dryden's Journal."
To denote them monsers, they must have had longs yeem of parts, compounded of bolds and fields: but though but burts, their peculiar functions.

BURR, n.f. [burule, Span] A kind of sweet bread.

Thy fongs are greater to mine ear,
Than to the thirteenth river clear,
Or winter pavdge to the labouring youth,
Or burn and fuel to the damns's throat.

Burr. v.t. [corrupted, as Skinner thinks, from dear.] A swelling part; an increasing cavity.

The vare in a biff, reaching dife搞得 through the oze, from the land, to low water mark, and having in it a burr, or ced, with a eye-hook,
where the fish entering, upon the coming back with the shé, are fallen from a lifting our again, soraken by the water, and left dry on the oze.

To Burt. v. n. [from the noun.] To fwell out as, the fall burn is out.

Bûnter, n.f. A cant word for a woman who picks up the street, and us'd, by way of contempt, for any low vulgar woman.

Buñtîng, n.f. [aberrica alba] The
name of a bird.

I took this task for a bunting. Shakej

Buñting, n.f. The fluff of which a ship's colours are made.

BoYu. n.f. [haut, or boy, Fr. Boy, Span] A piece of cork or wood floating on
the water, tied to a weight at the bottom.
The flibberman, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and yod tall anchoring bark
Dimin'th'd to her cock; her cock burs a boy.
Almoost too fmall for fight, King Law.
Like boys, that never sink into the flood,
On learning's surface we but lie and nod.

To Buñt. v. a. [from the noun.] To
fwell out as, the fall burn is out.

Buñter, n.f. A cant word for a woman who picks up the street, and us'd, by way of contempt, for any low
vulgar woman.

Buñtîng, n.f. [aberrica alba] The
name of a bird.

I took this task for a bunting. ShakeJ

Buñting, n.f. The fluff of which a ship's colours are made.

BoYu. n.f. [haut, or boy, Fr. Boy, Span] A piece of cork or wood floating on
the water, tied to a weight at the bottom.
The flibberman, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and yod tall anchoring bark
Dimin'th'd to her cock; her cock burs a boy.
Almoost too fmall for fight, King Law.
Like boys, that never sink into the flood,
On learning's surface we but lie and nod.

To Buñt. v. a. [from the noun.] To
fwell out as, the fall burn is out.

Buñter, n.f. A cant word for a woman who picks up the street, and us'd, by way of contempt, for any low
vulgar woman.

Buñtîng, n.f. [aberrica alba] The
name of a bird.

I took this task for a bunting. ShakeJ

Buñting, n.f. The fluff of which a ship's colours are made.

BoYu. n.f. [haut, or boy, Fr. Boy, Span] A piece of cork or wood floating on
the water, tied to a weight at the bottom.
The flibberman, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and yod tall anchoring bark
Dimin'th'd to her cock; her cock burs a boy.
Almoost too fmall for fight, King Law.
Like boys, that never sink into the flood,
On learning's surface we but lie and nod.

To Buñt. v. a. [from the noun.] To fwell out as, the fall burn is out.
B U R

5. To be in a state of destructive commotion. The nations bleed where'er he steps the turns, The groan full deepens, and the combat burns. Pape.

6. It is used particularly of love. She burns, the raves, the dies, 'tis true; But burns, and raves, and dies, for you. Addison.

B U R N I N G. adj. [from the participle.] Vehement; powerful.

These things fling him So venously, that burning flame detains him From his Cordelia. Shakespeare. I had a glimpse of him; but he shot by me. Rowe. Like a young bound upon a burning scent. Dryden.

B U R N. n. s. [from the verb.] A hurt caused by fire.

We see the phlegm of vitriol is a very effectual remedy against burns. Boyle. A fort of pear, Students from and /).<?. I Stapflpcaosr Shtikefpeare. Shiiikfpeare* To a Philip.

"I participate. I

Bu'rning.

"Bu'rning.

"Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

Bu'rning.

To break, or fly open; to suffer a violent disruption. So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine. Prov. iii. 10.

It is ready to burst into new bottles. 7th. egg, that soon Bursting with kindly ruftpipe, forth difclos'd The callow young. Milton.

To fly adust. Yet am I thankful; if my heart were great, 'Twould burst at this. Shakespeare.

To break away; to spring.

You burst, ah cruel! from my arms, And boldly glide by the Canal. Pope.

To come suddenly. A refolved villain, Whole bodies suddenly burst out; the king Yet speaks; and the venture may recover. Scot. If the world in inclos'd should on his feares burst, He would abhorrent. Phaenomen.

5. To come with violence. Well did thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice; For had the passions of thy heart burst out, I fear we should have seen deceptively there More rancorous spite. Shakespeare.

There is the medicinal passage over the Euphrates, bursting out by the valleys of the mountain Antaurus; from whence the plains of Melopotamia, their part of the Persian kingdom, began to open themselves. Keilere.

Young spring protrudes the bursting gams. Transfer.

6. To begin an action violently or suddenly. She burst into tears, and wrung her hands. Vett.

To Burst, v. a. To break suddenly; to make a quick and violent disruption. My beast I'll burst with straining of my courage; And from my shoulders crack my arms adust, But I will challenge this high-minded trumpeter. He fasted on my neck, and bellow'd out, As if he would burst he'adn. Shakespeare. I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds. Met. xxx. 8.

Moles faith also, the fountains of the great abyss were burst adust, to make the deluge; and what means this abyss, and the bursting of it, if restrained to Judas? what appearance is there of this disruption there? Burst'en. Thery.

If the judges of an animal body were, to fo as by the mixture of the opposites, to cause an ebullition, which would burst the creature. Burdett.

B U R S T. n. s. [from the verb.] A sudden disruption; a sudden and violent action of any kind.

Since I was man, Such scents of fire, such burst of horrid thunder, Such groans of rearing wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard. Shakespeare.

Down they came, and drew The whole roof after them, with burst of thunder, Upon the heads of all. Milton.

Imprest'd first, in the close dangerous gents Peer to get loose, and struggle for a vest; Like it e.x ways, and undermining all, Till with a mighty burst whole mountains fell. Addison.

B U R S T. participle. adj. [from burst.] B U R S T E N S. Dif节ed with a herinia, or rupture.

B U R S T E N N E S S. n. s. [from burst.] A rupture, or hernia.

B U R S T W O R T H, n. s. [from burst and worth; herinarian, Latin.] An herb good against ruptures. D.C.

B U R T. n. s. A flat fig of the turbot kind.

To B U R T H E N. v. a. See Burden.

B U R T H E N. n. s. Sec
BURS.

1. A measure containing eight gallons; a skirke.
2. It is used, in common language, indefinitely for a large quantity.
3. Bays of a cart-wheele. Irons within the hole of the nave, to preserve it from wearing. [from burch, Fr. a mouth.]

BUSHINESS, n. f. [from bussy.] The quality of being bushy.

BUSTMENT, n. f. [from busts.] A chickey; a chuffer of bushes.

BUSHY, adj. [from busts.]
1. Thick; full of small branches, not high.
2. Thick bushy beard, thick bushy face.
3. Thick like a bush.
4. Full of bushes.

BUSHLESS, adj. [from busses.] At leisure; without buskins; unemployed.

BUSHLY, adj. [from busses.]
1. With an air of importance; with an air of hurry.
2. Curiously; unfortunately.

BUSINESS, n. f. [from buss.] Employment; multiplicity of affairs.

But buffs can their bush from hence remove? Oh! that's the worst disease of love.

BUSH. n. f. [Bus, French.]
1. A thick shrub.

Bush burs,

The rose bursing round.

Busch. w. f. [bastiffe, Fr. buffelles, low Lat.]

5. Right of action. What buffets has a tortoise among the clouds? L'Estrange.
BUT

The pleasure which I took at my friend's pleasur herein, firstly bade me this order of the same been by court to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels.
While they, which were bade to lay the foundations their buildings were overthrown by an earthquake, and many thousands of the Jews were overwhelm ed.

The points which bade the devotion of the first age, and the curiosity of the latter.

Decay of Piety.

The ideas in it bade about, should be natural and congenital to all mankind.
Leibniz.
The learning and disputes of the schools have been much bade about genres and species.

Virtue.
For the rest, it must be owned, he does not bade himself on a good deal into any party, but rather spends his time in acts of hospitality.

Bu'stroy, n. f. [from bust and body.] A vain, meddling, fantastical person.

Going from house to house, talkers and bade-dirs are the canker and ruff of idleness, as idleness is the runt of time.

Bodley's and intermediers are a dangerous form and food to be extirpated.
Leibniz.
She is well acquainted with all the favourite servants, bade-beds, dependants, and poorrelations, of all persons of condition in the whole town.

B.U.T. conjugn. [bute, butan, Saxon.]

1. Except.
An emission of immaterial virtues we are a little doubtful to propound, it is so prodigious;
that it is by commonly avouched by many. Burton.

Who can it be, ye gods! bu perjurer? Lyon?
Who can inspire such forms of rage, but Lyon?
Where has my sword left one black, but Lyon?

Your poem hath been printed, and we have no objection but the obscurity of several passag es, by our ignorance in facts and persons.
Swift.

2. Except that; unless; had it not been that: in this verse we now write but that.
See vene rt.

And but infinity,
Which waists upon worn times, hath something fair'd
Hir with'd his ability, he had himself
The lands and waters meafur'd.

3. Yet; nevertheless.
It sometimes only enforces

Then let him speak, and any that shall hand without shall hear his voice plainly; yet may make extreme sharp and exile, like the voice of puppets; and yet the articulate sounds of the words shall not be confounded.

Our wants are many, and grievous to be born,
but quite of another kind.
Swift.

4. The particle which introduces the minor of a syslogium; now;

If there be a liberty and possibility for a man to kill himself to-day, then it is not absolutely necessary that he shall live till to-morrow; but there is such a liberty, therefore on such necessity.

God will one time or another make a difference between the good and the evil. But there is little or no difference made in this world; therefore there must be another world, wherein this sensible shall be made.

Swift.

5. Only; nothing more than.
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That not my service past, or present forsworns,
Can remove my practice; but to know my mark be my end.

What nymph fostered he voice last heard,
Will be my rival, though the have but ears.

Swift.

6. Then.
The full moon was no sooner up, and thinking in his own brightness, he opened the gates of Paradise.

Guardian.

7. But; without this consequence that.
Frills that contain the ground
Do seldom their anger withdraw,
But raging floods purify their hateful hand.
Dryden.

8. Otherwise than that.
It cannot be but nature hath some director,
of infinite power, to guide her in all her ways.
Hooker.

9. Not more than; even.
A genius so elevated and unconfined as Mr.
Cowley's, was but necessary to make Finside
Elish, those is Dryden.

Bere but now I left; whom, pl'im'd with pain,
Her age and anguish from these rites detain.

It is evident, in the instance I gave but now,
the consciousness went along.
Leibniz.

10. By any other means than.
Out of that will I cause those of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no tale again, but by transplanfing of Caffe.

Cowley.

11. If it were not for this; that; if it, were not that. Oblolete.
Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cresses. And, but my noble Moor
It true of mind, and made of no such business
At jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill-thinking.

Shakespeare.
I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou haft already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee.

12. However; howbeit: a word of indeterminate connection.

I do not doubt but I have been to blame;
But to pursue the end for which I came,
Under the guide of fortune, which led us on
And pour their common rage upon the foe.
Dryden.

13. It is used after no doubt, no question, and such words, and signifies the same with that; it sometimes is joined with
that.

They made no account, but that the navy should be absolutely master of the seas.

Burton.
I fancied myself a kind of cafe in the change of the paroxyms; never fudging but that the hurricane had ordered itself.
Dryden.

There is no question, but the king of Spain will renew most of the abuses.
Addison.

14. That. This seems no proper sene in this place.
It is not therefore impossible but I may alter the completion of my play, to reform myself into the good graces of my fair critics.
Dryden.

15. Otherwise than. Oblolete.
I should fin
To think our noddy of my grandpa's.

Shakespeare.

16. A particle by which the meaning of the foregoing sentence is bounded or refrained only;

Thus figh'd Mr. Ulysses, thus his fame extends.

A formidable man, bar to his friends.
Dryden.

17. A particle of objection; yet it may be objected: it has sometimes yet with it.

If we do, but put virtue and vice in equal circumstances, the advantages of safe and pleasure will be found to be on the side of religion.

Shelley.
The mischief or harms that come by play, inacordancy, or ignorance, are not at all, or to very greatly, to be taken notice of.

Locke on Education.

If a reader examines Horace's Art of Poetry, he will find but very few precepts in it, which he need not meet with in the course of Prepar'd I stand; he was but born to try

The lot of man, to suffer and to die.

Pope.

12
BUTCHERY. n. f. [from butcher.]

1. The trade of a butcher.

Yet this man, so ignorant in modern butchery, has cut up half an hundred years, and quartered five or six miserable fellows, in every tragedy you have written.

2. Murder; cruelty; slaughter.

If thou delight to try thy beams on heads, Behold this patron of thy butchery. Shakespeare.

The butcher in the line of hospitality is represented in this table under the mark of friendship.

Can he be so fond remorseful, Whom gods, and blood, and butchery delight? Dryden.

3. The place where animals are killed; where blood is shed.

There is no place, this house is but a butchery; Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it. Shakespeare.

Butlership. n. f. [from butler. The office of a butler.

But'tments. n. f. [abatement. Fr.] That part of the arch which joins it to the upper pier.

The supporters or butments of the said arch cannot suffer for much violence, as in the precedent flat portico. Wotton.

BUTTER. n. f. [butter, Saxon; but'y- rum, Lat.]

1. An unctuous substance made by agitating the cream of milk, till the oil separates from the whey.

And he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set before them. Genesis, viii. 3.

2. Butter of antimony. A chemical preparation, made by uniting the acid spirits of sublimate corrosive with regulum of antimony. It is a great cauticum. Harris.

3. Butter of tin, is made with tin and sublimate corrosive. This preparation continually emits fumes. Harris.

To BUTTER. n. a. [from the noun.]

1. To smear, or oil, with butter.

'Twas her brother, that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay. Shakespeare.

Words butter no parfums. L'Estrange.

2. To increase the flacks every throw, or every game: a cant term among game-players.

It is a fine simile in one of Mr. Congreve's prologues, which compares a writer to a buttering game-maker, that flacks all his winning upon one call; so that if he loses the last throw, he is sure to be accounted the worst player. Addison.

Butterfly. n. f. [butterpe Fey, Saxon.] A beautiful insect, so named because it first appears in the beginning of the season for butter.

Effusions that dapple, by her heaviness might, She turn'd into a winged butterfly, In the wide air, to make her wand'ring flights. Spenser.

Tell old tales, and laugh.

At glided butterflies; and hear poor rogues Talk of court and courtiers. Shakespeare.

And so befat, that as he call's his eye Among the comers on a butterfly, He few false Renard.

That which seems to be a powder upon the wings of a butterfly, is an innumerable company of extreme small fetters, not to be discerned without a microscope. Gay.

BUTTER IS. n. f. An infusion of steep set in a wooden handle, used in paring the foot, or cutting the hoof, of a horse. Farri'rs Dictionary.

BUTTER-
BUT

BUXOMNESS. n.f. [from buxom.] Wantonness; amoroufness.

To BUOY. w. a. Preter. I bought; I have bought. [bought.

1. To purchase; to acquire by paying a price; to obtain for money, or something equivalent; to procure by sale, not gift or theft.

They must buy up any corn growing within twelve miles of Grays; that to the filling of their masts, they want large quantities.

2. To procure some advantage by something that defers it, or at some price.

I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people. Shaksp.

Pent to linger.

But with a grain a day, I would not buy their mercy at the price of one fair word. Shaks.

Pleasure with prattle, and danger they would buy's.

And with a fee that would not only fly. Brcham.

3. To regulate by money; in this sense it has particles annexed.

You, and all the kings of Christendom, Are led to grofly by this meddling priest, Dreading the curse that money may buy out. Shak.

What things are power, throne, or riches, When they would terrify, dissuade, or buy off confidence! Souh.

To BUOY. w. v. To treat about a purchase.

I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and do following. Shaksp.

BューER.n.f. [from To buy.] He that buys a purcher.

When a piece of art is fet before us, let the first caution be, not to ask who made it, lest the fame of the author do captivate the fancy of the buyer. W rol.

To BUZZZ. v. n. [buzzter, Teut. to growl. Janius.

1. To hum; to make a noise like bees, flies, or wasps.

And all the chamber filled was with flies, Which buzzed all about, and made such confusion, That thay encom'd all men's ears, and eyes.

Like many swarms of bees assembled round. Spry.

There be more wasps, that buzz about his nose, Will make this dish the sooner. Shaksp.

For still the flowers ready stand, One bassiz round about,

One light, one tabet, gets in, gets out. Shaks.

Bshing.

Though no bees around your credit frow,

Nor on your lips diffil'd their golden dew.

Yet have we aft flower'd, in their stead,

A swarm of drones that buzz'd about your head. Pope.

We join, like flies and wasps, in buzzing about wirt. Swift.

2. To whisper; to prate to.

There is forth confufion in my pow'r,

As after some occasion falsely spake

By a bellov'd prince, there doth appeane

Among the buzzing multitude. Shaksp.

3. To found heavy and low.

Herewith wite a noise, as the birs among them, as if it had been the filling found of the eafs off. Haywood.

To BUZz. v. a. To whisper; to spred secretly.

Where both the world thrust forth a vanity,

That that so quickly summer'd into his ears? Shaks.

I will buzz about such prophesies,

That Edward shall be fearful of his life. Shaksp.

Did you nor hear

A buzzing of a preparation

Between the king and Catherine? Shaksp.

They might buzz and whisper it one to another, and, audibly withdrawing from the presence of the apostles, they then like their voices, and noise it about the city. Bun.

Buzz. n.f. [from the verb.] A hum; a whisper; a talk.

The
BY

The hive of a city or Kingdom is in best condition when there is least strife or buzz in it. But when the whole outward noise is in a buzz of politics.

Buzziard. n. s. [buzzing, Fr.]
1. A degenerate or mean species of hawk. More pitiful than the eagle shall be maw'd, while kites and buzzards prey at liberty. Sack. It is not done by the noble buzzard even plente'd me with. Small renown, 'tis true: for, not to say, We call him but a hawk by courtey. Dryden.
2. A blockhead; a dunce.
Those blind buzzards, who, in late years, of wilful maliceful souls, would neither learn themselves, nor could teach others, any thing at all. Atniah.
Buzzard. n. s. [from buzz.] A secret whisperer.
Her brother is in secret come from France, and wants buzzard to infect his ear. With petitional speeches of his father's death.

By. prep. [by, bg, Saxon.]
1. It notes the agent.
The Moor is with child by you, Lancastor. The grammar of a language is sometimes to be carefully studied by a grown man. Locke. Death's what the guilty fear, the pious crave, Sought by the wretch, and vanish'd by the brave. Dryden.
2. It notes the instrument, and is commonly used after a verb neuter, where with would be put after an active; as he killed her with a sword: she died by a sword.
But by Peldas' arms when Hector fell, He choks Alastor, and he shines as well. Dryden.
3. It notes the cause of any effect.
I view, by no presumption led, Your revels of the night. Furlough me fighting.
By wise the soul to daring action steals, By woe in painless patience it extols. Savage.
4. It notes the means by which any thing is performed, or obtained.
You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you. Shakespeare. Happier I had if suff'ring him to have known Good by itself, and evil not at all. Milton. The honest knows that by itself, which nothing in the world besides can give it any knowledge of.
We obtain the knowledge of a multitude of propositions by sensation and reflection. Wits's Logic.

By. n. s. [from buzz.]
It shews the manner of an action.
I have not patience: I consume the time In idle talk, and owns her false belief: Sack by her force, and bear her hence unharm'd. Dryden. This fight had more weight with him, as by good luck not above two of that venerable body were fallen after.
Addison. He swells within a neighbouring brook. He saw his branching horns, and alter'd look. Addison.
6. It has a signification, noting the method in which any efficacious action is performed with regard to time or quantity.
The bolt for you, is to re-examine the cause, and to try it even point by point, argument by argument, with all the exactness you can. Hooker. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by you two, and by threes.
Shakespeare. He calleth them forth by one, and by one, by the name, as he pleased, though Faldon the order we like inverted. The captains were obliged to break that piece of ordnance, and so to pieces to carry it away, that the enemy should not get so great a spoil. Knolles.
Common prudence would direct me to take them all out, and examine them one by one. Boyle.
Other would with him that pattern and encourage by your building; and so huge by huge, direct by street, there will at last be finished a magnificent city. Spratt.
Explore by his limb by limb, and fear to find
So make a gate had left a landmark behind. By

The punishment is not to be measured by the greatest or smallness of the matter, but by the opposition it carries, and stands in, to that respect and submission that is due to the father. Lock. By your description of the town, I imagine it to lie under some great enchantment. Pope. By what I have always heard and read, I take the strength of a nation.

It notes the sum of the difference between two things compared.
Meantime the bands pursu'd of a Lusian, More young and vigorous too by twenty springs. Dryden.

Her brother Rivers, Ere this, lies besmirch'd by Pandun or Pemmet. Benjon. By giving the denomination to least quantities of silver by one twentieths, you take from them their due. Locke.

It notes co-operation.
By her he had two children at one birth. Shaks. To-morrow morning call some knight to arms. Raw.

By, the fifth hour of the face, Will with a trumpet, tw'rt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms. Raw.

He en'd not; for, by this, the heavy bands Down from a sky of Jasper lighted now In Paradise. Milton. These have their course to finish round the earth By morrow evening. Dryden. The angelic guards ascended, mute and sad For man: for of his fate by they knew. Milton.

By that time a siege is carried on two or three days, I am altogether lost and bewildered in it. Addison. By this time, the very foundation was removed. Swift. By the beginning of the fourth century from the building of Rome, the tribunes proceeded so far, as to accuse and fine the consuls. Swift.

Before note: noting proximity of place.
Then may not he, the king lies by a beaver, if a beaver dwell near him or the church stands by thy tabernacle, thy tabernacle by the church. Shakespeare.

Here he comes himself;
If he be worth any man's good voice, That good man sit down by him. Ben Jonson. A fraticious plain, wherein Were tents of vanious hue: by time were bands Of cattle grazing. Milton. Stay by me, thou art refinest and faithful! I have employment worthy of thy arm. Dryden.

Before himself, by himself, or themselves, it notes the absence of all others.
Sitting in some place, by himself, let him translate into English his former erasure. Aeschin. Sokymus resolved to assault the breach, after he had, by himself, in melancholy mood, wrapped up a down in his tents. Confin.'s Hist. of the Turk. I know not whether he will annex his discoveries to his appendix, or publish by itself, or at all. Spenser.

He will imagine, that the king and his ministers, fat down and made them by themselves, and then sent them to their allies to sign. Swift.
More pleas'd to keep it till their friends could come, Than eat the fruit of themselves at home. Pope.
This wolf was forced to make bold, ever and anon, with a flock in private, by the by.

Hence we may understand, to add that upon the by, that it is not necessary.

So, while my love's revenge is full and high,
I'll give you back your kingdom by the by.

Dryden.

By, in composition, implies something out of the direct way, and consequently some obscurity, as by-read; something irregular, as by-end; or something collateral, as by-concernment, or private, as by-law. This composition is used at pleasure, and will be understood by the examples following.

By-coffeehouse, n.f. A coffee-house in an obscure place.

I afterwards entered a by-coffeehouse, that stood at the upper end of a narrow lane, where I met with a nonjourner.

Addison.

By-concernment, n.f. An affair which is not the main business.

Our plans, besides the main design, have underplots, or by-concernments, or left considerable persons and intrigues, which are carried on with the motion of the main plot.

Dryden.

By-dependence, n.f. An appendage; something accidentally depending on another.

Thee,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demand'd
And all this by-dependency.

From chance to change.

Shakespeare.

By-design, n.f. An incidental purpose.

And if the mist the mouse-trap lines,
They'll serve for other by-designs,
And make an article understand
To copy out her fool or hand;
Or find void places in the paper,
To steal in something to entrap her.

Hudibras.

By-end, n.f. Private interest; secret advantage.

All people that worship for fear, profit, or some other by-end, fall within the intendment of this fable.

L'Esprance.

By-going, adj. [a Scotch word.] Past.

Tell him, you're true.
All in Bohemia's this satisfaction
The by-going day proclaims'd.

Shakespeare.

As we have a conceit of motion coming, as well as by-goings; so have we of time, which dependeth thereupon.

Grew.

By-interest, n.f. Interest distinct from that of the publick.
Various factions and parties, all aiming at by-interest, without any sincere regard to the public good.

Addison.

By-law, n.f.

By-laws are orders made in court-lects, or court-barons, by common assent, for the good of those that make them, farther than the publick law binds.

Concil.

There was also a law, to restrain the by-laws and ordinances of corporations.

Bacon.

In the beginning of this record is inserted the by-laws and institutions; to which are added two by-laws, as a comment upon the general law.

Addison.

By-matter, n.f. Something incidental.

I knew one that, when he wrote a letter, would put that which was most material into the postscript, as if it had been a by-matter.

Bacon.

By-name, n.f.

A nick-name; name of reproach, or accidental appellation.

Hitherto, until this time, in the Conqueror, used short hoe, and thereupon was by-name Court-hoe, and showed blit the use of them to the English.

Comden.
C.

The third letter of the alphabet, has two sounds; one like k, as call, clock, craft, coal, companion, content; the other as s, as Caesar, affection, cider. It sounds like k before a, o, u, or a consonant; and like s before e, i, and y.

CAB. m.f. [SEP. A Hebrew measure, containing about three pints English, or the eighteenth part of the ephah.

CABAL. n.f. [cabale, Fr. n.2p, tradition. 1. The secret science of the Hebrew rabbins.
2. A body of men united in some clove design. A cabal differs from a party, as few from many.

She often interposed her royal authority, to break the cabals, which were forming against her first ministers.

Addison.

3. Intrigue; something less than conspiracy.

When each, by turns, cabals of women, stove To draw the indulgent king to partial love. Dryden.

CA BAL. v. t. [cabaler, Fr.]. To form close intrigues; to intrigue; to unite in small parties.

His malignant friends, summoned to take their leaves,
Are thought'd about his coach, and sit in council: What thinks caballing captains may design,
I must prevent, by being first in action. Dryden.

CABALIST. n.f. [from cabal]. One skilled in the traditions of the Hebrews.

Then live thus spake: with care and pain We form'd this name, renown'd in rhyme:
Not thine, immortal Neufermann! Conf.touchy cabals, more time. Swift.
CABALISTIC. adj. [from cabal].
CABALIST'S. stick. [from cabal].

Something that has an occult meaning.

The letters are cabalistical, and carry more in them than it proper for the world to be acquainted with.

Addison.

CABAG. v. t. To form a head, as the plants begin to cabage.

To CABAGE. v. a. [a cant word among taylors.] To steal in cutting clothes.

Your tailor, instead of threads, cabages whole yards of cloth.

CABAGE TREE. n.f. A species of palm-tree.

It is very common in the Caribbean islands, where it grows to a prodigious height. The leaves of this tree envelope each other, so that those which are included, being deprived of the air, are blanched; which is the reason the inhabitants cut for plates for hats, and the young shoots are pickled; but whenever this part is cut out, the trees are de-
At both corners of the farther side, let there be two delicate or rich manufactures, definitely paved, richly hangings, and a pair of crystalglases, and a rich cups in the middle, and all other elegance that may be thought on.

2. A hut or small house.

Hearken awhile in thy green cabinet,
Thou burn'st a small Colinet. Stydor.

3. A private room in which consultations are held.

You began in the cabinet what you afterwards practised in the camp.

4. A set of boxes or drawers for curiosities, private box.

Who feels a soul in such a body, let Might love the treasure for the cabinet. Ben. Jefin.

5. Any place in which things of value are hidden.

'Tby breath hath ever been the cabinet
Where I have lock'd my secrets. Derrum.

We cannot discover of the secrets, but by deriving our duty; but so much duty must needs open a cabinet of mysteries.

Taylor.

Cabinet, n. s. 1. A council held in a private manner, with unusual privacy and confidence.
The doctrine of Italy, and practice of France, in some kings' times; hath introduced cabinet-consuls.

Bacon.

2. A right number of privy councilors supposed to be particularly trusted.
From the highest to the lowest it is universally read; from the cabinet-counsel to the nursery.
Gay to Swift.

Cabinet-maker, n. s. [from cabinet and makes]. Do that makes small nice drawers or boxes.
The root of an old white pine will make very fine boxes and combs; for that they would be of great use for the cabinet-makers, as well as the tumblers and others.

Cable, n. s. [Caffid, Welsh; cabed, Dutch.]
The great rope of a ship to which the anchor is fastened.

What though the mast be now blown overboard,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our goods, our silver in the hold.
Yet lives the pilot still. Shakespeare.
The length of the cable is the life of the ship in all extremities; and the reason is, because it makes for the greatest safety of the vessel, as the ship, rising at that length, is not able to stretch it: and no thing breaks that is not fretched. Ralgh.
The cables crack: the sailors fearful cries
Attend; and false night involves the ships.
Dryden.

Cabe, n. s. Small ropes used in fishes. Diz.

Cacao. See Chocolate nut.

Cachet, adj. [from cachet.

Cachectick. Having an ill habit of body; shewing an ill habit.

Young and spirit blood, rather than vapid and cachectick. Arbuthnot on Air.

The cure to plagues in the blood, and appearance as milk in the blood, of some persons who are cachectick. Floyer.

Cachexy, n. s. [kæksid]. A general word to express a great variety of symptoms: most commonly it denotes such a deterioration of the humours, as hinder nutrition, and weakens the vital and animal functions; proceeding from weakness of the fibres, and an abuse of the non-naturals, and often from feverish acute ailments. Arbuthnot on Diet.

Vol. I.
C A I

C A L

C A I

C A L

know in English, and far in Latin; so certainly does flattery destroy virtue. Homer.

A flave and a fowndrel are signified by the same words in many languages. A mean villain; a definable knave: it often implies a mixture of wickedness and miliferous. Shakespeare.

Wild califf; usual of dread and despair, Unworthy of the common breathed air. Why livest thou, dead dog, a longer day, And dost not unto death thyself prepare? Spenser.

It's not impossible But one, the wickedest of the ground, May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute, As Angelo. Shakespeare.

The wretched califf, all alone, As he believ'd, began to mean, And tell his story to himself. Hudibras.

CAKE. n. f. [cook, Leutonick.]

1. A kind of delicate bread.

You must be feeling chileenfions I do you look for ale and total relief, yau rude beaker? Shakespeare. The cake is now, Lord, that I'll bring among the rest. Out of hope of all my strength the fare. Shak.

The diurnal dial was come; the prints prepare Their leaden cakes, and fillers for my heart. Dryden.

2. Any kind of cake, flat, thin, or high; by which it is sometimes distinguished from a loaf.

There is a cake that grows upon the side of a dead tree, that hath gotten no name, but it is large, and of a chimney heat, and hard and pithy. Bacon's Natural History.

3. Concreted matter; congelated matter.

Then when the tney cakes newel the wood, And cakes of ruffing ice come rolling down the flood. Dryden.

To CAKE. w. n. [from the noun.] To harden, as dough in the oven.

This burning matter, as it sunk very leisurely, had time to cake together, and form the bottom, which covers the mouth of that dreadful vault that lies underneath it. Addison or Evelyn.

This is that very Mab, That plats the manes of horfes in the night, And cakes the clefts in feif flufhing hairs. Sack.

And wash'd away the rings and cloathed blood, That caked within. Addison.

CA RASH. Tree.

It hath a flower consisting of one leaf, divided at the brim into five petals, from whose cup ripes the point, in the hinder part of the flower; which afterwards becomes a feedy fruit, having an hard shell. They rife to the height of twenty-five or thirty feet in the West Indies, where they grow naturally. The shells are used by the negroes for cups, as also for making instruments of music, by making a hole in the shell, and putting in small stones, with which they make a sort of rattle. D'Offrage.

CA MANDARINE. n. f. [word derived, probably by some accident, from calaminarum, Lat. which, in the middle ages, signified a hat.] A kind of woolen fluff.

He was of a bulk and stature larger than ordinary, had a red coat, flung open to show a calaminar hat. Addison.

Camel's wool. Fluff.

A kind of daffy, minute, which, being mixed with copper, changes it into brass. We must not omit these, which, though not of so much beauty, yet are of greater use, viz. leadstones, whetstones of all kinds, limethorns, calamine, or sulphur, which is also a kind of salt. Litch.

Camel's milk. n. f. [calaminaria, Lat.] The name of a plant.

CAMITION. adv. [calaminatus, Lat.] Fitted with floses.

CaledoNIus. n. f. [Lat.] A kind of precious stone.

Caledonius is of the agate kind, and of a milky grey, clouded with blue, or with purple. Woodward in fossils.

To CALCINE. See To Calcine.

In hardening, by basting without melting, the heat hath these degrees: first, it hardens, then makes hard, and lastly it doth calcinate. Bacon's Natural History.

Calcination.
Calcination, n. s. [from calcinare; calcination, Fr.] Such a management of bodies by fire, as renders them reducible to powder; wherefore it is called chemical pulverization. This is the next degree of the power of fire beyond that of fusion; for when fusion is longer continued, not only the more fubtile particles of the body itself fly off, but the particles of fire likewise infinicate themselves in such multitudes, and are so blended through its whole substance, that the fluidity, first caused by the fire, can no longer subsist. From this union arises a third kind of body, which, being very porous and brittle, is easily reduced to powder; for, the fire having penetrated every where into the pores of the body, the particles are both hindered from mutual contact, and divided into minute atoms.

Quincy.

Divers substances are thrown away, so soon as the distillation or calcination of the body, that yeildeth them is ended. Boyle.

This may be effected, but without a calcination, or reducing it by art into a fable powder.

Brown's Magazine.

Calcinationary, n. s. [from calcinate.] A vessel used in calcination.

To calcine, v. a. [calciner, Fr. from calx, Lat.] To burn in the fire to a calx, or friable subsance. See Calcination.

The folid form to be earth, bound together with some oil; for if a bone be calcined, so as the least form will crumble it, being immersed in oil, it will grow firm again. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

To burn up.

Every diffuse that union have calcined, Almost as many minds as men we find. Denham.

To calcute, v. a. To become a calx by heat.

This chrysalis is a pellicle folid, flone, clear as water, and without colour, enduring a red heat without losing its transparency, and, in a very strong fire, calcining without fusion. Neurton's Opticks.

To calculate, v. a. [calculator, Fr. from calx, Lat. A little flone or bead, used in operation of numbers.]

1. To compute; to reckon: as, he calculates his expenses.

2. To compute the situation of the planets at any certain time. A cunning man did calculate my birth, And told me, that by water I should die. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Why all these fires? why all these fiding ghosts, Why old men, fools, and children calculate, Why all those things change from their ordinance?

Shakespeare.

Who were there then in the world to observe the births of those first men, and calculate their nati- vities, as they spraved off their axes? Bentley.

3. To adjust; to project for any certain end.

The sentiments of religion clearly appears, as it tends directly to the happiness of men, and is, upon all accounts, calculated for our benefit. Tilley.

To calculate, v. a. To make a computation.

Calculation, n. s. [from calculate.]

1. A practice, or manner of reckoning; the art of numbering.

Cypher, that great friend to calculation; or rather, which changeth calculation into easy computation.

2. A reckoning; the result of arithmetical operation.

If then their calculation be true, for it they reckon. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Calculatory, n. s. [from calculate.] A calculator; a reckoner.

Calculationary, n. s. [from calculate.] Belonging to calculation.

Calculation, n. s. [calculus, Lat.] Reckoning; compute: obfolute.

The general calculus, which was made in the 13th perambulation, exceeded eight millions. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Calculese, adj. [from calculus, Lat.]

Calculest, adj. [from calculus, Lat.]

Calculationary, adj. [from calculus, Lat.]

That which makes any thing hot; heating.

Calcpository, adj. [from calculus, Lat.]

That which heats.

Calcify, v. n. [calcius, Lat.] To grow hot; to be heated.

Crystal will calcify unto electricity; that is, a power to attract fluids, or light bodies, and earver the needle, freely placed. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To calcify, v. a. To make hot.

Calendrical, n. s. [calendarium, Lat.] A register of the year, in which the months, and frated times, are marked, as festivals and holidays.

What hath this day deferv'd? what hath it done, That it in golden letters should be fixt Among the high tides, in the calendar, Shakespeare's King John.

We compute from calendars differing from one another; the compute of the one anticipating that of the other.

Cur'ld be the day when first I did appear; Let it be blotted from the calendar, Let it pollute the month! Dryden's Fables.

To calender, v. a. [calendar, Fr. Shorten.] To rub a cloth smooth; or lay the nap of cloth smooth.

Calender, n. s. [from the verb.] A hot press; a press in which clothiers smooth their cloth.

Calender, n. s. [from calendar.] The person who calenders.

Calendars, n. s. [calendaria, Lat.] It has no angular. The first day of every month among the Romans.

Calenture, n. s. [from calo, Lat.] A dissenter peculiar to sailors in hot climates; wherein they imagine the sea to be green fields, and will throw themselves into it.

Quincy.

And for that leathery was there no cure. Boston.

So, by a calenture milled, The marinier with capture fen

On the smooth ocean's azure bed, Enamelled fields, and verdant trees.

With eager haste he longs to rove.

In that fantastic scene, and thinks

It must be some enchanted grove;

And in he leaps, and down he sinks.

Swift.

Calip. n. s. calyx in the plural. [calip, Saxxen, kalf, Dutch.]

1. The young of a cow.

The calf hath about four years of growth; and to the fawn, and to the calf. Bacon's Nat. History.

Acoota tells us of a foul in Persia, called codores, which will kill and eat up a whole calf at a time. Wilkins.

Ah, Blouselid! I love thee more by half Than does their fawns, or caws the new-fall'n calf.

Gay.

2. Calve of the lips; mentioned by Hufca, signifies sacrifices of praise and prayers, which the captives of Babylon addreed to God, being no longer in a condition to offer sacrifices in his temple. Calmet.

Turn to the Lord, and fify unto him. Take away all the bose, and receive us gracious; do we pity the calf of our lips. Hufca, xiv. 2.

3. By way of contempt and reproach, applied to a human being; a dot; a fabled wretch.

When a child hap to be got,

That after proves an ideal;

When folk perceive it thrieth not;

Some fally doating brained calf,

That undertakes things by the half;

Says, that the fay right the left the eye;

And took away the other. Dryden's Nymphidia.

4. The thick, plump, bulbous part of the leg. [kalf, Dutch.]

Into her legs I'd have love's defiles fall,

And all her calf into a groovy figure.

Shake's of that calf, and falf photographers.

Caliver. n. s. [caliver, Fr.]

The bore; the diameter of the barrel of a gun; the diameter of a bullet.

Calix, m. f. [calix, Lat.] A cup; a chalice.

There is a natural analogy between the solution of the body and the purification of the soul by between eating the holy bread, and drinking the sacri- ficed calix, and a participation of the body and blood of Christ. Taylor.

Calic. n. s. [from Calcit in India.] An Indian fluid made of cotton; sometimes mixed with gay and beautiful colours. I wear the hoop petticoat, and am all in calixons, when the finch is in flocks. Addison's Spectator.

Calid. adj. [calidus, Lat.] Hot; burning; fervent.

Calidivy, n. s. [from calid.] Heat.

The fire will diffuse in every way; heat; and it will diffuse with fire, it will congrege in water, or warm oil; nor doth it only submit into an actual heat, but not endure the potential calidty of many waters.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

K k
The soul makes use of her memory, to call when she is to retain. Dido's Rule to Delilah.

Such fine employments our whole days divide.

To such the flocks of the morning invite.

Dido up the form; then call for the hall.

We wait the preton, hear the lawyers bawl. Dryd.

Then by consent abate from further toll,

Call off the dogs, and gather up the spoils. Addis.

By the pleasure of the face, and fancy.

I mean such an issue from visible objects, when we call up their ideas into our minds by paintings, statues, or descriptions. Addison's Spectator.

Why don't thou call my famous up strench?

My father's name brings tears into my eye.

Addison's Cato.

I am called off from public difficulties, by a domestic-allusion. John Stuart.

Eutychus has a tragedy intitled Procul, in which the shade of Darius is called up. Dryden on the Odyssey.

The paffions call aver the thoughts, with incessant importance, toward the object that excited them.

Watts.

3. To convoke; to summon together.

Now call we our high court of parliament. Dryden.

The king being informed of much that had passed that night, sent to the lord mayor to call a common council immediately. Clarendon.

4. To summon judicially.

The king had dots for the ear to return home, where he should be called to account for all his miscarriages. Clarendon.

Once a day, especially in the early years of life and study, call yourselves to an account, what new ideas, what new proposition or truth, you have gained.

Watts.

5. To summon by command.

In that day did the Lord God of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldness, and to gibbing with sackcloth. Isaiah, xxiv. 12.

6. In the theological sense, to inspire with ardours of piety, or to summon into the church.

Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God. Rom. i. 1.

7. To invoke; to appeal to.

I call God for a record upon my soul, that, to spare me, I came not as yet unto Corinth. 1 Cor. x. 23.

8. To appeal to.

When that lord perplexed their counsels and designs with inconvenient objections in law, the authority of the lord Mancheiser, who had trod the same paths, was the end of an appeal to the court.

Garri.

9. To proclaim; to publish.

Nor ballad-dinger, plac'd above the crowd, Sings with a note so thrilling, sweet, and loud, Nor parish clerk, who calls the psalm so clear. Gay.

10. To excite; to put in action; to bring into view.

He feuds with angry pride, and calls forth all his spots on every side. Cowley.

See Diomynus Homer's thoughts refine, and call new beauties forth from every page. Pope.

11. To figmatize with some opprobrious denomination.

Desersifiunsquallifedmenforallcompany,except friends; whom I can call names, if they do not jest loud enough. Swift to Pope.

12. To call back. To revoke; to retract.

He also is wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back his word; but will awake him, and call back the words of the evil doors; and against the help of them that work iniquity. Isaiah, xxxiv. 4.

13. To call for. To demand; to require; to claim.

Madam, his majesty both call for you, and for your grace, and your my noble lord. Shakespeare.

You fe few man of merit are sought after;
who cannot be supposed to have the gift of contitium.

4. Divine vocation; invitation or impulse to the true religion.

Give all diligence, to make your calling and election sure.

2 Peter 1, 10.

St. Peter was ignorant of the calling of the gentles.

Hobart on Prerogative.

CALLIPERS, n. f. [Of this word I know not the etymology; nor does anything more probable occur, than that, perhaps, the word is corrupted from clipners, instruments with which any thing is clipped, inclosed, or embraced.] Compasses with bowed thanks.

Callipers made of iron, a sort of any round, cylinder, conical body; for that when workmen use them, they open the two points to their desired width, and turn it so much off the intruded place, till the two points of the callipers fit just over their work.

Massey's Mechanical Articles.

CALLOSIITY, n. f. [callosity, Fr.] A kind of swelling without pain, like that of the skin by hard labour; and therefore when wounds, or the edges of ulcers, grow so, they are said to be callous.

Quintus.
The furgeon ought to vary the diet of his patients, as he finds the fibres too hard, too much, are too thick, and produce funguses; or as they harden, and produce callous; in the first cafe, wine and spirituous liquors are useful, in the last hurtful.

Abundance on Diet.

CALLOUS, adj. [callatis, Lat.] 1. Indurated; hardened; having the pores shut up.

In progress of time, the ulcers became firm and callous, with induction of the glands.

Wilmian.

2. Hardened; infirmible.

Licentiousness has so long prevailed for tharpoons of wit, and greatness of mind, that the confidence is grown callous.

L'Estrange.
The wretch is drench'd too deep;

His foul is fuch, to callous, and go frowns,
He furs, and fect not, fadness of his loaf.

Dryden.

CALL\'-N\'ESS, n. f. [from callous.]

1. Hardnefs; induration of the fibres.

The fpecies of the organ of touch. The more of these fpecies the more formed, and the skin becomes the thicker, and to a callousness grows upon it.

Gleizes.

2. Infirmility.

If they let go their hope of everlafting life with willingnefs, and entertain final perdition with exultation, ought they not to be esteemed defirous of common felice, and abandoned to a callousness and numbnefs of soul?

Bentley.

CALL\'-O\'D, adj. Unflued; naked; with out feathers.

Burling with kindly rupture, forth difcord'd
Their callous young.

Milten.

Then as an eagle, who with bafe care
Was being wildly on the wing for prey,
To her now silent airy does repair,
And finds her callous infants far'd away.
Dryden.

How in all flights they know to try their young.

And teach the callous child her parent's song.

Prior.

CALL\'-US, n. f. [Latin.]

An induction of the fibres.

1. A demand; a claim.

Defiance is a perpetual call upon humanity, and a greater incitement to tendernefs and pity than any other motive whatsoever.

Addison's Spect.

2. Hardened; infirmible.

Licentiousness has so long prevailed for tharpoons of wit, and greatness of mind, that the confidence is grown callous.

L'Estrange.
The wretch is drench'd too deep;

His foul is fuch, to callous, and go frowns,
He furs, and fect not, fadness of his loaf.

Dryden.

CALL\'-N\'ESS, n. f. [from callous.]

1. Hardnefs; induration of the fibres.

The fpecies of the organ of touch. The more of these fpecies the more formed, and the skin becomes the thicker, and to a callousness grows upon it.

Gleizes.

2. Infirmility.

If they let go their hope of everlafting life with willingnefs, and entertain final perdition with exultation, ought they not to be esteemed defirous of common felice, and abandoned to a callousness and numbnefs of soul?

Bentley.

CALL\'-O\'D, adj. Unflued; naked; with out feathers.

Burling with kindly rupture, forth difcord'd
Their callous young.

Milten.

Then as an eagle, who with bafe care
Was being wildly on the wing for prey,
To her now silent airy does repair,
And finds her callous infants far'd away.
Dryden.

How in all flights they know to try their young.

And teach the callous child her parent's song.

Prior.

CALL\'-US, n. f. [Latin.]

An induction of the fibres.

1. A demand; a claim.

Defiance is a perpetual call upon humanity, and
a greater incitement to tendernefs and pity than any other motive whatsoever.

Addison's Spect.

2. Hardened; infirmible.

Licentiousness has so long prevailed for tharpoons of wit, and greatness of mind, that the confidence is grown callous.

L'Estrange.
The wretch is drench'd too deep;

His foul is fuch, to callous, and go frowns,
He furs, and fect not, fadness of his loaf.

Dryden.

CALL\'-N\'ESS, n. f. [from callous.]

1. Hardnefs; induration of the fibres.

The fpecies of the organ of touch. The more of these fpecies the more formed, and the skin becomes the thicker, and to a callousness grows upon it.

Gleizes.

2. Infirmility.

If they let go their hope of everlafting life with willingnefs, and entertain final perdition with exultation, ought they not to be esteemed defirous of common felice, and abandoned to a callousness and numbnefs of soul?

Bentley.

CALL\'-O\'D, adj. Unflued; naked; with out feathers.

Burling with kindly rupture, forth difcord'd
Their callous young.

Milten.

Then as an eagle, who with bafe care
Was being wildly on the wing for prey,
To her now silent airy does repair,
And finds her callous infants far'd away.
Dryden.

How in all flights they know to try their young.

And teach the callous child her parent's song.

Prior.
CALUMNIA'TION. n. f. [from calumnia'.] That which we call calumnia'tion, is a malicious and false representation of an enemy's words or actions, to an offensive purpose. - Aysli. CALUMNIA'TOR. n. f. [from calumnia'.] A forger of accu'sation; a flanderer. As he that would live clear of the envy and hatred of certaine calumneurs, much lau.y his tongue upon his mouth, and keep his hand out of the ink-put. L'Engare. At the same time that Virgil was celebrated by Galus, we know that Bawm and Mureuin were his declared foes and calumneurs. Aysli. CALUMNIOUS. adj. [from calumny.] Slanderous; falsely reproachful. Virtue itself 'scapets not calumnious strokes. Shakespeare. With calumniou.s art. Of counterfeited truth, thus held their ears. Milton. CALUMNY. n. f. [calumnia', Lat.] Slander; false charge; groundles accusa'tion: with aggrief, or sometimes upon, before the person accused. He should abide, I see, as pure as snow; Though hate not escape calumny. Shakespeare. It is a very hard calumny upon our soil or clime, to affirm, that so excellent a fruit will not grow here. Temple. CA.LX. n. f. [Latin.] Any thing that is rendered reducible to powder by burning. Gold, that is more dense than lead, refists per'petually all the dividing power of fire; and will not be reduced into a calf, or dust, by such opera' tion as reduces lead into it. Dee. CALYCLE. n. f. [calculus, Lat.] A small bud of a plant. Cama'feu'. n. f. [from camaculis; which name is given by the orientals to the onyx, when, in preparing it, they find another colour.] A stone with various figures and repre'sentations of landscapes, formed by na'ture. CALVING. n. f. [from calf.] A term among workmen. Camber, a piece of timber cut arching; so as, a weight considerable being set upon it, it may in length of time be induced to a bright. Mason's Mechanical Exercises. CAMBERING. n. f. A word mentioned by Skinner, as peculiar to shipbuilders, who say that a plase is cambering, when they mean arched. [from cambrch, French.] CAMBRICK. n. f. [from Cambray, a city in Flanders where it was principally made.] A kind of fine linen, used for ruffles, women's sleeves, and caps. He hath ribbons of all the colours of the rainbow; inkles, eadisides, cambricks, and lawns. Shakespeare. Beckea had, by the use of a looking glass, and by the further use of certain artis, made of cam'brick, upon her head, attains to an evil art. Tatter. Confed'reate in the cheat, they draw the th'race, And cambrick handkerchiefs reward the song. Gay. CAME. The pretence of to come. Till all the pack came up, and every single horse tore the lad huntsman, grailing on the ground. Adapt.i INTERPRETER. A man very common in Arabia, Judea, and the neighbouring countries. One fort is large, and full of flesh, and fit to carry burdens of a thousand pounds weight, having one bucket upon its back. Another have two bunches upon their backs, like a natural saddle, and are fit either for burdens, or men to ride on. A third is kinder, and of a smaller size, called dromedaries, because of their fastness; which are generally used for riding by men of qua'iity. Camels have large solid feet, but not hard. Camels will continue ten or twelve days without eating or drinking, and keep water a long time in their humpes; for their refreshment. Camels. Patient of thirst and toil, Son of the desert! even the camel feels; Shot through with piercing thirst, the fiery blast. Thomson. CAM'LOPARD. n. f. [from camelus and pardus, Lat.] An Abyssinian animal, taller than an elephant, but not so thick. He is so named, because he has a neck and head like a camel; he is spotted like a pard, but his spots are white upon a red ground. The Italians call him giraffa. Trewoux.

CAMELOT. n. f. [from camel.] CAMLET. adj. [from camel.] 1. A kind of stuff originally made by a mixture of silk and camels' hair; it is now made with wool and silk. This habit was not of camels own, nor any coarse texture of its hair, but rather some finer weave of camel's, gorgram, or the like; lastly such as these stuffs are supposed to be made of the hair of that animal. Brown's Etymological Errors. 2. Hair cloth. Metemps the painter wears his hoary beard, And efts of his hair the loaded beard; Their camels warm in tents the soldier' hold, And shield the thiev'ing mariner from cold. Dy'd. CAM'ERA OBSCURA. n. f. [from camera, a chamber, Lat.] An optical machine used in a darkened cham'ber, so that the light coming only thro' a double convex glass, objects exposed to day-light, and opposite to the glass, are represented inverted upon any white matter placed in the focus of the glass. Martin. CAM'ERADE. n. f. [from camera, a chamber, Lat.] One that lodges in the same chamber; a bosom companion. By corrup'tion we now use comrade. Camerades with him, and confederates in his desig'n. Rymor. CAM'ERATRED. adj. [from camera, Lat.] Archd; roofed flopewise. CAMERATION. n. f. [from camera, Lat.] Arched roofed flopewise. CAMISADO. n. f. [camison, a shirt, Ital. camisson, low Lat.] A vessel made by soldiors in the dark; on which occasion they put their shirts outward, to be seen by each other. They had apportioned the same night, whose darkness would have concealed the fear, to have given a camisado upon the English. Heyward. CAMISATED. adj. [from camisa, a shirt.] Dressed with the shirt outward.

CAMLET.
Camel. See Camelot.

Camellia. n. f. [camellia, Sax.; omni.] An herb; the name of a small tree of the camellia family.

Camellia, n. f. [from camellia, Lat.] A plant.

Camellia latifolia. A flower.

Camel's hair. n. f. [from camel's hairy coat.] A designation of a book and ink, the latter being made by rubbing the hair with the book, the black substance being absorbed by the latter.

Camels, n. f. [from camel, from cam].
1. The light of a candle.

In darkness candlighs may serve to guide men's steps, which to use in the day, were madness.

Before the day was done, her work was fed.

And now by candlighs to bed. Dryd. Fab.

The boding owl.

Stands in the private cell by night, and flies abroad.

Swifts.

Such as are adapted to meals, will indifferently serve for dinners or suppers, only differing in the flames between daylight and candlelight.

Swifts.

2. The necessary candles for use.

I shall find baths and candlesticks.

Mulciman to L.

CANDLES, n. s. [from candle and flaps.]

The feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, which was formerly celebrated with many lights in churches.

The harvest dinners are held by every wealthy man, or as we term him, by every good liver, between Michaelmas and Candlesmas.

Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

There is a general tradition in most parts of Europe, that inferneth the custom of the preceding winter, upon hising the fun upon Candlesmas day.

Browne's Vulgar Errors.

Come Candlesmas nine years ago the child, and now lies by'd by the grandmother.

Gay.

CANDLESSTICK. n. s. [from candle and sticks.]

The inclination that holds candles.

The horses, fit for such candlesticks.

With torch-flames in their hands, and their poor

Lob down their heads.

Shakespeare.

These countries were once christian, and members of the church, and where the golden candlesticks did flour.

Browne.

CANDLESUFF. n. s. [from candle and suff.]

Any thing of which candles may be made; kitchen-fufl; greave; tallow.

With the help of oil, and wax, and other candles, the flame may continue, and the wick not burn.

Swifts.

CANDELWATER. n. s. [from candle and water.]

One that consumes candles, a spendthrift.

With candelwaters.

Shakespeare.

CANDOCK. n. s. A weed that grows in rivers.

Lest the pond lie dry; six or twelve monthes, both to kill the water-weeds, as willow, box, etc., and bulrushes; and also, that as these die for want of water, so grass may grow on the pond's bottom.

Shakespeare.

CANDOUR. n. s. [sandr; L.]

Sweetness of temper; purity of mind; openess; ingenuit.

He should have too much of a natural candour and sweetness, mixed with all the improvement of learning, as might convey knowledge with a force of genius.

Swifts.

To CANDY. u. a. [from the noun.] To beat with a walking staff.

CANDICULAR. adj. [candicularis; L.]

Belonging to the dog-star; as, candicular, or dog-days.

In order to different latitudes, into some the candelias are in the winter, as unto such as are under the equinoctial line; for unto them the dog-star shineth, when the sun is about the tropic of Cancer, which featur into their growths.

Browne's Vulgar Errors.

CANDINE. adj. [caninus; L.]

1. Having the properties of a dog.

A kind of women are made up of canine particles. These are f谥, who imitate the actions, and such as were, taken, always busy and barking, and snarl at everyone that comes in their way.

Addison.

2. Canine hunger, in medicine, is an appetite which cannot be satisfied.

An occasion to an habituat appetite of such quantities, which they will take in such quantities, 11 they want them up like dogs from whence it is called canine.

Addison.
C a n

Canister. n. f. [canistrum, Lat.]
1. A small basket.
2. A vessel in full canisters they bring.
3. With all the glorious of the purple spring. Dryden.

Ca n ker, n. f. [cancer, Lat.]
It seems to have the same meaning and original with cancer, but to be accidentally written with a c, when it denotes bad qualities in a leesd degree; or cancer might come from cancer, Fr. and cancer from the Latin.
1. A worm that prey upon, and devours fruit.
2. A fly that preys upon fruits.
3. Any thing that corrupts or consumes. The canker and ruin of many men's estates, which, in process of time, becomes a publick poverty. Bacon.
4. A kind of wild wolfhounds dog.
5. An eating or corroding humour. I am not glad, that such a fore of time Should seek a plaster by a contemned revolt, and heat th'inveterate canker of one wound By making many. Shakespeare.
6. Corroson; virulence.

'Tis Canker, v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To grow corrupt: implying something venemous and malignant.
That cunning architect of cancer's guilt, When princes late displeasure lets in bonds, For failed letters, and curforned wills. Fairy Queen. I will lift the down-erown Mortimer. As highl' th'air as this unthankful king, As this ingrate and cancer'd Bolingbroke. Shakespeare.
On canker'd hands that their compassions slant. Or harbor worm with cancer'd venom bite. Milton.
To some new clime, or to thy native sky, Oh friends and forfaken virtre I fly! I am the Indian in this world's deadly to thee grown; Decent and cancer'd malice rule thy throne. Dryd.
Let envious jealoufly and cancer'd state Pound every shifting g lare, and tax my open day or secret night. Pope.
2. To decay by some corrosive or destructiver principle. Shilling will fully and canker more than gilding; which, if it might be corrected with a little more care, gold, by that profitable. Beaver.

'Tis Canker, v. a.
1. To corrupt; to corrode.

VoL I.

C a n

B rehe to God his due in title and time:
A little peep of cancer the whole estate. Hakker.
2. To infect; to pollute. An honest man will enjoy himself better in a moderate fortune, that is gained with honour and reputation, than in an overweening estate, that is cankered with the acquisitions of rapine and exaction. Addison.

C a n ker bit. particip. a. [from canker and bit.]
Bitten with an envenomed tooth. Know, thy name is lejbo. By treason's tooth barewound and shahkbit. Shak.

Ca n nabine, a. [canabinius, Lat.]
Hempen.

Ca n nibal, n. f. An anthropophagist; a man-eater.
The canibal's themselves extol no man's flesh of those that die of themselves, but of such as are slain. Bacon.

They were little better than cannibals, who do hunt one another; and he that hath strength and swiftness, both eat and devour all his fellows. Davies in Ireland.

It was my hint to speak of the canibals, as well as other eaters; The anthropophagi. Shakespeare. The captive canibal, opprest with chains, Yet betrays his foes, revilis, provokes, dillsains; Of nature free, unamorable, and proud, He bids defiance to the gaping crowd; And spent at large, and speachifies, as he lies, With fiery glasses mock his rags, and dies. Donne.

If an eleventh commandment had been given, Thou shalt not eat human flesh; would not these canibals have esteemed it more difficult than all the regions of the earth. Shakespeare.

Ca n nib al l y, adv. [from cannibal.] In the manner of a cannibal. Before Coriolanus, he scoffed at and not him like a carbosade. Had he been canibally given, he might have dried and eaten him too. Shak.

Ca n ni per, n. f. [corrupted from calliper; which see.]
The square is taken by a pair of canipers, or two rulers, clapped to the side of a tree, measuring the distance between them. Shakespeare's handwriting.

Ca nnon, n. f. [cannon, Fr. from canna, Lat. a pipe, meaning a large tube.]
1. A great gun for battery.
2. A gun larger than can be managed by the hand. They are of so many fizes, that they decrease in the bore from a ball of forty-eight pounds to a ball of five ounces.

As cannon overcharg'd with double charges, So they redoubled strokes upon the foe. Shake.

He had left all the cannon he had taken; and now he sent all his great cannon to a garnish. Clarendon.

The making, or price, of these gunpowder instruments, is extremely expensive, as may be easily judged by the weight of their materials; a whole cannon weighing at common twenty thousand pounds; a half cannon, five thousand; a culverin, four thousand five hundred; a demi-culverin, three thousand; which, whether it be in iron or brass, must needs be very costly to the owner. Whiston.

C an on bal le t. a. [from cannon, cannon-bullet.]
Ball, bullet, and cannon-shot.

The balls which are shot from great guns.
He reckons those for wounds that are made by bullets, although it be a cannon. Wiseman's Surgery.

Let a cannon-bullet pass through a room, it must strike successively the two sides of the room. Locke.

To Ca n no na'de, v. a. [from cannon.]
To play the great guns; to batter or attack with great guns.

Both armies cannonaded all the ensuing day. Tylor.

Ca n no n ber, n. f. [from cannon.] The engineer that manages the cannon.
Gave me the cup.
And let the kettle to the trumpets spoke, The trumpets to the cannon without, The cannons to the heav'ns, the heav'n to earth. Shakespear.

A third was a most excellent cannoner, whose good skill did much endanger the forces of the king. Hayward.

Ca n no t. A word compounded of can and not. No not. Nothing else.
If cannon but belles, a cannoner a child can tell twenty, long before he has any idea of artillery at all. Locke.

Ca no'ra. n. f. A boat made by cutting.
Ca noe. a. [from canoe.] The trunk of a tree into a hollow vesse.
Others made raftes of wood; others did the boat of one tree, called the canoe, which the Gauls, upon the Rhone, used in affisting the transportation of Hannibal's army. Raleigh.

In a war against the Saracimans, they had four thousand monoyla, or canoes of one piece of timber. Arbuthnot on Canoe.

Ca no n. n. f. [canevus.]
1. A rule; a law.
The truth is, they are rules and canons of that law, which is written in all men's hearts; the church had for ever, no laws but these, to obviate them, whether the apostle had mentioned them, or no. Hooker.

His books are almost the very canons to judge both doctrine and discipline by. Hooker.

Religious canons, civil laws, are cruel; That which should war be. Shakespeare.

Canons in logic are such theses: every part of a division, singly taken, must contain less than the whole; and a definition must be peculiar and general to the thing defined. Watts.

2. The laws made by ecclesiastical councils.
Canon law is that law, which is made and ordained in a general council, or provincial synod, of the church.
These were looked on as lapsed persons, and great severities of penance were prescribed them by the canons of Ancony. Stillingsfleet.

3. The books of Holy Scripture; or the great rule.
Canon also denotes those books of Scripture, which are received as inspired and canonical, to diftinguish them from other profane, apocryphal, or disputed books; but, we say, that Canon is part of the sacred canon of the Scripture. Stillingsfleet.

4. A digimetry in cathedral churches.
For deans and canons, or prebends, of cathedral churches, they were of great use in the church; they were to be of countable with the bishop for his revenue, and for his government, in cases ecclesiastical.
Swift much admires the place and air, and longs to be a canon; but, we say, that Canon is a place too mean.

A canon! that's a place too mean! No, doctor, you shall be a dean; Two dozen cannon round your fall, And you the tyrant of them all. Swift.

5. Canons Regular. Such as are placed in monasteries.
Stillingsfleet.

6. Canons Secular. Lay canons, who have been, as a mark of honour, admitted in to some chapters.
[Among chirurgeons.] An instrumen used in ewing up wounds. Diderot.

7. A large fort of printing letter, probably called from being first used in printing a book of canons; or perhaps from CANT. n. f. [canto, Lat.] A song: used generally for a song in scripture.

CANTER. n. f. [from canter.]
A term of reproach for hypocrites, who talk for mal ly of religion, without observing it.

CANTERBURY BELLS. See PHELLOWER.

CANTERBURY GALLOP. [In horsemanship.] The hand gallop of an ambling canter, commonly called a canter; said to be derived from the monks riding to Canterbury on easy ambling horses.

CANTARIDES. n. f. [Latin.] Spanish flies, used to catch biters.

The flies, cantarides, are bred of a worm, or caterpillar, but peculiar to certain fruits: as are the fig-ter, the pine-tree, and the wild blueberry, all which bear sweet fruit, and fruit that hath a kind of secret biteing or sharpness: for the fig hath a milk in it that is sweeter and colder;
the pine-apple hath a kernel that is strong and abruptive.

CANTUS. n. f. [Latin.] The corner of the eye. The internal is called the greater, the external the lesser cantus.

CANTICLE. n. f. [from canto, Lat.] A song; used generally for a song in scripture.

This right of estate, in some nations, is yet more significantly expressed by Moses in his canniticles, in the psalm of God to the Jews.

CANTI LVERS. n. f. Pieces of wood framed into the front or other sides of an house, to sustain the moulding and CANTICLE. n. f. [canon, Lat.] Song; sermon. Not now in ufe.

In the eighth canto, the same person was brought in singing a canonic of Collyns's making.

CANTIL. n. f. [canto, Dutch, a corner; efenbenlion, Fr. a piece.] A piece with corners.

Skinnet.

How this river came, me it not how; I,
And eitie me from the bifi of all my land.
A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantil out.
Shakespeare's Henry IV.

To CANTILE. vi. a. [from the noun.]
To cannel a piece.

For four times talking, if one piece thou take,
That must be cannt, and the judge go fast.
Dryden's Journal.

CANTILE. n. f. [from cannt.] A piece; fragment.

Nor shald nor armour can their force oppose:
Halt cantile of his buckler flew the ground,
And no defence in his bard arms is found. Dryd.

CANTO. n. f. [Ital.] A book, or fiction, of a poem.

Why, what would you do?
—Where shall I find the strong gate,
And call upon my soul within the house?
Write holy canon of constant loved.
Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

CANTON. n. f. 1. A small parcel or division of land.
Only that little canon of land, called the Englishman, containing four small billet, did maintain a bordering war with the Irish, and retain the form of English government.

2. A small community, or clan.
The same is the case of rovers by land; such, as yet are some canons in Arabia, and some petty kings of the mountains adjacent to Arabia; and way man's Hot War.

To Ca'NAN. n. a. From the corn. To divide into little parts.

1. To divide; to separate. [from canafl, a waving cloth.]

2. To debate; to discuss.

The ears of wheat are divided by hands and canavan the matter with all possible diligence.

Woodward.

To Ca'VAS. m. a. [Canna] derives it from canabanber, Fr. to beat hemp; which being a very laborious employment, it is used to signify, to search diligently into.

1. To sift; to examine. [from canavan, a waving cloth.]

2. To examine, to sift through; to examine a book or paper. Rees's Woat's

To Ca'VAS, v. n. To solicit; to try votes previously to the decisive act.

Elizabeth being to resolve, upon an officer, and brought on camefied for others, put in small doubt of the person he meant to advance, and John, she was like one with a lantern9 seeking a man.

This crime of camefied, or soliciting, for church preference, is, by the cannon law, called simony.

CA'NANT. n. s. [canonette, Ital.] To garner, to store.

Cap, v. n. [cap, Welsh; cappe, Sax. cappe, Germ. cappe, Fr. cappe, Ital. capa, Span. cappe, Dan. and Dutch; capas, a head, Latin.]

1. The garment that covers the head.

Here is the cap your worship did bless,

"Why, this was moulded on a princess, a velvet cap. Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

I have ever held my cap off to the fortune.

"Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. Shaks.

First, lining both in woolen capes, Taking her after-dinner nap. Swift.

The cap, the whip, the small wine attire, For which they reaped to the fends.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

2. The ensign of the cardinalate.

Henry the Fifth did sometimes prophesy, If once he came to be a cardinal, He'd make his cap coeval with the crown. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

3. The topmost; the highest.

Thou art the cap of all the fools alive. Shakespeare's Timon.

4. A reverence made by uncovering the head.

They more and less came in with cap and knob, Met him in borough, city, villages. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Should the want of a cap or a crinie to mortally disappoint him, as we find afterwards it did. L'Estrange.

5. A vessel made like a cap.

It is observed, that a barrel or cap, whose cavity will contain eight cubical feet of air, will not serve a diver above a quarter of an hour. Whitel.

6. Cap of a great gun. A piece of lead laid over the touch-hole, to preserve the prime.

7. Cap of maintenance. One of the regalia carried before the king in the coronation.

To Ca'V. v. a. [from the corn.]

1. To cover on the top.

The bones next the joint are capped with a smooth circulare substance, serving both to strengthen and to protect from danger. Diderot.

2. To deprive of the cap.

Ironed, by another collision, take any thing from another, as boys, sometimes use to cap another, the same is straightly termed. Spenser on Ireland.

Cap to capel. To name alternately verses beginning with a particular letter; to name in opposition or emulation; to name alternately in contest.

Candid, and concluded, that the way to get thy way was to drink their way to it. L'Estrange.

To Ca'VASS, v. n. To solicit; to try votes previously to the decisive act.

Elizabeth being to resolve, upon an officer, and brought on camefied for others, put in small doubt of the person he meant to advance, and John, she was like one with a lantern9 seeking a man.

This crime of camefied, or soliciting, for church preference, is, by the cannon law, called simony.

CA'NY. adj. [from canes.]

1. Full of canes.

2. Conflating of canes.

But in his way lights on the barren plains Of Sichiana, where Chineses drive, With falls and wind, their cane waggons light. Milton.

CA'NOONET. n. s. [canonette, Ital.] A little song.

Vecchi was most pleasing of all others, for his conceit and variety, as well his majestical as canones. Peacham.

CAP. n. s. [cap, Welsh; cappe, Sax. cappe, Germ. cappe, Fr. cappe, Ital. capa, Span. cappe, Dan. and Dutch; capas, a head, Latin.]

1. The garment that covers the head.

Here is the cap your worship did bless.

Why, this was moulded on a princess, a velvet cap. Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

I have ever held my cap off to the fortune.

"Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. Shaks.

First, lining both in woolen capes, Taking her after-dinner nap. Swift.

The cap, the whip, the small wine attire, For which they reaped to the fends.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

2. The ensign of the cardinalate.

Henry the Fifth did sometimes prophesy, If once he came to be a cardinal, He'd make his cap coeval with the crown. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

3. The topmost; the highest.

Thou art the cap of all the fools alive. Shakespeare's Timon.

4. A reverence made by uncovering the head.

They more and less came in with cap and knob, Met him in borough, city, villages. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Should the want of a cap or a crinie to mortally disappoint him, as we find afterwards it did. L'Estrange.

5. A vessel made like a cap.

It is observed, that a barrel or cap, whose cavity will contain eight cubical feet of air, will not serve a diver above a quarter of an hour. Whitel.

6. Cap of a great gun. A piece of lead laid over the touch-hole, to preserve the prime.

7. Cap of maintenance. One of the regalia carried before the king in the coronation.

To Ca'V. v. a. [from the corn.]

1. To cover on the top.

The bones next the joint are capped with a smooth circulare substance, serving both to strengthen and to protect from danger. Diderot.

2. To deprive of the cap.

Ironed, by another collision, take any thing from another, as boys, sometimes use to cap another, the same is straightly termed. Spenser on Ireland.

Cap to capel. To name alternately verses beginning with a particular letter; to name in opposition or emulation; to name alternately in contest.

Candid, and concluded, that the way to get thy way was to drink their way to it. L'Estrange.

To Ca'VASS, v. n. To solicit; to try votes previously to the decisive act.

Elizabeth being to resolve, upon an officer, and brought on camefied for others, put in small doubt of the person he meant to advance, and John, she was like one with a lantern9 seeking a man.

This crime of camefied, or soliciting, for church preference, is, by the cannon law, called simony.

CA'NY. adj. [from canes.]

1. Full of canes.

2. Conflating of canes.

But in his way lights on the barren plains Of Sichiana, where Chineses drive, With falls and wind, their cane waggons light. Milton.
CAP\'ACIOUS. adj. [capax, Lat.] 1. Wide; large; able to hold much.

Bafet, and dufkl trappings, and gorgeous knight,
At joult and tournament.
Paradise Lost.

Some wore a breakfast, and a light juppon;
Their horses cloathed with rich caparisons.
Dryden's Embold.
To \CAP\'AR\'IS\'ON. vt., a. [from the noun.] 1. To drefr in caparisons.
The feeds caparison'd with purple fland,
With golden trappings, glorious to behold,
And chapp'd betwixt their teeth the foaming gold.
Dryden.

2. To drefp pompously; in a ludicrous fene.
Don't you think, though I am caparison'd like a man,
I have a doublt and hole in my disposition?
Paradise Lost. J

CA\'PE. n. f. [cape, Fr.] 1. Headland; promontory.
What from the cape you can dileen at seas?
—Nothing at all; it is a high wrought flood.
Shakespeare's Gtksills.

The parting fun,
Beyond the earth's green cape and verdant isle,
Helps her feet; and my signal to depart.
Paradise Lost.

The Romans made war upon the Tarrentines, and obliged them by treaty not to fail beyond the cape.
Arabians.

2. The neck-piece of a cloak.
A cloak in a robe of fine black cloth,
With wide deves and cape.
Bacon.

C\AP\ER\'ER. n. f. [capparis, Lat.] An acid pickle.
See Caper Bush.
We invent new sauce and pickles, which Rembld the animal ferment in taste and virtue, as Mangose, olives, and capers.
Pleer on the Humane.

C\AP\ER\'ER\BUSH. n. f. [cappararis, Lat.] An acid pickle.
See Caper Bush.

The fruit is fify, and shaped like a pear.
This plant grows in the South of France, in Spain,
And in Italy, upon old walls and buildings; and
The buds of the flowers, before they are open, are Pickled for eating.

To \CAP\'E. vt., n. [from the noun.] 1. To dance frolimondly.
The truth is, I am only old in judgment; and he
That will caper with me for a thousand marks, let Me lend him the money, and have the capper.
Shakespeare's Henry IV,

2. To flip for merriment.
Our matter
C\AP\'ER\'ING. vt.
Shakespeare's Timph.
His nimble hand's in swift then taught each giring
A capering cheerfulness, and made them fly
To their own dance.
Gowg.

The family trip it about, and capered like ballast
Flouring out of a marble floor.
Arbuthnot's John Bull.

3. To dance: flponed in contempt.
The flag would nede no force, nor long, nor Nor capping monfleur from active France, Revue.

To \CAP\'E.ER. n. f. [from caper.] A dancer; in contempt.
The vismer's gambols some delight afford;
No left the nimble capper on the cord;
But these are still infipid to fluee,
Coop'd in a ship, and told'd upon the fra.
Dryden's Faw.

CAP\'I\AS. n. f. [Lat.] A writ of two forts:
One before judgment, called cpa\'i\as ad responsum,
in an action personal, if the forfeit,
which is the twentiment of diftreft, return that he has no effects in his jurifdiction.
The other is a writ of execution after judgment.
Cowell.

CAP\'I\L\'AC\'CO\'US. adj. The fame with capillary.
CAP\'I\L\'AL\'La\'N\'M. n. f. [capillamentum, Lat.] Those small threads or hairs which Grow up in the middle of a flower, and Adorned with little heroes at the top,
Are called capillaments.
CAP\'I\L\'AL\'Y. adj. [from capillus, hair, Lat.] 1. Resembling hairs; small; minute: applied to plants.
Capillary or capillaceous plants, are such as
Have no main fork or item, but grow to the Ground, as hairs on the head; and which bear their seeds in Little tufts or protuberance on the backbone of their leaves.
Our common hyfup is not the leaf of vegetables,
Nor observed to grow upon walls; but rather
Some kind of capilliaries, which are very small plants,
And only grow upon walls and rocky places.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. Applied to vesfles of the body: small;
As the ramifications of the arteries.
Quiny.

Ten capillary arteries in some parts of the body,
As in the brain, are not equal to one hair,
And the smallest lymphatic vesfles is an hundred times
Smaller than the smallest capillary vesfle.
Arbuthnot's Aliments.

CAP\'I\LLA\'TI\ON. n. f. [from capillus, Lat.]
A veil like a hair; a small ramifications
Of vesfles. Not used.

Nor is the humour contained in smaller veins,
or obscure capilliaries, but in a veilc.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CAPITAL. adj. [capitalis, Lat.] 1. Relating to the head.
Needs must the serpent now his capital brooks
Expect with mortal pain.
Paradise Lost.

2. Criminal in the highest degree, so as to Touch life.
Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason.
Shakespeare's King Lear.
Several cases deserve greater punishment than
Many crimes that are capital among us.
Swift.

That which affects life.
In capital cases, wherein but one man's life is
In question, the evidence ought to be clear; much
More in a judgment upon a war, which is capital to All mankind.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Chief; principal.
I will, out of that infinite number, reckon but
Some that are most capital, and commonly occur-
Bull both in the life and conditions of private men, Racer.

As to survve in the least points, is errors; for the capital enemies thereof God hate, as his deadly lies, aliens, and, without repentence, children of endles pestilence.
They do, in themselves, tend to confirm the Truth of a capital article in religion.
Ackersey.

Chief; metropolitian.
This had been
Perhaps thy capital case, from whence had sprung
All generations; and had hither come,
From all the ends of th' earth, to celebrate
And reverence thee, their great projector.
Paradise Lost.

6. Applied to letters: large, such as are Written at the beginnings or heads of books.
Our most considerable actions are always pre-
Sed, like capital letters to an aged and dim eye.
Taylor's Holy Living.

The first is written in capital letters, without I'1'aditions or verses.
Green's Cosmographia Sacra.

Captial stock. The principal or original
Flock of a trader or company.

CAPITAL. n. f. [from the adjective.] 1. The upper part of a pillar.
You
The chief city of a nation or kingdom.

CAPTALLY, adj. [from capitally.] In a capital manner.

CAPTATION. n.f. [from captus, the head. Lat.] Numeration by heads.

He suffered for not performing the command of God concerning captation; that, when the people were ministered upon every head they should pay unto God a tithe.

Brown.

CAPITE. n.f. [from captus, capiatis, Lat.] A tenure which heldeth immediately of the king, and which commences by his natural service or service and is not as of any humour, chair, or manor; and therefore it is otherwise called a tenure, that heldeth merely of the king; because, as the crown is a corporation and feigneth in gods, as the common lawyers term it, to the king that poçoeth the crown in, in account of law, perpetually king, and never in his minority, or ever dieth.

Capon.

CAPITULAR. n.f. [from capitulum, Lat.] An ecclesiastical chapter.

1. A body of statutes, divided into chapters.

That this practice continued to the time of Charlemain, appears by a constitution in his Teyg.

2. A member of a chapter.

Canonists do agree, that the chapter makes decrees and statutes, which shall bind the chapter itself, and all its members or capitulars.

To CAPITULATE. v. n. [from capitulum, Lat.]

1. To draw up any thing in heads or articles.

Percy, Northumberland.

The archbishop of York, Douglas, and Mortimer, Capitulates against us, and are up. Shak. Henry IV.

2. To yield, or surrender upon certain stipulations.

The king took it for a great indignity, that thieves should offer to capitulate with him as enemies.

I shall purify, and about two o'clock this afternoon, I thought fit to capitulate. Spenser.

CAPITULATION. n.f. [from capitulation.]

Stipulation; terms; conditions.

It was not a complete conquest, but rather a separation upon terms and capitulations, agreed between the conqueror and the conquered; wherein, usually, the yielding party secured to themselves the law and religion.

Hale.

CAPTVI TREE. n.f. [capitavi, Lat.]

This tree grows near a village called Ayapel, in the province of Antofo, in the Spanish West Indies, about ten days journey from Carthagena. Some of them do not yield any of the balm jas those that do, are distinguished by a ridge which runs along their trunks. These trees are wounded in their trunks, and they apply thereof to the wounded end, to receive the balm. One of these trees will yield five or six gallons of balm.

Miller.

The CAPIT, v. a. I know not distinctly what this word means; perhaps, to strip off the head.

A cap'd your t album of the fynod, and shap the canons with a why not. Hudibras.

CAPOR. n.f. [capo, Lat.] A castrated cock.

In good roast beef my landlord flikes his knife; The cap, sir, is the delight of his dainty wife. Gay's Pâth.

CAPONNIER. n.f. [Fr. A term in fortification.] A covered logament, of about four or five feet broad, encompassed with a little parapet of about two feet high, serving to support planks lain den with earth. This logament contains fifteen or twenty folders, and is usually placed at the extremity of the countercapar, having little embrasures made in them, through which they fire.

Harr. CAR.

CAPT'ON. n.f. [French.] Is when one party wins all the tricks of cards at the game of picquet.

To CAP'T. v. a. [from the noun.] When one party has won all the tricks of cards at picquet, he is said to have captoted his antagonist.

Carpent. n.f. [from carpentors, A monk's hood.]

CAPPR'EOLATE. adj. [from capreolat, a tendril of a vine, Lat.]

Such plants as turo, wind, and climb upon the ground, by means of their tendrils, as gourds, melons, and cucumbers, are termed in botany, capreolat plants. Harr.

CAPRIC'CIE. n.f. [caprice, Fr. capriccio, It.; cbe, Span.] Fanci; fancy; whim; sudden change of humour.

It is a pleasant spectacle to behold the shifts, windings, and unperceived capriciosus of different nature, as the sun, moon, or stars, roll by a close and well managed experiment.

Glaze'st, Foppes, Parforce.

We are not to be guided in the sense of that book, either by the mispersof some ancients, or the capriciosus of one or two moderns.

Heaven's great view is one, and that the whole; That counterworks each folly and caprice, That disappoints the effect of every vice.

Pop. If there is a wind or more barret, or more distant from the church, there the rector or vicar may be obliged, by the caprice or pique of the bishop, to build.

Swifts.

Their passions move in lower spheres, Where'er caprice or folly steer.

All the various machines and utensils would now and then play odd pranks and caprice, quite contrary to their proper constitution, and design of the artificers.

Bentley.

CAPRICIOUS. adj. [capricieux, Fr.] Whimsical; fancifful; humourous.

CAPRICOSLY. adv. [from capricious.]

Whimsically; in a manner depending wholly upon fancy.

CAPRlCIOUSNESS. n.f. [from capricious.]

The quality of being led by caprice, humour, whimsicalness.

A capricious ought to suppose that there are reasons, although he be not apprized of them; otherwise, he must tax his prince of capriciosus, incontinency, or ill destin.

Swifts.

CAPRlCOSUS. n.f. [capricornus, Lat.]

One of the signs of the zodiac; the winter solstice.

Let the longest night in Capricorn be of fifteen hours, the day consequently must be of nine.

CAPRlCtO'LE. n.f. [French. In horsemanship.]

Caprioles are leaps, such as a horse makes one at the same place, without advancing forwards, and in such a manner, that when he is in the air, and height of his leap, he yeers or strikes out with his hinder legs, even and near. A capriole is the most difficult of all the high manage, or raised airs. It is different from the coupage in this, that the horse does not show his shoes; and from den with earth. This logament contains fifteen or twenty folders, and is usually placed at the extremity of the countercapar, having little embrasures made in them, through which they fire.

Harr.

CAPSTAN. n.f. [corruptly called capstern; capestan, Fr.] A cylinder, with levers, to wind up any great weight, particularly to raise the anchors.

The weight of anchors by the capstan is alto new. Raleigh's Elyas.

No more behold thee turn my watch's key. As femen at a capstan anchor weighs. Swifts.

CAP'SULAR. adj. [capulusa, Lat.]

Capsulation. n.f. closed, or in a box.

Seeds, such as are corrupted and stale, will swim; and this agreeeth to the seeds of plants locked up and capsulefully in their husks. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The heart lies, or capsulefully, in a car-tilage, which includes the heart as the skull doth the brain.

Dorham.

CAPTAIN. n.f. captain, Fr. in Latin capitansus; being one of those who, by tenure in capite, were obliged to bring folders to the war.

1. A chief commander.

Dinnyard's not this.

Our captains, Macketh and Banquet. Shak. Macb.

2. The chief of any number or body of men.

Nathan shall be captain of Judah. Numbers.

He sent unto him a captain of fifty. Kings.

The captain of the guard gave him victuals. Jeremiah.

3. A man skilled in war; as, Marlborough was a great captain.

4. The commander of a company in a regiment.

A captain's these villains will make the name of captains as odious as the word occury; therefore captains had need look to it. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

5. The chief commander of a ship.

The Rhodian captain, relying on his knowledge, and the lightsight of his vessel, sailed, in open day, through all the guards.

Arbuthnot in Ceni.

6. It was anciently written captain.

And evermore their cruel captain
Songht with his rrafal rout t' enrolle them round.

Fairy Queen.

7. Captain General. The general or commander in chief of an army.

8. Captain Lieutenant. The commanding officer of the colonel's troop or company, in every regiment. He commands as young captain.

CAPTAINRY. n.f. [from captain.] The power over a certain district; the chieftainship.

There should be no rewards taken for captorities of counties, no showers of billets for nominating of bishops.

Captainship. n.f. [from captain.]

1. The condition or poft of a chief commander.

Therefore to please thee to return with us, And of our Athens, thing and ours, to take The chieftainship. Timon.

2. The rank, quality, or post of a captain.

The lieutenant of the colonel's company might well pretend to the next vacant captainship in the same regiment.

Wotton.
CAR

3. The selfishness of a clan, or government of a certain district.

To diminish the Irish lords, he did abdicate their princedoms and enfeoff capitanip portrait.

4. Skill in the military trade.

CAPTATION. n. f. [from capto, Lat.] The practice of catching favour or applause; courtship; flattery.

I am content my heart should be discover'd, without any of those deceit, or popular capitation, which some men use in their speeches. K. Charles.

CAPT. n. f. [from capto, Lat. to take.]

The act of taking any person by a judicial process.

CAPTIOUS. adj. [capicuous, Fr. capicieux, Lat.]

1. Given to cavil; eager to object.

If he then a forwardness to be reasonning about things, take care that nobody check this inclination of milking it by capetious or fallacious ways of talking with him.

2. Invidious; enfevouring.

She taught him likewise how to avoid sundry capetious and tempting questions, which were like to be asked of him.

CAPTIOUSNESS. n. f. [from capetious.]

Inclination to find fault; inclination to object; peevishness.

Capetiousness is a fault opposite toerville; it often produces misunderstanding and provoking expression and carriage.

To CAPTIVATE, v. a. [capetor, Fr. capturer, Lat.]

1. To take prisoner; to bring into bondage.

How it becoming is in thy see
To triumph, like an Amazonian rull,
Upon their weak whom fortune captivates! Shak.

That haft by tyranny these many years
Wished our country, been our slaves.
And for our sons and husbands captivates. Shak.

He deserves to be a slave, that is content to have the rational sovereignty of his soul, and the liberty of the body. King Charles.

They stand firm, keep out the enemy, truth, that would captivate or disturb them. Locke.

2. To charm; to overpower with excellence; to seduce.

Wisdom enters the left, and to captivates him with her appearance, that he gives himself up to her.

Addison, Guardian.

To enslave: v. a.

They lay a trap for themselves, and captivate their underlings to mischief, falsehood, and error. Locke.

CAPTIVATION. n. f. [from captor, Lat.]

The act of taking one captive.

CAPTIVE, n. f. [capit, Fr. captivus, Lat.]

1. One taken in war; a prisoner to an enemy.

You have the captives,
Who were the opposites of this day's firsts. Shak.

This is no other than that forced respect a captive pays to his conqueror, a slave to his lord.

Roper.

For a from theme
Thy captives: I entreat the penal claim.

Pope's Odyssey.

2. It is used with to before the captor.

If thou sayst Ainy lives, 'tis well;
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him.

Shakespeare.
CAR

They are forth.

Their airy carriage, high over seas,
Flying, and over lands, with mutual wings
Eating their flights.
-Milton, Paradise Lost.

When Joseph, and the Blessed Virgin Mother,
He had left their holy Son, they sought him in the retinue of their kindred, and the carriage of the Galilean pilgrims.
-CARAVAN, n. f. [from caravans.] A house built in the Eastern countries for the reception of travellers.
The inn which receive the caravans in Persia, and the Eastern countries, are called by the name of Caravanserai.

The frankion mansion, like a Turkish caravansary, entertains the vagabond with only bare lodging.
-CARAVEL, n. f. [caravela, Span.] A caravel light, round, old-fashioned ship, with a square poop, formerly used in Spain and Portugal.

CARAVAY, n. f. [caravat, Lat.] A plant; sometimes found wild in rich moist pastures, especially in Holland and Lincolnshire. The seeds are used in medicine and confectionery.
-Miller.

CARBONADO, n. f. [carbonade, Fr. from carbos, a coal.] Meat cut across, to be broiled upon the coals.

In this way willingly, let us make a carboude of me.
-Shakespeare.

To CARBONADO, v. a. [from the noun.] To cut or hack.
-Draw, you rogue, or I'll fo carboude your bones.
-Shakespeare.

CARBUNCLE, n. f. [carbunculatus, Lat. A little coal.]
1. A jewel shining in the dark, like a lighted coal or candle.
A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art.
Wert not to rich a jewel.
-Shakespeare.

Its head
Created aloes, and carbuncle his eyes,
With burnish'd neck of verdant gold.
-Milton.

It is believed that a carbuncle does shine in the dark like a burning coal, from whence hath it its name.
-Watts.

Carbuncle is a stone of the ruby kind, of a rich blood color.
-Watts.

2. Red spots or pimples breaking out upon the face or body.
It was a pestilent fever, but there followed no carbuncle, no purple or livid spots, or the like, the marks of the blood not being tainted. Barne.

And flaming carbuncle, and noforme festw.
-Dryden.

CARBUNCLED, adj. [from carbuncle.]
1. Set with carbuncles.
An armure all of gold; it was a king's.-He had deform'd it, it was carbuncled like fiery fheen car.
-Shakespeare.

2. Spotted; deformed with carbuncles.
CARBUNCULAR, adj. Belonging to a carbuncle; red like a carbuncle.

CARBUNCULATION, n. f. [carbunculatio, Lat.] The blustering of the young buds of trees or plants, either by excessive heat or excessive cold.
-Harris.

CARCANET, n. f. [carcan, Fr.] A chain or collar of jewels.
Say that I linger'd with you at your shop,
To see the making of her carcanet. Shakespeare.
I have seen her beeke and bezed all over with emeralds and pearls, and a carkan about her neck.
-Hakewell or Provost.

CARCASS, n. f. [carcasse, Fr.]
1. A dead body of any animal.

To blot the honour of the dead,
And with foul cowardice his carcass shame,
Whose living hands immortal'd his name.
-Spenser.

Where should the carcass lie, now cutt'd off,
With carcasses and arms, the insanguin'd field, Defierd.
-Milton.

If a man vili his sick friend in hope of legacy,
He is a vultur, and only waits for the carcass.
-Taylor.

The fealy nations of the sea profound,
Like fillipdrick's carcasses, are driven aground.
-Dryden.

Body: in a ludicrous sense.
-To-day how many would have given their honours
To ve for'd their carcasses? Shakespeare.

He that finds himself in any distress, either of carcass or of fortune, should deliberate upon the matter before he prays for a change.
-L'Estrange.

The decayed parts of any thing; the ruins; the remains.
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rig'd,
Not tuck'd, fall, nor made.

The main parts, naked, without completion or ornament; as, the walls of a house.

What could be thought a sufficient motive to have had an eternal carcass of an universe, wherein the materials and positions, it were eternally laid together?
-Milton's Origin of Mankind.

[In gunnery.] A kind of bomb, usuall confuting of a shell or cafe, sometimes of iron with holes, more commonly of a coarse strong fluff, pitched over and glit with iron hoops, filled with combustibles, and thrown from a mortar.

-CARCALCE, n. f. [from carcer, Lat.] Prison fees.

Carcino'Matous, adj. [from carcinoma.] Cancerous; tending to a cancer.

CARD, n. f. [carte, Fr. cartis, Lat.] A flower.

The species are,
1. Greater ramosities, with a crimson spotted flower, commonly called the scarlet cardinal's flower.
2. The blue cardinal's flower.
-Miller.

CARDINALATE, n. f. [from cardinal.] The office and rank of a cardinal.

An ingenuous cavalier, hearing that an old friend of his was advanced to a cardinalate, went to congratulate his elevation upon his new honour.
-L'Estrange.

CARDMAKER, n. f. [from card and maker.] A maker of cards.
Am not I Christopher Sly, by occupation a cardmaker? Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

CARDMATCH, n. f. [from card and match.] A match made by dipping pieces of card in melted asphalt.

Take care, that those may not make the most notoious, who have the least to fall; which is very observ'd in the venders of cardsmakers.
-Addison.

CARDOUS: See Thistle.

CARE, n. f. [cape, Saxon.]
1. Solicitude; anxiety; perturbation of mind; concern.
Or, if I would take care, that care should be
For wit that kens'mt the world, and li'sht'mt like me.
-Dryden.

Nor tatter sick, nor anxious care.
Even though brought thither, could inhabit there.

Ruts in your soul the greater care of fulfilling the divers will.
-Weaver's Pantegran.

2. Caution; often in the phrase, to have a care.
-Well,
CAR

Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself. Shak.

The foolish virgin had taken no care for a future infinity; which was at first put into their lamps, was spent, as the wife had done. Tillyson.

Begone! the priest expects you at the chancel. — But, tyrant, have a care I do not chistle. A. Philip.

3. Regard; charge; heed in order to protection and preservation.

If we believe that there is a God, that takes care of us, and we be careful to please him, this cannot but be a mighty comfort to us. Tillyson.

4. It is a loose and vague word, implying attention or inclination, in any degree more or less: It is commonly used in the phrase, to take care.

You come in such a time, As if propitious fortune took a care.

To swell my tide of joys to their full height. Dryden.

We take care to flatter ourselves with the fancy scenes and prospects of future happiness. A. Tennyson.

5. The object of care, of caution, or of love.

O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows! When that my care could not withhold the blows, What wilt thou do when 260 is thy care? Shak.

Find'd were his checks, and glowing were his eyes.

Is the care 261 is the thy care? he cries. Dryd.

Your safety, more than mine, was then my care.

Left of the guide blest, the rugged loft.

Your ship should run against the rocky coast. Dryden.

cark, stop up leaks, refit, or trim the other side. Chambers.

To CARE'EN. v. n. To be in the state of careening. Careen.

To CARE'Ful, n. f. [carriage, Fr.] The ground on which a race is run; the length of a course. P'racc. Sid.-

2. A course; a race.

What rain can hold licentious wickedness, When down the hill he holds his fierce career? Shakespeare.

3. Height of speed; swift motion.

It is related of certain Indians, that they are able, when a horse is running in his full career, to stand upright on his back. Walde's Mathematical Magick.

Pratifice them now to curb the turning fleet; Moking the lions; now to his rapid speed To give the rain, and, in the full career, To draw the certain sword, or send the pointed spear. Prior.

4. Course of action; uninterrupted procedure.

Shall spies and fenwashes, and these paper bullets of the brain, sue a man from the career of his honour? Shakespeare.

That of a blessed family has rook up, and protected fair, and yet at length a crofs event has certainly met and kept him in the career of his fortune. Smith.

Knights in knightly deeds should preserve, And still continue what at first they were; Continue and proceed in honour's fair career. Dryd.

To CARE'ER. v. n. [from the noun.] Running with swift motion.

With eyes, the wheels.

Of beryl, and carousing fires between. Milton.

CARE'FUL. adj. [from care and full.]

1. Anxious; solicitous; full of concern.

The pitiful maiden, careful, comforts her, Does throw our thrilling shrieks and shrieking cries. Spenser.

Martha, thou art careful, and troubled about many things.

Welcome, thou pleasing flame.

Away embrace me in thy leaden arms, And charm my careful thought. Denham's Sphrase.

2. Provided in preparation: with of or for.

Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? 2 Kings.

To cure their mad ambition, they were sent To rule a different province, each alone.

What could a careful father more have done? Dryden.

3. Watchful; cautious: with of.

It concerns us to be careful of our conversations. Boy.

4. Subject to perturbations; exposed to troubles; full of anxiety; full of solicitude.

By him that rais'd me to this careful height, From that contented hap which I enjoy'd. Shak.

CARE'FULNESS. n. f. [from careful.]

1. In a manner that lends care.

eny, she carefully does it look! how meagre and ill-complexioned! Collier.

2. Heedfully; watchfully; vigilantly; attentively.

You come most carefully upon your hour. Shak.

By careful as I did before my attempt, I have made some faint resemblance of him. Dryden.

All of them, therefore, studiously cherished the memory of their honourable race, and carefully preferved the evidences of it. Atterbury.

3. Providentially.

Cautiously.

CARE'FULNESS, n. f. [from careful.] Vigilance; heedfulness; caution.

The death of Selinus was, with all carefulness, concealed by Proclus. Kneller's History of the Turks.

CARE'LESSLY. adv. [from careless.] Negligently; inattentively; without care; heedlessly.

If then he be found all careless display'd, In forest shadow from the sunny eye. Fairy Queen.

Not content to see

That others write as carefully as he. Waller.

CARE'LESSNESS. n. f. [from careless.] Negligence; inattention; absence of care; manner void of care.

For Carolus neither to care whether they love or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly for it. Shak. Coriolanus.

Who, in the other extreme, doth

Call a rough careless good fashion;

Whoserank is spur to, or whom he spurs on, He cares not. Dryd.

It makes us to walk warily, and tread fast, for fear of our enemies; and that is better than to be flattered into pride and carlessness. Prior.

The ignorance of carlessness of the fervants can hardly leave the master disappointed. Temple.

I who at some times spend, at others spare, Direct between virtue and vice. Pope.

CARE'LESS. adj. [from care.]

1. Having no care; feeling no solicitude; unconcerned; negligent; inattentive; heedless; careless; thoughtless; negligent; unheedful; unthinking; unmindful; of or about.

Knowing that if the worth-befal tham, they shall lose hope but themselves; whereas the true very cariless.

Spen.

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,

By seeming care, or careness of his will. Shaks.

A woman, the more curious she is about her face, is commonly the more careless about her house. Bun Jonson.

A father, unnaturally carless of his child, tells or gives him to another man. Locke.

2. Cheerful; undisturbed.

Thus wisely carless, innocently gay.

Cheerful he play'd.

His cheerful mood of life,

When must'd by careless solitude I liv'd,

And f ung of nature with unceasing joy,

Pleased I have wander'd through your rough do-

A part of the wild Carinas. Milton.

3. Unheeded; thoughtless; unconcerned.

The freedom of saying as many careless things as other people, without being so severely remarked upon as others. Dryd.

4. Unmoved by; unconcerned at.

Carles of thunder from the clouds that break,

My only emera from your books imbuces Grenville.

To CARGE'S. v. a. [carriker, Fr. from carre, Lat.] To endure; to fondle; to treat with kindness.

If I can cast, and lead, and carres my mind with the pleasures of worldly passions, or virtuous practices, let greatness and malice vex and abuse me, if they can. Swift.

CARE'SS. n. f. [from the verb.] An act of endearment; an expression of tenderness.

He, the know, would intermix

Grateful digressions, and solve high dispute

With enjugal carres.

Milton.

There are some men who from to humble minds wrapp'd up in human shape; their very careness are crude and important. L'Estrange.

After his first footfall he publicly owned him self.

If I can cast, and lead, and carres my mind with the first na-re to the church part.

CARE'.
CAR

The white's the maiden do their carn' fings,
To which the woods shall answer, and their echo ring,

Stevens's Ephemeris.

Even as the Old Testament, if you listen to David's harp, you shall hear as many heart-like airs as cars.

Opp'd to her, on other side advance
The rushing of the waters, the luscious
Minstrels and music, poetry and play,
And balls by night, and tournaments by day.

Dryden.

1. A song of devotion,
No night is now with hymn or carol blest.
Shakespeare.

They gladly thistle hafte; and, by a choir
Of equation'd angels, hear his carol sung. Milton.

2. A song in general.
The carol they began that hour,
How that a life was but a flower.
Shakespeare

To car'rol. v. n. [carolere, Ital.] To sing; to warble; to sing in joy and fettlely.

Hark, how the cheerful birds do chant their lays,
And sing their love's praise. Spenser.

This done, the fong, and carol'd oat to cease,
That men and angels might rejoice to hear.
Dryden.

Hov'ring fwoats, their throats releaz'd
From native flience, carol sounds harmonious.
Prior.

To car'rol. v. n. To praise; to celebrate in song.
She with precious viol't liquors heals,
For which their flower'eds sprout inabilit.
Milton

Ca'rotid. adj. [carotides, Lat.] Two arteries which arise out of the ascending trunk of the aorta, near where the sub-avalian arteries arise.
The carotid, vertebral, and splenetic arteries, are not only variously contorted, but also here and there diffused, to moderate the motion of the blood.

Ray on the Creation.

Car'rousal. n. f. [from carouse. It seems more properly pronounced with the accent upon the second syllable; but Dryden accents it on the first.] A fellow-ly game, this, their carousal Africanus taught,
And building Alba to the Latins brought. Dryden.

To car'ouse. v. n. [carouseer, Fr. carouser, lat. aus, out, Germ.] To drink; to quaff; to drink largely.
He calls for wine: a health, quoth he, as if he had been carousing to fat mates.
After a feast.
Shakespeare.

Learn with how little life may be prefer'd,
England and her people need not to carous.
Rabbin.

Now hats by, and youths carousing.
Hosts first go round, and then the house,
The brid's first come thick and thick.
Smiling.

Under the shadow of friendly bouquets
They caroused, and carous'd, till after the fest,
Waller.

To car'ouse. v. a. To drink up livishly.
Now my fouse fole, Rodrigo,
Whom love hath turnd almost the world out of face.
Dunsinane.

To Dunsinane hath to-night carouse,
Dunsinane.

Our cheerful guests carouse the sparkling teats
Of the rich grape, whilst music charms their ears.
Dunstan.

Car'ouse. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A drinking match.
Waste in wild riot what your land allows,
There ply the early feast, and late carouse.
Pepe.

2. A hearty dole of liquor.
He had in many eyes waking over him, as he high-dated a drink of carousal wine, but the race was advertised thereof within few hours after.
Davies in Ireland.

Please you, we may contrive this afternoon,
And your fav'rous to our rainiest health.
Shakespeare.

Car'ouser. n. f. [from carouse.] A drinker; a toper.
The bold carouser, and advent'ring dame,
Nor fear the fever, nor refuse the flame;
Safe in his skill, from all constraint set free
But conscious shame, remorse, and pity.

Granville.

Car. n. s. [carpe, Fr.] A pond fish.
A friend or mine flowed a pond of three or four acres with carps and teench.

To CARP. v. n. [carpa, Lat.] To cen-
Sure; to cavil; to find fault; with at before the thing or person cenfur'd.

Tortuous often, even through discontentment, carpeb injuriously at them, as though they did it even when they were free from such meaning.
Hooker.

This your all-licent's fool
Does hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth
In rank and not to be endured roots.
Shakespeare.

No, not a tooth or nail to fetch
And at my actions carp or catch.
Herbert.

When I spoke,
My honest hon'dom wordes were carp'd and cenfur'd,
For want of care.

To CARPENTER. n. s. [carpenter, Fr.] An artificer in wood; a builder of houses and ships.
He is distinguiished from a joiner, as the carpenter performs larger and stronger work.

This work performed with admiration good,
Godfrey his carpenter, and men of skill
In all the camp, a most enigmatical wood.
Fairfax.

In building Hero's great ship, there were three hundred carpenters employed for a year together.
Wiltons.

In burden'd wethers with speedy care,
His plenteous store do season's timbers send Thither the brawny carpenters repair,
And, as the sorgeants of many's ships attend.
Dryden.

To CARPENTER. v. n. [from carpenter.] The trade or art of a carpenter.
It had been more proper for me to have introdu-ted carpentry before joynery, because necessity did doubtless compel our forefathers to use the conveniency of furniture rather than the extravagancy of the lat.
Mason's Mechanical Exercises.

Car'er. n. f. [from To carp.] A caviller; a censuring man.
I have not these words,
By putting on the cunning of a carp'er.
Shakespeare.

CARPET. n. s. [carpet, Dutch.] 1. A covering of various colours, spread upon floors or tables.
Be the jack's fair within, the Jills fair without,
carpet laid, and every thing in order.
Shakespeare.

Against the wall, in the middle of the half pace,
Is a chair placed before him, with a table and carpet to n. s. [from To carp.]

2. Ground variegated with flowers, and level and smooth.
Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the garish carpet of this plain.
Shakespeare.

The carpet would be only covered with leaves of good green, And bought shall we cov'n a rug for your head.
Dryden.

3. Any thing variegated.
The whole dry land is, for the most part, cover with a lovely carpet of green grass, and other herbs.
Raper.

4. Carpet is used, proverbially, for a state of cafe and luxury; as a carpet knight, a knight that has never known the field, and has recommended himself only at table.

He is knight dub'd with unshackled rapier, and on carpet consideration.
Shakespeare.

5. To be on the carpet [for le tapis, Fr.] is to be the subject of consideration; an affair in hand.

To CARPET. v. n. [from To carp.] To spread with carpets.
We found him in a fair chamber, richly hanged and carpeted under foot, without any degrees to the face; he was for a time under a low throne, simply adorned, and a rich cloth of state over his head, of blue satin embroidered.
Bacon.

The dry land we find every where naturally carpeted over with grass, and other agreeable wholesome plants.
Darwin.

The carpet, particip. adj. [from To carp.] Captious; cenfurious.

No carpet critic intercepts his peace.
No rival drives but for a second place.
Granville.

Lay aside therefore a carpeting spirit, and read even an adversary with an honest design to find out his true meaning; do not sniff at little slips, and appearances of mistakes.
Watts.

To CARPETLY. adv. [from To carpet.] Captiously; cenfurally.
We derive our root from the Latin at second hand by the French, and make good English, as in these adverbs, carpingly, currently, actively, colourably.
Cambridge.

CARPEMEALS. n. s. A kind of coarse cloth made in the North of England.
Phillips's World of Words.

CARPUS. n. f. [Latin.] The wright, so denamed by anatomists, which is made up of eight little bones, of different figures and thicknes, placed in two ranks, four in each rank. They are strongly tied together by the ligaments which come from the radius, and by the annular ligament.

Frowsly, one of the bones of the carpus lying in the wound.
Wilson's Surgeries.

CARRACK. See Carack.

CARRAT. See Carat.

CARRAWAY. See Caraway.

Carrack. See Carack.

Carrat. See Carat.

Carraway. See Caraway.

Carr. n. s. [carriage, Fr. bagage; from carry.] 1. The act of carrying, or transporting, or bearing anything.
The unequal agitation of the wind, though material to the carriage of sounds farther, or less way, yet do not confound the articulation.
Boan's Natural History.

If it seems to strange to move this obblishe for so little force, what may we think of the carriage of it out of Egypt ?
Watts.

2. Conquest; acquisition.
Solomon resolved to besiege Vienna, in good hope that, by the carriage away of that, the other cities would, without resistance, be yielded.
Knoller's History of the Turks.

3. Vehicle; that in which any thing is carried.
What horse or carriage can take up and carry away at the topplings of a stable? at once ?
Watts.

4. The frame upon which cannon is carried.
He commanded the great ordnance to be laid upon carriages, which before was bound in great unwieldy timber, with rings fastened thereto, and could not hancnothing be removed to or from.
Knoller's History of the Turks.

5. Behaviour; personal manners.
Before his eyes he did cast a mild, by his own infiration,

The wolves will get a breakfast by my death, Yet scarce enough their hunger to supply, For love has made me carry one I die:

3. A name of reproach for a worthless woman.

Shall we send that foolish carrion, Mrs. Quickly, to him, and excise his throwing into the water?

Shakespeare, Henry IV.

To convey by force.

Goe, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet, Take all his company along with him.

Shakespeare, Henry IV.

To effect any thing.

There are some vain persons, that whatsoever goes wrong, or smooth upon greater means, if they have never felt the hand in it, they think it is they that carry it.

Bacon.

Or times we lose the occasion of carrying a burden well thoroughly by too much haste.

These advantages will be of an effect, unless we improve them to words, in the carrying of our affairs.

Addison.

7. To gain in competition.

And hardly shall I carry out my wife, Her husband being alive. Shakespeare, King Lear.

"How many hands for confusions!—Three, they say; but it is thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

I see not yet how any of these for reasons can be fairly avoided; and yet if any of them I good, it is enough to carry the cause.

Sonnaden.

The latter still enjoying his place, and continu- ing a joint commissioner of the treasury, still oppo- sed, and commonly carried away every thing.

Clarendon.

8. To gain after refinance.

The count wou'd your daughter, Lay down his wanton finge' before her beauty, Redolov to carry her; let her content, As we'll direct her way, 'tis but to bear it. Shall what a fortune does the thick lips own, If he can carry her thus?

Shakespeare, Othello.

This town was diverted, and ready for his visiting, which I had been given, would have been much blood: but yet the town would have been carried in the end.

Barce's Henry VII.

9. To gain with it; that is, to prevail.

[In other.]

No that you redol'd to give your voices?

But that is no matter; the great part carry it.

Shakespeare.

By thee's, and the like arts, they promised them selves that they should easily carry it; so that they entertained the house all the morning with other debates.

Clarendon.

If the numericals of a train must carry it, virtue may go follow Africa, and vice only will be the courtesies of the world.

Children, who live together, often thrive for masters, whereby shall carry it over the rest.

Locke.

In pleasures and pains, the present is next to carry it, and those at a distance have the disadvantage in the comparison.

Locke.

10. To bear out; to face through; with.

If a man carry it off, there is much money saved; and if he be detected, there will be something pleasant in the frolick.

L'Estrange.

11. To continue external appearance.

My piece is already in the belief that he's mad; will carry it thus for our pleasure and his peace.

Clarendon.

12. To manage; to transit.

The senate is generally as numerous as our house of commons; and yet carry its resolutions to privately, that they are seldom known.

Addison on Italy.

13. To behave; to conduct: with the reciprocal pronoun.

Neglect not also the examples of those that have carried it without ill in the same place.

Bacon.

He attended them into Scotland, with whom he did carry himself with much singular sweetness and temper.

Wotton.

Carried himself so insolently in the比起, and out of the house, to all pretences, that he became odious.

Clarendon.

14. Sometimes with it: as, she carries it high.

M. M. 2. 15. To
15. To bring forward; to advance in any progress.
It is not to be imagined how far confidence will carry a man; however, it is better walking slowly in a rugged way, than to break a leg and be a cripple.
This plain natural way, without grammar, can carry them to great elegance and politeness in their language.

16. To urge; to bear forward with some kind of external impulsion.
Men are strongly carried out, and hardly took off from the practice of vice, South.

17. To bear; to have; to obtain.
In a general sense, we use something that carries a kind of analogy to sense; they contrast their leaves against the cold; they open them to the favourable heat. Rule's Origin of Mankind.

18. To exhibit to view; to display on the outside; to fet to view.
The effect of every one in the family carries much satisfaction, that it appears he knows his happy lot. Addison.

19. To imply; to import.
It carries too great an imputation of ignorance, lightness, or folly, for men to quit and renounce their former tenets, presently, upon the offer of an argument which they cannot immediately answer. Locke.

20. To contain; to comprise.
He thought it carried something of argument in it, to prove that doctrine. Watts on the Mind.

21. To have annexed; to have anything joined with the particle with.
There was a righteous and a searching law, directly forbidding such practices; and they knew that it carried with it the divine stamp. South.
There are many expressions, which carry with them to my mind no clear ideas. Locke.

22. To convey or bear any thing united or adhering, by communication of motion.
We see also manifestly, that sounds are carried with wind; and therefore sounds will be heard further with the wind than against the wind. Bacon's Natural History.

23. To move or continue anything in a certain direction.
His chimney was carried up through the whole roof, so that you see the sky through it, notwithstanding the rooms lie very deep. Addison on Italy.

24. To push upon ideas, arguments, or anything succursive in a train.
Manbear, that wrote of the Egyptians, hath carried not by their government to an incredible distance. Heron's Origin of Mankind.

25. To receive; to endure; not in use.
Some have readad it so many odd stories, as though they could wrap it in a tale, to make others carry it with more pleasure. Bacon.

26. To convey by means of something supporting.
Carry camomile, or wild thyme, or the green strawberry, upon stakes, as you do hops upon poles. Bacon's Natural History.

27. To bear, as trees.
Set them a reasonable depth, and they will carry more fruits upon the item. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

28. To fetch and bring, as dogs.
Young wheals learn easily to carry young popinjays learn quickly to speak. Addison's Schoolmaster.

29. To carry off. To kill.
Old Parr lived to one hundred and fifty-three years of age, and might have gone further, if the change of air had not carried him off. Temple.

30. To carry on. To promote; to help forward.
It carries on the same design that is promoted by authors of a grave turn, and only does it in another manner. Addison.

31. To carry on. To continue; to put forward from one stage to another.
By the assistance, began by our blest Saviour, carried on by his disciples, and to be completed by their successors to the world's end, all types that damnation this faith are enlightened. Speirs.

32. To carry on. To prosecute; not to let cease.
France will not content to furnish us with money sufficient to carry on the war. Temple.

33. To carry through. To support; to keep from failing, or being conquered.
That grace will carry us, if we do not wilfully betake our countenance, victoriously through all difficulties. Hammond.

34. To carry away. n. m. [from carry and take].
A talebearer.
Some carry-cats, some pleasanter, some flighty many. Told our intents before. Shaks. Lear's Labour Lost.

35. To carry-haul. n. s. [from carry and haul].
A carriage in general.
The Scythians are described by Herodotus to lodge always in carts, and to feed upon the milk of mares. Temple.

36. To carry-tale. n. s. [from carry and tale].
A talebearer.
Some carry-cats, some pleasanter, some flighty many. Told our intents before. Shaks. Lear's Labour Lost.

37. To carry-ware. n. s. [from carry and ware].
A strong cord used to fasten the load on the carriage: proverbially any thick cord.

38. To carry-way. n. s. [from carry and way].
A way through which a carriage may conveniently travel.

39. To carry-work. n. s. [from carry and work].
The vehicle in which criminals are carried to execution.
The figure, whose good grace was to open the scene, Now fitted the halter, now travers'd the cart, and often took leave, but was loath to depart. Prior.

To C.A.R.T. v. a. [from the noun.] To expose in a cart, by way of punishment.
Democritus never taugh't so loud, To see bawds carried through the crowd. Hudibras.
No woman led a better life. She intrigued was a 'twas hard-hearted;
She chucked when a bawd was carried;
To.

1. A cafe of wood three inches thick at the bottom, girt round with marlin, and holding forty-eight musket-balls, and fix or eight iron balls of a pound weight. It is fired out of a hobit or small mortar, and is proper for defending a pass.

2. A portable box for charges.

3. A cartage. A cafe of paper, or parchment filled with gunpowder, used for the greater expedition in charging guns. Our merchant seamen in perfon by his new-call cannons fired from the strength of big-corn'd powder loves to try, and ball and cartridge for every board.

4. A cart rut. A cafe of cart and rut; route, a way. The track made by a cart wheel.

5. A cartulary. A cafe of cart and writings, A maker of carts.

7. To cut wood, or Stone, or other matter, into elegant forms. Taking the very refuse, he hath carved it diligently when he had nothing else to do.

8. To cut meat at the table.

9. To make any thing by carving or cutting.

10. To direct; to appoint; to provide at will.

11. As the skull of his fish was broken both from the violence of robbers and his own soldiers, who could easily have carved themselves their own food.

12. How dsaing full and ashes invade the prepositional of Providence, and carve out to himself the feast of the saved.

13. The labours share, being seldom more than a bare subsistence, never allows that body of men opportunity to struggle with the rich, unless when some common and great distress embolden them to carve to their wants.

14. To cut; to Hew. Or they will carve the shepherd's throat.

15. A cafe. All the ship's men, if they found any Indians there, to cut in the little fly-boats, or the carvel, into the river. For, with our great ships, we do not approach the coast.

16. A carvel. A cafe. All artists and artists Thecaus could command, Who could carve his work, and without danger; The master painters and the workmen came.

17. He that cuts up the meat at the table.

18. In this kind, to come in braving arms, Be his own carver, and cut out his way, To find out right with whom he should not be.

19. We are not the carvers of our own fortunes.

21. They can no more look like the ancient, than excellent carvings in wood like those in marble and bronze.

22. The kids are ivy, grapes in sludeurs lurks, Beneath the carving of the curious work.

23. A carv'ncle. A cafe. A fine and the虏ore of flesh, either natural or artificial.

24. Carv'ades. A cafe of carrier, acty carriers, taken by the Greeks, who led away the Complexes captive; and, to perpetuate their slavery, represented them in bronze as charged with burdens.

25. An order of persons or platters, under the figures of women drest in long robes, serving to support entablatures.

26. A casc'ade. A cafe, Fr. cattara, It. from cattara, to fall.

27. A cataract; a water-fall.

28. Rivers diverted from their native courses, and bound with chains of artificial force.
CASH. n. f. [coffe, Fr. a cheife.] Money; properly ready money; money in the cheife, or at his.

Of some rich burghers.

Paradis. Lea.

He is at an end of all his coffe, he has both his law and his daily bread now upon trust.

Hark! hark! the Knave Bull.

He sent the thief, that stole the coffe, away, and paid him that put it in his way.

Ray.

CASH-KEEPE.R. n. f. [from coffe and keepe.]

A man enthrilled with the money.

Dispensator was properly a coffe-keeper, or privy.

Sumatra.

CASHWORTH. n. f. A tree that bears nuts, not with shells, but husks. Miller.

CASHIER. n. f. [from coffe.] He that has charge of the money.

If a steward or coffer be suffered to run on, without bringing him to a reckoning, such a foolish forbearance will cause injury to the cofferer.

A man, finding his Son’s expences were very high, ordered his coffer to let him have no more money than what he should count when he received it.

Lolli.

Flight of coffeiers, or mobs, he’ll never mind; and knows no noise, while the mob is kind.

Pep.

To CASHIER. n. v. a. [coffer, Fr. caffier, Lat.]

1. To discard; to dismiss from a post, or a society, with reproach.

Don’t go on! Cashi hath beaten thee, and thou by that small hurt hast caiiier’d Cashi.

Shakespeare.

Secs in factions many times prove principals; but many times also they prove ciphers, and are caiiier’d in.

If he had omitted what he said, his thoughts and words being thus caiiier’d in his hands, he had no longer been Luctetius.

Dryden.

They have already caiiier’d several of their followers as mutineers.

Addison’s Farads.

The ruling rogue, who dreads to be caiiier’d,

Contrives, as he is hated, to be feared.

Swift.

2. It feems in the following passage, to signify the fame as to annul; to vacate: which is sufficiently agreeable to the derivation.

If we should find a father corrupting his son, or a mother her daughter, we must charge this upon a peculiar anomaly and badness of nature; if the name of nature may be allowed to that which seems to be utter caiiiering of it, and deviation from, and a contradiction to, the common principles of humanity.

Addison’s El MOCK.

Some caiiier, or at least endeavour to invalidate, all other arguments, and forbid us to hearken to those proofs, as weak or fallacious.

Lack.

CASK. n. f. [cafe, Fr. cafse, Lat.]

1. A barrel; a wooden vessel to stop liquor or provisions.

The patient turning himself about, it makes a floating kind of noise, like the rumbling of water in a cask.

Harvey.

Perhaps to-morrow he may change his wine,

And drink old sparkling Albion, or Seltine,

Who’d be old, and who’d age, with mould o’ergrown,

The good old cask for ever keeps unknown.

Dryden.

2. It has cask in a kind of plural sense, to signify the commodity or provision of casks.

Great inconsiderables grow by the bad cask being commonly so ill fashioned, and conditioned, as that a great part of the beer is ever lost and cask away.

Rogers.

CASK. n. f. [cafe, Fr. cafse, Lat.]

A barrel; a wooden vessel to stop liquor or provisions.

CASKET. A helmet; armour for the head: a poetical word.
C A S

Let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the coffee
Of thy pernicious enemy.
Shakespeare.

And thrice
Slung weighty stones, neck, and arm from far they flung;
Their caskets are, a covering thick and light.
Dryden.

Why does he load with darts
His trembling hands, and crush beneath a caf?
His wrinkled brow?
Alison.

C A S K E T. n. f. [a diminutive of caffe, a cheet, Fr. cafe, caffette.] A small box or chest for jewels, or things of particular value.
The found them dead, and cast into the streets,
An old man, where the jewels, life.
By some hand’s hand was robb’d and taken away.
Ignorant poor man! what doest thou bear
Lock’d up within the chest of thy heart?
What jewels and what riches hast thou there?
What here’nly treasure in so weak a chest? Davvies.
Mine eye hath found that fad sepulchral rock,
That was the chest of heaven’s richest store.
Milton.
That had by chance pack’d up his choicest treasure
In one dear caffette, and said’d only that, Gower.

C A S S A M U N A R. n. f. An aromatic vegetable, being a species of galangal, brought from the East, a nervous and tonic medicine.
Quinby.

To C A S S E T. v. a. [cafette, Fr. caffette, low Lat.] To vacate; to invalidate; to make void; to nullify.
This opinion superfetates and caffettes the belt medium we have.

C A S S A T I O N. n. f. [caffetation, Lat.] A malaking null or void.
Dibb.

C A S S A V I. n. s. A plant. It is culti-
C A S S A D A. vated in all the warm parts of America, where the roots, being being divided of its milky juice, is ground to flour, and then made into cakes of bread.

C A S T E R. See C A S S I O W A R Y.

C A S T I A. n. f. A sweet spice mentioned by Moly, Ex. xxx. 24, as an ingredient in the composition of the holy oil, which was to be made use of in the consecration of the sacred vessels of the tabernacle.
This aromatic is said to be the bark of a tree very like cinnamon, and grows in the Indies without being cultivated.
Calmet.

And thy garnements smell of myrrh, saffron, and coffee.
Psalm xxx. 5.

C A S T I A. n. f. The name of a tree.
It hath a cylindrical, long, taper, or flat pod, divided into many cells by transverse diaphragms, in each of which is contained one hard seed, for the most part, in a clumsy black sub-

C A S S I O D O R Y, or Stickadort, n. f. [Joetsch, Lat.] The name of a plant.

C A S S I O W A R Y. n. f. A large bird of prey in the East Indies.
I have a clear view of the relations of dam and chick, between the two cassiadoris in St. James’s park.
Dobson.

To CAST. v. a. preter. cæf; particip. paff. cæf, cæfus, Fr. [cabinet, Danish.] This is a word of multifarious and indefit e use.

1. To throw with the hand.
I rather chuse to endure the wounds of these darts, which envy coffles at novelty, than go on falsely and steplikely in the easy ways of ancient militancy.
Rippl.
They had compacted in his heart, and coffee darts at the people of morning till evening.
Matt. vii. 9.

Then coffee they found away.
And yield thee to my mercy, or I strike.
Dryden and Law.

2. To throw away, as useless or noxious.
If thy hand and offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee.
Matthew.

3. To throw, as from an engine.
Slings to cafe stones.
Chronicles.

4. To fatter by the hand; as, to cafe feed.
Coffe the dust into the brook.
Dowtererly.

5. To force by violence.
Cast them into the Red Sea.
Exodus.
Cast them into another hand.
Dowtererly.

6. To fed.
Nor shall thy vine coffee her fruit.
Malachi.

7. To throw from a high place.
Bear him to the high place, and from thence into destruction cast him.
Shakspeare’s Coriolanus.

8. To throw as a net or snare.
I speak for thy own profit, not that I may cast a snare upon thee.
1 Cor. viii. 35.

9. To drow; to let fall.
They let down the boat into the sea, as though they would have coffee anchor.
Acts, xxvii. 10.

10. To throw dice, or lots.
And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh.
Joshua, xvi, 10.

11. To throw, in wresting.
And I think, being too strong for him, though he took my legs sometimes, yet I made a shift to fubdue him.
Shakspeare.

12. To throw, as worthless or hateful.
His carcass was coffee in the way.
Chronicles.
His friends contend to embalm his body; his enemies, that they may cast it to the dogs.
Shakspeare’s Richard.

13. To drive by violence of weather.
Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain island.
Shakspeare.

14. To emit.
This flowed off in the calcination of the stone, and cast a nauseous smell.
Woodward.

15. To bring suddenly or unexpectedly.

C A S S I O D O R Y.

Content themselves with that which was the irremediable error of former time, or the necessity of the present hath cast upon them.
Hooker.

15. To build by throwing up earth; to raise.

And floating in the earth, casts up a mount of clay.
Speck’s Fairy Queen.

Thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee.
Shakspeare’s Tempest.

The king of Agytta shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.
2 Kings, xix. 35.
At length Barbarossa having cast up his trenches, landed fifty-four pieces of artillery for batterly.
Beck’s Natural History.

17. To put into or out of any certain flate, with the notion of deceit, or defention; as, the king was cast off from his throne.
Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison.
Matthew.

At thy rebuke both the chariot and horse cast into a dead sleep.
Job, xxxvi. 6.

18. To condemn in a criminal trial.
But oh, that treacherous heart! to whom worst shall you
Did trust our counsellors, and we both may rue;
Having his falsehood found too late, ‘twas then
That made me cast my guilt, and them distain.
Dow.
We take up with the most impudent wretches, wely, often suborn our own instruments and jealouses, that we may be sure to cast the unhappy criminal.
Government of the Tonges.
He could not, in this forlorn cafe, have made use of the very least plea of a cast criminal; nor so much as have crie’d, Mercy! Lord, mercy! Smithe.
There then we met, both tried, and both were cast.

And this irrevocable sentence pass’d.
Dryden.

19. To overcome or defeat in a law suit.
[from caffer, French.]
The northern men were agreed, and in effect all the other, to cast our London afterwards.
Condemn’d Remains.

Were the cafe referred to any competent judge, they would inevitably be cast.
Decay of Piety.

20. To defeat.
No martial project to surprise,
Can ever be attempted twice;
Nor cast delive servile afterwards,
Their courage tear their lying cards.
Hudibras.

21. To calibre.
You see but now cast in his mind, a punishment more in policy than in mality; even so as one would beat his offenders dog, to affright an impious lion.
Shakspeare.

22. To leave behind in a race.
In short, to sift your judgments turn and wind,
You cast our fleeter wits a mile behind.
Dryden.

23. To shed; to let fall; to lay aside; to mould; to change for new.
Our chariot lost her wheels, their points our features.
The bird of conquest kept her chief feather cast.
Paint.
Of plants some are green all winter, others cast their leaves.
Hume’s Natural History.

The casting of the skin is by the part, compared to the breaking of the feathers, or claws, but not rightly; for that was to make every casting of the skin a new birth and boister, the skin is in but a general cover, not shaped according to the parts, but the skin is shaped according to the parts.
The creatures that cast the skin are the fox, the ferret, the grizzipple, the hare, the whittow, etc.

C A S S I O D O R Y.

O textile head, which every year
Could feel the crop of wonders bear
Which might have seen the leaves of Each year’s growth added to the last;

The
A lord wandering by the way,
One that to bounty never cast his mind;
Ne thought of heaven ever did alay,
His bate for all the power of fate.

Spenser.

Zealom's languishing countenance, with crooked arms, and sometimes poy up eyes, she thought to have an excelente grace.

Sidney.

Let's play on the French, and answer
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Shakespeare.

Begin, suspicious boy, to cast about Thy infant eyes, and, with a sphile, thy mother single out.

Dryden.

Far istward cast thine eye, from whence the fan,
And orient sciences, at a birth begun.
Peter's Dun.

He then led me to the rock, and, placing me on the top of it, cast me away, lashed, flogged, and tell me what they thought.

Addison.

32. To found; to form by running in a mould.

When any such curious work of fliver is to be cast, as requires that the impression of hairs, or very slender lines, be taken off by the metal, it is not enough that the fliver be barely melted, but it must be kept a considerable while in a strong fluson.

How to build ships, and dreadful ordinance cast.
Infinit the arith.

Waller.

The father's grief restrain'd his art;
He twice effay'd to cast his son in gold,
Twice from his hands he dropt the forming mould.

Dryden.

33. To melt metal into figures.

Yon crow'd, he might reflect, joyiful crowd
With restless rage would pull my thrice down,
And cast the service to his renown.
Prior.

This was but as a refinner's fire, to purge out the dross, and then cast the meat again into a new mold.

Dryden.

34. To model; to form by rule.

We may take a quarter of a mile for the common measure of the depth of the sea, if it were cast into a channel of an equal depth every where.

Brown's Essay of the Earth.

Under this influence, derived from mathematical fludies, some have been tempted to cast all their logical, their metaphysical, and their theo-litical and moral learning into this method.

Watts's Logick.

35. To communicate by reflexion or emanation.

So bright a splendour, to divine a grace
The glorious Daphnis cast on his illustrious race.

Dryden.

We may happen to find a fairer light cast over the same scriptures, and see reason to alter our sentiments even in some points of moment.

Dryden.

36. To yield, or give up, without reserve or condition.

The reason of mankind cannot suggest any fald ground of satisfaction, but in making God our friend, and in carrying a confufion in that, may encourage us, with confidence, to cast ourselves upon him.

Swift.

37. To inflict.

The world is apt to cast great blame on those who have an indifferency for opinions, especially in religion.

Locke.

38. To cast aside.

To dismiss as udeful or inconvenient.

I have bought
Golden opinions from all sort of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest glos,
Not cast aside to foam.

Shakespeare.

39. To cast away.

To shipwreck.

Sir Francis Drake, and John Thomas, meeting with a storm, it thrust John Thomas upon the islands to the South, where he was cast away.

Raleigh's Essays.

His father Philip had, by like misfortunes, been like to have been cast away upon the coast of England.

Raleigh's History of the Turks.

With pity mov'd for others cast away
On rocks of hope and fears.

Reynolms.

But now our tears temperous grow,
And cast our hopes away.

Whil'st you, regardless of our weep,
Shall cast us off to sleep.

Dryden.

40. To cast away. To lavish; to waste in profusion; to turn to no use.

They that want means to nourish children, will obtain from marriage, or, which is all one, they cast away their bodies upon rich old wome.

Raleigh's Essays.

France, haf thoy yet more blood to cast away?
Say, shall the current of our right run out?
Shak.

He might be silent, and not cast away
His favours on vain Junoes.

O Maricia, O my fifier! All there's hope,
Our father will not cast away a life
So needful to us all, and to his country.

Addison's Cato.

41. To cast away. To ruin.

It is an impossible thing for states, by an over-fight in some one act or treaty between them and their present oppoffives, utterly to cast away themfelves for ever.

Locke.

42. To cast by. To reject or dismiss, with neglect or hate.

Old Capulet, and Montague,
Have made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their great and most ordinances.
Shakespeare.

When men, presuming to think they had the power that ended all, and were the only masters of right reason, cast by the votes and opinions of the rest of mankind,
as not worthy of reasoning.

Locke.

43. To cast down. To reject; to deprefs the mind.

We're not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the word:
For they, oppress'd king, I am cast down;
Myself could else outvote false trom's frozen.

Shakespeare.

The best way will be to let him see you are much cast down, and afflicted, for the ill opinion he enters upon you.

Addison.

44. To cast forth. To emi.

He shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon.

Hos.

45. To cast forth. To eject.

I cast forth all the household stuff.
Nelson.

46. To cast off. To difcard.

The prince will find him pleasant when,
Cast off his followers.
Shakespeare.

I cast me off in the time of old age.
Pensive.

He led me on, to cast me off,
But now hath cast me off, as never known.
Milton.

How! not call him father? I see preferment after a man strangely; this may serve me for an use of action, to cast off, my father, when I am great.

Dryden.

I long to clasp that hauty maid,
And bend her burnish'd vittyl to my passion:
When I have gone thus far, I'd cast her off.
Addison.

47. To cast off. To reject.

It is not to be imagined, that a whole society of men should publicly and professedly difown and cast off a rule, which they could not but be indisposed to reject.

Locke.

48. To cast off. To disburden one's self of.

All confpured in one to cast off their subjection to the crown of England.

Spenser's State of Ireland.

This maketh them, through an unavailing difstrive deavouring infultation, to cast off the care of those very affairs, which do most concern their state.

Hooke, Preface.

The true reason why any man is an atheist, is happily certain in our case; religion would curb him in his lusts; and therefore he casts it off, and puts all the scorn upon it he can.

Tytlove.

Company, in any action, gives credit and countaxe to the action of others; much as the furnish gets of this, so much he casts off of shame.

Addison.

We see they never fail to exert themselves, and to cast off the opposition, when they feel the weight of it.

Addison.
The qualities of blood in a healthy state are to be fluid, the red part coagulating, and the forum ought to be without any greenish cast.

Arthuson on Aquintus.

The nature of the red blood revolution is sickled over with the pale cast of thought. Shok.

New names, new dressings, and the modern cast, some locens, some perfons after, and stacht 3.

The world. Sir J. Denham.

14. Manner; air; mien.

Pretty conceptions, fine metaphors, glittering expressions, and something of a neat cast of verse, are properly the deeps, grubs, or loose ornaments, of poetry.

Neglect not the little figures and turns on the words, nor sometimes the very cast of the periods; neither omit or confound any rutes or custom of punctuation.

15. A flight; a number of hawks dismirfed from the fit.

A cast of merlins there was besides, which, flying of a galant height, would beat the birds that rode down unto the bushes, as falcons will do wild fowl over a river.

16. [Casta, Spanisli.] A breed; a race; a species.

Castanets, n. f. [castafcras, Sp.], A small shell of ivory, or hard wood, which dancers rattle in their hands.

If there had been words known between them, to the word.

Neither given any leave to search in particular who are the heirs of the kingdom of Casta, or who castaway.

Hooker.

Left that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway. 1 Cor.

Castaway, n. f. [from cast and away].

A peron loit, or abandoned, by Providence; any thing thrown away.

Neither given any leave to search in particular who are the heirs of the kingdom of Casta, or who castaway.

Ralph's History.

Cast. The participle pristatnes of cast, but improperly, and found perhaps only in the following passage.

When the mind is quick'd out of doubt, The organ, the defect and dead before.

Break up their drovly grave, and newly more coffee loung, and freqnant coffee Shakespeare.

Castellain, n. f. [castellano, Span.] The captain, governor, or oppotable of a caftle.

Castellans, n. f. [from castel.] The lordship belonging to a caftle; the extant of its land and jurisdiction. Philipp.

Castellated. adj. f. from castl. enclosed within a building, as a fountain or ciferen castellated.

Dit.

Caster, n. f. [from To castf.

1. A thrower; he that casts.

If with this throw the thrafnagget of cast vie,

Still, further still, I bid the discuss fly.

Page.

2. A calculator; a man that calculates for others.

Did any of them set up for a caftle of fortunate figures, what might he not get by his predictions?

Abdaden.

To Castigation, w. a. [castigate, Lat.] To chaffle; to chatten; to correct; to punish.

If thou didst put this four cold habit on,

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well. Shakespeare.

N n Castigation.
CASTIGATION. n. f. [from To castigate.] 1. Penance; discipline.
This kind of your torment.
2. Excommunication; excommunication.

CASTIGATORY. adj. [from castigate.]
Punitive, in order to amendment. There were other kinds of penalties inflicted, either probable, castigatory, or exemplary.

CASTING- NET. n. f. [from casting and net.]
An net to be thrown into the water, not placed and left.

CASTLE. n. f. [castellum, Lat.]
1. A strong house, fortified against assailants.
The castle of Macduff I'll fortify. Shakespeare.
2. Castles in the air. [chateaux d'Espagne, Fr.]
Projects without reality. There were but like castles in the air, and in men's fancies vainly imagined. Ralegh's History of the World.

CASTLE SOAP. n. f. [I suppose corrupted from Caifie soap.]
A kind of soap. I have a letter from a soap-boiler, delivering me to write upon the present duties on Castile soap.

CASTLED. adj. [from castle.]
Furnished with castles.
The horses neighing by the wind is blown, And castled elephants o'erlook the town. Dryden.

CASTLEWARD. n. f. [from caife and ward.]
An imposition laid upon such of the king's subjects, as dwell within a certain compass of any castle, toward the maintenance of such as watch and guard the castle. Crowle.

CASTLED. n. f. [from castle.]
An abbot.
We should rather rely upon the urine of a caifying’s bladder, a resolution of crabs eyes, or a second distillation of urine, as Helmont had commenced in Scotland's casts of his world.

CASTOR, or CHESTER, are derived from the Sax, caresen, a city, town, or castle; and that from the Latin caesum: the Saxons chusing to fix in such places of strength and figure, as the Romans had before built or fortified.

CASTER. n. f. [caster, Lat.]
1. A beaver. See Beaver.
Like beaver's casting of their from. Their wayward wealth to Norway's coast they bring. Dryden.
2. A fine hat made of the fur of a beaver. Caster and PULLUX. [in meteorology.]
A fiery meteor, which appears sometimes flicking to a part of the ship, in form of one, or two, or three or four balls. When one is seen alone, it is called Helena, which portends the severest part of the storm to be yet behind; two are denominated Caesar and Pullex, and sometimes Tyudaris, which portend a cessation of the storm. Chambers.

CASTERUM. n. f. [from caestar. In pharmacy.] A liquid matter included in bags or pusses, near the anus of the caesars, falsely taken for his testicles. Chambers.

CASTRATION. n. f. [from castrum, Lat.]
The art or practice of castrating.
To CASTRATE. n. a. [caesfr, Lat.]
1. To geld.
2. To take away the obscene parts of a writing.

CASUAL. adj. [caief, Fr. from caesar, Lat.]
Accidental; arising from chance; depending upon chance; not certain. The revenue of Ireland, both certain and casufal, did not rise unto ten thousand pounds. Chaucer.

CASUALTY. n. f. [from casual.] Accidentally; without design, or fet purpose.
Go, bid my woman Search for a jewel, that too casual Left him most his heart's delight. Shakespeare.

CATCH. n. f. [catch, Lat.]
1. A fort of hill.

CATCH in the pan. [imagined by some to be rightly written Katrina, as coming from Catipina. An unknown correspondent imagines, very naturally, that it is corrupted from Cate in the pan.]
There is a cunning which we, in England, call the turning of the cat in the pan; which is, when that which a man says to another, he lays it as if another had said it to him. Bacon.

CATCH a nine tails. A whip with nine lather, used for the punishment of crimes. You deed reformers of an inane age, You foul cat o' nine tails, in this world. This once be just, and in our cause engage.

PROLOGUE to Vanbrugh's Falstaff Friend.

CATCHER. n. f. [catcher, fr. catchere.]
Contrary to proper use; forced; far fetched.
A catheritical and far derived similitude it holds with men, that is, in a bifurcation.

CATCHLYS. n. f. [catchlēēeis.]
A deluge; an inundation; used generally for the universal deluge.
The opinion that held these catastrophes and empyreans unifal, was such as held that it put a total confusion among things in this lower world.

Hail's Origin of Mankind.

CATACOMBS. n. f. [from kata, and kou-Σ, a hollow or cavity.] Subterraneous cavities for the burial of the dead; of which which there are a great number about three miles from Rome, supposed to be the coves and cells where the primitive christians hid and assembled themselves, and where they interred the martyrs, which are accordingly visited with devotion. But, anciently, the word catena was only understood of the tombs of St. Peter and St. Paul. Chambers.
CAT

On the side of Naples are the catacombs, which must have been full of stench, if the dead bodies that lay to them were left to rot in open niches.
Judd, J. 1. Seizure: the art of seizing anything that flies or hides.

Suff of aspect, by the vulgar call’d
A catship; whose polluted hands the gods
With force incredible and magic conveys
E’er have endued, if he his ample palm
Should haply on ill-fated shoulder lay.

Debt.

CATCHWORD. n.s. [from catch and word.] The word at the corner of the page under the 1st line, which is repeated at the top of the next page.

CA’TER. n.s. [from cat and ‘te.] A single proposition, which is also categorical, may be divided again into simple and complex.

Watt’s Logick.

CATEGORically. adv. [from categor-cal.] 1. Directly; expressly.

2. Positively; plainly.

I dare affirm, and that categorically, in all parts wherever trade is great, and continues so, that trade must be nationally professed.

CHILD’S DISEASES OF TRADE.

CATEGORY. n.s. [cateqory.] A class; a rank; an order of ideas; a predicament.

The absolute infinitude, in a manner, quite changes the nature of beings, and exalts them into a different category.

Glynn.

CA’TERIAN. adj. [from catena, Lat.] Relating to a chain; resembling a chain.

In geometry, the catenary curve is formed by a rope or chain hanging freely between two points of suspension.

Harris.

The back is bent after the manner of the catenary curve, by which it obtains that curve which is safest for the included narrow.

Glynn’s Philosophical Principles.

To CATENATE. v. a. [from catena, Lat.] To chain.

Ditt.

CA’TER-COIN. n. f. [from catena, Lat.] Link; regular connection.

This catenation, or concerning union, whenever his pleasure shall divide, let go, or separate, they shall fall from their existence.

Brown’s Pug. Ex.".

To CA’TER. v. n. [from cat.] To provide food; to buy in victuals.

He that doth the ravens’ food,

Yea providently caters for the Sparrow,

Be comfort to my age.

Shakespeare. As you like it.

CA’TER. n.s. [from the verb.] Provider; collector of provisions, or victuals; mis-printed perhaps for caterer.

The flyers dolded in this Lymer, find a welcomer acceptance, where the table is cate for the homach, than those of the Tamaz.

Caterpillar’s Survey of Cornwall.

CA’TER. n. f. [quatre, Fr.] The four of cards and dice.

CA’TER-COIN. n. f. A corruption of quatre-couin, from the ridiculousness of calling cousin or relation to so remote a degree.

In mother and he, having your worship’s reverence, are scarce cater-couins.

Shakespeare’s Merchant of Venice.

Poetry and reason, how come thee to be catercouin? I.

Rymer’s Tragedies of the left Ages.

CA’TERER. n. f. [from cater.] One employed to sell and buy in provisions for the family; the providore or pur-veyor.

Let no foeth oppose the chamber infest;

Let fancy, not cost, prepare all our dishes.

Let the caterer mind the taste of each guest,

And the cook in his dressing comply with their wishes.

Ben Jonson’s Tavern Academy.

He made the greedy raven to be Elias’s caterer,

And bring him food.

Seldonn shall one see in cities or courts an athletic vigour, which is seen in poor houses, where nature is their cook, and necctify their caterer.

CA’TERESS. n.s. [from cater.] A woman employed to cater, or provide victuals.

Impudence do not change innate nature.

As if she would her children should be rauous

With her abundance the, good caterer,

Meant her provis’ only to the good.

Milton.

Caterpillar.
CAT

CATERPILLAR. n. s. [This word Skinner and Minherowe are inclined to derive from chatte poleke, a weevil. It seems easily deduced to cater, to feed, and piller, Fr. to rob; the animal that eats up the fruits of the earth.

1. A worm which, when it gets wings, is sustained by leaves and fruits.

The caterpillar breedeth of eat and leaves; for we see infinite caterpillars breed upon trees and hedges, by which the leaves of the trees or hedges are consumed.

Author is drawn with a pot pouring forth water, with which defend grasshoppers, caterpillars, and other small insects, from being devoured.

2. Any thing voracious and useless.

CATERPILLAR. n. s. [sarpiolides, Lat.] The name of a plant.

To CATHERWAL, q. m. [from cat.]

1. To make a nose as cats in rutting time.

2. To make any offensive or odious nose.

What a caterswelling do you keep here! If my lady has not called up her steward Mollin, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Shakespeare's Tancred Night.

WAS no dispute between the caterswelling brethren? Hudibras.

CATES. n. s. [of uncertain etymology; Skinner imagines it may be corrupted from delicat; which is not likely, because Janius observes, that the Dutch have kater in the same sense with our cater. It has no singular.] Viands; food; dill of meat; generally employed to signify nice and luxurious food.

This has not called Master, Sir, as the ancient phrase, Cate's fair feast; the entertainment protestes, not the cats. Ben Jonson.

O wafeful plot, never well content
With how cats'd fare; hunger ambitious
Of cats by land and sea fat feasts and feint.
Raleigh.

As alas, how simple to these cats,
What cursed appal that divers'd Eve!
Paradise Lost.

Thy, by th' alluring odour drawn, in hate
Fly to the odour cats, and crowding up
Their pleasant hours.
Phillips.

With costly cats the flaifd her fragol board,
Then with ill-gotten wealth the bought a lord.
Abraham.

CATHFISH. n. s. The name of a sea-fish in the Well Indies; so called from its round head and large glaring eyes, by which they are discovered in hollow rocks.
Phillips.

CATHARPINS. n. s. Small ropes in a ship, running in little blocks from one side of the throids to the other, near the deck; they belong only to the main throids; and their use is to force the throids tight, for the ease and safety of the masts, when the ship rolls.
Phillips.

CATHARTIC. adj. [from cathartico.] Purging medicines. The vermiform or peristaltic motion of the guts continually helps on their contents, from the pylorus to the rectum; and every irritation either quickens that motion in its natural order, or occasions some little invasions in it. In both, what but slightly adheres to the coats will be loosened, and they will be more agitated, and thus rendered more fluid. By this only it is manifest, how a catartic hastens and increases the discharge of bile, but where the force of the stimulus is great, all the appendages of the bowels, and all the valves in the abdomen, will be twich'd; by which a great deal will be drained back into the intestines, and made a part of what they discharge.

Quicksilver precipitated either with gold, or without addition, into a powder, is wont to be strongly enough cathartic; though the chemical, that have not proved, that either gold or mercury hath any salt, much less any that is purgative.

Bryne's Sophiae Olypiam.

Uvations and cathartics are often thought to be fought for, and all endeavour used to calm and regulate the fury of the passions.

Drys of Pliny.
The piercing cathartics ply their spiteful pow'r, Emeticks rank, and keen catharticks borne, Geryon.

Plato has called mathematical demonstrations the catharticks or purgatives of the soul.

Addison's Spectator.

CATHARTICALNESS. n. s. [from cathartical.] Purgation quality.

CATHEDRAL. n. s. A kind of foil.

The nodules with leaves in them, called cathedrals, seem to consist of a sort of iron stone, not unlike that which is found in the rocks near Whitewell in Cumberland, where they call cathedrals.

Woodward on Feith.

CATHEDRAL. n. s. [in a ship.] A piece of timber with two shivers at one end, having a rope and a block, to which is fastened a great iron hook, to truce up the anchor from the hawse to the top of the forecastle.

Sea Diet.

CATHEDRAL. adj. [from cathedra, Lat. a chair of authority; an episcopal see.]

1. Episcopal; containing the fee of a bishop.
A cathedral church is that wherein there are two or more prebends, with a bishop at the head of them, that do make as it were one body politic.

Methought I sat in feast of majesty,
In the cathedral church of Westminister.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.

2. Belonging to an episcopal church.
His conduct and regular-allowing at the cathedral service was never interrupted by the happenings of weather.
Locke.

3. In low phrase, antique; venerable; old. This seems to be the meaning in the following lines.
Here aged trees cathedral walks compose,
And mount the hill in venerable rows.
These green infants in their beds are laid.
Pope.

CATHEDRAL. n. s. The head church of a diocese.
There is nothing in Lhebror for extraordinary as the cathedral, which a man may view with pleasure, after he has seen St. Peter's. Addison in Italy.

CATHERINE PEAR. See Pear.

For streaks of red were mingled there,
Such as are on a Catherine pear,
The side that's next the sun.
Suckling.

CATHERETER. n. s. [cateteris.] A hollow and somewhat crooked instrument, to thrust into the bladder, to assist in bringing away the urine, when the passag is stopped by a stone or gravel.
A large clyster, suddenly injected, hath frequently forced the urine out of the bladder; but if it fail, a catheter must help you.
Wifeman's Surgery.

CATHODES. n. s. [In a ship.] Two little holes after above the gun-room ports, to bring in a cable or hawser through them to the capstan, when there is occasion to move the ship after Sea Diet.

CATHOLICISM. n. s. [from catholick.] Adherence to the catholic church.

CATHOLICK. adj. [catholique, Fr. catholike, universal or general.]

1. The church of Jesus Christ is called catholick, because it extends throughout the world, and is not limited by time.

2. Some truths are said to be catholick, because they are received by all the faithful.

3. Catholick is often set in opposition to heretic or Schismatic.

4. Catholick or canonical epistles, are seven in number; that of St. John, that of St. Jude. They are called catholick, because they are directed to all the faithful, and not to any particular church; and canonical, because they contain excellent rules of faith and morality.

Calmet.

Doublets the succeeders of those your great and catholick endeavours will promote the empire man over nature, and bring plentiful accession of glory to your nation.

Glamis's Seript.

Those systems undertake to give an account of the formation of the universe, by mechanical hypotheses of matter, moved either uncertainly, or according to some catholic laws.
Rey.

CATHOLICON. n. s. [from catholikos; catacholos taoos.] An universal medicine.
Preservation against that life, is the contemplation of the last judgment. This is indeed a catholicon against all; but we find it particularly applied by St. Paul to judging and despising our brethren.

Government of the Tonges.

CATHOLICON. n. s. [catholicoس and botany.] An assemblage of imperfect flowers hanging from trees, in manner of a rope or cat's tail; serving as male blossoms, or flowers of the trees, by which they are produced.

Camprics.

CATHOLIKE. adj. [from cat and like.] Like a cat.
A feline, with udders all drawn dry.
Lay couching head on ground, with cat-like watch.
Shakespeare.

CATLING. n. s.
1. A dismembering knife used by surgeons.
Harris.

2. It seems to be used by Shakespeare for catgut; the materials of fiddle strings.
What mischief there will be in him after Hector has knocked eat his brains, I know not. But I am farr, none; unless the faller Apollo get his keyes to make catlings of.
Shakespeare.

3. The down or moss growing about walnut trees, resembling the hair of a cat.
Harris.

CATMINT. n. s. [cataria, Lat.] The name of a plant.
Miler.

CATOPTRICAL. adj. [from catopticks.] Relating to catoptricks, or vision by reflection.

A catoptrical or dioptrical heat is superior to any, viciating the hardest substances.

Wise's Alchymist.

CATOPTRICKS. n. s. [catoptricus, a looking glafe.] That part of opticks which treats of vision by reflection.

CATPIPE. n. s. [from cat and pipe.] The same with catcall; an instrument that makes a squaking noise.

Some
CAVALRY, n. f. [cavalier, Fr.] Horse troops; bodies of men furnished with horses for war.

CAVAN, n. f. [from cavum, L.] In architecture. The hollow or under-cutting of the earth for cellaring; allowing to be the sixth part of the height of the whole building.

CAYLEBECK, n. f. A fort of light hats, so called from a town in France where they were first made.

CAUSTIC, n. f. [chandeu, Fr.] A mixture of wine and other ingredients, given to women in childbed, and fick persons.

CAYL. v. a. [from the noun.] To make caudle; to mix as caudle.

CAYL. v. n. [cave, Fr. cavat, Lat.] 1. A cavern; a den; a hole entering horizontally under the ground; a habitacion in the earth.

CAYRE, n. f. [cave, Fr. cavitare, Lat.] To cave or cavern.

CAYVIL. v. n. [caveat, Fr. caviller, Lat.] To raise captious and frivolous objections.

CAVIL. n. f. [from the verb.] False or frivolous objections.

CAVITY. n. f. [from cavum.] The disposition to make captious objection; the practice of objection.

CAYRE. n. v. a. To receive or treat with objections. Thou didst accept them: wilt thou enjoy it.

CAYVIL. v. f. [from the verb.] False or frivolous objections.
CAU
Towards the end of the month, earth up your winter plants and fallow herbs; and plant forth your cauliflowers and cabbages, which were blown in August. Evelyn's Calendes.

CAU. See To CAU.

To CAUPEON, v. n. [caupen, Lat.] To keep a viUing-house; to fell wine or vitualls. Dict.
CAUSABLE. adj. [from cause, low Lat.] That which may be caused, or effectcd by a cause. That may be miraculously effected in one, which is naturally causable in another. Brown's Pelgar Errors.

CAUSAL. adj. [causalis, low Lat.] Relating to causes; implying or containing causes. Every motion owing a dependence on preceding motors, we can have no true knowledge of any, except we would distinctly pay into the whole method of causal concentration.

CAUSALITY. n. s. [causalitate, low Lat.] The agency of a cause; the quality of causing. As he created all things, so he is beyond and in them all, in his very essence, as being the soul of their causatilities, and the essential cause of their existence. Brown's Pelgar Errors. By an unadvised transference from the effect to the remotest cause, we observe not the connection, through the interposed of many intermediate causative connections, between the first and the last. Glaveville's Sceptic Scholaris.

CAUSALLY. adv. [from causal.] According to the order or feries of causes. Thus may it be more causally made out, what Hippocrates affirmed. Brown's Pelgar Errors.

CAUSATION. n. s. [from cause, low Lat.] The act or power of causing. Thus doth he sometimes desire us in the concccts of fairs and meteors, besides their allowable actions, aspiring effects thereunto of independent causation. Brown's Pelgar Errors.

CAUSATIVE. adj. [a term in grammar.] That effectually by a cause of reason. Brown's Pelgar Errors.

CAUSATION. n. s. [from cause, low Lat.] A causer; an author of any effect. Demonstratively understanding the semplicity of perfection, and the invisible condition of the first causator, it was out of the power of earth, or the anonyng of belt, to work them from it. Brown's Pelgar Errors.

CAUSE. n. s. [causa, Lat.] 1. That which produces or efects any thing; the efficient. The wife and learnest, amongst the very heat, they that are beginning to work, and are unshod from first to last; the causes, whereupon originally the being of all things depended; neither have they otherwise spoken of that cause, than as an agent, which, knowing what and why it worketh, obserueth, in working, a most exact order or law. Hooker.

2. The reason; motive to any thing. The reft shall bear some other light. As cause will be obly'd. Shakespeare.

CAULIFFER. n. s. [from caulis, Lat. the stalk of a plant.] A species of cabbages.
CAUTION. n.s. [caute, Latt.] Caution; scruple: a word diffused.

Perhaps he loves you now: And now no fault of death before

The virtue of his will.

Skeat'speare.

CA'UTELOUS. adj. [cautelus, Fr.]

1. Cautious; wary; provident. Not in use.

Padisho doth with, like a cautela artisan, that the inward walls might bear some good shares in the burden.

Wotton.

2. Wily; cunning; treacherous.

Of themselves, for the most part, they are so cautious and wily headed, especially being men of so free and inexistent manners and practice in low matters, that you would wonder whereby they borrow such subtilties and fly shifts.

Speirs on Ireland.

Your fon

Will or exceed the common, or be caught

With cautious lauds and practice.

Skeat'speare.

CA'UTEDUSLY. adv. [from cautelus].

All prentor courts, if any of the parties be laid asleep, and experience of a retirement, and the other party doth cautiously get the start and advantage yet they will yet be after all things in surru quo prinis.

Bancon's War with Spain.

2. Cautiously; wary; circumspect; wary.

The Jews, not resolved of the fictitious side of Jacobo do cautiously, in their diet, abstain from both.

Brown.

CAUTERIZATION. n.s. [from cauterize].

The act of burning flesh with hot irons, or caustic medicaments.

They require, after cauterization, no such bondage, as that thereby you need to fear interpolation of the spirits.

Wright, To CAU'TERIZE. n. o. [cauterizer, Fr.] To burn with the cautery.

For each true word a blister, and each false eke

To extort to the interlocutor's tongue;

Disturbing with speaking.

Shakespeare.

No marvel though cantharides have such a corrosive and cauterizing quality; for there is not one other of the insects, but it is kind of a dull matter.

Bacon's Natural History.

The design of the cautery is to prevent the canal from closing; but the operators confess, that, in punctions cauterized, the tears rise still oftener.

Sharp's Surgery.

CAUTERY. n. s. [caute, Latt.]

Cautery is either actual or potential; the first is burning by a hot iron, and the latter with caustic medicines. The actual cautery is generally used to cut and remove dead matter; the potential cautery, by means of the quick; or to stop the effusion of blood, by burning up the veins.

Quinby.

In heat of fight it will be necessary to have your and your country's fire always ready for that which will connect the bleeding arteries in a moment.

Wright's Surg.

CAUTION. n.s. [caution, Fr. cautie, Latt.]

1. Prudence, as it respects danger; fore-sight; provident care; wariness against evil.

2. Security for.

Such conditions, and caution of the condition, as might suffice with such address as would matters better.

Sidney.

The Cedar, upon this new acquaint, gave him part of Beckett's caution for his disbursements.

Hume.

The parliament would yet give his majesty sufficient caution that the war should be prosecuted.

St. John.

He that objects any crime, ought to give caution, by the means of saries, that he will persevere in the prosecution of such crimes. Swift's Tour.

3. Provision or security against.

In defiance of all the rules and caution of government, the most dangerous and mortal of vices will come off.

L'Estrange.

Provisionary precept.

Attention to the forementioned symptoms as if might be advisable: this caution and rules of diet, by way of prevention.

Archibald.

5. Warning.

To CAUTION. c. a. [from the noun.]

To warn; to give notice of a danger.

How shall our thought avoid the various state?

Or wilder to our caution'd soul declare

The different phases thou pleasest to employ, that bent to hurt, and certain to destroy.

Prior. Thou caution'd me against their charms,

But never gave me equal arms.

Swift.

CAUTIONARILY. adj. [from caution.]

Given as a pledge, or in security.

I am made the cautionable pledge.

The gage and hostage of your keeping it. Swift's Tour.

Is there no security for the island of Brittan?

Has he not security for the news and peace to give us for securing trade?

Swift.

CAUTIOUS. adj. [from cautelus, Latt.]

Wary; watchful.

Be cautious of him; for he is sometimes an inconstant lover, because he hath a great advantage.

Swift.

CAUTIOUSLY. adv. [from cautelus.]

In an attentive, wary manner; wary.

They know how fickle common lovers are:

Their oaths and vows are cautiously belie'd;

For few there are but have been once deter'd.

Dryden.

CAUTIOUSNESS. n. s. [from caution.

Watchfulness; vigilance; circumstance; provident care; prudence with respect to danger.

I could not best approve their generous confidence and cautionfulness.

King Charles.

We then met those writers with great cautionfulness and circumspection, in points where it is not impossible that we may be deceived.

Addison.

TO CAVY. c. a. [taken from the found.]

To cry as the rook, raven, or crow.

Rufllet-pated thoughts, many in fort,

Riding and crying at the gun's report.

Shakespeare.

A walk of aged clans, to very high, that the rocks and crows upon the top form to soaring in another region.

The cooks, who high amid the houghs,

In early springs, his airy city builds,

And causts, caws.

Thomas' Spring.

TO CEASE. c. a. [ceaser, Fr. caise, Lat.]

1. To leave off; to stop; to give over; to desist: with from before a noun.

The lives of all, who cease from combat, frame;

My brother's be your most peculiar cares. Dryden.

2. To fail; to be extinct; to pass away.

The poor man shall never cease out of the land.

Dutchess.

The foul being removed, the faculties and operations of life, sense, and intelligence, cease from that malefactors, and are no longer in it.

Hud's Origin of Mankind.

3. To be at an end.

But now the wonder ceases, since I see

She kept them only, Tityrus, for thee.

Dryden.

4. To ret.

The ministers of Christ have ceased from their labours.

Tob Cyae. c. a. To put a slop to; to put an end to.

Importune him for monies: he not ceasing With flight dextrous.

Shakespeare.

My ministry, by imagination, or at one click a motion, than raise or caustis as it is easier to make a dog go flower, than to make him stand still.

Bacon's Natural History.

Cape thus this impulsive arm.

Milton.

But he, her cares to caustis.

Sent down the meek-eyed peace.

Milton.

The difcord is complete, nor can they cease The dire debate, nor yet command the peace. Dryden.

CEASE. n. s. [from the verb.] Extinction; failure: perhaps for decrease.

The caes of majesty

Dies not alone, but, like a gulf, withdraws What's near it with it.

Shakespeare.

CA'SURE. adj. [from ceaf.

Sufficient; continual; without pause; without stop; without end.

My gutless blood must quench the ceas's fire,

On which my endless tears were beetles spayed.

Fairfax.

All whose ceasure grasps his works behind,

Both day and night.

Like an oak

That finden forces, then all the winds employ Their ceasure roar; and only finds its leaves,

Or mall, which the revolving spring restores.

Popham.

CECITY. n. s. [cecitas, Lat.] Blindness; privation of sight.

They are not blind, nor yet distinctly sees there Is in them no ceacity, yet more than a ceacity they have fight enough to disfigure the light, though not perhaps to distinguish objects or colours.

Brown's Polygar Errors.

CED. D.'s. n. c. [Latt.]

A tree.

It is evergreen; the leaves are narrower than those of the pine tree, and many of them produced out of one tuberule, resembling a painter's pencil; it hath male flowers, or catkins, produced at remote distances from the fruit on the same tree.

The seeds are produced in large cones, comprising and turbined. The expansion of the branches is very regular in cedar trees, the ends of the shoots deflower, and thereby increasing their upper surface, which is constantly clothed with green leaves, so regularly as to appear at a distance like a green carpet, and, in waving about, make an agreeable prospect. It is favored that this tree has not been more cultivated in England; for it would be a great ornament to barren bleak mountains, even in Scotland, where four other trees would grow, it being a native of Mount Jannus, where the (more... of three million years. Resembled, in his Travels, of the largest tails on record, and found to be divided by five inches in circumference, and found. About five or six yards from the ground, it was divided into five limbs, each of which was equal to a great tree. The wood of this famous tree is mounted proof against the parasitism of animal bodies. The sawdust is thought to be one of the secrets used by the mountebanks, who pretend to have the emasculating mystery. This wood is also said to yield an oil, which is famous for preserving books and writings; and the wood is thought by Bacon to continue above a thousand years found.

MILLER.

I must yield my body to the earth: Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge. Whole arms gave shelter to the princely eagle; Under whose shade the rampart lion slept. Whoop top branch overtop'd Jove's spreading tree, And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind. Shakespeare.

CLE'DRINE. adj. [cledrinu, Lat.]: Of or belonging to the cedar tree. To CE'DIL. v. a. [chedle, Lat.]: To overlay, or cover, the inner roof of a building. And the greater house he said with six-tiers, which he over-laid with fine gold. [Chesden] I'll show the cedar from his house cined with cedar, be content with God's Saviour's lot, not to have where to lay his head. Dryden: The Play.

CE'ILING. n. f. [from ceiling]. The inner roof. Vanish makes ceilings not only thin, but left. Bacon.

And now the chicken'd sky Like a dark cedar floor'd: down rush'd the rain Impetuous. Milton's Paradise Lost. So when the sun by day, or moon by night, Strike on the polish'd brats their trembling light, The glittering species here and there divide, And cast their dooming beams from side to side: Now on the wall, and now on the pavement play. And to the ceiling flash'd the glazing day. Dryden.

CE'LANDINE. n. f. [celledonum, Lat.]: A plant. The flow'rs use the celandine, the lanxet euphrasia. Mura.

CE'LATU're. n. f. [celaturu, Lat.]: The art of engraving, or cutting in figures. To CE'LA'TE. v. a. [celebre, Lat.]:

1. To praise; to commend; to give praise to; to make famous. The songs of lion were plains and pieces of poetry, that adored or celebrated the Supreme Being.

Addison.

I would have him read over the celebrated works of antiquity, which have stood the test of so many different ages.

Addison.

2. To distinguish by solemn rites; to perform solemnly. He flew all them that were come to celebrate the sabbath. [Macbeth]

So the feast-day, the father comes forth, after divine service, into a large room, where the feast is celebrated. Bacon.

3. To mention in a let or solemn manner, whether of joy or sorrow. His daughter was most beautiful. [Macbeth]

During the celebration of this holy festival, you attend earnestly to what is done by the priest.

Shakespeare.

VOL. I.

2. Praise; renown; memorial.

No more shall be added in this place, his memory deserving a particular celebration, than that his learning, priest, and virtue, have been attested by few.

Clarendon.

Some of the ancients may be thought sometimes to have used a list of numbers, by the celebration of those who have added to their alphabet. Holders Elements of Speech.

CE'LE'BRI'ous. adj. [celebre, Lat.]: Famous; renowned; noted. Not in use. The Jews, Jerusalem, and the Temple, having always been celebrated yet, after their captivities, they were deplored of their glory, even then the Alifyrians, Greeks, and Romans, honoured with sacrifices the Most High God, whom they that pious, and observant the gospel, glorified God, and benefited man, much more than they could have done in the desolate and first-celebrated. Aretaeus.

CE'LE'BRI'ously. adv. [from celebrated]. In a famous manner. CE'LE'BRI'O'USNESS. n. f. [from celebrated]. Renown; fame.

CE'LE'BRI'TY. n. f. [celebritas, Lat.]: Publick and splendid transfiguration. The manner of her receiving, and the celebration of the marriage, were performed with great abstinence. Bacon.

CE'LE'BRI'ACK. n. f. A species of parley; it is also called curmudgeon rooted celery.

CE'LE'BRI'TY. n. f. [celebritas, Lat.]: Swiftness; speed; velocity. We very well fee them, who thus please, a wonderful cell full of celebrities; for, perceiving at the first but only some leaves of suspicion, and fear left it should be evil, they are presently, in one and the self-same breath, resolved, that what beginning ever it had, there is no possibility it should be good. Hunter

His former custom and practice was ever full of forwardness and celebrity to make head against them. Bacon.

Thus, with imagin'd wings, our swift scene dies, In motion with no loss of celebrity Than that of thought. Shakespeare.

Three things concur to make a promenade great; the bigness, the density, and the celebrity of the body moved. Dryden.

Whatever encroaches the density of the body, even without enering its celebrity, butts, because a denser body is hotter than a rarer. Aristotle in Animals.

CE'LE'BRE'. n. f. A species of parfley; which fee.

CE'LE'STIAL. adj. [celestial, Lat.]:

1. Heavenly; relating to the supernal region. These three, until the twelve celestial figures have brought about their annual reckoning. Shaks. The ancients commonly applied celestial descriptions of other cliims to their own. Shakespeare's Vulgar Errors.

2. Heavenly; relating to the blest state. Play that sad note I nam'd my knoll, whilst I sit meditating On that celestial harmony. Shakespeare.

3. Heavenly, with respect to excellence. Canst thou pretend desire, whom canst inhalt'd To worship, and a woman celestial nam'd 3 Dryden. Tumultuous, his bloomy face Glowing celestial lisse, with golden grace. Pope.

CE'LE'BRI'AL. n. f. [from the adj]: An inhabitant of Heaven. Thus affable and mild the prince proceed, And to the dome the unknown celestial heads. Pope.

CE'LE'STIALY. adv. [from celestial]. In a heavenly manner.

To CE'LE'STI'FY. v. a. [from celestial]. To give something of heavenly nature to any thing. Not used. We should affirm, that all things were in all things, that heaven were but earth terrified, and earth but heaven celestial'd, or that each part above had influence upon its affinity below.

CE'LI'ACK. adj. [xosalia, the belly]. Relating to the lower belly. The blood moving slowly through the colick and melodistick arteries, produces complaints.

Bacon's Vulgar Errors.

CE'LI'BRY. n. f. [celebris, Lat.]: Single life; unmarried state.

I can attribute their numbers to nothing but their frequent marriages; for they lodge on celebry as an accurate face, and generally are married betwixt twenty and thirty years. Spectator.

By teaching them how to carry themselves in their relations of husbands and wives, parents and children, they live, without question, adorn the gospel, glorified God, and benefited man, much more than they could have done in the desolate and first-celebrated. Aretaeus.

CE'LIBATE. n. f. [celebatus, Lat.]: Single life.

The males obliged themselves to celibatry, and then multiplication is hindered. Gramm.

CE'LL. n. f. [cella, Lat.]:

1. A small cavity or hollow place. The brain contains three thousand cell in a month by admirable fancy work. Dryden.

2. How bea for ever, though a monarch reign, Their ep rate cells and properties maintain. Pope.

3. The cave or little habitation of a religious perfon.

4. To find religion in a lazy cell, In empty fancy contemplations dwell. Dryden.

5. A small and close apartment in a prison.

4. Any small place of residence; a cottage.

Mine eyes he close'd, but open left the cell Of fancy, my internal fight. Milton's Par. Lost. For ever in this humble cell Let thee and I together dwell. Pope.

In cottages and lowly cells. True piety neglected dwells; Till call'd to heaven, its native seat.

Where the good man more lies great. Somers.

5. Little bags or bladders, where fluids, or matter of different sorts, are lodged; common both to animals and plants.

CE'LLANTY. n. f. [cellant, Lat.]: A place under ground, where fiores and liquors are reposed.

If this fellow had lived in the time of Cato, he would, for his punishment, have been confined to the bottom of a cell in. his lifetime. Pain bored in Drawing.

CE'LLAR. n. f. [cella, Lat.]: A place under ground, where fiores and liquors are reposed.

Come on, you hear this fellow in the cellars. Shakespeare.

A good alicant makes a house wholecloie, and gives opportunity for cellars. Martino's Husbandry.

CE'LLARIST. n. f. [cellarius, Lat.]: The butler in a religious house. Dry CE'LLULAR. adj. [cellular, Lat.]: Constituting of little cells or cavities.

The universe, consisting itself amongst the neighboring muscles, and cellular membrane, destroy'd. Pope's Sociology.

CE'LLITUDE. n. f. [cellitudo, Lat.]: Height.

CE'MENT. n. f. [cementum, Lat.]:

1. The matter with which two bodies are made to coherence, as mortar or glue.

O
Your temples burned in their cemeteries, your shrine confounded into an angel's birth.

There is a cemeter., compounded of Room, whites of eggs, and bones powdered, that become hard as marble. You may see divers peoples, and a eulogy of of love, or stones themselves.

The foundation was made of rough stones, placed with a more firm cement; upon this was laid another layer, consisting of small stones and cements.

The shrines of the ancients, when they left any men at sea, raised a cenotaph, or empty monument.

Register on Obits.

CEN.

Censorship, n.s. [cenfor., Lat.] Public rate.

We see what floods of treasure have flowed into Europe by that means, so that the censors, or of Christendom, are raised since then, ten times, you twenty times cold.

To place on the cens.

Censure, v.a. [cenfor., Fr.] To peruse with odours; contracted from in-

The Selli king, and cense his altar round
With Socket smoke, their heads with blazed bound.

Cinesis was near, and cast a furious look
On the side altar, censed with sacred smoke.

And bright and flaming Smells.

Censer. n.s. [cenfor., Fr.] 1. The pan or vessel in which incense is burned.

Antinonius gave Priety, in his money, like a lady with a censer after a batch.

Of incense clouds,

From golden censers, hid the moment.

2. A pan in which any thing is burned; fire-pan.

Here's only, and slip, and cut, and sight, and

Like to a censer in a barber's shop.

Censum, n.s. [cenfor., Lat.] A rate, an assessment.

God intended this censum only for the blesed
Virgin and her son, that Christ might be born

Joseph Hall.

Censor, n.s. [cenfor., Lat.] 1. An officer of Rome, who had the power of correcting manners.

Who was given to the censers and exprobaton.

Il-natured censers of the present age,

And fond of all the folly of the path.

Reference.

The most severe censor cannot but be pleased with the prodigality of his wits, though, at the same time, he could wish, that the misers of it had been a better man.

Dryden.

Censorian, adj. [from cenfor.] Relating to the censor.

As the chasity had the pretorian power for equity, so the chasmary had the censure power for offences under the degree of capital.

Censure, n.s. [cenfor., Fr.] 1. Addicted to censure; severe; full of invidious.

Do not too many believe no religion to be false,
but that is intertemperably rigid? no zeal to be spic-ritual, but what is censurable, or vindicative? Spratt.

O let thy prudence make my travels light!

And present Venus that excels my name.

Above the numbers of censurable fame.

Prior.

Sometimes it is of before the object of reproof.

A dogmatical spirit inclines a man to be censurable of his neighbour.

In this instance.

Warren in the Mind.

Sometimes so.

He treated all his inferiors of the clergy with so much sanctimonious pride; was rigorously and univer-

Censoriously, adv. [from censorous.]

In a severe reflecting manner.

Censoriousness, n.s. [from censorous.]

Dispension to reproach; habit of reproaching.

Speeches of disputation, and rudeness of behav-behaving, confusing and studied interpretation of things, all coarse and distasteful homilies, render conversion of men grievous and useful to one another.

Swift.

Censorship, n.s. [from cenfor.] 1. The office of a censor.

2. The time in which the office of censor is born.

It was brought to Rome in the censorship of Claudius.

Censurable, adj. [from cenfor.] Worthy of censure; blameable; culpable.

A small mistake may lie upon the mind the lasting memory of having been taunted for something censurable.

Locke.

Censurableness, n. s. [from cenfor-
Blameableness; fitness to be censured.

Censurer, n.s. [from cenfor.] He that blames; he that reproaches.

We must not flint

Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious cenforers.

Shak. Henry VIII.

A man who is possessed of real merit, should look upon his political cenforers with the same

Addison.

Censor, n.s. [cenfor., Lat.] A hundred;
and, five per cent. that is, five in the hundred.

Censura, n.s. [centariun., Lat.] 1. A poetical being, supposed to be com-bounced of a man and a horse.

Down from the waft they are cenforers, though women all above.

Shakespeare.

The idea of a cenfor has no more falsehood in it than the same cenfor.

Locke.

The archer in the zodiac.

The chearif empire of the sky
To Capricorn the Censor archer yields.

Dryden.

Censura, greater and as. [centauriun.] Two plants.

Add pound ed galls, and eos dry.

And with Cecropian thyme strong foetente cenfor.

Censura, n.s. [centaurius., Lat.] The number of a hundred.

In every cenfor of years from the creation,
some small statement should have been made.

Hallerill on Proviso.

Censurial, n.s. [centaurus., Lat.] Hundreds; the next step of progression after decimal in the arithmetick of frac-

The neglect of a few cenforials in the side of the cube, would bring it to an equality with the cubs of a foot.

Arithomela on Coin.

Censititious, adj. [from cenfor and fellum, Lat.] Having an hundred leaves.

Censidary.
CEN

CENTIPED. n. f. [from centum and ped.] A poisonous insect in the West Indies, commonly called by the English forty feet. Dyer.

CENTO. n. f. [centos, Lat.] A composition formed by joining scraps from other authors. It is quoted, as it were, out of threads of divers poets, such as Chiltons call a cenzo. Candem's Rom. If any man think the poem a cenzo, our poet will but have done the same in jiff which Bolleyn did in earl. Ansonic to Pope's Eccles.

CENTRAL. adj. [from centre.] Relating to the centre; containing the centre; placed in the centre, or middle. There is now, and was then, a space or cavity in the central parts of it, so large as to give reception to that mighty mass of water. Woodward's Natural History.

Central. adj. [from central.] With regard to the centre. Though one of the feet most commonly bears the weight, yet the whole weight rests entirely upon it. Dyer.

CENTRE, n. f. [centrum, Lat.] The middle; that which is equally distant from all extremities. The heav'n themselves, the planets, and this planet. Observe degree, priority, and place. Shakespeare. If we form an image of a round body all on fire, the flame proceeding from it will diffuse itself in every way; so that the forces, meeting for the centre they would have from all round about a huge sphere of fire and light. Dryden.

To CENTRE, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To place on a centre; or fix on a centre. One foot he central, and the other turned round through the vall profundio obscure. Milton.
2. To collect to a point. By each look, and thought, and care, it's shown. Their eyes were central all in me alone. Prior. He may take a range all the world over and draw, in all that wide and circonference of fire and light, and centre it in his own breast. South.
3. To be collected on. Either whole or on ye chief alone. Dryden.

To CENTRE, v. n.
1. To settle on; to repose on; as bodies when they gain an equilibrium. Where there is no visible thing wherein to centre, error is as wide as men's fancy, and may wander to eternity.
2. To be placed in the midst or centre. As God in heav'n is centre, yet extends to all; so they, Centring, receive the round about, and the Dying of Days. Milton.
3. To be collected to a point. What hopes you had in Damocles, lay down; Our hopes must centre on ourselves alone. Dryden. In common acknowledgment of the body will at length centre in him, who appears sincerely to aim at the common benefit. It was attained by the visible central of all the old prophets, or the portion of Christ, and by the completion of these promises since, he by himself uttered.

CENTRICK, adj. [from centre.] Placed in the centre.

CENTRIFUGAL, adj. [from centrifugum; figur.; 'strecte, Lat.] Having the quality acquired by bodies in motion, of receding from the centre. Some have deeper dugs in mine than I, Say where his centrifiek buggles dost thou. Daven.

CENTRIPETAL, adj. [from centrum and pete.] Having a tendency to the centre; having gravity. The direction of the forces, whereby the planets revolve in their orbits, is towards the central; and this force may be very properly called attractive, in respect of the central body; and centrifugal, in respect of the revolving body. Celsius.

CENTIVITY. See SENTINEL.

The thoughtless wisl shall frequent forfeits pay, Who 'gainst the centry's box dischage their ducats. Gay.

To CENTUPLE. v. a. [centuplicatio, from centum and plicare, Lat.] To make a hundred fold; to repeat a hundred times.

To CENTURIATE, v. a. [centuriare, Lat.] To divide into hundreds.

To CENTURATOR, n. f. [from century.] A name given to historians, who distinguish times by centuries; which is generally the method of ecclesiastical history.

The centuries of Bagdage were the first that discovered that grand instrument. Agrippa Paragas.

Cell' R'ion. n. f. [centuria, Lat.] A military officer among the Romans, who commanded an hundred men.

Can any man ready, say you?—A most royal one. The centuries, and their changes, distinctly billoted in the entertainment, and made foot to foot to an hour's warning. Shakespeare.

CENTUARY. n. f. [centuriar, Lat.] A period of one thousand years.

1. A hundred: usually employed to specify time; as, the second century. The nature of eternity is such, that, though our joys, after some centuries of years, may form to have grown older by having been enjoyed for many ages, yet will they really still continue new. Spenser.
2. And now time's whaler sectors is begun, Which in soft centures shall smoothly grow. Dryden. The lists of bishops are filled with greater numbers than one would expect; but the succession was quick in the three first centuries, because the bishop often ended in the martyr. Addison.
3. It is sometimes used simply for a hundred. Romanus, as you may read, did divide the Romans into tribes, and the tribes into centuries or hundreds. Spenser. And on it fell a century of pray's, Such as I can, twice over, I'll weep and sigh. Shak.

CEOL. An initial in the names of men, which signifies a flipp or veelf, as such as those the Saxons landed in. Giffen.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.

CER.
They have a set of ceremonious phrases, that run through all ranks and degrees among them.

Addison’s Guardian.

Then let us take a ceremonious leave, and loving farewell, of our several friends. Shakespeare.

6. Civil and formal in a fault.
The old caliph was grown so ceremonious, as he would needs accompany me some miles in my way. Sidney.

CEREMONIOUSLY, adv. [from ceremonious.] In a ceremonious manner; formally; respectfully. APOLLO.

Some welcome for the mistresses of the house.

CEREMONIOUSNESS, n. f. [from ceremonious.] Addicthedness to ceremony; the use of too much ceremony.

CEREMONY. n. f. [ceremonia, Lat.]
1. Outward rite; external form in religion.
   Bring her up to the high altar, that she may The sacred ceremonies partake. Specif.
   He is superstitious grown of late; Quite from the main object he held once Of many things, safe of dreams and ceremony. Shaks.
   Difrofe the images, if you find them deck’d with ceremony. Shaks.
2. Forms of civility.
The multitude to what is ceremony; Meeting were bare without it. Shaks.
Not to use ceremonies at all, is to teach others not to use them again, and so diminish respect to himself. Bacon.
3. Outward forms of state.
What art thou, thou idle ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer’st more Of mortal girls, than do thy worshipers? Art thou such a fad place, but place, degree, and form? Shaks.
   A clever place, Where pump and ceremony entered not, Where greateats was that out, and highnesses well forgot. Dryden’s Fables.
CEROTE. n. f. The same with cerote; which see. In those which are critical, a cerote of oil of olives, with white wax, hath hitherto cured my gout, viz. Wollaston.
CERCERN. adj. [certerus, Lat.]
1. Sure; indubitable; unquestionable; undoubted; that which cannot be questioned, or denied.
Those things are certain among men, which cannot be denied without obliquity and folly. Tillotson.
This the mind is equally certain of, whether these ideas be more or less general. Locke.
2. Resolved; determined.
However I with thee have fre’d my lot, Certain to undergo like doom of death, Comfort with thee. Addison’s Paradise Lost.
3. Undoubting; put past doubt.
This form before Aleyone pretend, To make her certain of the sad event. Dryden.
4. Unfalling; which always produces the expected effect.
I have often wished that I knew as certain a remedy for any other distemper. Mads.
5. Conflant; never failing to be; not casual.
   Virtue, that directs our ways Through certain certain, unchangeable paths. Dryden.
6. Regular; settled; ratified.
   You shall gather a certain rate. Exodus.
   What calls the council, states a certain day, Who forms the phalanx, and who points the way? Pope.
   The preparation for your banquet throws your certain hours. Cotton.

7. In an indefinite sense, some; as, a certain man told me this.
   How had therefore this fashion may justly be accounted, certain of the same countries do pass far beyond it. Carew’s Survey.
   Some certain of your brethren road, and ran From one of another’s nuptial day. Dryden.
   Let there be certain leather bags made of several bigneys, which, for the matter of them, should be trackable. Whitt.
   CERTAINLY, adv. [from certain.]
1. Indubitably; without question; without doubt.
   Certainly he that, by those legal means, cannot be secured, can be much less be by any private attempt. Dryden’s Polycy.
   What needless collection of simple things, prejudice or frivolity fund for, in another’s use, is not to certainly known. Locke.
2. Without fail.
CERTAINNESS, n. f. [from certain.]
The same with certainty.
1. Expectation from doubt.
   Certainty is the expectation of the agreement or disapprovement of our ideas. Locke.
2. Exemption from failure; as the certainty of an event, or of a remedy.
   That which is real and fixed.
   Doubtful things fall, often hurts more Than to be sure they do; for certainties Or past remedies, or timely knowing.
   The remedy then born, Shakespeare.
   Regularity; settled state.
   Certes, Sir Knight, you’ve been too much to blame. Shakespeare.
   Thus for to blot the honour of the dead.
   And wish for posterity his carens be.
   Whole living hands immemorial’d his name. Specif.
   For these, there are of the island, Shakespeare.
   Ceres, our authors are to blame. Hudson.
   CERTIFICATE, n. f. [certificat, low Lat. he certifies.]
1. A writing made in any court, to give notice to another court of any thing done therein. Cowell.
2. Any testimony.
   A certificate of poverty is as good as a protection.
   I can bring certificates I have myself obtained before company. Addition.
   To CERTIFY, v. a. [certifier, Fr.]
1. To give certain information of.
   The English ambassadors returned out of Flanders from Maximilian, and certified the king that he was not to hope for any aid from him. Bacon.
   This is designed to certify those things that are confirmed of God’s favour. Hammond’s Fandam.
   It has of before the thing told, after the person told; a, I certify you of the fact. CERTIORARI, m. f. [Lat.] A writ issuing out of the chancery, to call up the record of a cause, to shew a thing to be true, that justice may be made; upon complaint made by bill, that the party, who seeks the said writ, hath received hard dealing in the said court. Cowell.
   CERTITUDE. n. f. [certitude, Lat.] Certainty; freedom from doubt; insufficiency of proof.
   They thought at first they dream’d: for twas With them, to certain ceritude of fate. Dryden.
   There can be no majesty and mines in the certitude we have of things, whether by mathematick demonstration, or any other way of conference. Grew’s Cyclopedia.
   CERTIVCAL. adj. [certivelis, Lat.] Belonging to the neck.
   The aorta, bending a little upwards, boils forth the cerebellum and auxiliary arteries; the reff, turning downward again, forms the descending currents. Grew.
   CERTULAN. adj. [cervulan, Lat.] Blue.
   CERTULOUS. adj. Sky-coloured.
   It afforded a solution with now and then a light touch of sky colour, but nothing near to high altitude tint of silver. Bight.
   From thee the sapphire fold ether takes, Its hue cerulian. Thomson’s Summer.
   CERTULICICK. adj. [from cerulian.] Having the power to produce a blue colour.
   The several species of rava, as the rubick, cerulials, and others, are separated one from another. Grew.
   CERTUMEN. n. f. [Lat.] The wax or excrement of the ear.
   CERUSE, n. f. [cerula, Lat.] White lead.
   A preparation of lead with vinegar, which is of a white colour, whence many other things, resembling it in that particular, are by chemists called ceruse or the ceruleum of antiquity, and the like. Quincy.
   CERUSEAN. adj. [from Cerur.]
The Cesarian section is cutting a child out of the womb, either dead or alive, when it cannot otherwise be delivered. Which circumstance, it is said, gave the name of Cesar to the Roman family so called. Quincy.
   CESS. n. f. [probably corrupted from cerese; see CENSE; though imagined by Junius to be derived from santifere, to seize.]
1. A levy made upon the inhabitants of a place, rated according to their property.
   The like effe is also charged upon the country sometimes for victorious the soldiers, when they lie in garison. Specif.
2. The act of laying rates.
3. [from cefse, Fr.] It seems to have been used by Shakespeare for bounds or limits, though it stand for rate, reckoning.
   I pray thee, Tom, best Cuttie’s saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrong in the withers out of all effe. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
To CESS. v. a. [from the noun.] To rate; to lay charge on.
   We are to consider how much hard there is in all Utters, that according to the quantity thereof, we may off the said rents, and allowance ensuing thereto. Specif.
To CESS. v. n. To allow a legal duty. See CESSOR.

CESSATION. n. f. [cessatio; Lat.]
1. A stop; a rest.
   The day was yearly observed for a festival, by cessation from labour, and by returning to church.
   True piety, without cessation off. By theories, the practick part is lost. Denon.
2. Vacation; suspension.
   There had been a mighty confusion of things, an intermixture and perturbation of the ordinary courses, and a cessation and suspension of the laws of nature. Woodward’s Natural History.
   The rising of a parliament is a kind of cessation from politics. Addison’s Provocator.
3. End of action; the state of ceasing to act.
   The ferment, which is mixed with an alkali, being poured out to that which is mixed with an acid, r afteth an effervescence; at the cessation of which, the falk, in which the acid was compleat, will be regenerated. Archibutt on Aliments.
4. A pause of hospitality, without peace.
   When the success of the poor protestants in Ireland were diverted, I was intent to get them some refresh, by a cessation. GESSAVIT.
1. To warm with rubbing.
   They laid him upon some of their garments,
   And fell to rub and chafe him till they brought Him to recover both breath, the fervour
   And warmth of his body, and to such Extremity, as the overseers of the Hospital recommended.

2. To heat by rage or hurry.
   Let me see the face of the wind with winds,
   Rage like an angry boat chafed with sweat.
   Shak.

3. To perfume.
   Little more than snow
   New fall’n from heav’n, with violet’s mix’d,
   From the earth’s bosom, and the dew of Heaven.
   Shak. (from ceda, cedum, Lat.)

1. Retreat; the act of giving way.

2. Resignation; the act of yielding up or quitting another.

3. Condemnatory. (from cedum.) As a cedum bankrupt, one who has deliver ed up all his effects.

4. Covenant; an agreement or tax.

5. Censor. (from cede.) The person who is to examine the works of an artist.

7. Caut. (from cede.) A note in the scale of magic.

8. Chaste, (from cede, whales, Lat.) Of the whale kind.

9. Cetaceous. (from cede, Lat.) Such fishes as have lungs or respiration are not without the seaweed, as whales and cetaceous anim als.

10. Cau. (from cede, Lat.) He has created various of these cetaceous fishes,

11. Faul. To chafe the person.

13. Caut. I am, the ground of all accord,

14. Cadv. To chafe the person.

15. Cac. To chafe the person.

17. CH as, in words purely English, or fully naturalized, the sound of sfe; a peculiar pronunciation, which is hard to de scribe in words. In some words derived from the French, it has the sound of \( \beta \), as chaff; and in some derived from the Greek, the sound of \( \alpha \), as chebbic.

18. Cade, In the Commentaries of Shakspier.

19. Cade, A sort of fish.

20. Chafe-wax, An officer belonging to the lord chancellor, which the wax for the feeling of writes.

22. Chaff. (from scap; Sax. kof, Dutch.)

23. Chafe the husks of corn; the kernels of the fruit of Chaff.

24. To chafe wax, To.

25. To chafe iron, To.

26. To chear, (French.)

27. To chafe wax, To.

28. Chaf. Wax, To.

29. Chaffy, adj. (from chaff.) Like chaff; full of chaff; light.

30. To chaffe, To.

31. Chaffedisch, (from chaff and dis.) A vessel to make any thing hot in;
   a portable grate for coals.

32. Chaffweed, (from magisterium, Lat.) An herb, the same with euedove.

33. Chaffly, To.

34. To chaff, To.

35. To chaff, To.

36. To chaff, To.

37. To chaff, To.

38. To chaff, To.

39. To chaff, To.

40. To chaff, To.

41. To chaff, To.
A moveable seat.

A vessel made for Cæsar, but for Titus too.

And which more blest? who canst watch it, country, far.

To be held up, to be kept in slavery.

To unite, to be with.

A pump used in large English wells, which is double, so that one can draw water from the other. It yields a great quantity of water, works easily, and is easily managed; but takes up a great deal of room, and makes a disagreeable noise.

The admiral fixing the mouth of the haven caisled, and the caisles full of ordnance, and strongly manned, durst not attempt to enter.

The monarch was abroad, the people, friend.

This world, its state, was made for Cæsar, but for Titus too.

And he who could not feel, to lose a day.

To keep by chair.

The admiral fixing the mouth of the haven caisled, and the caisles full of ordnance, and strongly manned, durst not attempt to enter.

A carriage of pleasure drawn by one horse.

Instead of the chair he might have said the caisle of government; for a caisle is driven by the person that sits in it.

An engraver in brass.

Engrossing in brasses.

A dry English measure.

Thirty-six bushels heaped up, according to the sealed buttel kept at Guildhall, London. The caislers should weigh two thousand pounds.

All the church at that time did not think em-CHAP.

Were the grasped person of our Banquo present, Whom I may rather challenge for unkindness.

Shaks. sc. 4. [In law.] To object to the impartiality of any one. [See the noun.]

Though only made, yet twenty-four to be returned, to supply the defects or want of appearance of those that are challenged off, or make default. Hale.

5. Challenge as due.

This divine order, whereby the pre-enunciator of chiefest acceptation is by the best things, twitly challenged. Hock.

Which of you, shall we fay, doth love us most? The most of my beauties may extend Where nature doth with merit challenge. Shaks.

And so much duty as my mother bid'd To you, preferring you before her father;

So much I challenge, that I may profit Due to the Moor, my lord. Shaks.

Had you not been their father, these white flowers Did challenge pity of them. Shaks.

So when a tyrer plucks the buckler's blood, A famph'd lion, lifting from the wood, Roars loudly fierce, and challenges the food. Dryd.

Hath thou yet drawn over young John's head That still would recommend thee more to Caesar, And challenge better terms. Addis.

6. To call any one to the performance of conditions.

I will now challenge you of your promise, to produce certain rules at the principles of your

Punam in Drawing. Chal. n. s. [From the verb.]

1. A summons to combat.

I never in my life Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly. Shaks.

2. A demand of something as due.

Taking for his youngings casks,

Left greedy eyes to them might challenge lay. Bly.

But by our elder did their flowered mark. Shaks.

There must be no challenge of swiftness, or dis- countenancing of frequent. Collar of Friends.

3. [In law.] An exception either against persons or things; persons, as in alio to the jurors, or any one or more of them, by the prisoner at the bar. Challenge made to the jurors, is either made to the array, or to the polls: challenge made to the array, is when the whole number is excused again, or partially empanelled; challenge to or by the poll, is when some one or more are excepted against, as not indifferent: challenge to the jurors is divided into challenge principal, and challenge for cause: challenge principal is that which the law allows without cause alleged, or farther examination; as a prisoner at the bar, arraigned upon felony, may peremptorily challenge to the number of twenty, one after another, of the jury empanelled upon him, alleging cause.

Challenger. n. s. [From challenge.]

1. One that defies or lurnions another to combat.

Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler? No, fair princess; he is the general challenger. Shaks.

Death was denounc'd; He took the furnace, void of fear, And unconcern'd call his eyes around, As to find and dare the direful challenger. Dryd.

2. One that claims superiority.

Stood challenge on mount of all the age, For her perfection. Shaks.

3. A claimant; one that requires something as of right.

Earnest challengers there are of trial, by some publick disputations. Hak.

Chalybeate. adj. [from chalybe, Lat. steal.] Impregnated with iron or steel; having the qualities of steel.

The eye sought to frighten the folio, allnościing lights and wine, and itself of chalybeate waters. Arb. in Diet. Chal. n. f. [French.] The beat of the drum which declares a surrenders.

Several French battalions made a show of resistance; but, upon advancing to fill up a little officer, in order to attack them, they beat the cham- bers, and sent us chartes blanches. Addis.

CHAMBER, n. s. [chamber, Fr. camero, Lat. camerum, Welsh.] 1. An apartment in a house; generally used for those appropriated to lodging.

Did them come forth, and hear me, Or at their chamber door I beat the drum, Till it cry, Sleep to death.

When we have mask'd with blood these sleepy.

Of his own chamber. Shaks.

A natural cave in a rock may have something not much unlike to parlours or chambers. Benj.

2. Any retiring place.

The dark caves of death; and chambers of the grave. Prior.

3. Any cavity or hollow.

Petit has, from an examination of the figure of the eye, argued against the possibility of a film's existence in the posterior chamber. Sharp.

In the Imperial chamber this vulgar answer is not admitted, wise. I do not believe it, as the matter is compounds and alleged. Addis.

5. Lower part of a gun where the charge is lodged.

6. A species of great gun.

Names given them, as cannons, demi-cannons, chambers, arquebuses, muskets, etc.

Cook's Remarks.

7. The cavity where the powder is lodged in a mine.

To chamber, v. n. [From the noun.]

1. To be wonton; to intrigue.

Let us walk homely as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and beastly.

Romans.

2. To reside as in the chamber.

The best blood chamber'd in his bosom. Shak.

CHAMBERER, n. s. [From chamber.] A man of intrigue.

I have not the least parts of conversation, That chamberies have.

CHAMBERFELLOW, n. s. [From chamber and fellow.] One that lies in the same chamber.

It is my fortune to have a chamber-fellow, with whom I agree very well in many finner's.

Spieg.

CHAMBERLAIN, n. s. [From chamber.] 1. Lord great chamberlain of England is the sixth officer of the crown; a conderful part of his function is at a co- coronation; to him belongs the provi- sion of every thing in the house of lords; he difposes of the word of hate; under him are the gentleman usher of the black rod, his black rod, and his door- keepers. To this office the duke of Ancaster makes an hereditary claim.

Cham.

2. Lord chamberlain of the household has the oversight of all officers belonging to the king's chambers, except the pre- ceident of the bedchamber.

Cham.

Humbly complaining in her dity, Got my lord chamberlain his liberty. Shak.

He was made lord chamberlain, though a full of chambers might be put into the hands of his brother.

Clarend.

A patriot is a fool in every age.

When all lords chamberlains allow the flags. Pipe.

A servant who has the care of the chambers.

Thinks'th thou

That the blank air, thy bolsterous chamberlain,

Will put thy shirt on warm? Shak.

Here be the chambers and the chambers and the chambers.

We will with wine and waffel convince. Shaks.

He serv'd at first <Elmilia's chamberlain. Dryd.

Fables, 57.

4. A receiver of rents and revenues; as, chamberlain of the exchequer, of Chelsea, of the city of London.

Cham.

CHAMBERLAINSHIP, n. s. [From chamber- lain.] The office of a chamberlain.

Cham.

CHAMBERMAID, n. s. [From chamber and maid.] A maid whose business is to dress a lady, and wait in her chamber.

Men will not hit.

The chambermaid was named Ciss. Ben Jon.

Some course country wench, almost decay'd, Trudge to barrow the chambermaid. Pip.

When he doubted whether a word were intel- ligible or no, he used to confound one of his lady's chambermaids. Swift.

Swift.

He was ever presumptuous to entend the girls with the common spotties prativified by cham- bermaids among us, they are publicly whipped. Swift.

To chamber, v. a. [From chamber. See Came.

To vary; to variegate.

Some have the veins more varied and chamber- bladed; as oak, whereof walnut is footed. Bacon's Natural History.

Cham.

CHAMBERLAIN OF A FORGE. The joint or bending of the upper part of the hinder leg. Dariér's Drist.

Cham.

CHAMBERLEON, n. s. [seigneur.] The chamberlain has four feet, and on each foot three claws. Its tail is long; with this, as well as with its feet, it travels swiftly to the branches of trees. Its tail is flexible, and as the sun is in its position, it changes its colour, from its being in the sun, to its being in the shade, it becomes bluish; though some are yellow, and others green, and both of a taller kind. When it is in the sun, it becomes bluish, the teal changes into a darker grey, inclining to a dun colour; and its parts, which have left of the light upon them, are changed into spots of different colours. The skin of the light doth not shine upon it, is like cloth mixed with many colours. Sometimes, when it is handled, it seems speckled with dark spots, inclining to a shin, and it appears to be of a violet colour; and sometimes, if it be wrapped up in linen, it is white; but it changes colour only in some parts of the body.

Cham.

A chamberlain is a creature about the bigness of an ordinary lizard; his head unportionably big, and his eyes great; he moves his head without writhing of his neck, which is inflexible, as a hog doth; his back crooked, his skin spotted with little
At the chemist, which is known
To have no colours of his own,
But borrows from his neighbour's blue,
His white or black, his green or blue.

To Chamfer. u. a. [chamber, Fr.] To channel; to make furrows or gutters upon a blue.

Chamfer. n. f. [from Chamfer.] A small furrow or gutter on a column.

Chamlet, n. f. [See Camlet.] Stuff mingled originally of camel's hair.

To make a chamlet, draw five lines, wavy over-theway, if your diaper consist of a double fine.

Chamois, n. f. [chamet, Fr.] An animal of the goat kind, whose skin is made into soft leather, called among us chamoit.

There are the beards which you shall eat: the ox, the sheep, and wild ox, and the chamois.

Chamomile. n. f. [χομημίλη.] An odoriferous plant.

Chamomile flowers.

To Champ. u. a. [champyer, Fr.]

1. To bite with a frequent action of the teeth.

Coffee and opium are taken down, tobacco but in fumes, and betel is but champed in the mouth with a little time.

The said rep't'd not, overcome with rage; he, like a proud staid relin'd, went haughty on, champ'ing his iron sail. Bacon's Paradox Left.

At his command.

The roots caparison'd with purple flame, and champ'd betwixt their teeth the foaming gold.

Dryden.

2. To devour, with violent action of the teeth.

A tobacco pipe happened to break in my mouth, and the piece left such a delicious roughness on my tongue, that I champ'd up the remaining part.

To Champ. n. n. To perform frequently the action of biting.

Muttering and champ'ing, as though his cud had troubled him, he gave occasion to Mussaforis to come and see me. Sidney.

They began to repeat of that they had done; in a most admirable and irefulsy champ upon the bit they had taken into their mouths.

Henry.

Champignon. n. f. [champignon, Fr.] A flat open country.

In the shaws of the customs, meseems, you have a fair champage laid open to you, in which you may at large stretch out your discourse.

Spenser's Shepheard's Calendar.

Of all these bounds, with shadowy forests and with champages yield'd, We make this lady.

Shakespeare.

If two angel-discreet princes have their triumph meeting on an open champage, the more mighty will continually seek occasion to extend his limits unto the farther border thereof. Raleigh.

Sir John Norris maintained a retreat with divers disfarray, by the space of some miles, part of the way champage, unto the city of Gaunt, with left tods of men than the enemy.

Bacon.

For if two dice two pieces flow'd, Th'o' one wounding, th'o' other straight, and left between Fat champage, with left rivers interven'd. Milton.

Champetery. n. f. [from champetry. In law.] Such a move, or cause, or cause, or cause to them to be moved, either by their own or others procurement, and pursue, at their proper costs, to have part of the land in contest, or part of the gains.

Cowell.

Champignons, n. f. [champignon, Fr.] A kind of mushroom.

He went with dreadful mushrooms treats; Secure for you, himself champignons eats. Dryden.

It has the resemblance of a large champignon before it is opened, branching out into a large round Woodrow.

Champion. n. f. [champion, Fr. campio, low Lat.] 1. A man who undertakes a cause in single combat.

In many armies, the matter should be tried by duel between two champions. Bacon.

For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce, Strive here for matter, and to battle bring. Their embryo arms. Milton's Paraphrase Left.

Light of Tolipens, and support of Troy. Triumph and success to thy country's joy! Dryden.

At length the severe admirals appear. The two bold champions of each country's right. Dryden.

2. A hero; a stout warrior; one bold in contest.

A stout champion never handled sword. Shak.

He fights with dreadful mushrooms treats, and they applau'd themselves as real champions for truth, when indeed they are contending for error. Locke.

3. In law.

In our common law, champign is taken no less for him that strieth the combat in his own cafe, than for him that fighteth in the case of another. Cowell.

To Champion. u. a. [from the noun.]

To challenge to the combat.

The seed of Bambou kings! Rather than so, come, Fate, into the list, And champign me to that utterance. Shakespeare.

CHANCE. n. f. [chance, Fr.]

1. Fortune; the cause of fortuitous events. As the unthought accident is guilty
Of what we wildly do, so we provoke Ourselves to be the flames of chance, and fires Of every wind that blows. Shakespeare.

The only man, of all that chance could bring To meet my arms, was worth the conquering. Dryden.

Chance is but a mere name, and really nothing in itself; a conception of our minds, and only a commodious way of speaking; whereby we would express, that such effects as are commonly attributed to chance, were verily produced by their true and proper causes, but without their design to produce them.

Benting.

Fortune: the act of fortune; what fortune may bring; applied to persons.

Those things are commonly not observed, but left to take their chance. Bacon's Essays.

2. Accident; casual occurrence; fortuitous event.

To say a thing is a chance or a casualty, as it relates to sound causes, is not profane, but a great truth; as signifying no more, than that there are some events besides the knowledge and power of second agents. South.

The beauty I beheld has struck me dead. Unknowingly the strikes and kills by chance; Poison is in her eyes, and death in every glance. Dryden.

All nature is but art, unknown to thee; All chance direction, which thou canst not see. Pope.

4. Event; success; luck: applied to things.

Now we'll together, and the chance of good news Be like our warrant quiret! Shakespeare.

5. Misfortune; an case of accident.

You were us'd To say extremity was the trier of spirits, That common chances common men could bear. Shakespeare.

6. Possibility of any occurrence.

A chance, but chance may lead, where I may meet Some wand'ring spirit of heav'n, by fountain side, Or in thick shade retir'd. Milton's Para. Left.

Then your ladyship might have a chance to escape this address. Swift.

CHANCE. adj. [It is seldom used but in composition.] Happening by chance.

Now should they part, malicious tongues would lay, That they met like chance companions on the way. Dryden.

I would not take the gift, Which, like a toy drop't from the hands of fortune, Lay for the next chance come. Dryden.

To Chance. u. n. [from the noun.] To happen; to fall out; to fortune.

Think what a chance thou couldst on; but think why, Thou hast this misters fill; Shakespeare.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? Shakespeare.

Ay, Caica, tell us what hath chance do to-day, That Caesar looks so full of spirit, full of heare; Shakespeare.

He chance'ed upon divers of the Turks virtuallers, whom he easily took. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks. I chose the faster fate, and chance'd to find A river's mouth impetuous to the wind. Pope's Odyssey.

CHANCEFUL. adj. [chance and full.] Hazardous. Out of use.

Myself would offer you t' accompany In this advent'rous chanceful progress. Spenser.

CHANCE-MEDLEY. n. f. [from chance and medley.] In law.

The casual slaughter of a man, not altogether without the fault of the slayer, when ignorance or negligence is joined with the chance; as if a man met by an highway-side, by which he usually travel, and call'd down a bough, not giving warning to take heed thereof, by which bough one falling by is slain: in this case he offends, because he thought not, or warn'd not, that the party might have taken heed to himself. Cowell.

If such an one should have the ill hap, at any time, to strike a man dead with an instant slaying, it ought to be a matter of regret and confusion, to be judged but a chance-medley. Swift.

CHANCEABLE. adj. [from chance.] Accidental.

The trial thereof was cut off by the chanceable coming thither of the king of Persia. Sidney.

CHANCE.
CHANCELLOR, n. s. [from cancelli, Lat. lattices, with which the window was enclosed.] The eastern part of the church, in which the altar is placed.

Whether it be allowable or no, that the minister should sit here in the chancellor.

The church is a square building, raised on a single stone of four feet in thickness, and an hundred and fourteen in circumference.

CHANCELLOR, n. f. [cancellarius, Lat. chancellor.] A cancellarius, or master of the chancellery, is a person who receives the documents and mandates of the chapter and assembles the knights, keeps the register of their deliberations, and delivers their acts under the seal of the chapter. Chambers, Chancellorship, n. f. The office of chancellor.

The chancellor of the Order of the Garter, and other military orders, is an officer who seals the commissions and mandates of the chapter and assizes of the knights, keeps the register of their deliberations, and delivers their acts under the seal of the chapter. Chambers.

To alter; to make other than it was. Thou shalt not meet me thus.

Nor change my countenance for this service. A housewife is not to have her head and life changed.

Whatsoever is brought upon thee, take cheerfully, and be patient when thou art changed to a low estate.

For the elements were changed in themselves by a kind of harmony; like as in a pleyfing notes, they change the name of the tune, and yet are always sounds.

To mend the disposition or mind. I would the verse be in heaven, so she could intreat some poet to chang this curious Jew.

To discount a larger piece of money into several smaller. A shopkeeper might be able to change a guinea, or a mora, when a customer comes for a crown's worth of goods.

To change a city, or to change band, is to turn or bear the horse's head from one hand to the other.; from the left to the right, or from the right to the left.

To change. v. n. 1. To undergo change; to suffer alteration; as, his fortune may soon change, though he is now so secure.

One Julia, that his changéd thought forgot, Would better fit his chamber. Shakespeare.

2. To change, as the moon; to begin a new monthly revolution. I am weary of this moon; would he change. Shakespeare.

To change. n. f. [from the verb.] 1. An alteration of the face of any thing.

Since I saw you last, there is a change upon you. Shakespeare.

2. A succession of one thing in the place of another. What wonder changes of a fatal scene, Still bringng to the lust, and life, and death! Dryden.

Nothing can cure this part of ill-breeding and change and variety of companies, and that of positions above us. Locke.

Empire by various turns shall rise and fall; while thy abandoned tribes shall only know a different matter, and a change of time. Prior.

How time destroys this base and low superiority, and his alternate situations fall and rise! While, at each change, the sun of Lyth in Jove now burns with glory, and then melts with love. Pope.

3. The time of the moon in which it begins a new monthly revolution.

To take fees or rents, and for some of them immediately after the change, and others of the same kind immediately after the full. gala. Natural History.

4. Novelty; a state different from the former. The hearts of all his people shall revolt from him, and kill the lips of unapproachable change. Shake.

Our fathers did, for change, to France repair; and they, for change, will try our English air. Dryden.

5. In ringing.] An alteration of the order in which a set of bells is sounded. Four bells admit twenty-four; in ringing, and five bells one hundred and twenty.

Shakespear's Elements of Speech.

6. That which makes a variety; that which may be used for another of the same kind.

Pp
Changeable, adj. [from changeable.]

1. Subject to change; fickle; inconstant.

A steady mind will admit steady methods and counsels; there is no measure to be taken of a changeable humour.

If I am merry, I must be changeable; and sometimes the gravel of us all are so, even upon ridiculous accidents.

Dryden.

Changeableness, n. s. [from changeable.]

1. Inconstancy; fickleness.

At length he betrothed himself to one worthy to be changed by, and yet to find the changeable might excite a unworthy a changeableness.

Sidney.

There is no temper of mind more unmannerly than that changeableness, with which we are too juicily branded by all our neighbours.

Addison's Freeholder.

2. Susceptibility of change.

If how long they are to continue in force, be no where expressed, then have we no light to direct our judgment concerning the changeableness or immutability of them, but considering the nature and quality of such laws.

Hacket.

Changeably, adv. [from changeable.]

Inconstantly.

Changefulness, adj. [from changeable and full.]

Full changes; inconstant; uncertain; mutable; subject to variation; fickle.

Unfound plots, and changeful orders, are daily devised for her good, yet never effectually procured.

Spenser.

Britain, changeful as a child at play.

Now calls in princes, and now turns away. Pope.

Changing, n. s. [from change: the word arises from an old superstitious opinion, that the fairies steal away children, and put others that are ugly and stupid in their places.]

1. A child left or taken in the place of another.

And her base elfin breed there for thee left:

Such men do changelings call, so chang'd by fairies theft.

Spenser's Fairy Queen.

She, as her attendant, bath of a lovely boy full'm from an Indian king;

She never had so sweet a changeling. Shakespeare.

2. An idiot; a fool; a natural.

Changing's and fools of heav'n, and these that

Wildly we roam in discontent about.

Dryden.

Would any one be a changeling, because he is left determined by wife confinements than a wife more.

Leigh.

3. One apt to change; a waverer.

Of fickle changelings and poor discontent,

Suck'd with the noise of birds revolving loud. Milton.

Chant, n. s. [from chant.] A finger; a songster.

You curious changers of the wood,

Jove's ethereal lays, refulgent fire,

The changers foul and raptur'd song inspire.

In the channel of song-spun song-spun,

That gape and rub the elbow at the news

Of nutty-harmony. Shakespeare.

Wasnot long

Before from world to world they knew;

As they had turned from the stars.

And as they changels I'd, they died. Hudibras.

4. Any thing changed and put in the place of another: in ludicrous speech.

I folded the wit up in form of the other.

Subscribed it, gave the impression, 'tis falsify'd.

The changeling. Shakespeare.

Changer, n. s. [from change:] One that is employed in changing or dis-counting money; money-changer.

Ch'Annel, n. s. [canal, Fr. canalis, Lat.]

1. The hollow bed of running waters.

It is not safe, now that things are grown into an habit, and have their certain couts, to change the channel, and turn their streams another way.

Spenser's State of Ireland.

Draw them to Tyber's bank, and weep your tears

Into the channel, till the lowest channel

Do kiss the most exalted fountains of all. Shakespeare.

So 'tis injur'd, which from her wonted course,

To gain some access to twice did force;

If the new banks, neglected once, decay,

No longer will from her old channel play. Waller.

Had not the said frits been dislocated, some of them either dropped, or else would have been slain or too change or channel to give reception to the water of the sea.

Woodward.

The tops of mountains and hills will be contin-ually washed down by the rains, and the channels of rivers abated by the streams.

Bentley.

2. Any cavity drawn longways.

Complaint and hot defires, the lover's bell,

And folding tears, that wore a channel where they flow'd. Dryden.

Chanticleer, n. s. [from chant.] A woman finger.

Sweet bird, that dunn'd the noise of folly,

Malicious, mock melancholy.

There, chanteef of the woods among,

I woo to hear thy even-song. Milton.

Chantry, n. s. [from chant.]

Chantry is a church or chapel endowed with lands and other yearly income, for the maintenance of one or more preists, daily to sing mass for the souls of the donors, and such others as they appoint.

Cowper.

Now go with me, and with this holy morn,

Into the chantry by;

And, underneath that consecrated roof,

Plew me the full assurance of your faith. Spenser.

Chaos, n. s. [chaos, Lat. y^aio]

1. A state of matter opposed to be in confusion before it was divided by the creation into its proper classes and elements.

The whole universe would have been a confused chaos, without beauty or order.

Bentley.

2. Confusion; irregular mixture.

We shall have nothing but darkness and a chaos within, whatever order and light there be in things without us.

Locke.

Please 3 with a work, where nothing's just or fit,

One glaring chaos and wild heap of wit. Pope.

Chantick, adj. [from chant.] Refembling chaos; confused.

When the terraqueous globe was in a chantick state, and the earthy particles subfusili, then those several beds were, in all probability, equalized in the earth.

Derham.

To Chap. v. a. [chapen, Dutch, to cut.]

This word seems originally the same with cepha, nor were they probably dis-tinguished at first, otherwise than by accident; but they have now a meaning something different, though referable to the same original sene.) To break into biatus, or gaping.

It weakened more and more the arch of the earth, drying it immoderately, and chapping it in foody places.

Burnet.

Then would unbalance'd best licentious reign,

Crack the dry hills, and chop the ruffian plain,

Blackmore, Chap.
CHA

CHAP. n. f. [from the verb.] A cleft; an aperture; an opening; a gaping; a chink.

What moisture the heat of the summer ejects out of the earth makes to spring up in the rains of the next winter; and such clefts are filled in, are filled up again.

Burnet's Theory.

CHAP. n. f. [This is not often used, except by anatomists, in the singular.] The upper or under part of a bird's mouth. He sends a grinding sound, and part he spits, and part be ground.

Dryden.

The lower cleft in the male skeleton is an inch broader than in the female. Grew's Magna.

CHAPEL. n. f. [chapse, Fr.]

1. The catch of any thing by which it is held in its place; as, the hook of a scabbard by which it flicks in the belt; the point by which a buckle is held to the back strap.

This is Monsieur Paradis, that had the whole theory of the war in the knot of his fear, and the practice in the cleft of his dagger. Shakespeare.

2. A bras or silver tip or cafe, that strengthens the end of the scabbard of a sword. "Philippis's World of Words.

CHAPEL. n. f. [capella, Lat.]

A chapel is of two forts: either adjoining to a church at the foot of the same, which men of worth build; or else separate from the mother church, where the parish is wide, and is commonly called a chapel of ease, because it is built for the use of one or more parishioners, that dwell too far from the church, and is served by some inferior curate, provided for as the charge of the rector, or of such as have benefited by it, as the composition or curate. Couwell.

She went in among those few trees, so closed in the tops together, as they might seem a little chapel.

Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel? Shakespeare.

Where truthenthethis church, he helps errour to rear up a chapel hard by. "Hume.

A chapel will I build with large endowments, Dryden.

A free chapel such is as founded by the King of England. "Airport's Parergon.

CHAPELERY. n. f. from chapel.

Wanting a chapel.

An old pulpy sword, with a broken hilt, and chaplet, with two broken points. Shakespeare.

A chapel of the church is usually said to be that which does not afhail of itself, but is built and finite within one other church, and is independent thereupon. "Airport's Parergon.

The jurisdiction or bounds of a chapel. "Chaperson.

A kind of hood or cap worn by the knights of the garter in their habit. I will omit the honourable habiliments, as robes of state, parliamentary robes, chapelers, and caps of state. Camden.

CHAPELAR. n. f. [from chap and Jair.] Having the mouth threnk.

A chapelar beare baldly hanging by the cloven helmet. Dryden.

CHAPITRE. n. f. [chapiteau, Fr.]

The upper part or capital of a pillar. He overshot their chapiteaux and their fillets with the pinnacles. "Fielding.

CHRISTIAN. n. f. [capellanus, Latin.]

1. He that performeth divine service in a chapel, and attends the king, or other person, for the instruction of him and his family, to read prayers, and preach. "Cowell.

CHAP. n. f. [chapse, Fr.]

Willing me to permit
John de la Court, my chaplain, a choice hour,
To bear from him a matter of some moment. Shakespeare.

Chaplain, away! thy pridish room favers thy life. Shakespeare.

2. One that officiates in domestic worship.

A chief governor can never lose of some worth.
Less illustre chaplain, fond of a title and disgrace.

"Swift.

CHAPLAINSHIP. n. f. [from chaplain.]

1. The office or business of a chaplain.

2. The possession or revenue of a chapel.

CHAPLESS. adj. [from chap.] Without any flesh about the mouth.

Now chaplains, and knocked about the muzzard with a secon's staff. Shakespeare.

Shut me nightly in a chamber-house, With recky thanks and yellow chaplins bones. Shakespeare.

CHAPLET. n. f. [chaplet, Fr.]

1. A garland or wreath to be worn about the head.

Upon old Hyems chin, and icy crown,
An old friends of sweet fonner's mуд.
It, as in mockery, etc. "Shakespeare.

I strongly think to know,
Whether thy ROBY chaplets were,
Those that their mistress score did bear,
Or those that were us'd kindly. "Shakspere.

All the quire was grace,
With chaplets green, upon their foreheads plac'd.
Dryden.

The winding ivy chaplet to invade,
And folded form, that your fair forehead shad. Dryden.

They made an humble chaplet for the king. Swift.

2. A string of beads used in the Romish church for keeping an account of the number rehearsed of paternosters and ave-maries. A different sort of chaplets is also used by the Mahometans.

3. In architecture. A little moulding carved into round beads, pearls, or elives.

4. In horsemanship. A kind of firrup leathers mounted each of them with a firrup, and joining at top in a sort of leather buckle, which is called the head of the chaplets, by which they are fastened to the pommel of a saddle, after they have been adjusted to the length and bearing of the rider. "Farrar's Diff.

A chapman; one that offers as a purstacher.
Fair Diodame, you do as chapman do.
Disolate, for he that you intend to buy, Shak.
Yet have they from the mask, and bought 'em too,
And understand 'em as most chapman do. "Ben Jonson.

There was a collection of certain rare manuscripts, exquisitely written in Arabic; these were upon safe to the Jesuits at Antwerp, liquored chaplets of such worth. "Wharton.

He directed two, and carried them to Samson, as the likeliest place for a chaplet. "L'Estrange.
Their chaplets they betray;
Their chops are deep; the buyer is their prey. "Dryden.

CHAPS. n. f. [from chap.]

1. The mouth of a beack of prey.

So on the downs we see
A hassen'd hare from greedly greyhound go,
And pull all his chaplets to fox. "Sidney.

Open your mouth; you cannot tell who is your friend; open your chaplets again. Shakespeare.
1. A mark; a stamp; a representation.
2. A letter, figure, in writing or printing.
3. The hand or manner of writing.
4. A representation of any man as to his personal qualities.
5. An account of anything as good or bad.
6. The person with his semblance of qualities; a personage.
7. Personal qualities; public constitution of the mind.
8. Essential qualities impressed by a rod or office.
9. To characterize; to engrave. It seems to have had the accent formerly on the second syllable.
10. To charge, to tax with. It has with before the thing entrusted.

CHARACTER. n. s. [character, Lat. \textit{characteris}.

1. A mark; a stamp; a representation.
2. A letter, figure, in writing or printing.
3. The hand or manner of writing.
4. A representation of any man as to his personal qualities.
5. An account of anything as good or bad.
6. The person with his semblance of qualities; a personage.
7. Personal qualities; public constitution of the mind.
8. Essential qualities impressed by a rod or office.
9. To characterize; to engrave. It seems to have had the accent formerly on the second syllable.
10. To charge, to tax with. It has with before the thing entrusted.

CHARACTERISTIC. adj. [from \textit{characteristic}]. That which constitutes the character, or marks the peculiar proprieties of the thing.

CHARACTERISTICAL. n. s. [from \textit{characteristic}]. The quality of being peculiar to a character; marking a character.

CHARACTERISTIC of a Logarithm. The name with the index or exponent.

1. To give a character or an account of the personal qualities of any man. It is some commendation that we have avoided publicly to characterize any person, without long experience.
2. To engrave, or imprint. They might be called anticipations, premonitions, or sentiments characterized and engraved in the soul, born with it, and growing up with it.
3. To mark with a particular stamp or token. There are faces not only individuals, but gentile, religious, and national; European, Asiatic, African, and Grecian faces characterized.
5. Characterary. n. s. [from \textit{character}]. Impression; mark; distinction; accentuated anciently on the second syllable.
6. Fairies and flowers for their characterly. Skelmersdale.
7. All my engagements I will confine to thee, All the character of my fool bounds. Skelmersdale.
8. Skel. coal. n. s. [imagined by Skinner to be derived from \textit{char}, business; but, by Mr. Lye, from \textit{to char}, to burn.] Coal made by burning wood under turf.
9. It is used in preparing metals.
10. Scecal. leaf longer than charcoal; and charcoal of roots, being coaled into great pieces, leaf longer than ordinary charcoal. Bacon's \textit{Rat. Hist.}
11. Love is a fire that burns and sparkles in men as naturally as in charcoal, which foamy chymists flit in holes, when out of wood they extract coal. Hudibras.
12. Is there who, lock'd from ink and paper, Crowns with the tea! round his dark'en'd walls! Pipe.

CHAR. n. s. [char, French].
1. Charbs of artichokes, are the leaves of fair artichoke plants, tied and wrapped up all over but the top, in tallow, during the autumn and winter; this makes them grow white, and lose some of their bitterness.
2. Charbs of beet, are plants of white beet, transplanted, producing great tops, which, in the midst, have a large, white, thick, downy, and cotton-like main shoot, which is the true charb. Mortimer.

To CHARGE, v. a. [charger, fr. carre, Ital. from carrus, Lat.]
1. To enthrall; to commission for a certain purpose: it has with before the thing entrusted.
2. To impute as a debt: with on before the debtor.
3. To impute: or before the person to whom anything is imputed.
4. He has so great an encourager of commerce, that he charged himself with all the sea full of rich vessels as carried corn to Rome in winter.
5. To impeach as a fact: it has with before the thing imposed.
6. The ploughman's plow, the baker's sweet, is to be counted into the bread we eat; the plough, mill, oven, or any other utensils, must all be charged on the account of labour.
7. To accuse: it has with before the crime.
8. To challenge.
9. The priest shall charge her by an oath. Numbers.
10. To a charge, by a name.
11. To charge with, and receive the fight.
12. To burden, to load.
13. Here's the smell of blood still; all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh! What a sight is there! This heart is sorely charged. Shakespeare.
14. When often urged, unwilling to be prest, Your country calls you from your low retreat, And to that formless, charge'd with cares, which none more trusts, and none can better bear. Shakespeare.
15. A fault in the ordinary method of education, in the charging of children's memories with rules and precepts.
16. The brief with weighty crimes was charge'd.
17. On which the pledge much enlarg'd.
12. To cover with something adventurous. It is pity the obliques in Rome had not been charged with several parts of the Egyptian histories, instead of hieroglyphics. Addison in Italy.

13. To fix, as for flight. Obsolete. He rode up and down, gallantly mounted, and charged and discharged his lance. Knolles's History of the Turks.

14. To load a gun with powder and bullets. To charge, w. n. To make an onset. Like your heroes of antiquity, he charges in iron, and seems to despise all ornament but intrinsic merit. Granville.

CHARGE. n. [from the verb.]

1. Care; custody; trust to defend. A hard division, when the harmless sheep Must leave their lambs to hungry wolves in charge. Fairfax.

He required many things, as well concerning the princes which had the charge of the city, whether they were in hope to defend the same.

2. Precept; mandate; command. Saul might even lawfully have offered to God those referred spoils, had not the Lord, in that particular case, given special charge to the contrary. Hooker.

It is not for nothing, that St. Paul giveth charge to beware of philosophy; that is to say, such knowledge as mens entendoms obtain unto. Hooker.

One of the Turks laid down letters upon a stone, saying, that in them was contained that they had in charge.

Caesar's History of the Turks.

The leaders having charge from you to them, Will not go off until they hear you speak. Shakspere.

He, who requires
From us no other service than to keep
This one, this safe charge, of all the tree
In Paradise, that bear delicious fruit
So various, not to taste but only see.
Of knowledge, planted by the tree of life. Milton.

3. Commission; trust conferred; off. If large possessions, pompous titles, honorable charges, and profitable commissions, could have made this proud man happy, there would have been nothing wanting. L'Estrange.

Go forth the master of thy herd to see;
True to his charge, a loyal swain and kind. Pope.

4. It had anciently sometimes over before the thing committed to trust.

5. He is of the subject of command or trust.

Hast thou eaten of the tree,
Wherefore gave thee charge, thou shouldst not eat? Milton.

6. It has upon before the person charged.

He loves God with all his heart, that is, with that degree of love, which is the highest point of our duty, and of God's charge upon us. Taylor's Rule of Living Italy.

7. Acculation; imputation. We need not lay new matter to his charge:
Beating your officers, or giving yourselves. Shakspere.

These very men are continually reproaching the clergy, and laying to their charge the pride, the luxury, the ignorance, and superfluities of popish times.

8. The person or thing entrusted to the care or management of another. Why hast thou, Satan, broke the bounds prepared
For thy transgression, and disturb'd the charge
Of others? Milton's Paradise Lost.

More had he said, but, fearful of her flay,
This, that, what would move his charge away
To some fresh pature. Shakspere.

Our guardian angel saw them where they lye
Upon the palace of our dwelling king;
He spy's, abandoning his charge to fate. Dryden.

9. An exhortation to a judge to a jury, or bishop to his clergy. The bishop has recommended this author in his charge to the clergy. Dryden.

10. Expanse; cost. Bang long since made weary with the huge charge which you have laid upon us, and with the strong endurance of so many complaints.

Their charge was always born by the queen, and duly paid out of the exchequer. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.

11. It is, in later times, commonly used in the plural, charges. A man ought wisely to begin charges, which, once begun, will continue. Bacon's Essays.

We're put yourself to charges, to complain
Of wrong which heretofore you did suffer. Dryden.

The last pope was at considerable charges to make a little kind of harbour in this place. Addison in Italy.

12. Onset. And giving a charge upon their enemies, like lions, they flew eleven thousand footmen, and fifteen hundred horsemen, and put all the others to flight. Machiavel.

Honorable retirements are no ways inferior to brave charges; as having less of fortune, more of discipline, and as much of valour. Bacon's War with Spain.

13. The signal to fall upon enemies. Our author forms to find a charge, and begins like the clangour of a trumpet. Dryden.

14. The posture of a weapon fitted for the attack or combat. Their neighing swarming of the spur,
Their armed states in charge, their beavers drawn. Shakspere.

16. What any thing can bear. Take charge of my brother charge over Jerusalem; for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many. Nebuchadnezzar.

17. The quantity of powder and ball put into a gun. Among harriers.

18. Charge is a prevarication, or a sort of oment of the confidence of a thick deception, which is applied to the shoulder-splints, inflammations, and sprains of horses.

A charge is of a middle nature, between an ornament and a plaster, or between a plaster and a cast-applin. Ferriis's Dist.

19. In heraldry. The charge is that which is born upon the colours, except it be a coat divided only by partition. Pedrach.

CHARGEABLE. adj. [from charge.]

1. Expensive; costly. Diverse bulwarks were demolished upon the face, in peace chargeable, and little to be expedient in war. Hayward.

Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought, but wrought with labour and travel night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you. 2 Thessal. 3.

There was another accident of the same nature on the Sicilian coast, much more plausible, but less chargeable for it cost nothing but wit. Wotton.

Considering the chargeable methods of their education, their numerous labours, and small income, it is next to a miracle, that so many of their children should have.

Atterbury.

2. Imputable, as a debt or crime: with on. Nothing can be a reasonable ground of defending a man, but some fault or other chargeable upon him. Spenser.

Subject to charge or accusation; accountable: followed by with.

Your papers would be chargeable with something worse than indelicacy; they would be immoral. Shakspere.

CHARGEABLENESS. n. f. [from chargeable.]

Expanse; cost; collinences.

That which most detests me from such trials, is not their chargeableness, but their unsatisfactory, or, though they should succeed. Dryden.

CHARGEABLY. adv. [from chargeable.]

Expensively; at great cost.

He procured it not with his money, but by his wit; not chargeably bought by him, but liberally given by others by his means. Shakspere.

CHARGEFUL. adj. [charge and full.] Expensive; costly. Not in use.

Here's the note.

How much your chain weighs to the utmost cast.

The fineness of the gold, the chargeful charm. Shakspere.

CHARGER. n. f. [from charge.] A large dish.

All the tributes land and sea afforded, He'd in great charges, load oursumptuous boards.

This golden charger, snatch'd from burning Troy, Anchises did in sacrifice employ. Dryden's Annals.

In Limb himself, at the most solemn feast, Might have some chargers not excelled by his. Dryden.

Nor dare they close their eyes,
Void of a bulky charger near their lips,
Whose which, in often interrupted feast,
Their thirsty bowls compel to irrigate.

Their dry-fare'd tongues. Phillips.

CHARLY. adv. [from charge.] Warily; frugally.

What paper do you take up to certify 't? Shakspere.

CHARGING (by n. f. [from charge.]) Caution; nicety; scrupulosity.

I will confess to act any villain against him, that may not fully the charitableness of his honesty. Shakspere.

CHARIOT. n. f. [car-rod, Welsh, a wheeled car, for it is known the Britons fought in such; chariots, Fr. carretas, L. currus.]

1. A wheel carriage of pleasure, or state; a vehicle for men rather than wares.

Thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, And garland on thy head. Shakspere.

2. A car in which men of arms were anciantly placed.

He skims the liquid plains.

High on his chariots, and with loose'd reins Majestic roves along. Dryden's Annals.

3. A lighter kind of coach, with only front wheels.

To his chariots, w. a. [from the noun.] To convey in a chariot. This word is rarely used.

An angel all in flames ascended,
As in a fiery column chariosting.

His godlike preference. Milton's Samson Agonistes.

CHARIOTER. n. f. [from chariot.] He that drives the chariot. It is used only in speaking of military chariots, and those in the ancient public games.

The guiding charioteer beneath the wheel Of his two cars. Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel.

The burning chariots, and the charioteers, In bright Boites and his wars appear.
Show us the youthful handsome character, Firm in his feat, and running his career.

5. Alms; relief given to the poor.
We must incline to the king; I will look for him, and privily relieve him; go you and begin a talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived.

CHARLTON. n.f. [charlatan, rhetor]. A sport anciently used, where chariots were driven for the prize, as now horSES run.

Benevolently; without malignity. Nothing will more enable us to bear our cries patiently, injuries charitably, and the labour of religion comfortably.

Taylor.

CHARITY, n.f. [charity, Fr. charitats, Lat.] 1. Tenderness; kindness; love. By thy grace, founded in reason, loyalty, and pure, Relations deans, and all the charities Of fathers, sons, and brothers, first were known.

Milton. 2. Goodwill; benevolence; disposition to think well of others. Mine hopes, I hope, are only those of charity to mankind; and such as my own charity can cause me to commit, that of others may more easily execute.

Dryden. 3. The theological virtue of universal love. Concerning charity, the first object whereof is that incomprehensible beauty which shineth in the countenance of Christ, the Son of the living God.

Buck. Peace, peace, for thame, if not for charity. — Urge neither charity nor thame to me: Uncharitably with me you have dealt. Shakespeare.

Deeds to thy knowledge answerable; add faith, Add virtue, patience, temperance; add love, By name to come call'd mercy, the soul Of the heavens.

Milton. Faith believes the revelations of God; hope expects his promises; charity loves his excellencies and mercies.

But baffling charity's more ample sway, nor bound by time, nor subject to decay, In happy triumph shall for ever live. — Prior.

Charity, or a love of God, which works by a love of our neighbour, is greater than faith or hope.

Humphrey.

Charles, n.f. (from charme.) 1. To doxify with charms against evil.

CHARLEMED. adj. Enchanted. Arcadia was the charmed circle, where all his friends for ever should be happy, and his age.

Sidney.

The charm you undrewd, was only to obtain; But when the charm is ended, The charm you disdain'd.

Dryden.

2. Words of endearment among lovers.

CHARMED, adj. Of true virgin here distreight.

Milton.

3. That handkerchief That Did in Egyptian to my mother give; She was a charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people.

Shakespeare.

The passion you pretended, was only to obtain; But when the charm is ended, The charm you disdain'd.

Dryden.

4. The power of pleasing.

SHANNER, adj. [charme, Fr.] Containing rest, or caracals. Such are those thick and plummy tallow damps, oft found in charmed vaults, and Egypt vaults, and fitting by a new grave.

Milton.

5. To charm you by my once commend'd beauty, By all your rows of love, and that great voice Which did incorporate and make us one.

Shakespeare.

To subdue by some secret power; to amaze; to overpower.

ET, in mine own was charmed.

Could not find death, where she did hear him speak; Nor feel him where he struck.

Shakespeare.

Makest the secret grief can charm.

Shakespeare.

6. To subdue the mind by pleasure.

Tis from your graces That from my musick confidence to my tongue

Charm this report out.

Shakespeare.

Admit me, my lovely face, Tell me where thy strengths do lie: Where the power that charms us so, In thy foul, or in thy eye?

Waller.

Charmed by accepting, by submitting fiery.

Chloe thus the foul charm'd,

Waller.

Aw'd without fiends, and without beauty charm'd.

Waller.
Astronomical instruments, geographical charts, and compassey.

Chart, n. f. [charta, Latin.]

1. A chart is a written evidence of things done between man and man. Charts are divided into charts of the king, and charts of private persons. Charts of the king are those, whereby the king pledges any grant to any person or persons, or to any body politic: as a chart of exemption, that no man shall be encompassed upon a jury; chart of pardon, whereby a man is forgiven a felony, or other offence. Cowell.

2. Any writing bestowing privileges or rights.

If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter, and your city's freedom. Shak.

It is not to be wondered, that the great charter whereby God bestowed the whole earth upon Adam, and confirmed it unto the sons of Noah, being as brief in word as large in effect, hath bred much guard of interpretation. Raleigh's Effays.

Here was that charter feel'd, wherein the crown and person of arbitrary power lays down. Dowsam.

She talks the rubbish from her mounting bow, And seems to have new'd her charter's date, Which hasn't will to the death of time allow. Dryden.

God renewed this charter of man's sovereignty over the creatures. Swift.

3. Privilege; immunity; exemption.

The must have liberty, Withal as large a charter as the wind, To blow on whom I please: for so fools have, And they that are most gallyd with my folly, They must most laugh. Shakespeare.

My mother, Who has a charter to extoll her blood, When she do prate me, grieves me. Shokesp.

Charter-party, n. f. [charter partes, Fr.] A paper relating to a contract, of which each party has a copy. Charter-parties, or contrats, made even upon the highest and most important transactions, are not in their own nature maritime, belonging not to the admiral's jurisdiction. Hall.

Charter-bred, adj. [from charter.] Indulged with privileges by charter; privileged.

When he speaks
The air, a charter'd liberty, is still. Shakesp.

Char'y, adj. [from care.] Careful; cautious, wary.

Over his kindred he held a wary and careful care, which bountifully was expressed, when occasion so required. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

The charter'd mail is prudish enough, If the unwieldy beauty to the moon. Shakesp.

To Chase. n. v. a. [chaff'er, Fr.]

1. To hunt.

It shall be as the chaff'd tree. Job.

Mine enemies chaffed me like a bird. Lamentations.

2. To pursue as an enemy.

And Abimelech chaff'd him, and he fled before him. Judges.

One of you shall chaff a thousand. Deutonomy.

3. To drive away.

He that chaff'd away his mother, is a son that causeth shame. Proverbs.

4. To follow as a thing desirable.

5. To drive.

Thus chaff'd by their brother's endless malice from prince to prince, and from place to place, they, for their safety, fled at last to the city of Berosus. Knol's History of the Turks.

In the following year had chaff'd away.

The flying stars, and light return'd the day. Dryd.

Chase Metals. See To Enchase.

Chase, n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Hunting; as, the pleasures of the chase.

2. Pursuit of any thing as game.

Whilst he was half-hunting in the chase, it seems, Of this fair couple, methinks he on the way. The father of this fair female. Shakespeare.

There is no chase more pleasant, methinks, than to drive a thought, by a good conduct, from one end of the world to another, and never to lose light of it till it fall into the furthest abyss. Burtens 'Labour of the Earth.'

3. Fitsne to be hunted; appropriation to chase or sport.

Concerning the beasts of chase, whereof the buck is the fable, he is called the third year a fawn. Shak.

A maid I am, and of thy virgin train! Oh! let me still that spotless name retain, Frequent the forests, thy chase I will obey, And only make the beasts of chase my prey. Dryd.

4. Pursuit of an enemy, or of something noxious.

The admiral, with such swift only as could sudden be put in readines, made forth with them, and such as came daily in, we set upon them, and gave them chase. Bacon.

He fell'd out upon them with certain troops of horsemen, with fouls violence, that he overthrew them, and, having them in chase, did force execution. Knol's History of the Turks.

They feck that joy, which us to glad Expanded on the hero's face, When with his fumes fprentt'd the front, And William led the glorious chase. Prior.

5. Pursuit of something as desirable.

Yet this mad chase of fame, by few purs'd,
Has drawn destruction on the multitude. Dryd.'s Journal.

6. The game hunted.

She, seeing the covering of her purs'd chase, went circling about, rigging so with the less fanes of rigging. Sidney.

Hold, Warwick! I feck thee out from other chase. For I myself will put this deer to death. Shak.

Honour's the noblest chase; purs't that game, All comprehends the love of fame. Cowl.

7. Open ground covered with fresh beasts as are hunted.

A receptacle for deer and game, of a middle nature between a forest and a park; being commonly less than a full forest, but covered with so many liberties; and yet of a larger compass, and flor'd with greater diversity of game, than a park. A chase differs from a forest in this, that it may be in the lands of a subjueck, which a forest, in its proper nature; cannot: and from a park, in that it is not enclosed, and hath not only a larger compass, and more variety of game, but likewise more keeps and over-seers. Cowell.

He and his lady both are at the lodge.

Upon the north side of this pleasant chase. Shak.

8. The Chase of a gun, is the whole bore or length of a piece, taken within the Chamber.

Chase-gun, n. f. [from chase and gun.]

Guns in the forpart of the ship, fired upon those that are purs'd.

Mean time the Belgians tack upon our rear, And raking chase-gun through our stern they lend. Dryd.

Chaser, n. f. [from chase.]

1. Hunter; pursuer; driver.

Then began
A hop 't h'sh' chase, a retire; anon
A rout, confusion thick.

So full he drove, that his reviewing eye
Has left the chasers, and his ear the cry. Drydsh.

Strech't on the lawn, his second hope survey,
At once the chasers, and at once the prey.

But, before long, running at the deadly haig,
Bled in the forest like a wound'd hart! Pedge.

2. An enchaser.

Chasm, n. f. [Greek.]

1. A breach, uncleas'd; a cleft; a gap; an opening.

In all that visible corporeal world, we see no chasms or gaps. Locke.

The father of this orb communicates with that of the ocean, by means of certain hiatuses or chasms paling betwixt it and the bottom of the ocean. Woodrow.

The ground adult her riv'n mouth dilates, Horrible chasm! profound. Phillips.

2. A place unfilled; a vacancy.

Some lazy age, left in exile, Not having leave to remember; and Such, whose sense capability but makes In forests chasms, in equinoxes miscarriages. Dryden.

Chasselas, n. f. [French.] A sort of grape.

Chaste, adj. [chaste, Fr., chastus, Lat.]

1. Pure from all commerce of sexes; as, a chaste virgin.

Diana chaste, and Hebe fair. Prior.

2. With respect to language, pure; uncorrupted; not mixed with barbarous phrases.

Free from obscurity.

Among words which signify the same principal ideas, some are clean and decent, others unclean; some chaste, others obscene. Wotton's Logics.

3. To the marriage bed.

Love your children; be different, chaste, keepers at home. Titus.

Chaste-tree, n. f. [citetas, Lat.]

This tree will grow to be eight or ten feet high, and produce flowers at the extreme of every branch in autumn. Miller.

To Chasteen, n. v. a. [chastify, Fr. chastifie, Lat.]

To correct; to punish; to mortify.

Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not the soul spare for his crying. Prov. 19.

I follow thee, Calv'guide the path
Thou leaft'd me; and to the hand of heav'n submit, However chas'ter'd.

Chasteen's. n. n. a. [cakes, Lat. ant.] anciently ascended on the first syllable, now on the last.

1. To punish; to correct by punishment; to afflict for faults.

My breath I'll burst with draining of my courage, But I will chastify this high-minded trumpeter. Shakespeare.

I am glad to see the vanity or eny of the cunning chemists thus discovered and chaff't. Bayley.

Seldom is the world affrighted or chaff't with figns or prodigies, earthquakes or inundations, famines or plagues. Greco's Cynecologia Sacra.

Like you, commission'd to chaff's and blefs,
He must averse the world, and give it peace. Prior.

2. To reduce to order, or obedience; to repress; to refrain; to awe.

The water of the little St. Bithem.

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear, And chaff's, with the valour of my tongue, All that impedes thee. Shakespeare.

Know, Sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court, Nor once be chaff't with the sober eye Of dull Othello. Shakespeare.

The gay social feast
By decency chast'd.

Chastenement, n. f. [chasten, Fr.]

Correction; punishment; commonly, though
CHA
through not always, used of domestic or parental punishment.

20. To give the ingredients of our cullions. Shakespeare.
CHEAP, adj. [cepan, Sax. hoopen, Dutch, to buy.

1. To be had at a low rate; purchased for a small price.
When there are a great many sellers to a few buyers, the thing to be sold will be cheap.
2. To be sold at a low price;

To such a shop as that's in trade, which will bid the best for goods with a small purchase.

To give a notion of the trade, what the market is, and what the market is like, as to price.

To account for the price, and what the price is, and what the price is like, as to quality.

To account for the quality, and what the quality is, and what the quality is like, as to sale.

To account for the sale, and what the sale is, and what the sale is like, as to custom.

To account for the custom, and what the custom is, and what the custom is like, as to use.

To account for the use, and what the use is, and what the use is like, as to fashion.

To account for the fashion, and what the fashion is, and what the fashion is like, as to time.

To account for the time, and what the time is, and what the time is like, as to weather.

To account for the weather, and what the weather is, and what the weather is like, as to season.

To account for the season, and what the season is, and what the season is like, as to year.

To account for the year, and what the year is, and what the year is like, as to cause.

To account for the cause, and what the cause is, and what the cause is like, as to reason.

To account for the reason, and what the reason is, and what the reason is like, as to effect.

To account for the effect, and what the effect is, and what the effect is like, as to consequence.

To account for the consequence, and what the consequence is, and what the consequence is like, as to result.

To account for the result, and what the result is, and what the result is like, as to purpose.

To account for the purpose, and what the purpose is, and what the purpose is like, as to design.

To account for the design, and what the design is, and what the design is like, as to object.

To account for the object, and what the object is, and what the object is like, as to effectual.

To account for the effectual, and what the effectual is, and what the effectual is like, as to operation.

To account for the operation, and what the operation is, and what the operation is like, as to performance.

To account for the performance, and what the performance is, and what the performance is like, as to deed.

To account for the deed, and what the deed is, and what the deed is like, as to act.

To account for the act, and what the act is, and what the act is like, as to action.

To account for the action, and what the action is, and what the action is like, as to practice.

To account for the practice, and what the practice is, and what the practice is like, as to performance.

To account for the performance, and what the performance is, and what the performance is like, as to act.

To account for the act, and what the act is, and what the act is like, as to action.

To account for the action, and what the action is, and what the action is like, as to practice.

To account for the practice, and what the practice is, and what the practice is like, as to performance.
To Drider.

I [from here]

The presence of publick good is a cheat that will ever pass, though abused by ill men, that I wonder the good do not grow ashamed to use it.

Empirick politicians use deceits, Hide what they give, and cure by but a cheat.

When I consider life, 'tis a cheat. You fool'd with hope, men fiev the deceit: Trust on, and think to-morrow will repay; To-morrow's fals than the former day; Eyes words; and while it says we shall be blest With some new joy, cuts off what we polled.

A person of fraud. Dissimulation can be no further useful than it is conceal'd; for as much as no man will trust a known cheat.

Like that notorious cheat, val's forms I give, Only that you may keep me while I live. Dryden.

One that practises fraud. I will be chatter to them both, and they shall be exchequors to me. [It is here for exchequer.] Shakespeare.

They say this town is full of conjurers, As nimble jugglers that deceive the eye; Difficult cheats, prating mountebanks; And many such like libertines of fin. Shakespeare. He is no swaggerer, holier; a tame cheat I faith;—Cheater, call you him? I will no honest man my house, nor no cheats. Shakespeare.

All forts of ingenious persons, the craftiegrous, the delimiters of tithes, cheaters of men's inhereitances, falfe written and authenticated.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

To CHEEK [v. a. [from the French echeter, check; from whence we use, at that game, the term checkmate, when we flow our adversary from carrying on his play any farther.]

1. To repres; or, to curb. Refer thy state; with better judgment check this from them rais'd. Dares may be transpired, they may be spread and multiplied, they may be check'd and lade down.

I hate when vice can bolt her arguments, And virtue has no tongue to check her pride. Milton.

He who fat at a table, richly and deliciously furnished, but with a frown hanging over his head by one single gleam or hair, surely had enough to check his appetite. Swift.

2. To reprose; or, to chide. Richard, with his eye brimful of tears, Then check'd, and rapt by Northumberland. Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy. Shakespeare.

His fault is much, and the good king his master. Will check him for it. Shakespeare.

3. To compare a bank note, or other bill, with the correspondent paper. To control by a counter-reckoning. To CHECK. v. n.

1. To flop; to make a flop; with at. With what should I give a check at it? Shaks. He must observe their moods on whom he justice, The quality of the persons, and the time; And, like the hangman, check or every feather. That enters before his eye. Shakespeare.

The mind, once jaded by an attempt above its power, either is disabled for the future, or else checks at any vigorous undertaking ever after. Locke.

2. To clath; or, to interfere. If love check with budness, it troubleth man's fortunes. Bacon.

3. To strike with reprefion. I'll avoid his presence; It checks too strong upon me. Dryden.

CHECK. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Reprefion; flop; rebuff; sudden reftraint. Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway, Meeting the check of such another day. Shaks. We fee, all, that kings that have been fortune conquerors in but half their years, must have some check or arrest in their fortune. Bacon's Essays.

God hath of late years manifested himself in a very dreadful manner, as if it were upon purpose to give a check to this infernal impatience. Til耶fier.

It was this viceroy's zeal, which gave a remarkable check to the first progress of Christianity. Addison's Freiholder.

God put it into the heart of one of our princes, to give a check to that facrilege which had been but too much winked at. Atterbury.

The great struggle with passions is in the first check. Gregory.

2. Refrain; curb; govern; continued reftraint. They who come to maintain their own breach of faith, the checks of their confciences much breaketh their spirit. Haywood.

The impiety of the new officer's nature needed some refrain and check, for some time, to his immediate pretences and appetite of power. Clarendon.

Some free from rhyme or reason, rule or check, Break Prifian's head, and Pegasus's neck. Pope.

While fuch men are in truth, who have no check from within, nor any views but towards their inward Swiffs.

3. A reprofe; a flight. Oh! this life Is nobler than attending for a check. Shakespeare.

However this may gallop with him some checks, Cannot with safety call him. Shakespeare.

4. A dislike; a sudden inferrection; something that stops the progress. Say I should wear, not my wife subject to check; and is it strange? perhaps revolt! Dryden.

5. In falconry, when a hawk forfakes her proper game to follow rooks, pies, or other birds that crofs her flight.

A young woman is a hawk upon her wings; and if she be fondsome, she is the more subject to go out on check. Suckling.

When whiffed from the bill. The fome falcon flippes where he thought he'd flip; And with her eagerness, the querry mild'd, Straight flies at cocker, and clips it down the wind. Dryden.

6. The perfon checking; the caufe of restraint; a flop.

He was unhappily too much ufed as a check upon the lord Coventry. Clarendon.

A fatically poet is the check of the laymen on bad preltes. Dryden's Fabler, Preface.

7. Any flop or interruption. The letters have the natural production by several checks or stops, or, as they usually call them, articulations of the breath or voice.

Holder's Elements of Speech.

8. The correspondent ciphers of a bankbill.

9. A term used in the game of che-ecs, when one party obliges the other either to move another piece, or not to play.

10. Clerk of the Check, in the king's household, has the check and controlment of the yeomen of the guard, and all the others belonging to the royal family.

11. Clerk of the Check, in the king's navy at Plymouth, is also the name of an officer invested with like powers.

Chambers.

To CHECKER. v. n. [from echeter, check; To CHECKER. Fr.] To variagate or diversify, in the manner of a chessboard, with alternate colours, or with darker and brighter parts.

The grey-eyed man mingles on the frowning meeting, Cheker'd the easter clouds with flickeys of light. Shakespeare.

The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind, And make a checker'd shadow on the ground. Shakespeare.

As the feakes, rolled in the flowry banks, With shinning checker'd drough, don't fling a child; That for the beauty thinks it excellent. Shakespeare.

The wealthy syring yet never bore That sweet nor dainty flowers.

That damask'd not the checker'd floor Of Cynthia's former power. Dryden.

Many a youth and many a maid Dancing in the checker'd stable. Milton.

In the chess-board, the use of each chief-man is determined only within that chequer'd piece of wood. Locke.

In our present condition, which is a middle flate, our minds are, as it were, chequered with truth and falfehood. Addison.

The ocean intermixing with the land, so as to check her into earth and water. Pope.

Chamber's Natural History.

Here waving groves a checker'd scene displays, And part admit, and part exclude the day. Pope.

CHECKER. n. f. Work varied al Checkery-work. n. f. ternately as to its colours or materials.

Note that word and the wreaths of chain-work for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars. Johnson.

CHECKER, n. f. [echet mat, Fr.] The movement on the chess-board that kills the opposite men, or hinders them from moving.

Love they him coll'd, that gave me the checkmate, But better might they have beho'de him hate. Spoon. Checkroll. n. f. [from check and roll.] A roll or book, containing the names of such as are attendants on, and in pay to, great perfonages, as their household ser- vants. It is otherwise called the checkroll. Cotton.

Not daring to extend this law farther than to the king's servants in checkroll, left it should have been too bar'd to the gentlemen of the kingdom. Bacon's Henry VIII.

CHEEK. v. [case, Saxon.]

1. The face; if the face below the eye. And now and then an ample tear trill'd down Her delicate cheek. Shakespeare.

Her beauty hang upon the cheek of night. Like a rich jewel in Athelstane's ear. Shakespeare.
CHE

CHE, n. s. [from cheek and bone.]
I cut the tauters, and felt the flags: it lay partly under the os jugale, or cheekbone. Wm. Pennan.

CHEEKTOOTH, n. s. [from cheek and tooth.]
The hinder-tooth or tusk.

CHEER, n. s. [cheer, Fr. entertainment; cara, Sp. the countenance. It seems to have, in English, some relation to both these senses.]
1. Entertainment; provisions served at a feast.
   But though my cares be mean, take them in good part.
   Better that you may love, but not with better heart. Shakespeare.
   His will was never determined to any pursuit of good cheer, polished sauces, and delicious wines. Locke.

2. Invitation to gaiety.
   You do not give the cheer; the feast is fold
   That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis making, 'Tis given with welcome. Shakespeare.

3. Gaiety; jollity.
   I have not that
   Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have. Shak.

Air of the countenance.
   Right faithful true he was in deed and word,
   But of his cheer did fome too solemn fad:
   Nothing did he dread, but ever was y'dread. Spencer.
   Which publick dechef, rescued each from such a cheer,
   As not a figh, a look, a drink bewrayed.
   The leaf felt tooch of a degenerate fear,
   Gave life to envy, to his covered praife. Dryd.
   He ended; and his words their deceafing cheer
   Enlight'ned'd, and their laffing'd hope reviv'd; Milton.

At length appear
   Her gentle brethren stretch'd upon the bier;
   Pale at the sudden fighs, the chang'd her face. Dryden.

5. Perhaps temper of mind in general;
   for we read of heavy cheer.
   Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some mect.
   Aet.

To CHEER, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To incite; to encourage; to infpirit.
   He complained that he was betrayed; yet, for all that, was nothing discouraged, but cheered up the footmen. Knolles.
   He cheerd the dogs to follow her who fled,
   And vow'd revenge on her devoted head. Dryden's Fable.

2. To comfort; to console.
   I died, ere I could loud thee aid;
   But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd. Shakespeare.
   Displeas'd at what, not suffering, they had fecn,
   They went to cheer the fducation of the green. Dryd.

3. To gladden.
   Heart! I' a glad note the lonesy defect cheer;
   Prepare the way: a god, a god appears! Pope's Merif.
   The fac'd face, above the waters rais'd,
   Thou'rt heav'n's eternal brazen portals blest;
   And wide the carn'd flame of his burning ray, Pope.

To CHEER, v. n. To grow gay or gladlone.
At fight of thee my gloomy soul cheers out and up;
My hopes revive, and gladness dawns within me. A. Philips.

CHEERER, n. s. [from Tender.] Gladnemer, giver of gaiety.

CHEESE, n. s. [from chees.]
A kind of food made by preling the curd of coagulated milk, and suffering the mass to dry.

CHEESECAKE, n. s. [from cheese and cake.]
A cake made of soft curds, sugar, and butter.

CHEESEMONGER, n. s. [from cheese and monger.]
One who deals in cheese.

CHEESE-EVAT, n. s. [from cheese and eat.]
The wooden caihe in which the curds are confined when they are preflled into cheese.

CHEESY, adj. [from cheese.] Having the nature or form of cheese.
Acids mixed with them precipitate a phosphorus chalyke matter, but not a cheese substance. Accounts on Aliments.

CHEERY, n. s. [cheer, Lat.] The claw of a shellfish.
It happeneth often, I confefs, that a lobster hath the cheery, or great claw, of one side longer than the other. Brown.

CHEMISTRY. See CHEMISTRY.
CHEQUER. See CHECKER.
To CHE'RISH. v. a. [cherish, Fr.] To support and forward with encouragement, help, and protection; to foster; to nurse up.

Whensoever Buckingham doth turn his hate
Upon your grace, and not with dutheous love
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
With hate in thee where I expect most love. Shak.
I would I were thy bird.
Sweet, far would I.
But I should kill thee with too much cherishing. Shakespeare.

What doth cherub weeps but gentle air? Shakespeare.
Magistrates do possess the thoughts more concerned to cherish religion, and to maintain in the minds of men the belief of a God and another life.

Tell old good Saturn, which doth all devour,
Doth cherish her, and still augment her might. Dryd.
He that knowingly commisses an ill, has the up-braslings of his own conscience; those who act by error, has its cherishinges and encouragements to animate them.

Decay of Piety.

CHE'RIJHER, n. s. [from cerry.] An encourager; a supporter.
One of their greech preachers it is to he the maiitainers and cherishers of a regular devotion, a reverend worship, a true and decent piety. Spouts.

CHE'RISHMENT, n. s. [from cerry.] Encouragement; support; comfort. It is now obsolete.

The one lives her age's ornament,
That with rich bounty, and dear cherishing,
Supports the praise of noble poeole.

CHERRY.

CHERRY-TREE, n. a. [cerry.]
The species are, 1. The common red or garden cherry. 2. Large Spanish cherry. 3. The red heart cherry. 4. The white heart cherry. 5. The bleeding
CHE.

ing heart cherry. 6. The black heart cherry. 7. The May cherry. 8. The black cherry, or maizard. 9. The black cherry, or mahogany cherry. 10. The wild cherry. 11. The Eladiers cherry. 12. The carriern cherry. 13. The large black cherry. 14. The bird cherry. 15. The red bird or Cornish cherry. 16. The largest double flowered cherry. 17. The common wild cherry. 18. The wild northern English cherry, with late ripe fruit. 20. The thistle or scarlet cherry. 21. The cherry-tree with slipped leaves. And to a mixture, two double flowers of cherry.

Cherry. v. n. [cherry]. Among the various names for this fruit, that of cherry is the most generally used. MIrander.

To CHERRY. v. n. [from cherry; perhaps from cherry up, corrupted to cherry.] To chiep; to use a cheerful voice.

The bird Frame to thy song their cheerful chieping! Or hold their peace for shame of thy sweet lay.

Cheeseman. n. f. A species of Wild Service.

Cheese-board. n. f. [from cheese and board.] The board or table on which the game of chess is played. And cards are dealt, and chess-boards brought, To ease the strain upon the brain.

Cheeseman. n. f. [from cheese and man.] A puppet for chefs.

A company of chefs-men站着 on the same squares of the chess-board where we left them, We say they are all in the same place, or unmove'd.

Cheese-player. n. f. [from chefs and player.] A gamester at chefs.

Thus, like a skilful chefs-player, he draws out his men, and makes his pawns of use to his greatest power.

Cheesom. n. f. Mellow earth.

The tender chefs-man and mellow earth is the best, Being more mould, between the two extremes of clay and sand; especially if they be not by any means binding. Bacon's Natural History.

Chest. n. f. [cypr. Sax. cyfht. Lat.] 1. A box of wood, or other materials, in which things are laid up. He will seek there, on my word; neither prent, chefs, trunks, wall, vast, but he hath an abode for the remembrance of each place. Shakespeare. But mine have been by avarice oppress'd, And heaps of money crowded in the chefs. Dryden.

2. A CHEST of Drawers. A cafe with moveable boxes or drawers.

3. The trunk of the body, or cavity from the shoulders to the belly. Such as have round faces, or broad chefs, or shoulders, have seldom or never long necks.

He describes another by the largeness of his chefs, and breadth of his shoulders.

Pope's Notes on the Hind. To CHEST, v. n. [from the noun.] To repose in a chest; to hoard.

CHEST-FOUNDERING. n. f. A disease in horses. It comes next to a pleurisy, or peripneumony, in a human body.

Earle's Dictionary.

CHESTED. adj. [from chest.] Having a chest; as, broad-chested, narrow-chested.

Chester. See CASTOR.

Cheesnut. n. f. [cheesnay, Fr.] A chestnut. Cofftesin, Lat.

1. The tree hath kastkins, which are placed at remote distances from the fruit, on the same tree. The outer cost of the fruit is very rough, and has two or three nuts included in each husk or covering. This tree was formerly in greater plenty, as may be proved by the old buildings in London, which were, for the most part, of this timber; which is equal in value to the oak bark, and, for many purposes, far exceeds it; particularly for making vessels for liquors; it having a property, when once thoroughly fearton, to maintain its bulk constantly, and is not subject to shrink or swell, like other timber.

2. The fruit of the chestnut tree. A woman's tongue, That gives not half so great a blow to the ear, As will a chestnut in a farmer's rind.

Shakespeare. Dobson has a fable of furies, machines, and cheats, and fruits that ripen at the latter time.

Practam on Drawing.

3. The name of a brown colour.

This hair is of a good colour.

An excellent colour, your chocolate was ever the only colour.

Shakespeare.

Merab's long hair was gloriously chestnut brown.

Cheston. n. f. A species of plum.

Chesterfield. n. f. [chevalier, Fr.] A knight; a gallant strong man.

Renowned Talbot does expect my aid; And I am bowd by a traitor villain, And cannot help the noble chevalier. Shakespeare.

CHIEF AUX DE PRIVE. n. f. [Fr. Theingular Cheval de Frise is seldom used.] The Frieian horse, which is a piece of timber, larger or smaller, and traversed with wooden spikes, pointed with iron, five or six feet long; used in defending a passage, hopping a breach, or making a retrenchment to flop the cavalry. It is also called a turpique, or touriquet.

Chambers.

Cheven. n. f. [chevare, Fr.] A river, the same with chub.

Cheveril. n. f. [cheverau, Fr.] A kid, kid-sheater, Obsoleto.

A sentence is but a chevare gloze to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward.

Shakespeare.

Which gives the capacity.

Of your soft chevare confidence would receive, If you might please to stretch it. Shakespeare.

Q. Here's a slide of chevare, that stretches from one inch narrower to an inch wide.

Shakespeare.

Chevisance. n. f. [chevisaunce, Fr.] Enterprise; achievement. A word now not in use.

Fortune, the foe of famous chevisance. Schelmen, said Guyon, yields to virtue aids. Spranger.

Cheveryon. n. f. [French] One of the honourable ordinaries in heraldry. It represents two tenths of a house, set up as they ought to stand.

Harriss. To CHEW. w. a. [seepyan, Sax. hauen, Dutch. It is very frequently pronounced chew, and perhaps properly.]

Q. 1. To...
1. To grind with the teeth; to masticate. — If little faults, proceeding on dissipation, shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eyes when capital crimes, cheat'd, swallow'd, and disposed of? Appear before us? Shakespeare.

2. To meditate; or ruminate in the thoughts. — While the fierce monk does at his trial fland, He chews revenge, abjuring his offences. — Condemn his precepts and murder in his hand, He'll give his judge, to prove his innocence. Prior.

3. To take without swallowing. — Heaven's in my mouth, As chides and doth its name. Shakespeare. Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested; that is, some books are to be read only in parts; others to be read, but not curiously; and some few to be read wholly, with attention. Bacon.

To CHEW. v. n. To champ upon; to ruminate. — I will with patience hear, and find a time; Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this. Shakespeare. Be not the life of disdained, and then leave the multitude to chide upon 't. I. F. Orange. Old politicians chew on wisdom past, And blunder on in business to the last. Pope.

CHICANE. n. f. [ebbant, Fr. derived by Menage from the Spanish word ebica, little.] 1. The art of protracting a contest by petty objection and artifice. — The general part of the civil laws concerns not the chicanes of private eves, but the affairs and intercourse of civilized nations, grounded upon the principles of reason. — His attorneys have hardly one trick left; they are at an end of all their chicanes. Aubinot's History of John Bull.

2. Artifice in general. This feline is only in familiar language. — Unwilling then in arms to meet, He strove to lengthen the campaign, and save his forces by chicanery. Prior.

To CHICANE. v. n. [chicane, Fr.] To prolong a contest by tricks. — Chicanery, n. f. [chicane, Fr.] A petty sophister; a trifling disputant; a wrangler. — This is the way to disquiet the two most different things I know, a logical chicaner from a man of reason. Locke.

CHIC'NERY. n. f. [chitanerie, Fr.] Sophistry; mean trick of wrangling. — He was a master better in destroying the greatest part of their reports; and only to preserve such as discovered most of the chicanery and fatuity of the practice. Arbuthnot.

CHICHEN. n. f. See CHICKEN.

CHICHLING, &c. n. f. [lathyrus, Lat.] In Germany they are cultivated, and eaten as peas, though neither so tender nor well tasted. Miller.
CHI

5. In Spenser it seems to signify somewhat like achievement; a mark of distinction.

Where he the not says that the sight for thee?
The coloured chieftains wrought with a chirp,
The knavish runnings, and got revenge.
Spenser.

4. In heraldry.
The chirp is a herald of the French word chirp; the head or upper part this is usually the third part of the escutcheon. Paint h and Drawing.

Chiefdom. n. s. [from chirp.] Sovereignty. Not in use.

Zephyrus being in love with Chloris, and coveting her to wife, gave her for a dowry the chirp and sovereignty of all flowers and green herbs.
Spenser's Kall. Chirp.

Chiefless. adj. [from chirp.] Wanting a head; being without a leader.

And chirping armies did out the campaign,
And navies yawn'd for orders on the main. Pope.

Chiefly. adv. [from chirp.] Principally; eminently; more than common.

Any man who will consider the nature of an epic poem, what actions it describes, and what persons they are chirp whom it informs, will find it a work full of difficulty.
Dryden.
The chief parts of the kingdom, where the number and estates of the different chirps lie.
Swift.

Chiefness. n. f. [from chirp.] A small remnant of the lord paramount.

They shall be well able to live upon those lands, to yield her majesty reasonable chiefness, and also give a competent maintenance unto the garrisons.
Spenser's Ireland.

Would the referred rent at this day be set more than a small chirp? Swift.

Chieflain. n. f. [from chirp. n. capitan.]

1. A leader; a commander.

The head of their chirp, for his fifty's sake,
(Their chirpice Humber named was slight)
Unto the mighty stream he to betake,
Where he an end of battle and of life did make.
Shakespeare.

2. The head of a clan.

It broke, and absolutely subdued all the lords and chiefmen of the isle. Dawson and Ireland.

Chiefly. n. f. [probably from chief and acer, Fr. purchase.] Traffick, in which money is extorted; as confiscate. Now chiefly.

There were good laws against usury, the bafard use of money; and against unlawful exchanges and exchanges, which is bafard usury. Bacon.

Chiefly. n. f. [from chill, cold, and chief for that Temple feems mistaken in his etymology, or has written it wrong to ferve a purpose.] Sores made by froth.

I remembered the cure of childrens when I was a boy (which may be called the children's gout), by burning at the feet.
Temple.

CHILD. n. s. in the plural CHILDREN. Saxon.

1. An infant, or very young person.

In age, to wish for youth is main as vain.
As for a youth to turn a child again.
Dawson.

We should so more be kinder to one child than to another, than we are tender of one eye more than of the other.
Spenser.

The young lad must not be ventured abroad at eight or ten, for fear of what may happen to the tender child. He then runs ten times less risky than at sixteen.
The stroke of death is nothing; children endure it, and the greater towards find it no pain. Wahr.

2. One in the line of filiation, opposed to the parent.

Where children have been exposted, or taken away young, and afterwards have approached to their parents preference, the parents, though they have not known them, have had a secret joy or other alteration, thereupon. Bacon's Nat. History.

The winged vengeance overtake such children.

So unexhausted her perfection were.
The Lord, as he was in his days. Dryd.
He, in a fruitful wife she embraces old,
A long increase of children's children told. Add.

3. The descendants of a man, how remote forever, are called children; as the children of Edom, the children of Israel.

4. In the language of scripture.

One weak, in knowledge.

Kob. I. Corin. Such as are young in grace.

John. Such as are humble and docile.

Mat. The children of light, the children of darkness; who follow light, who remain in darkness.

The eldest, the eldest, are also called the children of God.

How is he numbered among the children of God,

And his lot is among the fainst! Arbuthnot.

Mercy on 't! a beare, a very pretty beare!

A boy, or child, I wonder? Shakespeare.

6. Any thing the product or effect of another.

Maddens, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hash from my soul
Withe'd the black crikles. Shakespeare.

7. To be youth Child. To be pregnant.

But, if, indow, let us with child Pray that the burden may not fall this day; Left that their hopes proudly be abro'd. Shad.

To Child. v. n. [from the noun.] To bring children.

The spring, the summer,

The child's being, anxiety winter, change
Their wonted liverys.

Shakespeare.

As to child, young vigorous people, after irregularities of diet, in such it begins with
As to child, young vigorous people, after irregularities of diet, in such it begins with Childbearing. participial childbearing.

[from child and bear.] The act of bearing children.

Childbed. n. [from child and bed.] The state of a man bearing a child, or being in labour.

The Pains only in childbed were foretold.

And, bringing forth, soon recommended by joy.

Pray that the burden may not fall this day; Left that their hopes proudly be abro'd. Shad.

The time of life between infancy and puberty.

Infancy and childhood demand thin, copious, nourishing aliment.
Arbuthnot in Aliments.

3. The properties of a child.

Their love in early infancy began,

And rose as childhood ripened into man. Dryden.

Childish. adj. [from child.] In childhood.

1. Having the qualities of a child; tripping; ignorant; simple.

Learning hath its infancy, when it is both beginning and almost childish; then its youth, when it is luxuriant and juvenile.
Barrow's Essays.

2. Becoming only children; tripping; pueril.

Maidens being elder by three or four years, there was taken away the occasion of childish confections.

The lion's whelp's saw how he did bear,

And tub in rugged arms without childish fear.

Spenser.

When I was yet a child, no childish play To me was pleasing; all my mind was set Seriously to learn and know. Paradoxes.

The fathers looked on the worship of images as the most folly and childish thing in the world.
Stillingfleet.

One that hath newly learn'd to speak and go Loves childish play.

They have spoiled the walls with childish sentences, that confust, often in a jingle of words.

Childen in Italy.

By conversation the childish babblings of their younger days might be worn out.
Arbuthnot's History of John Bull.

Childish. adj. [from childish.] In a childish tripping way; like a child.

Together with his fame his infancy was great, he who had rashly and childishly objected him.
Hooker.

Some men are of excellent judgment in their own professions, but childish unkindly in any others.
Selden.

Childishness. n. s. [from childish.]

1. Puerility; trifling.

The...
The actions of children, and unhonorable carriage, time and age will of itself be sure to reform, Locke.

Nothing in the world gives a truer idea of the superstition, credulity, and childishness of the Romish and other national religions. Addison on Italy.

2. Harlequins.

Speak thou, boy; perhaps thy childishness will move him more.

Then can our reasons.

Speak, and is Hold, and to thought ufually Dull; The all keep The ^

A marches.

To make cold. Age has not yet. So shrank my frame, or so cold my veins, But conscious virtue in my breast remains. Dryden.

Heat burns his face, from chills his setting beam, And runs the world with expidion extreme, Creath.

Each changing season does its poison bring; Rheums chill the winter, aces blit the spring. Prior.

Now to more the drum. Prospects to arms; or trumpet’s chang’d fulfil Affrights the rivers, or chills the virgin’s blood. Philips.

2. To depresp; to deject; to discourage. Every thought on God chills the gait of his spirits, and awakens terror which he cannot hear.

Eggers.

1. To blister with cold. The fruits perish on the ground, Or soon decay, by snows innate cold, By winds are blasted, or by lightning killed.

Blackmore.

Chilliness. n.f. [from cbilly] A sensation of shivering cold. If the patient endures three days, the looseness of the pain abates, and a chilliness or shivering affects the body.

Arbuthnot.

Chilly. adj. [from chilly] Somewhat cold.

A chilly fear betows.

Chillnss.

Chillness. n.f. [from cbilly] Coldness; want of warmth.

If you come out of the fun suddenly into a shade, there followeth a chills or shivering in all the body. Bacon.

This while he thinks, he lift aloft his dart, A generous chills fizzes ev’ry part,

The veins pour back the blood, and fortify the heart.

Dryden.

Chim. [chime, Dutch.] The end of a barrel or tub.

Chime. n.f. [from chimera] The original of this word is doubtful. Janius and Minheus fupp- pole it corrupted from cicada; Skinner from gamme, or gamus; Haspans from chimaira, to call, because the chime calls to church. Perhaps it is only softened from chime, or eburn, an old word for the sound of many voices, or instruments making a noise together.

1. The consonant or harmonick sound of many correspondent instruments. Hang’d in the thights with bells; That, as we strike a tune, in our dance shall make a chime. Ben Jonson.

The sound.

Of instruments, that made notious chime, Was heard of harp and organ. Milton’s Par. Lost.

Love virtue, the alone is free;

She can teach you how to climb.

Higher than the fingers of fate. Milton.

The correspondence of found.

Love first invention verses, and form’d the rhyme; The motion measured, harmonize’d the chime. Dryden.

The found of bells, not rung by roper, but struck with hammer. In this tenie it is always used in the plural, chimes.

We have heard the chime in midnight. Shakspere.

4. The correspondence of proportion or relation.

The concepctions of things are placed in their several degrees of chillitude; as in several proportions, one to another; in several harmonious chimes, the sort of relation is often drown’d.

Griffis’s Chimeras.

To Chime. v.n. [from the noon.]

1. To found in harmony or consonance.

Chime. n.f. [from chimera] Imaginary; fanciful, wildly, vainly, or fantastically conceived; fantafick.

Notwithstanding the sinnets of this allegory may alone for it in some measure. I cannot think that persons of such a chimera’s existence are pro- pectors in an epic poem.

Spedictor.

Chimaery. adv. [from chimera] Imaginable; fancifully; agreeable; agree.

Chimaery. Imaginary; fanciful; wildly, vanilly, or fantastically conceived; fantafick.

Chimnago. n.f. [from chimina] Unreal, wild, and fanciful, as remote from reality as the existence of the pseustical Chimaira, a monster feigned to have the head of a lion, the belly of a goat, and the tail of a dragon.

In short, the forces of dreams is a piece, Chimara’s lie, and more absurd, or left. Dryden.

No body joins the voice of a sheep with the shape of a houfe, to be the complex ideas of any real fulances, unless he has a mind to fill his head with chimara, and his discourse with un- intelligible words.

Ladis.

Chimney. n.f. [from chimina] Imaginary; fanciful; wildly, vanilly, or fantastically conceived, fanttribute.

Chimney. n.f. [from chimina] Imaginary; fancifully; agreeable, agreeable.

Chimney. Imaginary; fanciful; wildly, vanilly, or fantastically conceived; fantafick.

Chimney. n.f. [from chimina] Unreal, wild, and fanciful, as remote from reality as the existence of the pseustical Chimaira, a monster feigned to have the head of a lion, the belly of a goat, and the tail of a dragon.

In short, the forces of dreams is a piece, Chimara’s lie, and more absurd, or left. Dryden.

No body joins the voice of a sheep with the shape of a houfe, to be the complex ideas of any real fulances, unless he has a mind to fill his head with chimara, and his discourse with un- intelligible words.

Ladis.

Chimney. n.f. [from chimina] Unreal, wild, and fanciful, as remote from reality as the existence of the pseustical Chimaira, a monster feigned to have the head of a lion, the belly of a goat, and the tail of a dragon.

In short, the forces of dreams is a piece, Chimara’s lie, and more absurd, or left. Dryden.

No body joins the voice of a sheep with the shape of a houfe, to be the complex ideas of any real fulances, unless he has a mind to fill his head with chimara, and his discourse with un- intelligible words.

Ladis.
Yet some old men
Tell stories of you in their chimney-corner. Dunstan.

CHIMNEYPEICE. n. f. [from chimney and piece.] The ornamental piece of wood, or stones, that is set round the fire-place.

Polish and brighten the marble hearths and chimneypieces with a soft dip in grease. Swift.

CHIMNEYSWEeper. n. f. [from chimney and sweeper.]

1. One whose trade it is to clean foul chimneys of foot.

To look like he is chimney-sweepers black;
And since her time are colliers counted bright.

2. It is used proverbially for one of a mean and vile occupation.

Golden lads and girls, all mud,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust. Skelmore.

CHIN. n. f. [cine, Sax. kinni, Germ.] The part of the face beneath the upper lip.

But all the words I could get of her was waving her wand, and thrusting out her chin. Sidney.

With his Amazonian chin he drove.

The briddled lips before him.

Swift.

He said his bony head, which sunk again, and, linking on his bosom, knock'd his chin. Dryden.

CHINA. n. f. [from China, the country where it is made.] China ware; porcelain; a species of vessels made in China, dimly transparent, partaking of the qualities of earth and glass. They are made by mingling two kinds of earth, of which one easily vitrifies; the other refills a very strong heat: when the vitrifiable earth is melted into glass, they are completely burst.

Splinter, vapours, or small-pox, above them all; And mirth of himself, tho' China talk.

Pope.

The China ware, earth and plate and china together in the same bake. Swift.

CHINA-ORANGE. n. f. [from China and orange.] The sweet orange: brought originally from China.

My many years has the China-orange been propagated in Portugal and Spain. Marlow's Hymn.

CHINA-ROOT. n. f. [from China and root.] A medicinal root, brought originally from China.

CHI'RENCOUGH. n. f. [perhaps more properly kn chimney, from kienir, to pant, Dut. encong.] A violent and convulsive cough, to which children are subject.

These are the curious and uncommon complaints, complicated with an intermitting fever. Dr. Young.

CHINE. n. f. [cine, Fr. cêine, Ital. cina, Lat. cinnam.]

1. The part of the back in which the spine or back bone is found.

She stroke him such a blow upon his chin, that the cinnam all his body.

Sidney.

He presents her with the turky head, And china with china bristles roughly speckled. Dryden.

2. A piece of the back of an animal.

A flattering story by this old man, And he had term'd about his chin very liberally among his listeners. Spenser.

CHINE. n. f. [from the noun.] To cut into chines.

CHINN, n. f. [from the verb.]

A small piece taken off by a cutting instrument.

Cucumbers do extremely affect moisture, and over-drink themselves, which chins or chaps forbid them. Racine.

That chin made iron swim, not by natural power. Byroil.

CHINN, n. f. [from To chine.] A fragment cut off.

They sung their land with the chippings of a fort of lost stone. Motier's Histandry.

The chippings and filings of these jewels, could they be preserved, are of more value than the whole mass of ordinary gold. Trench on the Coppers.

CHIRAG'ICAL. adj. [from chiragra, Lat.] Having the gout in the hand; subject to the gout in the hand.

Chirurgical persons do suffer in the fingers as well as in the feet, and sometimes both of all.

Brown's Walker.

CHIRO'GRAPHER. n. f. [from the hand, and qoqago, to write.] He that exerciseth or professes the art or business of writing.

Thus passeth it from this office to the chirographer's, to be engrossed. Bacon's Office of Instruction.

CHIROGRAPHIST. n. f. [See Chiro'grapher.] This word is used in the following passage, I think, improperly, for one that tells fortunes by examining the hands: the true word is chirographer, or chirocramer.

Let the physiognomists examine his features; let the chiragraphe behold his palm; but, above all, let us consult for the calculation of his nativity.

Brown's Walker.

CHIRO'GRAPHY. n. f. [See Chiro'grapher.] The art of writing.

CHIRO'MANCY. n. f. [See Chiro'grapher.] One that foretells future events by inspecting the hand.

The middle fort, who have not much to spare,
To chirocramers' cheaper art repair,
Who tell the pretty palm, to make the line more fair.

Dryden's New Year's Eve.

CHIRO'MANCY. n. f. [xyl, the hand, and muta, a prophet.] The art of foretelling the events of life, by inspecting the hand.

There is not much considerance in that doctrine of chirocramy, that posture of this hand doth signify things past; in the middle things present; and at the bottom, events to come.

Brown's Walker.

CHIRP. v. a. [perhaps corrupted from cheer up.] The Dutch have this particle.

To make a cheerful nifie; as birds, when they call without singing.

She chirping ran, he peeping flew away,
Till hard by them both he and the did flay.

Sidney.

Come he right now to sing a raven's song?
And thinks he that the chirping of a wren
Can chase away the first conceived foul? Shak.
No chirping tuck the welkin them invoke.

To cast away thy laments and thy sighs.

The careful hen
Calls all her chirping family around.

Thomson's Spring.

CHIRP. v. a. [This seems apparently corrupted from cheer up.] To make cheerful.

Let ho bofer blyt here think it sin
To push on the chirping and moderate bottle.

Johnsons.

Sir Balsalm now, he lives like other sirs,
He takes his chirping pint, he cracks his jolies.

Pope.

CHIRP. n. f. [from the verb.] The voice of birds or insects.
Chirurger. n. f. [from chirp.] One that chirps; one that is cheerful.

To Chirr. w. n. [cecum, Sax.] See Churn. To coo as a pigeon. Fancier.

Chirurgien. n. f. [zephyrus, from zephyr, the hand, and zephyr, wind.] One that curing ailments, not by internal medicines, but outward applications. It is now generally pronounced, and by many written, surgeon.

When a man's wound casts to smart, only because he has lost his feeling, they are nevertheless mortal, for his not feeling his need of a chirurgian.

Chirurgie. n. f. [from chirurgien.]
The art of curing by external applications. This is called surgery.

Gynacia having skill in chirurgie, an art in those days much esteem'd.

Nature could do nothing in her case without the help of chirurgie, in lessening the fluxed flesh, and making way to pull out the rotten bones.

Chirurgical, adj. See Chirur-

Chirurgick. n. s

Having skill useful in outward applications to hurts.

As to the chirurgical or physical virtues of wax, it is reckoned a mean between hot and cold. Mortimer.

2. Relating to the manual part of healing.

3. Manual in general, confining in operations of the hand. This sense, though the first according to etymology, is now scarce found. The chirurgical or manual part doth refer to the making instruments, and exercising particular experiments. Within.

Chisell. n. f. [fissum, Fr. of seissum, Lat.]
An instrument with which wood or bone is pared away.

What fine chisel
Could ever cut that sheath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kifs her. Shakespeare.

There is such a seeming fronts in the limb
As if a chisel had hewed them out of stone, but a pencil had drawn and sketched them in oil. Wren's Architecture.

Imperfect shapes; in marble such forms are.
When the rude chisel does the man begin. Dryden.

To Chisel. w. a. [from the noun.] To cut with a chisel.

Chit. n. f. [according to Dr. Hicky, from kind, Germ. child; perhaps from chico, little, Span.] 1. A child; a baby. Generally used of young persons in contempt.

Theris shall appear such chit in store.
"Tis not in chits to turn all politicians to jeh. Ainsworth.

2. The shoot of corn from the end of the grain. A cant term with tailsters.

Barley, couched four days, will begin to chew the chit or spirit at the root-end. Mortimer's Husbandman.

3. A freckle. [from chick-pease.] In this sense it is seldom u'd.

To Chit. w. n. [from the noun.] To sprout; to shoot at the end of the grain: cant.

I have known barley chit in seven hours after it had been thrown forth. Mortimer's Husbandman.

Chitchat. n. f. [corrupted by reduplication from chit.] Prattle; idle prate; idle talk. A word only used in ludicrous conversation.

I am a member of a female society, who call our selves the chit-chat club. Spectator.

Chitterlings. n. f. without singular.

[From sebyter lingb, Dut. Minnow; from attulca, Germ. Skinner.] The guts; the bowels. Skinner.

Chittry, adj. [from chit.] Childful; like a baby.

Chivalrous. adj. [from chivalry.] relating to chivalry, or quaint knightly; knightly; warlike; adventurous; daring. A word now out of use.

And noble minds of yore allied were
In brave pursuit of chivalrous emprise. Fairy Q.

Chivalry, n. f. [chivalrous, Fr. knighthood; from euchal, a horse; as to, in Latin.] 1. Knighthood; a military dignity.

There be now, for martial encouragement, some degrees and orders of chivalry; which, nevertheless, are confided improperly upon soldiers and no orders. Bacon's Essays.

2. The qualifications of a knight; as, valour, dexterity in arms.

That he had slain
The flow'r of Europe for his chivalry. Shak.

I may hope, on my own names,
I have a truant born to chivalry. Shakespeare.

3. The general system of knighthood. Solemly he swore,
That, by the faith which knights to knighthood bore,
And whate'er else to chivalry belongs,
He would not cease till he reveng'd their wrongs. Dryden.

4. An adventure; an exploit. Not now in use.

They four doing oft more dangerous, though less famous, because they were but private chivalry.

Sidney.

5. The body or order of knights.

And by his light
Did all the chivalry of England move to do brave acts. Shakespeare.

6. In law.

Serjeant military, of the French chivalry; a tenure of land by knight's service. There is no land but is held mediately or immediately of the crown, by some service or other; and therefore are all parts of lands, whether arable or not, called fiefs, fees, as proceeding from the benefit of the king. If the king gave to the nobles large possessions for this or that rent and service, they parceled out their lands, so received for rents and services, as they thought good; and those services are by Littleton divided into chivalry and socage. The one is military and military; the other, chivalry and duchy. Chivalry, therefore, is a tenure of service, whereby the tenant is bound to perform some noble or military office unto his lord; and is of two sorts; either real, that is, such as may hold only of the king; or such as may also hold of a common person as well as of the king. That which may hold only of the king, is properly called serjeanty; and it is again divided into grand or petit, i.e. great or small. Chivalry that may hold of a common person, as well as of the king, is called kustangam. Cowell.

Chlorosis. n. f. [from yly, green.] The green-sickness.

To Choke. See Choke.

Chocolat. n. f. [chocolate, Span.] 1. The nut of the cacao tree.

The tree hath a rose flower, of a great number of petals, from whole copulation rises the pointal, being a tube cut into many parts, which becomes a fruit shaped somewhat like a cucumber, and deeply furrowed, in which are contained several seeds, collected into an oblong heap, and flit down, somewhat like almonds. It is a native of America, and is found in greatest plenty in several places between the tropicks, and grows wild. See Cacao.

Miller.

2. The cake or mall, made by grinding the kernel of the cacao nut with other substanstes, to be diffolvd in hot water.

The Spaniards were the first who brought chocolate into use in Europe, to promote the consumption of their cacao-nuts, achio, and other drugs, which their West Indies furnish, and which enter the composition of chocolate, called Guinums.

3. The liquor made by a solution of chocolate in hot water.

Chocolate is certainly much the best of these three exotic liquors: its oil seems to be both rich, alimentary, and sanative. Arth. in Allm. In fumes of burning chocolate first glow, And tremble at the feast that froths below! Pope.

Chocolat House. n. f. [chocolate and house.] A house where company is enterained with chocolate.

Ever since that time, Lisander has been twice a day at the chocolate-house. Trelaw.

Chochrome. [the old preterite from chivt.] See Chirr.

And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban. Genesis.

Choice. n. f. [choix, French.] 1. The act of choosing; determination between different things proposed; election.

If you oblige me forcibly to chuse,
The choice is made; for 1 must both refuse. Dryden.

Soft elocution doth thy flyte remove,
Gentle or sharp, according to thy choice.

2. The power of choosing; election.

Choice there is not, unless the thing which we take be so in our power, that we might have refused it. If fire consume the flability, it chooseth not to do, because the nature thereof is such that it can do no other.

There's no liberty like the freedom of having it at my own choice, whether I live to the world, or to the Devil.

To talk of compelling a man to be good, is a contradiction; for where there is force, there can be no choice. Whereas, all moral goods consisteth in the elective act of the will, or will of the mind.

Greco's Cospolita Sacra.

Whether he will remove his contemplation from one idea to another, is many times in his choice.

Locke.

3. Care in choosing; curiosity of distinction.

Julius Caesar did write a collection of aphorisms: it is pity his book is lost; for I imagine they were collected with judgment and choice.

Tales of the Boccharo Aphorisms.

4. The thing choisen; the thing taken, or approved, in preference to others.

Your choice is not so rich in birth as beauty; That you might well enjoy her. Shakespeare.

Thy choice to thee, from among the choirs; Thy choice of flashing warliers.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Now, Mars, the fields, let fame exalt your voice; Nor let thy conquests only be her choice. Pindar.

5. The
5. The bell part of any thing, that is more properly the object of choice.

The choice and flower of all things profitable in other books, the Psalms do both more briefly contain, and more movingly affect us. To this art a mighty prince in the choice of our sepulchres bade the sea,

6. Several things proposed at once, as objects of judgment and election.

A braver choice of dauntless spirits. Did ne'er float upon the floating tide. Shakespeare.

7. To make Choice of.

To choose; to take from many things proposed. Widowed of what himself approved made choice, nor is led captive by the common voice. Dodsian.

CHOICE, adj. [choice, French.]

1. Select; of extraordinary value. After having set before the king the choicest of wines and fruits, he told him the left part of his entertainment was come. Guardian. Thus, in a sea of folly to'sd.

2. Curiously; with exact choice. Collected choicely from every county home. Shak.

3. Valuably; excellently. It is certain it is choicely good. Walton's Angler.

CHOICENESS, n. s. [from choice.] Nicely; particular value. Carry into the shade such anicents, feedlings, or plants, as are for their choiceness referred to pots. Evelyn's Kalendar.

CHOIR, n. s. [chorus, Latin.]

1. An assembly or band of singers. They were now all in the choir of angels, who their voices affluent. Waller.

2. The singers in divine worship. The choir, With all the choicest music of the kingdom, Together singing Te Dam. Shakespeare.

3. The part of the church where the choristers or singers are placed. The lords and ladies, having brought the queen To a pavement's edge in the church's wall off. At distance from them. Shakespeare.

TO CHOOSE. v. t. [from accoean. Sax. from cecano, the cheek or mouth. According to Minshovus, from 27; from whence, probably, the Spanish abajar.]

1. To suffocate; to kill by oppressing the passage of respiration. When but to my good lord I prove untrue, I'll from thence from hence. Shakespeare. Without you thunder's, clouds of dust did it; Contending walls, Waller.

2. To flop up; to obturate; to block up a passage. Men troop'd up to the king's capacious court, While violets were cast'd with the rose. Chapman. They are at a continual expense to cleanse the ports, and keep them from being choked up, by the lure of several vessels. Addis in Italy.

White pray's and tears his dearest progress stay, And crowds of mourners choke their sovereign way. Trelawne.

5. To hinder by obstruction or confinement. Of two poets trimmers, that do cling together, And choke their art. Shakespeare. They cannot lose her perfect pow'r to fee, The mills and streams do choke their window-light. Dryden. It semeth the fire is choke'd, as not to be able to remove the flame. Bacon's Natural History. You must make the mound big enough to contain the whole fruit, when it is grown to the greatest; for else you will choke the spreading of the fruit. Bacon's Natural History.

The fire, which choke'd in ashes lay, A load too heavy for his soul to move, Was upward blown below, and know'd away by love. Dryden.

4. To suffrers. And yet we venture'd; for the rain proporrt Choke'd the respect of likely people round. Shakespeare. Choak'd thee flee'tly of thy sin.

For to deny each article with might. Shakespeare. Cannot remove the strong conception that I do grow wise. Shakespeare.

5. To overpower. And that which fell among thorns are they who, when they have heard, go forth, and are choke'd with cares, and riches, and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection. Luke.

No fruitful creep the tickly fields return; But ears and darts choke the shining grain. Dryden's Past. CHOKER, n. s. [from choke.]

1. One that chokes or suffocates another. One that puts another to silence. A low term.

2. Any thing that cannot be awangered. CHOKING-WEED, n. s. [lerangiana.] A plant, CHOKY, adj. [from choke.] That which has the power of suffocation.

LAGOOGUES, n. s. [χαλός, bile.] Medicines which have the power of purging bile or cholcer. CHOLER, n. s. [choler, Lat. from χολή.]

1. The bile. Marcellus Ficinus increases these proportion, adding two more of partes cholerae. Amore in Education.

There would be a main delict, if such a feeding animal, and to subject unto diseases from bilious causes, should want a proper conveyance for choler. Dryden's Pilgrims Errance.

2. The humour which, by its super-abundance, is supposed to produce iraefibility. It engenders cholcer, planteth anger.

And better were that both of us did fall, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are cholericists, Than feed it with such over-roughed stuff. Shakespeare.

3. Anger; rage.

But to know is alight: he hath been ever to conquer, and to have his said of contradiction. Shakespeare. He, methinks, is no great scholar; Who will not take a part in the cholcer. Prior.

CHO?qNICKNESS, n. s. [from choleric.] Anger; iraefibility; peevishness.

TO CHOOSE. v. w. I choose, to have choosen, or chose. [choiser, Fr. coger, Sax, kusen, Germ.]

1. To take by way of preference of several things offered; not to reject. Did I chos't him out all the tribes of Israel to be my priest? 1 Sam. 14, 19.

I may neither chos't whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike. Shakespeare.

If he should offer to chos't, and chos't the sight called him, you must refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him. Shakespeare.

2. To take; not to refuse.

Let us chos't to us judgment; let us know among ourselves what is good. Job.

O the will has fill'd so much freedom left us to enable it to chos't any act in its kind good; as also to refuse any act in its kind evil. Stanch's Sarmons.

3. To elect; to pick out of a number.

How much less shall I chos't him, and chos't out my words to reason with him? Job.

4. To elect for eternal happiness; to predetermine to life. A term of theologians.

TO CHOOSE. v. n. To have the power of choice between different things. It is generally joined with a negative, and signifies must necessarily be.

Without the influence of the Deity supporting things, their utter annihilation could not cease but follow. Hobbes.

Knaves abroad, Who having by their own importunate suit Convenced or furnish'd them, they cannot chos't But they must baulk. Shakespeare.

When a favourite shall be rais'd upon the foundation of merits, then can be not chos't but profess. Pope.

Throw down a golden apple in her way; For all her hate, she could not chos't but fly. Dryden.

Those who are persuad'd that they shall continue for ever, cannot chos't but aspire after a happiness commensurate to their duration. Tullius.

CHOOSER, n. s. [from chos't.] He that has the power or office of chosing; elector.

Come all into this nay, quoth she; Come closely in, be baulk'd by me; Each one may here a chos't be. For room you need not wrestle. Dryden.

In all things to deal with other men, as if I might be my own chos't. Hammond's Practical Catechism.

This generality is not sufficient to make a good choser, without a more particular contrivance of his judgment and will. Watson.

TO CHOP. v. a. [lappen, Dut. conquer, French.]

1. To cut with a quick blow.

What shall we do, if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complaint? -Chop off his head, man. Shakespeare.

Within this three days his head is to be chop'd off. Shakespeare.

And where the cleaver drops the heller's soul, Thy breathing nothild hold. Goyo's Vero.
CHO

2. To devour eagerly: with up.
You are for making a hungry meal, and for chopp- ing up your entertainment like an hungry crow.

Dryden.

Upon the opening of his mouth he drops his breakfast, which the fox presently chews up.

L'Estrange.

3. To mince; to cut into small pieces.
They break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot.

Makar.

Some granaries are made with clay, mixed with hair, chopped straw, mulch, and such like.

Martin's Husbandry.

By dividing them into chapters and verses, they are so chopped and minced, and broken and divided, that the common people take the verses usually for different afl ascertain.

Locke.

4. To break into chunks.
I remember the cow's dugs, that her pretty chop'd hands had milked.

Shakespeare.

To CHOP. v. n. [seepan, Sax. kopen, Dut. cut, buy.]

1. To purchase, generally by way of trade; to give one thing for another.
The chopping of bargains, when a man buys not to hold but to sell again, grinds under the feller and the buyer.

2. To put one thing in the place of another.
Sets up communities and sects, To chop and change, intelligences. Hylas.

Affirm of fpring chop'd and changed. Hylas.
The wavy with the fary rang'd. Hylas.

We go on chopping and changing our friends, or our ou're felves. L'Estrange.

3. To bandy; to interchange; to return one thing or word for another.
Not let the council at the bar chop with the judge, nor win himself into the handling of the cause snow, after the judge hath declared his sentence. Bacon. Thou'lt never leave off your chopping of logic, till your skil is turned over your ears for prating.

L'Estrange.

CHOP. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A piece chopped off. See CHIP.
Sir William Capel compounded for sixteen hundred pounds; yet Empen would have cut another, chop out of him, if the king had not died. Bacon.

2. A piece small of meat, commonly of mutton.
Old Crofs condemns all persons to be fops, That can't regulate themselves with mutton chops.

King's Cook.

3. A crack, or clefs.
Water will make wood to swell; as we see in the filling of the chops of bowls, by laying them in water.

Bacon.

CHOP-HOUSE. n. f. [from chop and house.]
A mean house of entertainment, where provision ready dressed is fold.

1. Any place at the chop-houses, where every man eats in public a mess of beefs or chop of meat, in fentence.

Spenser.

CHOP'PIN. n. f. [French.]

1. A French liquid measure, containing nearly a pint of Winchester.

2. A term used in Scotland for a quart of wine measure.

CHOPPING. participial adj. [In this feme, of uncertain etymology.] An epithet frequently applied to infants, by way of ludicrous commendation: imagined by Skinner to signify luffs, from cap, Sax.; by others to mean a child that would bring money at a market. Perhaps a greedy, hungry child, likely to live.

Both [Jack Freeman and Ned Wild. Finson.

WHO don, the fair and chopping child. Finson.

CHOPPING-BLOCK n. f. [chop and block.
A log of wood, on which any thing is laid to be cut in pieces.

The straight smooth elms are good for asle- trees, boards, chopping-blocks. Martin's Husbandry.

CHOPPING-KNIFE. n. f. [chop and knife.]
A knife with which cooks mince their meat:

Here comes Dametas, with a fword by his fide, a foref-hill on his neck, and a chopping-knife under his glider.

Sidney.

CHOP'PY. adj. [from chop.] Full of holes, clefs, or cracks.
You can't understand me, By each at once her choppy finger laying Upon her skinny lips.

Shakespeare.

CHOPS. n. f. without a fingular. [corrupted probably from Chaps, which fee.]

1. The mouth of a head.
So soon as my chops begin to walk, you must be walking too, for company.

L'Estrange.

2. The mouth of a man, used in contempt.
He ne'er fhowks hands, nor bid fawed to him, Till he unfaid him from the rope to the chops.

Shakespeare.

3. The mouth of any thing in familiar language; as of a river, of a smith's wife.

CHOP'RAL. adj. [from chorus, Lat.]

1. Belonging to, or composing a choir or concert.
All found on first by finging or golden wire Temper'd with twiftings internaps with voice, Choral or unifon. Miflon.

Choral symphonies. Miflon.

2. Singing in a choir.
And, choral songs sung the fsecond day.

Amhurst.

CHORD. n. f. [chorus, Lat.]
When it signifies a rope or finging in general, it is written chord: when it primitive fignification is preferred, the b is retained.

1. The finging of a musical instrument.
Who now'd Their fops and chords, was fent; his volent touch Infang'd from all proportions, low and high, Fined and purfled tranfverfe the refonnant fong.

Miflon.

2. In geometry. A right line, which joins the two ends of any arch of a circle.

To CHORD. v. a. [from the noun.] To furnish with fings or chords; to ftring.
What paffion cannot muffick raise and quell? When Jubal ftruck the chorded string, His lifing bending with a good around.

Dryden.

CHORD'EE. n. f. [from chordea, Lat.]
A contraction of the fronnum.

CHOR'ION. n. f. [chorion, to contain.] The outward membrane that envraps the fetus.

CHO'KSTER. n. f. [from cavorus.
1. A finger in catheral, usually a finger of the lower order; a finging boy.

2. A finger in a concert. This feme is, for the moft part, confined to poetry.
And let the roaring organs loudly play
The praises of the Lord in lively notes.

The whites, with hollow throats,

Stimulates the joyous flnging. Spenser.

The new-born phoenix takes his way.

Of airy chfers a numerous train
Attend his progress.

Dryden.

The musical voices and accents of the vocal chfers.

Ray of the Creation.

CHOR'GRA'pher. n. f. [from graphere, a region, and graphos, to describe.] He that describes particular regions or countries.

CHOR'GRA'PHICAL. adj. [See CHOR'GRA'pher.]
Defcriptive of particular regions or counties; laying down the boundaries of countries.

I have added a chorographical defcription of this terrestrial paradise. R. H. World.

CHOR'OGRAPHICALLY. adv. [from chorographic.] In a chorographical manner; according to the rule of chorography; in a manner descriptive of particular regions.

CHOR'OGRAPHY. n. f. [See CHOR'GRA'pher.]
The art or practice of describing particular regions, or laying down the limits and boundaries of particular provinces. It is in its object than geography, and greater than topography.

CHO'rus. n. f. [chorus, Lat.]
1. A number of fingers; a concert.
The Grecian tragedy was a thing nothing but a chorus of fingers: afterwards one actor was introduced.

Dryden.

2. Never did a more full and unfruitful chorus of human creatures join together in a hymn of devotion.
In praise to just let every voice be join'd,
And fill the general choral of mankind.

Pope.

2. The persons who are supposed to hold what passes in the acts of a tragedy, and fing their sentiments between the acts.

For supply,

Admit me chorus to this history. Shakespeare.

3. The song between the acts of a tragedy.

4. Verfes of a song in which the company join the singer.

CHO'KE. [the preter tense, and sometimes the participle passive, from To choke.
Our forefathers here above the red night fands, And here be choops again to rule the land.

Dryden.

CHOKE. [the participle passive from To choke.
If king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of choops soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast.

Shake.

CHOU'CH. n. f. [ceo, Sax. choucer, Fr.]
A bird which frequents the rocks by the fen fide, like a jake-daw, but bigger.

Houmer.

In birds, kites and hawks have a reahence with hawks, crows with ravens, daws and chouches.

Bacon's Natural History.

To crow the Eke Imperial grace affords,

And choops and daws, and such republiek birds.

Dryden.

CHOU'LE. n. f. [commonly pronounced and written show.] The crop of a bird.

The chofs or crop, adhering unto the lower side of the beak, and to decreasing by the throat, is a bag or fachet.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.
CHRISTIANITY, n. f. [Gr.

A Christian is a person who professes the religion of Christ. The word "Christian" is derived from the Greek word "Kristos," which means "Messiah." It is often used to refer to a person who follows the teachings of Jesus Christ.

The religion of Christianity is based on the teachings and life of Jesus Christ. It is a monotheistic religion that is centered around the belief in one God and the belief in the divinity of Jesus Christ. The religion of Christianity is practiced by over 2.4 billion people worldwide.

Christianity is divided into several branches, including Catholic, Protestant, and Orthodox. Each branch has its own beliefs and practices, but they all share a common belief in the trinity (God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit). Christians also believe in the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the promise of eternal life after death.

Christianity has had a significant impact on the development of Western culture, politics, and society. It has also played a central role in the history of the world, with many major events and developments being influenced by Christian beliefs and practices.

The religion of Christianity has a rich history and tradition, with many important figures and events that have shaped its development. These include the life and teachings of Jesus Christ, the work of the early apostles, and the development of the church over the centuries.

The word "Christian" is often associated with a sense of community and a commitment to goodness and justice. Christians believe that they are called to live a life that is pleasing to God and to make a difference in the world.

Christianity is a religion that is open to all people, regardless of their background or beliefs. It is a religion of love and acceptance, and it is based on the belief that all people are created in the image of God.

The religion of Christianity is a complex and diverse faith that is still evolving and changing today. It is a religion that is rich in history and tradition, and it continues to inspire and challenge people around the world.
Chylous, adj. [from chylos.] Containing of chyle; partaking of chyle.

Chylous milk is the chylous part of an animal, already prepared.

Chylophobia. n. [Chylophobias.] Lat.

Chylophobia, n. f. Lat. Made by chylophobia.

I am tied with waiting for this chylophobia, which feels so young, and beggars us when old.

Dryden.

The medicines are ranged in boxes, according to their nature, whether chylophobic or Galenical preparations.

Watt.

2. Relating to chylophobia.

Methodist already, from this chylophobic flame, I see a city of more precious mould.

Dryden.

With chylophobia art, the mind's sake, and always the aromatic, tolerable flowers. Pop.

The ancient oblique itching in that matter, and is capable of forming into noblest use: an act now utterly lost, or perchance kept up by a few chylophobes.

Watt.

Chylophobic. adj. [from chylophobias.] In a chylophobic manner.

Chylophobia, n. f. [See Chylophobia.] A professor of chylophobia; a philosopher by fire.

The flattering chylophobic, in his golden views, Supremely bright.

Chylophobia, n. f. [derived from some Chylopoe'tick or Tiberous, or, to make; by others from an Oriental word, keena, black. According to the supposed etymology, it is written with y or j.] A term applied to any thing that is very black, or yellow.

Bacon.

Operations of chylophobes, fall foot of vital forces, is chylophobic milk or blood of grace.

Arbuthnot in his divinity.

Chylophobic. adj. [Chylophobias. Lat. from cibus, food.] Relating to food; useful for food; edible.

Chylophobic. adj. [Chylophobias. Fr.] A small sort of onion used in salads. This word is common in the Scotch dialect; but the j is not pronounced.

Chylophobic, or chylous, are a kind of decomposing bodies.

1. The fear—remaining after a wound.

D. S. Captains Spur, with his chylophobic, an emblem of war, were once upon a time.

Shakespeare.

2. A mark; an impression so used by Shakespeare left properly.

Shakespeare.

The cicatrice or cicatricial mark is a sign of the past.

Shakespeare.

Cicatrization. n. f. [from cicatrice.] An application that makes a cicatrice.

Cicatrization. n. f. [from cicatrice.] Having the qualities proper to induce a cicatrice.

1. The act of healing the wound.

A vein basted, or corroded in the lungs, is looked upon to be for the most part incurable, because of the motion and coughing of the lungs, tearing the gap wider, and hampering the commutual conjunctures and cicatrization of the vein.

2. The
The particular it from a all
Cin'laU, n. f. [from cinereus, Latt.] The chief keeper of plate, utensils, and things of value, belonging to a church.
Cim'ERED, n. f. [cimerium, Latt.] Having the qualities of cusea.

D.

2. To heal and induce the skin over a sore.

Poisons may yet retain some portion of their nature; yet are so mixed, that they do not make good destructive malignities.

Circulation, n. f. [from cicerate.] The act of tainting or reclaiming from wildness.

This holds not only in domestic and manufactured birds, but then it might be the effect of ciceration or application, but in the wild.

Cider, n. f. [cider, Fr. sidra, Ital. scura, Lat. oxigen, flb.]
1. All kind of strong liquors, except wine.

This kind of cider is now wholly obsolete.

2. Liquor made of the juice of fruits preferred.

We had also drink, wholesome and good wine of the grapes, a kind of cider made of that country; a wonderful pleasing and refreshing drink.

Cider, n. f. [cider, Fr.]
1. A maker of cider.

When the cider is to be used, it is preferred, and ordered after the best manner they could, yet hath their cider generally proved pale, flat, and ill-tasted.

Ciderkin, n. f. [from cider.]

A low word used for the liquor made of the fruit or proofs matter of apples, after the cider is preferred, and a convenient quality of boiled water added to it, the whole infusion for about forty-eight hours.

William's World of Words.

Ciderkin is made for common drinkings and supplies the plate of small beer.

Cieling, n. f. [French: CIEGE, n. f.] A candle carried in processions.

Cielary, adj. [cileum, Latt.] Belonging to the eyelids.

The eyelids project, or rather the integuments, covered in the inner side of the eyelids, and necessary for their manifold, by the contraction, to alter the figure of the eye.

Cinetic, adj. [from cinetic, hair, cloth, Latt.] Made of hair.

A garment of cameo's hair, that is, made of some texture of that hair: a coarse camice, or stockcloth habit, suitable to the austerity of his life.

Brown's Latin Exemp.
CIR

The cirrus over-tells the stock; and the stock is but passive, and giveth aliments, but no motion, to the graft. [Bacon]

CIPHER. n. f. [ciffras, Fr. cifra, It. cifra, low Lat. from an oriental root.] 1. An arithmetical character, by which some number is noted, as a figure. 2. An arithmetical mark, which, standing for nothing itself, increases the value of the other figures. Mine were the very cifir of a function. To find the faults, whose line stands in record, and let go by the factor. Shakespeare. If the people be foremost in the election, you cannot make them nulls or ciphers in the privation or translation. Bacon. As, in accounts, ciphers and figures pass for real sums, so names pass for things. Such.

3. An intertexture of letters engraved usually on boxes or plate. Troy fam'd in burnish'd gold; and o'er the throne, Arms and the Man in golden ciphers flame. Pope.

Some mingles fling'd the restless star, and some Deep on the new-born vagrant's heaving side The stars, too, stood by, the stars, and stand. Thomson.

4. A character in general. In succeeding times this wisdom began to be written in ciphers and characters, and letters bearing the form of creatures.

Rabelais's History of the World. 5. A secret or occult manner of writing, or the key to it. This book, as long liv'd as the elements, In cipher writ, or new-made Hieroglyphs. Donne. He was pleased to command me to pay at London, to fend and receive all his letters; and I was furnished with mine several ciphers, in order to it. Dr. Johnson.

To CIPHER. v. n. [from the noun.] To practice arithmetick. You have been bred to business; you can cipher: I wonder you never used your pen and ink. Arbuthnot.

To CIPHER. v. a. To write in occult characters. He formulated sermons, and penned notes: his most compos'd with Cipher algebraic. Haywood.

To CIRCULATE. v. a. [circulate, Lat.] To make a circle; to compass round, or turn round. Bailey.

CIRCULATION, n. f. [circulation, Lat.] An orbicular motion; a turning round; a measuring with the compasses. Bailey.

CIRCLE. n. f. [circuit, Lat.] 1. A line continued till it ends where it began, having all its parts equidistant from a common centre. Any thing that moves round about in a circle, in less time than our ideas are wont to proceed one another in our minds, is not perceived to move, but seems to be a perfect entire circle of that matter, or body, and not a part of a circle in motion. Locke. By a circle I understand not here perfect geometrical circles, but an orbicular figure, whole length is equal to its breadth; and which, if it be to circle, may be called circular. Newton's Opticks.

Then a deeper skill, In circle following circles, gathers round To clothe the face of things. Thomson's Summer.

2. The plane included by a circular line. This plane is the circle or figure. Of the two branches, these sweet ornaments. Wholelaid shadows kings have fought to deep in? While these foul arms, thus circling you, may prove More heavy chains than those of hopeless love. Pope.

Unform, he gilded thro' the joyous crowd, With diamond circlets and an ambient cloud. Pope.

3. To CIRCLE in. To confine; to keep together. We term those things dry which have a confidence within themselves, and which, to enjoy a determinate figure, do not require the slip or hinderance of another body to limit and circle them in their movings. Boyle.

By a circle I understand not here perfect geometrical circles, but an orbicular figure, whole length is equal to its breadth; and which, if it be to circle, may be called circular. Newton's Opticks.

3. To CIRCLE. v. n. To move circularly; to end where it begins. The well-fought bowl Circles incessant; whilst the humble cell With suavest laugh and rural joys resounds. Phillips.

Now the circling years disclose The day preferv'd, to reward his woes. Pope.

To CIRCLED. adj. [from circle.] Having the form of a circle; round. The inconstant moon, That monthly changes in her circular orb. Shak.

CIRCLET. n. f. [from circle.] A circle; an orb: properly a little circle.
1. A chemical vessel, in which that from which the fire is collected and cooled in another placed upon it, and falls down again.
CIRCULATORY, adj. [from circulate].
Circular Letters are the SAME with Circular Letters.
CIRCUMAMBLY, adj. [from circumambient.] The act of encompassing.
Ice recovers its figure according to the surface it contracts or the circumference which contains it.

2. To circle round, to walk round.
Died.
To CIRCUMCISE, v. a. [circumcised, Lat.] To cut the prepuce or foreskin, according to the law given to the Jews. They came to circumcision the child.
Luk.
One is alarmed at the industry of the whips, in aiming to strengthen their moral force by reinforcement from the circumcised. Swift's Essay.
CIRCUMCISION, n. f. [from circums.
The rite or act of cutting off the foreskin.
They left a race behind them to itself, distinguished from others.

3. To circulate in a circle; to run round; to return to the place whence it departed in a concave course.
If our lives motions theirs must imitate, our knowledge like our blood must circulate.

4. To circulate, v. a. To put about.
In the civil wars, the money sent on both sides was circulated at home; no public debts contracted.

5. Motion in a circle; a course in which the motion tends to the point from which it began.
What more obvious, one would think, than the circulation of the blood, unknown till the last age?
Burnet's Theory.
As much blod passeth through the lungs, as through all the rest of the body; the circulation is quicker, and heat greater, and their texture extremely delicate. Arbov's Elements.

6. A series in which the same order is always observed, and things always return to the same state.
CIRCUMFUSIONS, n. s. [from circumfuso.] The act of spreading round; the state of being poured round.

CIRCUMGYRATE, v. a. [circum and gyrate, Lat.] To roll round. All the glands of the body are composed of various sorts of cells united, circumgyrated, and complicated together. Ray on the Creation.

CIRCUMGREATION, n. s. [from circumgreare, Lat.] The act ofBounding round. The Sun turns round his own axis in about twenty-five days, from his first being put into such a circumgyration. Choyce.

CIRCUMCENT. adj. [circumcentae, Lat.] Lying round any thing; bordering on every side.

CIRCUMITION, n. s. [from circumcire, Lat.] The act of going round.

CIRCUMPLICATION, n. s. [circumciliare, Lat.] 1. The act of binding round. 2. The bond with which any thing is encompassed.

CIRCUMLOCATION, n. s. [circumlocutio, Lat.] 1. A circuit or compass of words; paraphrase. Virgil, studying brevity, could bring these words into a narrow compass, which a translator cannot render without circumlocution. Dryden. 2. The use of indirect expressions. These people are not to be dealt withal, but by a train of story and circumlocution. L'Estrange.

CIRCUMVIORED, adj. [circumvirens, Lat.] Walled round; encompassed with a wall.

He hath a garden circumvirend with brick. Shakespeare.

CIRCUMNAVIGABLE, adj. [from circumnavigare, Lat.] That which may be sailed round.

The king of Antipodes, the inhabitants of the earth beyond the western extreme of the globe circumvirend. Ray on the Creation.

CIRCUMNAVIGATE, v. a. [circum and naviga, Lat.] To sail round.

CIRCUMNAVIGATION, n. s. [from circumnavigare, Lat.] The act of sailing round.

What he says concerning the circumnavigations of Africa, from the latitude of Gibraltar to the Red Sea, is very remarkable. Archim. on Cosm.

CIRCUMVAGATOR, n. s. One that sails round.

CIRCUMPLICATION, n. s. [circumplectes, Lat.] 1. The act of enwrapping on every side. 2. The flate of being enwrapped.

CIRCULAR, adj. [from circum and taur.] Stars near the North pole, which move round it, and never set in the Northern latitudes, are said to be circumpolar stars.

CIRCUMPOSITION, n. s. [from circum and postirex.] The act of placing any thing circularly. Now is your feal for circumposition, by glee or fetch of earth.

CIRCUMSATION, n. s. [circumscire, Lat.] The act of shading or paring round.

DIFF.

CIRCUMROTATION, n. s. [circum and rotare, Lat.] 1. The act of whirling round with a motion like that of a wheel; circumvolution; circumvovation.

2. The state of being whirled round.

CIRCUMSCRIBE, v. a. [circum and scrive, Lat.] 1. To inclose in certain lines or boundaries. 2. To bound; to limit; to confine.

The good Amphidromus, with honour and with fortune in return'd; From whence he circumscribed with his friends, and brought to give the enemies of Rome. Shakespeare. Therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he's head. Shakespeare. He form'd the pow'rs of heav'n Such as he pleas'd, and circumscrib'd their being. Milton.

The action great, yet circumvolved by time; The words not three, but hiding into rhyme. Dryden. The spirits, which do circumspectly the motions of men's acts, are those which do circumvolve and limit them. Swift. To you, ye simple, The little forms which circumscribe your sex. Southern.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION. n. s. [circumscriptio, Lat.] 1. Determination of particular form or magnitude. In the circumscriptio of many leaves, flowers, fruits, and seeds, nature affects a regular figure. Ray on the Creation. 2. Limitation; boundary; constraint; confinement. I would not my unhoused free condition Put into circumscriptio and condine. Shakespeare.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE. adj. [from circumscribente.] Inclining the superintendence; marking the form or limits on the outside. Some staves regular, are distinguished by their external forms; such as is circumscriptio, or depending upon the whole frame, as in the eagle-frames, is properly circumscriptive. Addison.

CIRCUMSCRIPT. adj. [circumscriptus, Lat.] Cautious; attentive to every thing; watchful on all sides. None are for me, That look into me with commodate eyes; High reaching Buckingham grows circumscript. Shakespeare. Men of their own nature circumscript and slow, but at the time distracted and affronted. Dryden. The judicious doctor had been very watchful and circumscript, to keep himself from being imposed upon. Pope.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION. n. s. [circum and scriptio, Lat.] Watchfulness on every side; caution; general attention. Observe the sudden growth of wickedness, from want of care and circumscriptio in the first limbs. Clarendon. So laying, his proud step he circumscriptly More, but with circumscriptio, Milton's Paradise Lost.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE. adj. [circumscriptio, lat.] Looking round every way: attentive; vigilant; cautious. No less alike the politician and the judge; All fly round things, with circumscriptio eyes. Pope.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVELY, adv. [from circumscriptio.] Cautionably; vigilantly; attentively; with watchfulness every way; watchfully.

CIRCUMPECTELY, adv. [from circumpect.] With watchfulness every way; cautionly; watchfully; vigilantly. These authority weighs more with me than the concurrent effusions of a thousand eyes, who never examined the thing so carefully and circumpecteely. Ray on the Creation.

CIRCUMPLECTNESS, n. s. [from circumpect.] Caution; vigilance; watchfulness on every side.

Travel forces circumplectums on those abroad; who at home are nursed in security. Watson.

CIRCUMSTANCE, n. s. [circumstantia, Lat.] 1. Something appendant or relative to a fact: the same to a moral action as accident to a natural substance. When men are ingenious in picking out circumstances of contempt, they do kindle their anger much. Bacon's Essays. Our confiding, or concealing perfidious truths, vary and change their very nature, according to different circumstances of time, place, and persons. Smith. 2. The adjuncts of a fact, which make it more or less criminal; or make an accumulation more or less probable. Of these supposed crimes with me leave me room, By circumstance, but to acquit myself. Shakespeare.

3. Accident; something adventitious, which may be taken away without the annihilation of the principal thing considered. See outside known, the foot thereto all things fees; Synesius, circumstances; the both the substance view. Davier.

4. Incidents event; generally of a minute or subordinate kind. He defended Cassidey with very remarkable circumstances of courage, industry, and patience. Clarckson.

The sculptor had in his thoughts the Conqueror's weeping for new worlds, or the like circumstance in history. Addison.

The poet has gathered those circumstances which most irritate the imagination, and which really happen in the raging of a tempest. Addison. Spots.

5. Condition; state of affairs. It is frequently used with respect to wealth or poverty; as, good or ill circumstances. None but a virtuous man can hope well in all circumstances. Bacon. We ought not to conclude, that if there be national inhabitants in any of the planets, they must therefore have human nature, or be involved in the circumstances of our world. Henry. When men are easy in.those circumstances, they are naturally enemies to innovations. Addison's Essay on Trade.

To CIRCUMSTANCE. v. a. [from the noun.] To place in particular situation, or relation to the things.

To worthless things, Virtue, art, beauty, taste, and character.

Rentsmen or not, nature values business; And such as are circumstant they are Diderot.

CIRCUMSTANT. adj. [circumstant, Lat.] Surrounding; environing.

Its bays by to confine the remotest parts of the world, and it gives motion to all circumstantial bodies. Digby on the Sky.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL. adj. [circumstantialis, low, Lat.] 1. Accidental; not essential.

Hath to circumstantial branches, which Difficulton would be rich in. Shakespeare.

This jurisdiction in the essentials of it, is as old as Christianity; and those circumstantial additions... of secular circumvallation, Christian princes thought necessary.

Who would not prefer a religion that differs from orow in the circumvallations, before one that differs.

from it in the essentials?

Addison's Britt. Dis.

2. Incidental; happening by chance;

casual.

Virtue 'tis but anguished, when 'tis several.

By occasion walk'd, and circumvall'd. Dryden.

3. Full of small events; particular; details.

He had been provoked by men's tedious and circumvoluted recitals of their affairs, or by their multiplied questions about his own. Prior's Dedic.

CIRCUMVALLATION, n. f. [from circum-vallant]. The appendage of circum-vallations; the state of any thing as modified by circumvallations.

CIRCUMVALLATION, adv. [from cir-

cumvallant.]

1. According to circumstance; not essentially; accidentally.

Of the fancy and intellect, the powers are only circumvallantly different. Glanville's Scifia.

2. Minute; exactly; in every circum-vallant manner.

Lucian agrees with Homer in every point cir-cumvallantly. Orestes.

To CIRCUMVALLATE, v. a. [from cir-

cumvallant.]

1. To place in particular circumstances; to invest with particular accidents or accidents.

If the act were otherwise circumvallated, it might still that freely, which now it wills freely. Brinmel.

2. To place in a particular condition, as with regard to power or wealth.

A number indefinitely superior, and the best cir-cumvallated, Imaginable; are for the success of Hannibal. Swift.

To CIRCUMVALLATE, v. a. [circumv-

vallate, Lat.]

To incloze round with trenches or fortifications.

CIRCUMVALLATION, n. f. [circum-

vallate, Lat.]

1. The act of carrying round.

2. The state of being carried round.

To CIRCUMVALLATE, v. a. [circumv-

vallate, Lat.]

To decieve; to cheat; to impose on, to delude.

He, to be betrayed or circumvallated by his cruel brother, fled to Barbarossa.

Knolles's History of the Turks.

As his malice is vigilant, he redeeth not to circumvall the loss of the first deceived.

Brown's Vulgar Errades.

Should man

Fall circumvallated thus by fraud. Milton's Parlia.

To die undisputed, and to circumvall. Dryden.

CIRCUMVALLATION, n. f. [from cir-cumvallate.]

1. Fraud; impollute; cheat; delusion.

The inequality of the match between him and the fidelities of us, would quickly appear by a legal circumvallation; there must be a wisdom from above to over-reach this hollow wisdom. South.

If he is in the city, he must avoid baring ground against circumvallation in commerce.

Coler of Popularit.

2. Prevention; pre-occupation. This scene is now out of use.

Whatever hath been thought on in this state,

That could be brought to bodily aff. Rome

Had circumvallation. Shakespeare.

To CIRCUMVALLATE, v. a. [circumv-

vallate, Lat.]

To cover round with a garment.

Who on this safe the earth did firmly round,

And mad't the deep to circumvall it round. Winton.

CIRCUMVOLVE, n. f. [circumvolvate, Lat.]

The act of rolling round.

To CIRCUMVOLVE, v. a. [circumvolvate, Lat.]

To roll round; to put into a circular motion.

Could fold orbs be accommodated to phenomena, yet to ascribe each sphere an intelligence to circumvolvate it, were unphilosophical.

Glanville's Scifia.

CIRCUMVOLVATION, n. f. [circum-

volvate, Lat.]

1. The act of rolling round.

The twisting of the guts is really either a circum-volvation, or infection of one part of the gut within

An other. Avicenna.

2. The thing rolled round another.

Consider the obliquity or closeness of these circumvolvations; the nearer they are, the higher may be the influence.

CIRCURUS, n. f. [circus, Latin.]

An open

CIRQUE, a space or area for sports, with seats round for the spectators.

A pleasant valley, like one of these circuses, which in great cities somewhere doth give a pleasant spectacle of running horses. Sidney.

The one was about the circus of Flora, the other upon the Taranic mountain. Stillng.

See the circus falls, the unhind'd temple Noise,

Swietts par'd with heroes, Tyber chock'd with gods.

Page.

CIST, n. f. [cistus, Latin.]

A cave; a temdium: commonly used in medicinal language for the cost or inclosure of a tumour.

CITED, adj. [from cist.] Inclosed in a cist, or bag.

CISTERN, n. f. [cisterna, Latin.]

1. A receptacle of water for domestic use.

'Is not the rain that waters the whole earth,

but that which falls into his own cistern, that must rechief. South.

2. A resevoir; an inclosed fountain.

Had no part of him kindly beheld.

In the wide cisterns of the lakes confin'd,

Did not the springs and ditches trench the land,

Our globe would grow a wilderness of lands.

Hooke.

3. Any receptacle or repository of water.

So half my Egypt were submers'd, and made a cistern for scald slaves. Shakespeare.

But there is no bottom, none,

In my voluptuousness; your wives, your daughters,

Your matrons, and your maidens, could not fill up

The cistern of my lust. Shakespeare.

CISTUS, n. f. [Lat.] The name of a plant.

The fame with rockrose.

CIT, n. f. [cited from cist.] An inhabitant of a city, in an ill sense; a pert low townman; a pragmatical trader.

We bring you now to show what different things

The cits or cistrons are from the courts of kings.

Johnson.
CLA

I would have had Alameria and Omifin parted cruelly; as if it was not proper for lovers to do so. Collar of the Stage.

He thought them folks that left their way, and so'd them cruelly to stay.

4. Without gay or gaudy colours.

The chambers were too short and cheerful, and furnished cruelly. Bacon's New Atlantick.

CIZE, n. f. [perhaps from sinec, Lat. shaped or cut to a certain magnitude.] The quantity of any thing, with regard to its external form: often written face.

If no motion can alter bodies, that is, to reduce them some other size or figure, then there is none of itself to give them the size and figure which they have.

Grew's Cosmogony.

CLACK, n. f. [kitchen, Germ. to rattle, to make a noise.]

1. Any thing that makes a lasting and importunate noise: generally used in contempt for trifles.

But still his tongue ran on, and with its everlasting clack
Set all men's ears upon the rack.

Fancy from this, in some distress high:
He knows not when my clack will lie.

Borrower.

To CLACK, v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To make a clanking noise.

2. To let the tongue run.

To CLACK, v. a. As to clack awal, is to cut off the sheep's mark, which makes it to weigh less, and so foil the leys custom to the king.

Cowell.

CLAD, part. pret. [This participle, which is now referred to clothes, seems originally to have belonged to clother, or some such word, like kleden, Dutch.] Clothed; invested.

So oft in fests with softly changes clad,
To crammed maws a frant new chang'ing brooks.

Sidney.

He hath clad himself with a new garment.

Kings.

Beyond the flow'ry Dale of Slonna, clad with vine. Milton.

Their prattler clad.

With incense, where the golden altar sunk'd
By their great intercessors. Milton.

But virtue too, as well as ice, is clad.

In flesh and blood.

To her the weeping heav'n's become serene;
For her the ground is clad in cheerful green. Dryden.

The couriers were all most magnificently clad.

Swift.

To CLAIM, v. a. [clamer, French.] To demand of right; to require authoritatively; not to beg or accept as favour, but to exact as due.

If only one man hath a divine right to obedience, no body can claim that obedience but he that can show his right.

We must know the first ruler, from whom any one claim'd, came by his authority, before we can know who has a right to succeed him in it.

Locke.

Poets have undoubted right to claim.

If not the greatest, the most laudable name. Congreve.

CLAIM, n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A demand of any thing, as due.

You, in the name of Lady Branch your wife, may then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Shakespeare.

Forbore thyself! The traitor's odious name.
I first return, and then disprove thy claim. Dryden.

Will he not, therefore, of the two evils chose the lees, by bearing his highness his just claim upon him, rather than to another who hath already revived several claims upon him?

Swifts.

2. A title to any privilege or possession in the hands of another.

Either there must have been but one sovereign over them all, or else every father of a family had been as good a prince, and had as good a claim to royalty as those.

Locke.

3. In law.

A demand of any thing that is in the possession of another, or at the least out of his own; as claim by charter, claim by defect.

Cowell.

4. The phrases commonly to make claim, or to lay claim.

The king of Pridia lays in his claim for Neft, Chitel, as he did for the principality of Orange. Addison on Italy.

If God, by positive grants, gave dominion to any man, primogeniture can lay no claim to it, unless God ordained.

Locke.

CLAIMABLE, adj. [from claim.] That which may be demanded as due.

CLAIMANT, n. f. [from claim.] He that demands any thing, as unjustly detained by another.

CLAIMER, n. f. [from claim.] He that makes a demand; he that requires any thing, as unjustly withheld from him.

CLAIR-OBSCURE, n. f. See CLARE-OBSCURE.

To CLAIMER, v. n. [probably corrupted from close; as climber, climber.] To climb with difficulty, as with both hands and feet.

The kitchen malkin pies
Her richest locken 'bout her reachey neck,
Clambr'ing the walls to eye him. Shakespeare.

When you hear the drum,
Clambr not your step up to the cimeters then. Shak.

The men there do, not without some difficulty, climbr up the acclivities, dragging their kine with them. Ray.

They were forced to climbr over so many rocks, and to tread upon the brink of so many precipitates, that they were very often in danger of their lives. Addison's Fornings.

CLAMM, v. a. [in some provinces, to climb; from climban, Saxox, to glue together.]

To clog with any glutinous matter.

A swarm of wasps got into a honey-pot, and there they closed and climbr'd themselves till there was not getting out again. L'Étranger.

The fritos were all daubed with lime, and the birds climbr'd and taken. L'Étranger.

CLAMMINESS, n. f. [from clamming.] Vulgarity; vileness; tenacity; ropiness.

One gross pipkin will spoil the clamminess of the glue. Mason.

CLAMMY, adj. [from clamming.] Viscous; glutinous; tenacious; adhesive;ropy.

Bodies clammy and claving, have an appetite, at once, to follow another body, and to hold to themselves.

Neither the brain nor spirits can conserve motion; the former is of such a clammy consistency, it can no more retain it than a quagmire. Glaucester's Steward.

Aghast he walk'd, and flinging from his bed, Cold sweat, in clammy drops, his limbs o'erspread. Dryden.

Joyful thou'lt see
The clammy surface all e'er-covered with tribes
Of greedy infects.

Philip.

There is an unquenchable clammy vapour that arises from the stumps of grapes, when they lie matted together in the vat, which puts out light when dipped into it.

Addison on Italy.

CLA'MOROUS, adj. [from clamour.] Vociferous; noisy; turbulent; loud.

It is not sufficient to say, that in arguing these ceremonies, none are so clamorous as paupers, and they whom paupers scowl. Hooker.

He kiss'd her lips
With such a clamorous face, that at the parting
All the church echo'd. Shakespeare.

At my birth
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous in the wealthy fields. Shakespeare.

With the clamorous report of war
Thus will I grow your exclamations. Shakespeare.

Then various elements against them join'd.
In one more various animal combatt
And fram'd the clam'rous race of busy human kind. Pope.

A pamphlet that will settle the wavering, infarct the ignorant, and inflame the clamorers for justice. King Charles.

The maid,
Shall weep the fury of my love decy'd;
And weeping follow me, as thou dost now.

With idle clamours of a broken vow. Prior.

2. It is used sometimes, but left fitly, of inanimable things.

Here the loud Arno's bold'rous clamours cease,
That with sublimine murmurs glide in peace. Addison.

CLAMOUR, n. f. [clamer, Latin.]

1. Outcry; noise; exclamation; vociferation.

Revoke thy doom,
Or whilst I can vent my sorrow from my throat,
I'll tell thee, tho' dull and slow.

The people grew so exorbitant in their clamours for justice. Addison.

The maid shall weep the fury of my love decy'd;
And weeping follow me, as thou dost now.

With idle clamours of a broken vow. Prior.

2. In Shakespeare it seems to mean, activly, to stop from noise.

Clamour thy tongue, and not a word more. Shakespeare.

CLAMP, n. f. [clamp, French.]

1. A piece of wood joined to another, as an addition of strength.

2. A quantity of bricks.

To burn a clump of bricks of thousand and thousand, they allow seven tons of coal. Mortimer's History.

To CLAMP, v. a. [from the noun.]

When a piece of board is fitted with the grain to the end of another piece of board cross the grain, the first board is clamped. Thus the ends of tables are commonly clamped to prevent them from warping.

Mason's Mechanical Exercises.

CLAN, n. f. [probably of Scottish origin; Gael, clan, in the Highlands, signifies children.]

1. A family; a race.

They surround the flag
Of each his faction, in their several clans,
Swarm populous, unnumber'd. Milton.

Milton was the poetical soul of Spenser, and Mr. Walker of Fairfax, for we have our lineal descendents and class as well as other families. Dryden.

2. A body or set of persons, in a line of contempt.

Partridge and the rest of his clan may shoot me for a cheat; if I fail in any single particular. Swifts.

CLANSCULAR.
6. To clap up. To complete suddenly, without much precaution. We closed the four doors to the council room, and the meeting was over.

7. To clap up. To fit in with little formality or delay. She had to make a quick decision about the appointment, and yet she didn't want to be too formal.

8. To enter with alacrity and briskness upon any thing. She entered the room with energy, not tardily.

9. To move nimbly with a noise. The cat moved quickly across the floor, making a soft noise.

10. To strike the hands together in applause. The audience clapped their hands together in response to the performance.

11. To make a clapping sound. The dog clapped his paws together, demanding food.

13. A sudden and unexpected act or motion. The wind suddenly blew the tree over, surprising the passerby.

15. A sudden and unexpected misfortune. The sudden rainstorm left the garden in disarray.

16. A venereal infection. The patient was diagnosed with a venereal infection.

17. With falconers. The falconers were clad in their traditional uniforms, ready for the hunt.

18. With a clapper with his hands; an applaudi. He clapped his hands together in an applause.

19. The tongue of a bell. He rang the bell, and the tongue of the bell called out.

20. To tongue-bait; to scoff. She scoffed at the news, saying it was ridiculous.
CLA

Prrw. beg, Smith. [clarin, South. fe-
Then to to to a it fpinette, Milton'
To yttaiiury. Hooker. Bacon
To Bacon. know To South. as and Dycdn. Speiifir.

To CLARIFY. v. a. [clarifie, French.]
1. To purify or any liquor; to sep-parate from feculenties or impurities.
The apothecaries clarify their pyrops by whites of eggs, beaten with the juices which they would clarify; which whites of eggs gather all the dregs and greasy particles from the liquids to them; and after the pyrops being set on the fire, the whites of eggs themselves harden, are taken forth.

To CLARIFY. v. n. To clear up; to grow bright.
Whoever hath his mind fraught with many thoughts, his wits and understanding do clarify and break up in the discoursing with another; he marialleth his thoughts more ordely, he heareth how they look when they are turned into words.

CLAIRION: n. s. [clarin, Spanish; from clairon, loud, Lat.] A trumpet; a wind instrument of war.
And after to his palace he brings them,
With drums, and trumpets, and with clarions loud;
And all the way the joyous people sang. Spenser.
Then arise commands, that at the warlike sound
Of trumpets loud, and clarions, be uprear'd
The mighty standard. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Let fuller notes the applying wind amaze,
And the loud clarion labour in your praise. Pope.

CLAIRITY, n. s. [claritie, French; claritas,
Lat.] Brightness; splendour.
A light by abundant claritie invisible; an unadornedl whiche it may not be concealed.
Sir Walter Raleigh.
Man was not only decceivable in his integrity,
but the angels of light in all their claritie.

CLARKY, n. s. [clarenat, Latin.] An herb.
Plants that have circled leaves do all abound with moisture. The weakest kind of currying is roughness; as in clarly and burn. Bacon's Natural History.

To CLASH. v. n. [clatson, Dut. to make a noise.]
1. To make a noise by mutual collision; to strike one against another.
Three times, as of the clashing found
Of arms, we heard. Daven.

CLA'SPER. n. f. [from clap.] The tendrels or threads of creeping plants, by which they cling to other things for support.
The tendrils or clasps of plants are given only to such species as have weak and infirm stalks.
Bacon.

CLA'SKNEFE. n. f. [from clasp and knife.]
A knife which folds into the handle.
CLASS. n. f. [from classis, Latin.]
1. A rank or order of persons.
Seriffs has distingued the readers of poetry, according to their capacity of judging, into three classis.
Dryden.
2. A number of boys learning the same lesson at the school.
We shall be relieved away from this lower clas,
in all I form to trend on clasificacion ground. Addis.
With them the genius of claspke learning duxellich, and from them it derived.

To CLASS. v. a. [from the noun.]
To range according to some flated method of distribution, to range according to different ranks.
I considered that, by the claspling and mending such papprate, I might instruct the reader.

ARISTOTL On Class.

CLASSICAL. adj. [classicus, Latin.]
CLASSIC. s. [classis, Lat.]
1. Relating to antique authors; relating to literature.
Portick fields encompass me around,
And still I form to trend on clasificacion ground. Addis.
With them the genius of claspke learning dyed-lich, and from them it derived.

To CLASSIC. n. f. [classis, Lat.] An author of the first rank; usually taken for ancient authors.
The clasificacion of an age that heard of none. Pope.

CLASSIS. n. f. [Latin.] Order; sort; body.
He had declared his opinion of that claspsf of men, and did all he could to hinder their growth.
Clayton.

To CLATTER. v. n. [clapnage, a rattle,
Saxon.]
1. To make a noise by knocking two sonorous bodies frequently together.
Now the shrill trumpet from afar
Had rous'd the neighing-fedais to scour the fields,
While the fierce sisters claspl'd on their shields.

Clayton's Horse.
Down sunk the monster-bulk, and press'd the
ground;
His arms and claspling shielded on the vaft body
made the ground.
Their clasping arms with the fierce shocks
rebound;
Helmets and broken lance's fell to the ground.

Gage's battle.

To CLATTER. v. n. [clapage, a rattle,
Saxon.]
2. To utter a noise by being druck together.
All that night was heard an unwaited clattering of weapons, and of men running to and fro.

CLORUS. n. f. [from clorus, Latin.
Down sunk the monster-bulk, and press'd the
ground;
His arms and claspling shielded on the vaft body
made the ground.
Their clasping arms with the fierce shocks
rebound;
Helmets and broken lance's fell to the ground.

Gage's battle.

To CLATTER. v. n. [clapage, a rattle,
Saxon.]
3. To
To shake, to make to start and rattle.
I only with an oaken staff will meet thee, And make the stones and pebbles clatter, That thou shalt think it to be Jack at Milton, When all the bees are gone to fettle, You clatter till your brains ache. Swift.

To diotope, jar, or clamour; a low voice. Marlin.

A rattling noise made by the frequent and quick collission of sonorous bodies. A clatter is a clafh often repeated with great quickness, and seems to convey the idea of a found harper and thriller than rattle. [See the verb.]

I have seen a monkey overthrow all the dishes, and make a clatter, merely for the pleafure of feeling them tumble, and hearing the clatter they made in their fall. Swift.

It is used for any tumultuous and confufed noise. By this great clatter, one of the greatest gods. Seems bruited. Shakespeare. Grow to be short, Throw by your clatter, And make the matter. Ben Jonson. O Town's jolly boys, Ne'er dream of the matter, Till rous'd by the noise Shakespeare. The jumbling particles of matter in chaos make not such a clatter. Swift.

To clavated. adj. [clavatus, Latin.] Knobbled; fet with knobs. Their appear plainly to have been clawed spikes of some kind of cedrus ovatus. Woodward on Fagus.

To Claudent. adj. [claudens, Latin.] Shitting; including, confining. Diz.

To claudicate. w. n. [claudus, Latin.] To shitting. Diz.

To Claudication. n. f. [from claudis, Latin.] The act or habit of shitting. Diz.

Clave. [the pretence of clave.] See clave.

Clavellated. adj. [clavellatus, low Latin.] Made with burnt tartar, a chymical term. Chambers. Alli, transmitted through clavellated ashes into an exhaust'd receiver, looks weight as it parallels through them. Arboeuth.

Claver. n. f. [clapeyn, Saxen.] This is now universally written closer, though not so properly. See Clover.

Clavile. n. f. [clavilica, Latin.] The collar bone. Some quadrupeds can bring their fore feet unto their mouiths; as moutl that have claviles, or collar bones. Browne. A girl was brought with angry wheats down her neck, towards the middle. Hoffman's Surgery.

Clause. n. f. [claudula, Latin.]
1. A sentence; a single part of a discourse; a subdivision of a larger sentence, so much of a sentence as is to be confonned together.

God may be glorified by obedience, and obeyed by performance of act will, although no special

CLA

3. To talk fast and idly. Here is a great deal of good matter. Lost for lack of selling;

Now they do not but clatter; Here may come of melling. Spenser. All those airy speculations, which betteted not men's manners, were only a noise and clattering of words. Dryden. To clatter. v. a.

1. To strike any thing as to make it sound and rattle.

I only with an oaken staff will meet thee, And make the stones and pebbles clatter, That thou shalt think it to be Jack at Milton, When all the bees are gone to settle, You clatter till your brains ache. Swift.

2. To disperse, jar, or clamour; a low voice. Marlin.

A rattling noise made by the frequent and quick collision of sonorous bodies. A clatter is a clafh often repeated with great quickness, and seems to convey the idea of a found harper and thriller than rattle. [See the verb.]

I have seen a monkey overthrow all the dishes, and make a clatter, merely for the pleasure of feeling them tumble, and hearing the clatter they made in their fall. Swift.

It is used for any tumultuous and confused noise. By this great clatter, one of the greatest gods. Seems bruited. Shakespeare. Grow to be short, Throw by your clatter, And make the matter. Ben Jonson. O Town's jolly boys, Ne'er dream of the matter, Till roused by the noise Shakespeare. The jumbling particles of matter in chaos make not such a clatter. Swift.

To clavated. adj. [clavatus, Latin.] Knobbled; set with knobs. Their appear plainly to have been clawed spikes of some kind of cedrus ovatus. Woodward on Fagus.

To Claudent. adj. [claudens, Latin.] Shitting; including, confining. Diz.

To claudicate. w. n. [claudus, Latin.] To shitting. Diz.

To Claudication. n. f. [from claudis, Latin.] The act or habit of shitting. Diz.

Clave. [the pretence of clave.] See clave.

Clavellated. adj. [clavellatus, low Latin.] Made with burnt tartar, a chymical term. Chambers. Alli, transmitted through clavellated ashes into an exhausted receiver, looks weight as it parallels through them. Arboeuth.

Claver. n. f. [clapeyn, Saxen.] This is now universally written closer, though not so properly. See Clover.

Clavile. n. f. [clavilica, Latin.] The collar bone. Some quadrupeds can bring their fore feet unto their mouths; as most that have claviles, or collar bones. Browne. A girl was brought with angry wheats down her neck, towards the middle. Hoffman's Surgery.

Clause. n. f. [claudula, Latin.]
1. A sentence; a single part of a discourse; a subdivision of a larger sentence, so much of a sentence as is to be conjoined together.

God may be glorified by obedience, and obeyed by performance of act will, although no special

CLA

2. [In poetry.] Earth in general; the terrafical element. Why should our clay

Over our spirits so much sway? Dryden.

To CLAY. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover with clay; to manure with clay. This manuring lasts fifty years; then the ground must be cropped again. Moxon. Clay-cold. adj. [clay and cold.] Lifeless; cold as the unanimated earth. What's his clay-cold core with holy drop; And saw him laid in hallow'd ground. Rev

Clay-pit. n. f. [clay and pit.] A pit where clay is dug. Some are found in a clay-pit. Wendover to Fingles.

Clayets. n. f. [clay. Fr. In fortification.] Wattles made with flakes interwoven with olers, to cover with lodgments. Chambers.

Clayey. adj. [from clay.] Constifuting of clay; abounding with clay. Some in a lax or frozen, some a heavy or clayey one. Dryden.

Clayish. adj. [from clay.] Partaking of the nature of clay; containing particles of clay. Small beer proves an unwholesome drink; perhaps, by being brewed with a thick, muddish, and clayey water, which the distiller misses. Harvey on Gauging.

Claymar. n. f. [clay and marl.] A whith, smooth, chalky clay. Claymar resembles clays, and is near akin to it; but is more and sometimes mixed with chalk-stones. Martineau's Huxleyan.

Clean. adj. [clay, Welsh; clane, Sax.]
1. Free from dirt or filthy; as, clean water. Both his hands, most filthy punctual Above the water, screen'd high extant; And fain'd to wash themselves indecorantly; Yet nothing clean were for such intents. But rather foure. Fairy Queen.

They make clay the outside of the cup and the platter, but within they are full of exsolution and excesses. Matthew.

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart. Psalms. In me a clean heart, O God! Psalms.

2. Free from moral impurity; clean; innocent; guiltless.

3. Elegant; neat; not unwieldy; not encumbered with anything useless or disproportionate.

The timber and wood are in some trees more claye, in some more knotty. Linear's Natural History. Yet thy walk is straight and clear.

As God's thief, or Hermes' rod. Wailer.

4. Not foul with any loathsome dizease; not leprous.

If the plague be somewhat dark, and spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean, Leviticus.

Dextrous; not bungling; neat; as, a clean trick; a clean leap; a clean box.

Clean. adv.
1. Quite; perfectly; fully; completely. This fene is now little used. These athens have been clean contrary unto those before mentioned. Hooke.

Being feated, and dometick friends.

Clean overthrown. Shakespeare. A philosopher, perfid'd with the same objection, shapes an anew clean contrary. Hakewell as Precedent.

2. Without miscarriage; in a dexterous manner.

They came off clean with Homer; but they fail, Browne went before, and kindly swept the way. Hooke.

To CLAY. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover with clay; to manure with clay. This manuring lasts fifty years; then the ground must be cropped again. Moxon.
CLEANLY, adv. [from cleanly.] In a cleanly manner.

CLEANLINESS, n. f. [from cleanly.]
1. Freedom from dirt or filth.
2. Neatness of dress; purity; the quality contrary to negligence and naivete.
3. Cleanliness, freedom from filth.
4. Eas[y] exactness; justness; natural, untarnished correctness.

CLEANLY, adv. [from clean.] Elegantly; neatly; without naivete.

CLEAN, v. a. [from clean.] To free from dirt; to wash or wash out, and make clean.
1. To free from filth, or dirt, by washing or washing out. To wash or wash out, and make clean.
2. To purify from guilt.

CLEANSE, v. a. [from clean.] To wash; to wash out, and make clean.
1. To free from filth, or dirt, by washing or washing out.
2. To purify from guilt.

CLEANLY, adv. [from cleanly.] Not only to keep his hands clean, but also to keep his mind free from evil thoughts.

CLEANLINESS, n. f. [from cleanly.]
1. Freedom from dirt or filth.
2. Neatness of dress; purity; the quality contrary to negligence and naivete.
3. Cleanliness; freedom from filth.
4. Eas[y] exactness; justness; natural, untarnished correctness.

CLEANST, adv. [from cleane.] Not only to keep his hands clean, but also to keep his mind free from evil thoughts.
Your eyes, that seem to clear,
Yet see but dim, shall perfectly be then Open'd and clear'd, Milton's Paradise Lost.
Like Bosias in his race, when rushing forth,
He seizes the flies, and clears the cloudy skies.
A favour'd fly, a homely treat.
Where all is plain, where all is neat,
Clearness causes forthwith the great.
Dryden.

2. To free from obscurity, perplexity, or ambiguity.
To clear up the several parts of this theory, I was willing to lay aside a great many other speculations.
Burnet's Theory.

3. To purge from the impurity of guilt; to justify; to vindicate; to defend: often with from before the thing.
Some were much clarified by the death of those who were executed, to make him appear guilty.
Sir John Hayswards.

4. To cleanse: with of, or from.
My hands are of your colour; but I flame
To wear a heart so white!
A little water clears us of this deed.
Shakespeare.

5. To remove any encumbrance, or embarrassments.
A man digging in the ground did meet with a door, having a wall on each hand of it: from which having cleared the earth, he forced open the door.
Addison's Spectator.

6. To free from any thing offensive or noxious.
To clear the palace from the foe, succeeded
The weary living, and revenge the dead.
Dryden.

7. To clarify; as, to clear liquors.
To gain without deduction.
He clears but two hundred thousand crowns a year, having defrayed all the charges of working the flocks.
Addison's Spectator.

8. To confer judgment or knowledge.
Our common prints would clear up their understandings, and animate their minds with virtue.
Addison's Spectator.

9. To clear a ship, at the Custom House, is to obtain the liberty of failing, or of selling a cargo, by satisfying the Custom House.

10. To clear a ship, at the Custom House, is to obtain the liberty of failing, or of selling a cargo, by satisfying the Custom House.

1. To grow bright; to recover transparency.
So foul a fly clears not without a form. Shakespeare.

2. Sometimes with up.
The milk, that hung about my mind, clears up.
Addison.

3. To be disengaged from encumbrances, diftrusts, or entanglements.
He that clears at once, will redirect; for finding himself out of affairs, he will revert to his customs; but he is clearly better, induced a habit of frugality, and gainest as well upon his mind as upon his estate.
Swift's Directions to the Groom.

4. To be clarified.
Gold is a wonderful clear of the understanding; it diffuses every drop and forgives every sin.
Addison.

5. Clearly.
1. Brightly; luminously.
Myriades of grace and salvation, which were but darkly discerned, then have unto us more clearly than the sun.
Addison.

6. Plainly; evidently; without obscurity or ambiguity.
Christianity first clearly proved this noble and important truth to the world.
Rogers.

7. With discernment; acutely; without embarrassment or perplexity of mind.
There is almost no man that be clearly discerned and sharper the vices in a speaker than the virtuous.
Ben Jonson.

8. Without entanglement or distraction of affairs.
He that doth not divide, will never enter into business; and he that divideth too much, will never come out of it clearly.
Bacon's Essays.

9. Without by-ends; without finical views; honestly.
When you are familiar with these matters, do not take into consideration any fancied or worldly interest, but do clearly and impartially with your teacher.
Tytolive.

10. Without dedication or call.
Without pernicious; without evasion: without subterfuge.
By a certain day they should clearly relinquish unto the king all their lands and possessions.
Davis on Ireland.

11. Transparency.
It may be as clearly expressed and splendid, but sweetness of favour.
Bacon's Natural History.

12. Splendour; lucre.
Like beauty, clear and simple, with the clearness, love not the flattery of it upon me.
Sidney.

13. Distinctness; perspicuity.
If he chooses to think right, he does not know how to convey his thoughts to another with clearness and perspicuity.
Addison's Spectator.

14. Sincerity; honestly; plain dealing.
When the case required disquisition, if they used it, the former opinion spread abroad, of their good faith and clearness of dealing, made them almost invincible.
Bacon.

5. Freedom from imputation.
I require a clearness. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Perfidious; discerning; judicious.
Clearighted reason wildom's judgment leads; And sends, her valiant, in her footsteps true.
Herrick.

7. To clear arth, v. n. a. [from clear and farce.] To fixen with farce.
He took his present lodging at the mansion-house of a tailor's widow, who walked, and can eat in his living.
Addison.

8. To cleave. v. n. preter. I cleave, [cleafan, Sax. cleaven, Dutch.]
1. To adhere; to flock; to hold to.
The clarifying of liquors by adhesion, is effected when some clearing body is mixed with the liquors, whereby the several parts flock to that clearing body.
Bacon's Natural History.

9. Water, in small quantity, cleaves to any thing that is solid.
Bacon's Natural History.

10. When the spirit grows into hardness, and the clouds cleave fast together.
The thin chamelion, fed with air, receives
The colour of the thing to which he bends.
Dryden.

11. To unite aptly; to fit.
New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.
Shakespeare.

12. To unite in concord and interest; to adhere.
The apostles did conform the Christians according to the pattern of the Jews, and made them cleave the better.
Homer.

13. The men of Judah cleave unto their king.
If you shall choose to my consent, when 'tis,
It shall make you honour for.
Shakespeare.

14. The people would revolt, if they saw any of the French nation to cleave.
Knolles's History of the Turks.

15. To be concomitant to; to be united with.
We cannot imagine, that in breeding or begatting offspring, his grace doth cleave to the one, and forsake the other.
Shakespeare.

16. To divide with violence; to split; to part forcibly into pieces.
And at their palling cleave the Albian flood.
Hiller.

17. The fountains of it are said to have been cleaven, or birth open.
Barnet's Theory of the Earth.

18. He is blacksmith'd in the wings disguis'd, And, like a shooting star, he left the night.
Dryden.
Rain'd on her dulky wings, the clouds the liek.
Dryden.

19. When with such force he struck, he fell'd him down.
And left the circle of his golden crown.
Dryden.

20. Or had the fun.
Elected to the earth, a new seat.
His beam he left the hills, the valley dry'd.
Blaeuwer.

21. Where whole brigades one champion's arms o'er.
And cleave a giant at a random blow.
Tick.

22. Not half to swell the trembling doves can fly.
When the fierce eagle cleave the liquid fly.
Verge.

23. To divide; to part naturally.
And every part that parts the hoof, and cleave the left into two cleaves.
Dryden.

24. To cleave. v. n.
1. To part amunder.
War's twist thy twain, would
As if the world were twain, and that plain men Should folder up the riffs.
Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

25. The ground cleave amunder that was under them.
Cimelius.

26. Ti
CLEW.

He cut the swelling sty,
And in a moment vanished from her eye.

Pep's Oddy.

1. To suffer division.

It clews with a glossy polished substance, but not plane, but with some little uneveness.

Newton's Optics.

CLEAVER, n. f. [from clave.]

1. A butcher's instrument to cut animals into joints.

You gentlemen keep a pair of roaring battle shown by day and night, with horses and hunting hounds, and ringing the changes on butchers' clavers.

Addison.

Tho' arm'd with all thy clavers, knives, and axes made good hit.

Steele.

2. A weed. Improperly written CLEVER.

CLEVES, n. f. The two parts of the foot of beasts which are cloven-footed.

Skinner.

It is a country word, and probably corrupted from claves.

CLEFT, n. f. [from clefs, key, Fr.] In musick, a mark at the beginning of the lines of a song, which forces the tune or key in which the piece is to begin.

Chambers.

CLEFT, part. pass. [from clever.] Divided; parted asunder.

Far with inconceivable'd

On the clefs wood, Milton's Paradise Lost. I never did on clefs Parnassus dream, Nor into the Heliconian shades. Dryden.

CLEFT, n. f. [from cleaves.]

1. A space made by the separation of parts; a crack; a crevice.

The caedens seem to break through the claves and cracks of rocks.

Addison's Guardian. The extremity of this cave has a long clef in it, which was enlarged and cut into shapes by Agrippa, who made this the great port for the Roman fleet.

Addison on Italy.

The rest of it, being more groze and ponderous, does not move fast; but lodges in the claves, energy, and sides of the rocks, near the bottoms of them.

Woodward.

2. In farriery.

Clefts appear on the bottom of the patterns, and are caused by a sharp and malignant humour, which rots the skin; and it is accompanied with pain, and a noisome ftreight.

Farrier's Dist.

Far from being such a weakly

No, 'tis a mare, and hath a cleft.

Ben Jonson.

CLEFT TO CLEPTOGRAPHS. v. a. [clefs and grafts.]

To engrat by cleaving the flock of a tree, and inferrting a branch.

Filbers may be cleft in a good nut.

CLENMY, n. f. [element, Fr. elemnitia, Lat.] 1. Mercy; remission of severity; willingness to spare; tenderness in punishing.

I have flated the true notion of clensmy, mercy, compassion, good-nature, humanity, or whatever else it is called, to far as is consistent with wisdom.

Addison.

2. Mildness; softness.

Then in the clenity of upward air

We'll pour our spots, and the dire thunder fear.

Dryden.

CLEMENT. adj. [element, Lat.] Mild; gentle; merciful; kind; tender; compassionate.

You are more clement than vile men, Who of their broken deceit take a third, Letting them thrive again on the abatement.

Shakespeare.

CLENCH. See CLINCH.

To CLENCH. v. a. [clypman, Sax.] To call. Obsolus.

1. Demented; skilful.

It was the clener mockery of the two.

E. F. B. R.

I read Dry's letter more for the bille than the news. The man has a clever pen, it must be owned.

Addison's Spectator.

2. Just; fit; proper; commodious.

I can't but think 'twould found more clever, To me, and to my heirs for ever.

Pep's Oddy.

3. Well-shaped; handsome.

She called him sprightly, and, he called her lovely Peggy, though the girl was a tight clever wench as any was.

Addison.

4. This is a low word, scarcely ever used but in burlesque or conversation; and applied to any thing a man likes, without a settled meaning.

CLEFT. adv. [from clover.]

Dexterously; fitly; handomely.

These would invade rats with the scent,

And sometimes catch them with a snare,

As clearly as in the abbot trap.

Addison.

Lingere upon his high may have as throng an arm, and take off a man's head as clearly as the executioner.

South.

CLEFTNESS. n. f. [from closer.] Dexterity; skill; accomplishment.

CLEFT. w. f. [from cleft, Sax. clowneus, Dutch.] 1. Thread wound upon a bottom; a ball of thread.

Efficous on twisting his deceitful cleft,

To heave a weight on a piled duel. Speecer.

While, guided by some cleft of heavenly thread,

The perplex'd labyrinth we backward tread.

Ruttenen.

They use small clefts draw vastes weights aloge, Not in their bulk, but in their orders. Dryden.

2. A guide; a direction: because men direct themselves by a cleft of thread in a labyrinth.

This alphabet must be your own cleft to guide you.

It is no way, no thought, no beam of light.

No cleft to guide me thro' this gloomy maze.

To clear my honour, yet preferro my fault. Smith.

There will be no such cleft in the most particular, but want of some cleft, or connecting idea, to lay hold of.

Watt's Light.

CLEFT OF THE FAIL of a ship, is the lower corner of it, which reaches down to that carling where the tackles and hanks were fastened.

Harris.

To CLEFT. w. a. [from cleft, a term.] To cleft the fail; is to raise them, in order to be furled; which is done by a rope fastened to the cleft of a fail, called the cleft-garnet.

Harris.

To CLICK. v. a. [cliken, Dutch; cliquer, French; or perhaps the diminutive of cleft.] To make a sharp, small, succedaneous noise.

The solemn death-watch click'd, the hour the die was.

And thrilling clickers in the chimney cried. Gay.

CLEFTER, n. f. [from click.] A low word for the servant of a faleman, who stands at the door to invite customers.

CLEFT. n. f. [from cleft.] The knockcr of a door.

Skinner.

CLEFT. n. f. [clens, Latin.] 1. One who applies to an advocate for counsel and defence.

There is due from the judge to the advocate for commendation, whose cases are well handled; for that upholds in the cleft the reputation of his counsel.

Bacon's Essays.

Advocates.
Adventures must deal plainly with their clients and tell the true state of their case.
Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

It may perhaps sometimes be used for a more general use, as it was used among the Romans.
I do think they are your friends and clients,
And fearful to disturb you.
Ben Jonson.

Cliented. partic. adj. [from client.]

Supplied with clients.

This due occasion of disbursement, the word connexions and clients, I do not under the least idea of expense, convert to a more profitable occasion of action.
Carrick's Anatomy of Cornwall.

Clientele. n. s. [clientele, Lat.] The condition or office of a client. A word frequently used.
There's Varas holds good quarters with him;
And, under the pretext of clients,
Will be admitted.
Ben Jonson.

Clientship. n. s. [from client.]
The condition of a client.
P dancing and emigrating among the Romans always defended: the plebeian bouds has recourse to the particular line which had formerly protected them.
Dryden.

Client. n. s. [client, Lat. clipe, clipeo, Sax.]
1. A steep rock; a rock, according to Skinner, broken and craggy. [craggy]
2. A place to precipitate a man from a high cliff into the sea.
Batte's Nat. Hist.
Mountaineers, that from Severus came,
And from the craggy cliffs of Tetrica.
Dryden.

Wherever 's so found; scattered over the shores, there is as constantly found lodged in the cliffs thereabouts.
Without.

2. The name of a character in music.
Proper Clef.

Cleft. n. s. The same with Clif. Now diluted.
Down he tumbled, like an aged tree,
High growing on the top of rocky cliffs.
Spenser.

Climate. n. s. [climateo, Gr.]
A certain space of time, or progression of years, which is supposed to end in a critical and dangerous time.
Elder times, settling their conceits upon climaters, differ from one another.
Brown's Vulg. Err.

Climatological. adj. [from climate.]

Climatological. adj. [from climate.]

Containing a certain number of years, at the end of which some great change is supposed to befall the body.

Certain observanies are supposed to be attended with some considerable change in the body;
as the seventh year; the twenty-sixth, made up of three times seven; the forty-ninth, made up of seven times seven; the sixty-third, being nine times seven; and the eighty-ninth, which is nine times nine; and which two last are called the grand climatick.

The numbers seven and nine, multiplied into each other, do make up sixty-three, commonly expressed the great climaterial of our lives.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Your lordship being now arrived at your great climax, yet give no proof of the least decay of your excellent judgment and comprehension.
Dryden.

My mother is something better, though at her advanced age, every-day is a climacteric.
— Pope.

Climate. n. s. [climateo, Gr.]

1. A space upon the surface of the earth, measured from the equator to the polar circles; in each of which spaces the longest day is half an hour longer than in that nearer to the equator. From the polar circles to the poles, climates are measured by the increase of a month.
2. In the common and popular fenes, a region, or tract of land, differing from another by the temperature of the air.

Between th' extremes, two happier climates hold
The temperate climes of hot and cold. Dryden.

On what new happy climates are we to reckon?
Dryden.

This talent of moving the passions cannot be of any value in the northern climates.
Swift.

To Climate. v. t. To inhabit. A word only in Shakespeare.

The blessed gods
Pour all infection from our arts, whilst thou
Shakespeare.

Do climates here.
Shakespeare.

The climate. v. s. The fame with climates. Not in use.
Swift.

Such bounties preceding fill the fates,
Have heav'n and earth together demonstrated
Our climates and countries.
Shakespeare.

And this natal year, which brings
To keep up some great and
To keep the world up.
Shakespeare.

One of the most striking instances of the other climates.
Swift.

They apply the celestial description of other climates unto their own.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Of beauty fign, her shining progres view,
From clime to clime the dazzling light pursues.
Dryden.

We shall meet
In happier climates, and on a safer shore.
Addison.

Health to vigorous bodies, or fruitful feasons in temperate climates, are common and familiar blushing.
Dryden.

To Clinch. v. s. [cli^nca, Sax. to knock, junip, clingle, in Fens, to encompas, Minshew.]

1. To hold in the hand with the fingers bent over.

Something less the boldest and the shields
Of heroes, whose dibemfible hands yet bear
The dart aloft, and clinch the pointed spear.
Swift.

2. To contract or double the fingers.

Their tallest trees are about seven feet high,
the tops' whereof I could but reach with my fit clinched.
Swift.

3. To bend the point of a nail in the other side.

4. To confirm & to fix: as, to clinch an argument.

To clinch. v. s. [from the verb.]

1. A word used in a double meaning; a pun; an ambiguity; a duplicity of meaning, with an identity of expression.
How it obtains this meaning is difficult to find. A nail caught on the other side, and double, is a nail clinched; a word taken in a different meaning, and doubled in sense, is likewise a clinch.

Such as they are, I hope they will prove, without a clinch, insipid; farthing after the nature of light.
Dryden.

Pure clinches the barbarian muse affords,
And Panton waging harmes war with words.
Dryden.

Here one poor word a hundred clinches makes.
Pope.

2. That part of the cable which is fastened to the ring of the anchor.

Clinch. v. s. [from clinch.] A clamp a holdfast; a piece of iron bent down to flatsen plank.

The wims of the work Calypso found
With those he press'd em, and with clinchers bound.
Pope.

To Clinch. v. s. pret. I clung; part.
I have clung. [Hang, Danish.]

1. To hang up a thing turning round; to flick to; to hold fast upon.

The broad long doubtful foal
As two spent fiemes that do cling together,
And clink their axes.
Shakespeare.
1. To embrace, by throwing the arms round; to hug; to enfold in the arms. He that before thou'd her, to such harms, how runns to take her in his clapping arms. Sidney.

2. A sharp successive noise; a knocking. I heard the clink and full of sound. Shakespear.

3. It seems in Spenser to have some usual lese. I believe the knocker of a door. Tho' crooping claps, behind the wicket's clink, Privly he peeped out thro' a chink. Spenser.

To CLIP. v. a. [clippan.] To cut, or cut off. To CLIP. v. n. [clip.] To cut or cut off.

CLOAK. n. f. [cloak, Sax.] 1. The outer garment, with which the rest are covered. You may bear it under a cloak that is of any length. Shakespeare. Their cloaks were cloth of sable, mix'd with gold. Dryden. All arguments will be as little able to prevail, as the cloaks did with the traveller to part with their cloaks, which he held only the fatter. Locke. Nimby he rode, and cast his garment down; That indist in his cloak I wrapp'd me round. Pope's Odyssey.

To CLOAK. v. n. [from cloak.] 1. To cover with a cloak. 2. To hide; to conceal. What methely shyn, in deed and view, She by creation was, till the did fall; Thenforth she fought for helps to check his crimes within. Spenser.

CLOAK AND DAGGER. [from cloak and bag.] A person in disguise; a bag in which clothes are carried. Why do thou converse with that trunk of humours, that ruffled clackbag of guts? Shakes. I have already fit ("Tis in my clackbag doubles, bat, bobs, all That answer to them. Shakespeare.

CLOCK. n. f. [clock, Welth, from clock, a bell, Welth and Armorkic; clocks, Fr.] 1. The instrument which, by a series of mechanical movements, tells the hour by a stroke upon a bell. If a man, be in sickneas or pain, the time will form longer without a clock or hour-glas than with it. Bacon. The picture of Jerome usually described at his study, is with a clock hanging by, Brown's Villger Errantry. I told the clocks, and watch'd the waiting light. Dryden.

2. It is an usual expression to say, What is it of the clock, for What time is it? Or ten o'clock, for the tenth hour. What is it o'clock?—Upon the stroke of four. Shakespeare.

CLOKemaker. n. f. [clock and maker.] An artificer whose profession is to make clocks.

This inequality has been diligently observed by several of our ingenious clockmakeurs, and equations made and used by them. Clockwork n. f. [from clock and work.] Movements by weights or springs, like those of a clock.

So if unprejudic'd you see The goings of this clockwork, man! You find a hundred movements made By fine devices in his head; But 'tis the slowest of all clocks, The tells this being what 's o'clock. Prior. Within this hollow was Valken's shop, full of fire and clockwork. Addison. You look like a puppet moved by clockwork, Arcturus.

CLOD. n. f. [club, Sax. a little hillock; klots, Dutch.] 1. A lump of earth or clay; such a body of earth as cleaves or hangs together. The earth that casteth up from the plough a great clod, is not so good as that which casteth up a smaller clod. Burton. I'll cut up, as plows Do barren lands, and strike together flints And clods, th' ungrateful famish and the people. Ben Jonson. Who frowneth with harrows, or who pounds with rakes, The fawning clods. Dryden.

2. A turf; the ground. Byzantium boast, that on the clod, Where once their sultan's horse has trod, Grows neither grass, nor thurf, nor tree. Swifts.

3. The thing concreted together in a clod. Fishermen who make holes in the ice to dip up fish with their nets, light on styallows congealed.
In cloths of a slimy substance; and carrying them home to their stoves, the warmth sterilizeth them to life and flight. Milton.

5. Any thing vile, base, and earthy; as the body of man, compared to his foul.

And ye high heavens, the temple of the gods, In which a thousand torches, flaming bright, Do burn, that to us, wretched earthly cloths, In dreadful darkness lend desired light. Spenser.

The spirit of man, Which God inspir'd, cannot together perish.

With this real corporal Miller's Paradise Lost. How the pure spirit is united to this cloth, is a knot too hard for our degenerated intellects to untie. Glanvil.

In moral reflections there must be heat, as well as dry reason, to inspire this cold cloth of clay which we carry about with us. Burnet's Theory.

6. A dull, gross, stupid fellow; a clown.

The vulgar! a fierce animated clod, Never pleas'd withught above 'em. Dryden.

To CLOD. v. n. [from the noun.] To gather into concretions; to coagulate: for this we sometimes use clot.

Let us go find the body, and from the stream, With water pure, and cleansing herbs, wash off. The folded gored gore. Milton.

To CLOD. v. a. [from the noun.] To pelt with cloths.

CLODY, adj. [from clod.] 1. Consisting of earth or cloths; earthy; muddy; miry; mean; gross; base.

The glorious fun, Turning with splendour of his gracious eye, The meshes clothy earth to glittering gold, Skeat.

2. Full of cloths unbroken.

These lands they low-selves under surrow about Michaelmas, and leave it as clothy as they can. Merriam's Husbandry.

CLODPEATE. n. f. [clod and pate.] A flupid fellow; a clown; a thickskull.

CLODPATEted. adj. [from clodpeate.] Su- plid; dull; doolish; thoughtless.

My slumber'd visions spoiled the greatest genius: in the world, when they breed me a mechanism. Arbuthnot.

CLODPOUIL. n. f. [from clod and poll.] A thickskull; a clown; a blockhead.

This letter being so excellently ignorable, he will not only take it from a clodpole, Shakespear.

To CLOG. v. a. [It is imagined by Skinner to come from, log; by Casson derived from skul, a dog's collar, being thought to be firh hung upon fierce dogs.] 4. To load with something that may hinder motion, to encumber with flackles; to impede, by fastening to the neck or leg a heavy piece of wood or iron. If you find it to be much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a stea, I'll eat the vest of the anatomy. Shakespeare.

Let a man wear himself from their worldly impediments, that here clog his foot's flight. Digby on the Soul.

The wings of birds were clodd'd with lee and foam. Dryden.

Flethly luts do deceive men's minds, and clog their spirits, make them grogs and fool, liftsers and unactive. Tullus.

Cows and pomatum shall his flight restrain, While clodd'd he beats his fitten wings in vain. Peire.

2. To hinder; to obtrude.

The gutter'd rocks and congregated sands, Tribes clog'd with cly the guilefull keel. Shaks.
There being no winter yet to close up and unite its parts, and restore the earth to its former companions. But the suddenness of any public rupture happens, it is immediately closed up by moderation and good offices. All the traces drawn there are immediately closed up, as though you wrote them with your finger on the surface of a river. Watts in the Mind.

To Close. 2. 1. To closeco. to join its own parts together. They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed up upon them. Number, xvi. 31. In plants, you may try the force of imagination upon the lighter motions, as upon their closing and opening. 2. To Close upon. To agree upon; to join in. The jealousy of such a design in us would induce France and Holland to close upon some measures between them to our disadvantage.

3. To Close with. To come to an agreement with; to comply with; to unite with. Entire submission makes that wrong that virtuous gentlewoman, to close with us. Shakespeare's Henry IV. It would become me better, than to cloze.

In terms of friendship with thine enemies. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar. There was no such defect in man's understanding, but that it would be with the evidence. South. He took the time when Richard was deposed. And high and low with happy Harry cloze. Dryden. Pride is so unfoolish a vice, that there is no closing up with it. Collar of Friendship. This spirit, poured upon iron, let go the water. The field and spirit is met and attracted by the fixed body, and let go the water, to close with the fixed body. Newton's Opticks. Such a proof as would be closed with certainty at the first, shall be set aside easily afterwards. Atterbury.

These governors bent all their thoughts and applications to cloze in with the people, now the stronger party.

4. To Close with, To grapple with in wrestling.

Close. n. s. [from the verb.] 1. Any thing shut; without outlet. The admirable effects of this distillation in cloze, which have the worms and matings of living creatures. Bacon. 2. A small field inclosed. I have a tree, which grows here in my cloze, That mine own self invites me to cut down. And shortly much I fell it. Shakespeare.

Certain bedes dividing a cloze, chance upon a great chaffe. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

3. The manner of shutting: in this and the following sense it is pronounced as cloze. The doors of planks were; their cloze exquisites, kept with a double key. Chapman.

4. The time of shutting up. In the cloze of night, Phleged began he violently lay. Dryden.

5. A grapple in wrestling. The king went of pursuie into the North, laying an open fide unto Perkin to make him come to the cloze, and so to trip up his heels, having made him to break his hold before. Bacon. Both fell with dull, but starting up, the third cloze they had made, Had not Achilles' skill about. Chapman.

6. Pause; cessation; rest. This cloze pleasure left to cloze, With thousand eeches still prolong all heavy cloze. Milton.

7. At ev'ry cloze the made, th' attending throng Rep-led, and bax the burden of the song. Dryden's Fables.

8. A conclusion or end. Speedy death. The cloze of all my miseries and the balm. Milton. Thro' Syria, Perus, Greece, the goes; And takes the Romans in the cloze. Prior.

9. Clear. [from the verb.] A shirt fait, so as to leave no part open; as, a cloze box, a cloze house. We suppose this bag to be tied cloze about, towards the window. Wilkins.

10. Having no vent; without inlet; secret; private; not to be seen through. Nor could his cloze too cloze a vizir's weare, To keep their eyes whose guilt had taught to fear. Dryden.

11. Confined; flagrant; without ventilation. If the rooms be low, confined, or full of windows and doors; the one murther the air, and not fresh; and the other maketh it exceeding unequal. Bacon's Natural History.

12. Compact; solid; dense; without interferences or vacuities. The inward strength of the earth is of itself an uniform mass, cloze and compact. Bacon's Theory. The golden globe being put into a præcis, which was driven by the extreme force of screwes, the water made itself way thro' the pores of the very cloze metal. Locke.

13. Vicious; glutinous; not volatile. This oil, which nourishes the lamp, is supposed of to cloze and tenacious a substance, that it may slowly evaporate. Bacon.

14. Concise; brief; compressed; without exuberance or digression. You lay your thoughts to cloze together, that, were they cloze, they would be crowded, and even a drop of observation would be wanting. Dryden. Fear. Where the original is cloze, no version can reach it in the same compass. Dryden. Read these instructive leaves, in which compare Frye's cloze art, and the natural fibre. Pope.

15. Joined without any intervening distance or space, whether of time or place. Was I a man bred great as Rome herself, Equal to all her titles that could stand Cloze up with her, I must fulfill her name At strong as he doth heav'n! Ben Jonson.

We must lay aside that lazy and falacious method of confounding by the lump, and must bring things cloze to the test of true or false. Bacon. Shut. Plant the spring encloses cloze to a wall. Motmam. Where'er my name I find, Some dire misfortune follows cloze behind. Pope.

16. Approaching nearly; joined one to another. Now sit we cloze about this table here, And call in question our necessities. Shakespeare.

18. Undiscovered; without any token by which one may be found. Cloze observe him for the sake of mockery, Cloze in the name of Jael! lie you there. Shakespeare.

19. Hidden; secret; not revealed. A hidden intent at lia to throw me grace. Speaker. Some pages cannot keep their cloze things, will do more to vindicate their art, or oppose their antagonists, than to gratify the curious, or benefit mankind. Boyle.

20. Having the quality of secrecy; truly; Constant you are, But yet a woman; and yet secretly. No lady cloze. Shakespeare.

15. Without wandering; without deviation; attentive. I discovered no way to keep our thought cloze to their business, but, by frequent attention, getting the habit of attention. Locke.

16. Full to the point; home. I am engaging in a large dispute, where the arguments are not like to reach cloze on either side. Dryden.

17. Retired; solitary. He kept himself cloze because of Saul. Chronicles.

18. Secluded from communication; as, a cloze prisoner. Behind her death Cloze following pace for pace, not mounted yet.

19. Applied to the weather, dark; cloudy; not clear. Close.

20. adj. It has the same meanings with closely, and is not always easily distinguished from the adjective.

2. It is used sometimes adverbially by itself, but more frequently in composition. As, Close-bent. adj. In close order; thick ranged; or secretly leagues, which seems rather the meaning in this passage.

3. Nor in the house, which chamber ambassadors Close-bent, dared not attack me. Milton.

4. Close-bodied. Made to fit the body exactly. If any clergy shall appear in any cloze-bodied coat, they shall be suspended. Aylliff's Parergon.

5. Close-hand. adj. Covetous. Galba was very close-hand I have not read much of his liberality. Arbuthnot on Coins.

6. Close-pent. adj. Shut cloze; without vent. Then in some close-pent room it crept along, And smouldring as it went, in silence fed. Dryden.

3. Attentively. If we look more closely we shall find Most have the seeds of judgment in their mind. Pope.

4. Secretly; daily. A Spaniard, riding on the bay, sent some cloze into the village, in the dark of the night. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

5. Without deviation. I hope I have translated closely enough, and given them the same turn of verse which they had in the original. Dryden.

8. Close. n. s. [from cloze.] 1. The state of being shut; or, the quality of admitting to be shut without inlet or outlet. In drums, the closeness round about that prefereth the sound, maketh the noise some forth of the drum-hole more loud than if you should strike upon the like skene extended in the open space. Bacon's Natural History.

2. Narrow-
2. Narrowness; straitness.
3. Want of air, or ventilation.
4. Compactness; solidity.
5. Each word was being half-shed, and the chaps

To closet. [from clot.] A chamber impliment.
A seat for his trunkle, led the van;
And his high helm: was a cloathed pan. Garil.

Clotn. n. f. [from clothe.] A small room of privacy and retirement.
1. The tapen burnish in your cloth. Shakespeare.
He would make a stop into his cloths, and after a to a step he was gone. Watson.
2. A private repository, of curiosities and valuable things.
He should have made himself a key, whereby to open the cloths of Mineer, where those fine treasures are to be found in all abundance.

To clothe. [from clot.] To furnish her cloths.
He furnished her cloths d, and filled.
The crowded shelves with rarities of sheers.

CLOTHING. n. f. [from clot.] Drefs; vefture; garments.
 Thy bosom might receive your yielded spight,
And thine with it, in heaven's pure clothing dres.
Though closed kites might take united flight.

CLOTHESBARE. n. f. [from clot and bare.] One who trims the cloth, and levels the nap.
My father is a poor man, and by his occupation a clothesteare. Harkwell on Prouincials.

CLOPPAL. n. f. [from clot and poll.]
1. Thicket or blockhead.
What stays the fellow there? call he the clippal back.

2. Head, in scorn.
I have sent Cloten's clippal down the stream,
In emisty to his mother. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

To cloterv. n. [from clot.] To concerte; to conegrate; to gather into lumps.
Barre it d rag'd the trimming frant.
Siddling thine clot's blood and holy mire.

CLOTTY. adj. [from clot.] Full of clods:
concreted; full of concretions.

The matter expeditor'd is thin, and mixt with thick cloth; Swiss breaks. Hamon on Concretions.
Where land is clothy, and a flower of raine flowers through, you are; makes a wall to break it.

Maxims.

CLOUD.
CLOUD. n. f. [The derivation is not known. Minifere derives it from claudo, to flout; Seneor from claud; Casabon from claudo, darkness; Skinner from claddhe, Dutch, a spot.]

1. The dark collection of vapours in the air.

Now are the clouds, that lower'd upon our horse.
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
